BEGGARS RAP BAN ON CHILD LABOR

Japanese Mendicants Protest Prohibiting Children Seeking Alms

TOKIO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Beggars of Tokio have protested to police against the plan to prohibit the use of children in the begging business.

There are some 400 professional beggars in Tokio and most of them use pathetic-looking children—either their own or rented ones—to tease ten-sen pieces from the pockets of soft-hearted citizens. If they are not permitted to use children, the beggars claim, their business will be ruined. The police plan to place the children in a government home where they can be educated and cared for.

The police say some beggars have made small fortunes at their business, but most of them live in doss houses or in the slums.

Bodies Found in Engine Room

Total of Seventeen Out of Forty Crash Victims Now Recovered

Further Retrieval Efforts to be Delayed Until Hulk is Raised

PROVINCETOWN (Mass.) Jan. 7. (AP)—The sunken submarine S-4 gave up the bodies of ten more victims today, making a total of seventeen that have been recovered out of the crew of forty aboard the craft when it was rammed and sunk by the Coast Guard destroyer Paulding three weeks ago today.

Nine of the bodies recovered today were found in the engine room, as were the seven that had been removed from the wreck previously. The tenth was found just inside the door of the motor compartment. The bodies were recovered by fifteen divers, working in five relays of three men each, who carried on their search from morning until night.

WORK TO BE HALTED

Officers of the salvage fleet tonight expressed doubt that any more bodies will be removed from the wreck until after the submarine has been raised. Divers reported that

PYORRHEA CURE QUEST NEARS END

Kansas Dentist Will Donate to Profession Results of 21-Year Search for Remedy

MANHATTAN (Kan.) Jan. 7. (AP)—A twenty-one-year search for a pyorrhea cure is nearing an end, says Dr. N. L. Roberts, Manhattan dental surgeon, with success in sight.

Dr. Roberts will soon present to the profession a formula which he says will conquer the disease. He attacked the problem in 1906, but only recently has he progressed sufficiently in his laboratory research to offer his claims to his colleagues and permit his formula to undergo the rigorous tests of scientists.

Dr. Roberts has announced that he will give the results of his labors to the profession as his contribution to the scientific side of dental surgery.

Duchess of York Society Leader

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Duchess of York has become a leader of fashion in the ultra-smart younger set of London society since her Australian tour.

Whether it be a particular kind of pin or brooch to fasten her fur, an ostrich feather fan to carry at a dance, any particular shape of hat or shade of color for a dress, no sooner does the Duchess appear with one or the other than it immediately becomes the fashion and is seen here, there and everywhere.

The latest dance frocks are being made rather short but with a small train, and society dress-makers assert it is because the Duchess has appeared on several occasions in such a gown.

AIRPLANES TRANSPORT TONS OF MACHINERY

WINNIPEG, Jan. 7. (AP)—A season's test is reported to have established the value of the airplane as an aid to mining. Three planes operated in the remote mining district of Northern Manitoba carried 1000 passengers and 200,000 pounds of freight between December, 1926, and August, 1927.

The outstanding feat was transportation of eight tons of machinery, dynamite and men from Cache Lake to the end of Hudson's Bay Railway.

Six more planes will be put into service shortly.

Falsity of Papers Admitted

Senate Committee Winds Up Inquiry Into Authenticity of Mexican Documents

Authorship Not Determined as Procurer Denies Forging, But Names Sellers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Mexican documents published in Hearst newspapers were accepted today as forgeries, on the basis of handwriting experts' reports, by Miguel Avila, procurer of the papers, and John Page, writer of the Hearst stories, before the special Senate committee, as it concluded its inquiry.

Asked point blank by Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, if he forged the documents, Avila said "No." Pressed as to who did "fake" them he shrugged his shoulders and referred to the "man who gave them to me."

TWO SELLERS NAMED

Avila said that Francisco Tobias, a clerk in the Mexican consulate office in New York, sold him the papers purporting to come from the official files there. Avila named Pedro Gonzales as the man who sold him papers represented as having come from Mexico City archives. He told the committee Tobias still works in New York, and he thinks Gonzales is working at the Ford factory in Detroit.

Page likewise declared he has no idea who forged the papers and said he did not ask Avila "because he is my friend and I did not want to insult him."

After closely examining Avila the committee wound up its hearings and indicated before going into executive session it will make a report of its findings to the Senate early next week.

SENATORS CLEARED

One of the documents purported to show the creation of a $1,215,000 Mexican fund for four United States Senators. These Senators — Borah, Idaho; Norris, Nebraska; Heflin, Alabama, and La Follette, Wisconsin—were cleared soon after the start of the inquiry by W. R. Hearst, the publisher, and the committee, of any suspicion of having received the money or having been approached in regard to it.

The search then into the authenticity of the documents brought reports from five handwriting experts, three of whom were hired by Mr. Hearst, that the papers are "unquestionably ungenuine."

It is the view of the committee members that no action can be taken in this jurisdiction against those who forged the signatures of President Calles and other Mexican officials to the documents even if they were definitely known.

Senator Reed today asked Page and Avila if they know a man named

SANTA AIDS COAL MINE STRIKERS

Former Boxer Now Business Man Digs Deep Into Savings, Investing $30,000

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8. (AP)—There's a Santa Claus in New Kensington, Pa., striking coal miners say—a former boxer, turned business man. He has dug deep into his accumulated earnings this winter to give aid and comfort to families of strikers housed in hastily built barracks.

When coal companies decided to sell the household goods of strikers to obtain back rent for living in company-owned houses, Fred Broad, real estate broker, appeared in the role of Santa. He bought the furnishings—and returned them to the strikers. He has invested some $30,000 in such purchases.

This furniture has gone to the barracks erected by the United Mine Workers where strikers, their wives and children are braving winter.

Broad's interest in miners goes back to 1919 when his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fannie Sellins, a moving spirit among the workers, was slain during a strike disorder. From middleweight boxer and boxing promoter he has come to be a leading business man of New Kensington and a bank director.

He does not call his giving charity. He insists that he will not lose a cent because, he asserts, the miners will pay him back when they return to work.

TELEPHONE EXECUTIVE GIVEN RECOGNITION

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—J. W. Gilkyson, coast division commercial manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, who surveyed the route for the present long-distance line from Tehachapi to Los Angeles and who was a prominent figure in establishment of transcontinental lines from San Francisco in 1915, has been honored with a six-starred gold service emblem at the conclusion of forty years of service with one organization. Gilkyson still is active and expects to remain so for many more years. He served in Los Angeles in an executive capacity in 1909 and 1910.

NEW JERSEY MAN QUITS TO MAKE SENATE RACE

KETCHIKAN WRECKED BY HIGH WINDS

Gale Levels Houses and Scatters Craft in Harbor; Alaskan Liner Safe

KETCHIKAN (Alaska) Jan. 7. (AP)—Sweeping out of the southwest at a velocity of seventy miles an hour, a terrific windstrom today wrought havoc in the town of Ketchikan.

Scores of buildings were damaged, while three residences were tossed into the storm-lashed waters of Tongass Narrows. No loss of life is reported.

Scows and small vessels broke loose from their moorings and were battered against the foundations of the waterfront homes in Newtown. Three hundred and fifty thousand logs of the Ketchikan Lumber and Shingle Company were carried away by the tempest.

The windstorm, described as the most severe ever known here, struck the city at noon. As the waves of the Narrows lashed the Newtown district, scores of persons abandoned their homes. Hundreds of fishing craft along the waterfront were in imminent danger of capsizing before the storm subsided early tonight. Water filled a number of Newtown stores.

The passenger liner Alameda of the Alaska Steamship Company succeeded in docking here from Seattle just before the storm reached its height.

A wharf of the Sunny Point Canning Company suffered considerable damage. Iron roofing of the cannery buildings was blown away.

The 110-foot Coast Guard cutter Cygan limped into port this afternoon after bucking a terrific gale in Dixon entrance.

Unusually Low Area on Way to Moisten State

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The speed with which an area of unusually low barometric pressure approaches the California coast will determine to a large extent the weather conditions of the next week, Forecaster Bowie opined tonight. The weather chart reveals a widespread low from the Alaskan chain to the Honolulu steamer lane. Its core, off Alaska, was reported by the steamer Achilles to be as low as 28.6, but the wind is blowing from the south. Eventually the wind will shift and the presence or absence of counter-winds will govern the situation.

The extreme edge of the area probably will be felt in rainfall on the farthest Northern California coast by morning, the forecaster believes. There was no rain today, however.

Bishop Cannot Understand Ban on Miss Royden

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—It is difficult for Rt. Rev. A. F. Deane, lord bishop of Aberdeen, Scotland, to understand how "kind-hearted" Americans" can prevent a woman minister from preaching simply because she smokes cigarettes.

"If there are such people they ought to be put in a lunatic asylum," remarked the bishop, here during a tour soliciting funds for a church memorial.

His comment was upon the action of church women of Boston and Oak Park, Ill., who canceled speaking engagements with Miss Agnes Maude Royden, English evangelist, supposedly because she smokes.

STOCK MARKET GOES WILD

All Saturday Trading Records Break Following Coolidge Statement on Brokers' Loans

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—All Saturday trading records on the New York [illegible] were broken today in a feverish outburst of buying created [illegible] that President Coolidge sees nothing alarming in the huge vol[illegible] of brokers' loans. Prices soared $1 to $9 a share in the first hour, but week-end profit-taking developed and substantial slices were cut from the early gains before the market closed. Sales totaled 1,672,900 shares.

Added to the President's statement was a declaration, construed as bullish, by W. C. Durant, prominent stock market operator and maker of automobiles. He belittled the "hue and cry" over brokers' loans and predicted that, in the normal course of business, this phase of credit will reach a volume of $5,000,000,000 within twelve months.

In the late selling, Greene Cananea Copper, recently a sensational performer, lost nearly $12 a share after it had reached $147.75. United States Steel and General Motors both relinquished their early gains of about $2 and radio corporation fell back from a day's peak of $102.50 to $99.87½. The latter rallied in the last few minutes, closing at $101.

Abnormally heavy buying also took place in the curb market, where sales of 460,000 shares were made, a new Saturday record. Bonds were accumulated in large amounts, particularly Treasury 3 3-4s and 3 3-8s, which sold above their previous records, and several of the popular railway mortgages.

Outside the securities markets, the day's chief interest centered in sterling exchange. The rate for sterling cables dropped more than half a cent to $4.87 7-32, definitely removing any likelihood of early shipments of gold to England. Other exchange rates were slightly lower.

Remus to Have Period of Rest Under Scrutiny

LIMA (O.) Jan. 7. (AP)—George Remus, acquitted by a Cincinnati jury of slaying his wife, Imogene, and committed to the State Hospital for the Insane here, will remain in the hospital quietly for a time at least, under observation of hospital physicians and three Lima doctors to be employed by Remus.

This much was definitely known of Remus's plans. He ultimately expects to free himself from detention. Just when the habeas corpus proceedings by which the former "king of bootleggers" hopes to effect his removal from the hospital, will be filed, remains a matter of conjecture.

Skiers Killed by Avalanches

BREGENZ (Austria) Jan. 7. (AP)—Two avalanches in Vorarlberg district, former Austrian Crown land, have resulted in the death of four skiers.

CARPENTER STRIKE PAIR FILE APPEALS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The appeal of Gus Madsen and George Pesce, carpenter strike "terrorists" convicted of the manslaughter of MacIvan Campbell, a nonunion worker, and now in San Quentin prison, was filed today with the State District Court. It consists of 1695 pages of transcript of testimony in the four trials which occurred before the two were found guilty of manslaughter as a compromise. They were tried three times for murder, in each case the jury disagreeing.

JOINT SHIP BIDDERS NOT TO COMBINE

Matson, President States Lines Will Not be Merged if Obtained at Sale

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Cooperation of the Matson Navigation Company and the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company in an effort to obtain control of three steamship lines to be relinquished by the United States government February 10, will mean joint operation of the lines and no more, William P. Roth, president of the Matson company, said here today. Roth's statement followed announcement that the two companies are prepared to bid for control of the American Australia Oriental Company of San Francisco, the Oregon-Oriental Line of Portland and the American Oriental Mail Line of Seattle.

"There is no intention of combining the Matson and the American Hawaiian companies," Roth said. "Should we be successful in our plan to acquire the government ships, we will form a separate company to operate the three lines."

It has been known here for some time that the two companies were interested in the government freight line operated out of this port, but the announcement of the intention to bid for the other two lines came as a surprise. The Matson and American-Hawaiian interests now control forty-six vessels.

Levine Faces Federal Suit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, who traversed the Atlantic in an airplane with Clarence Chamberlin, has been notified by the Department of Justice that unless he settles the government's claims growing out of sale of surplus war materials his case will be brought into the Federal courts.

It is understood that the department has offered to settle for $300,000, while Levine's attorneys are offering $100,000.

Mrs. Al Smith Surgery Patient

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the New York Governor, was removed from her rooms at the Hotel Biltmore to St. Vincent's Hospital late this afternoon and operated on for appendicitis early tonight.

Mrs. Smith first felt ill last Friday night. Her condition became more serious today and at 5 p.m. she was taken to the hospital in a private ambulance. The Governor accompanied her there.

LONDON IN PERIL YET

Tides in Thames Still Rising

Flood Held Worst Disaster Caused by River in Modern Times

Total Dead Set at Fourteen With Terrific Damage to be Estimated

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—High tides driven by a violent gale from the North Sea met the flood waters of the Upper Thames Valley in London early today, and wrought the city's worst flood disaster in living memory. Crashing through the protecting wall in two places and overflowing its banks at a number of low spots, the river swept into hundreds of dwellings, and drowned fourteen persons, and threatened the lives of thousands.

Tonight police and residents along the swollen Thames watched and guarded against a recurrence of the destructive overflow, which the authorities assert will remain a threat yet for several days.

GALLERY LOSS HEAVY

While relief organizations are caring for hundreds of destitute and homeless, and the police are clearing away the wreckage of the flood, no authoritative estimate as to property damage has been made, although this undoubtedly will reach staggering figures.

Probably the outstanding loss occurred in the Tate Gallery, officially styled the National Gallery of British Art, where 15,000 Turner drawings are among the damaged or ruined art treasures. The Turner wing contains, in addition to this vast number of drawings, numerous finished and unfinished paintings by the great artist.

Notable structures affected by the flood are the houses of Parliament, the Tower of London, Waterloo Hospital, St. Thomas Hospital, Blackwall tunnel, Chelsea power house and Woolwich arsenal. The hospitals were affected only in the basements.

Within a few hundred yards of the stately houses of Parliament, and the venerable Westminster Abbey, and across the river within a stone's throw of Lambeth Palace, official residence of the archbishops of Canterbury since the day of the Plantagenets, there are dwellings crowded together, where many thousands of London's poorest find shelter. Upon these the flood waters came swiftly in the night.

INRUSH SUDDEN

So sudden was the inrush that the inhabitants hardly had time to put on their miserable semblance of outdoor wear. Plunging into the dark streets, they found them flowing like canals, the murky waters already stealing toward the upper rooms of the dwellings.

Mounted police battered at doors to arouse sleeping inmates. They stood in their stirrups, and reached

REALTY MEN TALK LAWS

State Directors at San Diego

Legislative Recommendations Given to Committee for Final Approval

Officers' Installation, Ball and Banquet Feature Dual Meeting

BY C. C. COHAN
"Times" Staff Representative

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Presentation of legislative ideas pertaining to the bonding of real-estate dealers and other propositions concerning realty selling and the referring of them to the organization's legislative committee, Louis J. Pfau, San Francisco, chairman, for consideration and action, were outstanding features of today's meeting of the board of directors of the California Real Estate Association.

The midwinter quarterly session and annual inaugural meeting of the association was climaxed with an inaugural banquet and ball at the San Diego Hotel tonight, previous to which President Hotchkiss, San Diego, and other officers of the State association, with officers of the San Diego Realty Board, were installed in office.

DIRECTORS IN SESSION

The directors of the State association began their meeting this morning at the U. S. Grant Hotel, continuing it through the luncheon attended by them there, President-elect Hotchkiss presiding. The directors considered and acted on various matters threshed out by the executive council at its meeting the night before.

The budget was approved as presented by the ways and means committee, of which Robert Baker, Los Angeles, is chairman. A good surplus was shown which, added to the reserve fund, will be invested in a loan and building association. Plans for an intensive membership drive sanctioned by the executive council were approved by the directors. Approval was given suggestions presented by the resolutions committee of which W. E. Daum, Los Angeles, is chairman. Among other things, the resolutions favored a plan of property-owner memberships in the association. The resolutions also expressed appreciation for the work done in behalf of realty welfare by Gov. Young, State Real Estate Commissioner Barnson, Harry H. Culver and Harold J. Stonier. A plan for preparation of the association's history was approved by the committee.

REPORTS SUBMITTED

Reports were made by regional vice-presidents and realty board officials. The appraisal committee, Peter Hason, Pasadena, chairman, made recommendations as to realty forms and fees for the appraisal course instituted by the University of Southern California.

A vote of thanks was tendered the

PHENOMENAL GROWTH SHOWN BY CITIES OF PACIFIC COAST

The extraordinary growth of Pacific Coast cities in the past seven years is strikingly set forth in the results of a population survey of the principal cities of California, Oregon and Washington just completed for The Times by the Newspaper Feature Bureau. The 1928 figures, which are as of January 1, are based on public utility records, school attendance and other official data, conservatively interpreted. The 1920 figures are those of the last Federal census. a

ENJOYING WORK PAYS

When Vernon and Irene Castle electrified New York and Paris with their newly created dance steps, some years ago, they were successful only because they loved their work, explains Miss Castle in an article in Liberty.

"Had our work been an effort," writes the dancer, "I doubt if it would have pleased people as they claim it did. The enjoyment Vernon and I got out of it made others enjoy it, and, in our case, at least, I feel that too much technique, too studied and finished a performance, would have destroyed the spirit of our dancing and robbed it of its youthful spirit."

TORE INTO THE SOD

A golfer at a resort was introduced to a clergyman. They had a round together. Unluckily the layman was rather irascible when off his game and used some sulphurous language. The clergyman was shocked and moved to protest. "I think you ought to respect the cloth," he said at last.

"I do respect the cloth," said the short-tempered man, "but what's that got to do with it—we're not playing billiards."—[Boston Transcript.

BEGGARS RAP BAN ON CHILD LABOR

Japanese Mendicants Protest Prohibiting Children Seeking Alms

TOKIO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Beggars of Tokio have protested to police against the plan to prohibit the use of children in the begging business.

There are some 400 professional beggars in Tokio and most of them use pathetic-looking children—either their own or rented ones—to tease ten-sen pieces from the pockets of soft-hearted citizens. If they are not permitted to use children, the beggars claim, their business will be ruined. The police plan to place the children in a government home where they can be educated and cared for.

The police say some beggars have made small fortunes at their business, but most of them live in doss houses or in the slums.

S-4 GIVES UP TEN MORE

Bodies Found in Engine Room

Total of Seventeen Out of Forty Crash Victims Now Recovered

Further Retrieval Efforts to be Delayed Until Hulk is Raised

PROVINCETOWN (Mass.) Jan. 7. (AP)—The sunken submarine S-4 gave up the bodies of ten more victims today, making a total of seventeen that have been recovered out of the crew of forty aboard the craft when it was rammed and sunk by the Coast Guard destroyer Paulding three weeks ago today.

Nine of the bodies recovered today were found in the engine room, as were the seven that had been removed from the wreck previously. The tenth was found just inside the door of the motor compartment. The bodies were recovered by fifteen divers, working in five relays of three men each, who carried on their search from morning until night.

WORK TO BE HALTED

Officers of the salvage fleet tonight expressed doubt that any more bodies will be removed from the wreck until after the submarine has been raised. Divers reported that

PYORRHEA CURE QUEST NEARS END

MANHATTAN (Kan.) Jan. 7. (AP)—A twenty-one-year search for a pyorrhea cure is nearing an end, says Dr. N. L. Roberts, Manhattan dental surgeon, with success in sight.

Dr. Roberts will soon present to the profession a formula which he says will conquer the disease. He attacked the problem in 1906, but only recently has he progressed sufficiently in his laboratory research to offer his claims to his colleagues and permit his formula to undergo the rigorous tests of scientists.

Dr. Roberts has announced that he will give the results of his labors to the profession as his contribution to the scientific side of dental surgery.

Duchess of York Society Leader

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Duchess of York has become a leader of fashion in the ultra-smart younger set of London society since her Australian tour.

Whether it be a particular kind of pin or brooch to fasten her fur, an ostrich feather fan to carry at a dance, any particular shape of hat or shade of color for a dress, no sooner does the Duchess appear with one or the other than it immediately becomes the fashion and is seen here, there and everywhere.

The latest dance frocks are being made rather short but with a small train, and society dress-makers assert it is because the Duchess has appeared on several occasions in such a gown.

AIRPLANES TRANSPORT TONS OF MACHINERY

WINNIPEG, Jan. 7. (AP)—A season's test is reported to have established the value of the airplane as an aid to mining. Three planes operated in the remote mining district of Northern Manitoba carried 1000 passengers and 200,000 pounds of freight between December, 1926, and August, 1927.

The outstanding feat was transportation of eight tons of machinery, dynamite and men from Cache Lake to the end of Hudson's Bay Railway.

Six more planes will be put into service shortly.

Authorship Not Determined as Procurer Denies Forging, But Names Sellers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Mexican documents published in Hearst newspapers were accepted today as forgeries, on the basis of handwriting experts' reports, by Miguel Avila, procurer of the papers, and John Page, writer of the Hearst stories, before the special Senate committee, as it concluded its inquiry.

Asked point blank by Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, if he forged the documents, Avila said "No." Pressed as to who did "fake" them he shrugged his shoulders and referred to the "man who gave them to me."

TWO SELLERS NAMED

Avila said that Francisco Tobias, a clerk in the Mexican consulate office in New York, sold him the papers purporting to come from the official files there. Avila named Pedro Gonzales as the man who sold him papers represented as having come from Mexico City archives. He told the committee Tobias still works in New York, and he thinks Gonzales is working at the Ford factory in Detroit.

Page likewise declared he has no idea who forged the papers and said he did not ask Avila "because he is my friend and I did not want to insult him."

After closely examining Avila the committee wound up its hearings and indicated before going into executive session it will make a report of its findings to the Senate early next week.

SENATORS CLEARED

One of the documents purported to show the creation of a $1,215,000 Mexican fund for four United States Senators. These Senators — Borah, Idaho; Norris, Nebraska; Heflin, Alabama, and La Follette, Wisconsin—were cleared soon after the start of the inquiry by W. R. Hearst, the publisher, and the committee, of any suspicion of having received the money or having been approached in regard to it.

The search then into the authenticity of the documents brought reports from five handwriting experts, three of whom were hired by Mr. Hearst, that the papers are "unquestionably ungenuine."

It is the view of the committee members that no action can be taken in this jurisdiction against those who forged the signatures of President Calles and other Mexican officials to the documents even if they were definitely known.

Senator Reed today asked Page and Avila if they know a man named

SANTA AIDS COAL MINE STRIKERS

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8. (AP)—There's a Santa Claus in New Kensington, Pa., striking coal miners say—a former boxer, turned business man. He has dug deep into his accumulated earnings this winter to give aid and comfort to families of strikers housed in hastily built barracks.

When coal companies decided to sell the household goods of strikers to obtain back rent for living in company-owned houses, Fred Broad, real estate broker, appeared in the role of Santa. He bought the furnishings—and returned them to the strikers. He has invested some $30,000 in such purchases.

This furniture has gone to the barracks erected by the United Mine Workers where strikers, their wives and children are braving winter.

Broad's interest in miners goes back to 1919 when his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fannie Sellins, a moving spirit among the workers, was slain during a strike disorder. From middleweight boxer and boxing promoter he has come to be a leading business man of New Kensington and a bank director.

He does not call his giving charity. He insists that he will not lose a cent because, he asserts, the miners will pay him back when they return to work.

TELEPHONE EXECUTIVE GIVEN RECOGNITION

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—J. W. Gilkyson, coast division commercial manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, who surveyed the route for the present long-distance line from Tehachapi to Los Angeles and who was a prominent figure in establishment of transcontinental lines from San Francisco in 1915, has been honored with a six-starred gold service emblem at the conclusion of forty years of service with one organization. Gilkyson still is active and expects to remain so for many more years. He served in Los Angeles in an executive capacity in 1909 and 1910.

KETCHIKAN WRECKED BY HIGH WINDS

Gale Levels Houses and Scatters Craft in Harbor; Alaskan Liner Safe

KETCHIKAN (Alaska) Jan. 7. (AP)—Sweeping out of the southwest at a velocity of seventy miles an hour, a terrific windstrom today wrought havoc in the town of Ketchikan.

Scores of buildings were damaged, while three residences were tossed into the storm-lashed waters of Tongass Narrows. No loss of life is reported.

Scows and small vessels broke loose from their moorings and were battered against the foundations of the waterfront homes in Newtown. Three hundred and fifty thousand logs of the Ketchikan Lumber and Shingle Company were carried away by the tempest.

The windstorm, described as the most severe ever known here, struck the city at noon. As the waves of the Narrows lashed the Newtown district, scores of persons abandoned their homes. Hundreds of fishing craft along the waterfront were in imminent danger of capsizing before the storm subsided early tonight. Water filled a number of Newtown stores.

The passenger liner Alameda of the Alaska Steamship Company succeeded in docking here from Seattle just before the storm reached its height.

A wharf of the Sunny Point Canning Company suffered considerable damage. Iron roofing of the cannery buildings was blown away.

The 110-foot Coast Guard cutter Cygan limped into port this afternoon after bucking a terrific gale in Dixon entrance.

Unusually Low Area on Way to Moisten State

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The speed with which an area of unusually low barometric pressure approaches the California coast will determine to a large extent the weather conditions of the next week, Forecaster Bowie opined tonight. The weather chart reveals a widespread low from the Alaskan chain to the Honolulu steamer lane. Its core, off Alaska, was reported by the steamer Achilles to be as low as 28.6, but the wind is blowing from the south. Eventually the wind will shift and the presence or absence of counterwinds will govern the situation.

The extreme edge of the area probably will be felt in rainfall on the farthest Northern California coast by morning, the forecaster believes. There was no rain today, however.

Bishop Cannot Understand Ban on Miss Royden

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—It is difficult for Rt. Rev. A. F. Deane, lord bishop of Aberdeen, Scotland, to understand how "kind-hearted" Americans" can prevent a woman minister from preaching simply because she smokes cigarettes.

"If there are such people they ought to be put in a lunatic asylum," remarked the bishop, here during a tour soliciting funds for a church memorial.

His comment was upon the action of church women of Boston and Oak Park, Ill., who canceled speaking engagements with Miss Agnes Maude Royden, English evangelist, supposedly because she smokes.

STOCK MARKET GOES WILD

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—All Saturday trading records on the New York Stock Exchange were broken today in a feverish outburst of buying created by the statement that President Coolidge sees nothing alarming in the huge volume of brokers' loans. Prices soared $1 to $9 a share in the first hour, but week-end profit-taking developed and substantial slices were cut from the early gains before the market closed. Sales totaled 1,672,900 shares.

Added to the President's statement was a declaration, construed as bullish, by W. C. Durant, prominent stock market operator and maker of automobiles. He belittled the "hue and cry" over brokers' loans and predicted that, in the normal course of business, this phase of credit will reach a volume of $5,000,000,000 within twelve months.

In the late selling, Greene Cananea Copper, recently a sensational performer, lost nearly $12 a share after it had reached $147.75. United States Steel and General Motors both relinquished their early gains of about $2 and radio corporation fell back from a day's peak of $103.50 to $99.87½. The latter rallied in the last few minutes, closing at $101.

Abnormally heavy buying also took place in the curb market, where sales of 460,000 shares were made, a new Saturday record. Bonds were accumulated in large amounts, particularly Treasury 3 3-4s and 3 3-8s, which sold above their previous records, and several of the popular railway mortgages.

Outside the securities markets, the day's chief interest centered in sterling exchange. The rate for sterling cables dropped more than half a cent to $4.87 7-32, definitely removing any likelihood of early shipments of gold to England. Other exchange rates were slightly lower.

Remus to Have Period of Rest Under Scrutiny

LIMA (O.) Jan. 7. (AP)—George Remus, acquitted by a Cincinnati jury of slaying his wife, Imogene, and committed to the State Hospital for the Insane here, will remain in the hospital quietly for a time at least, under observation of hospital physicians and three Lima doctors to be employed by Remus.

This much was definitely known of Remus's plans. He ultimately expects to free himself from detention. Just when the habeas corpus proceedings by which the former "king of bootleggers" hopes to effect his removal from the hospital, will be filed, remains a matter of conjecture.

CARPENTER STRIKE PAIR FILE APPEALS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The appeal of Gus Madsen and George Pesce, carpenter strike "terrorists" convicted of the manslaughter of MacIvan Campbell, a nonunion worker, and now in San Quentin prison, was filed today with the State District Court. It consists of 1695 pages of transcript of testimony in the four trials which occurred before the two were found guilty of manslaughter as a compromise. They were tried three times for murder, in each case the jury disagreeing.

JOINT SHIP BIDDERS NOT TO COMBINE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Co-operation of the Matson Navigation Company and the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company in an effort to obtain control of three steamship lines to be relinquished by the United States government February 10, will mean joint operation of the lines and no more, William P. Roth, president of the Matson company, said here today. Roth's statement followed announcement that the two companies are prepared to bid for control of the American Australia Oriental Company of San Francisco, the Oregon-Oriental Line of Portland and the American Oriental Mail Line of Seattle.

"There is no intention of combining the Matson and the American Hawaiian companies," Roth said. "Should we be successful in our plan to acquire the government ships, we will form a separate company to operate the three lines."

It has been known here for some time that the two companies were interested in the government freight line operated out of this port, but the announcement of the intention to bid for the other two lines came as a surprise. The Matson and American-Hawaiian interests now control forty-six vessels.

Levine Faces Federal Suit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, who traversed the Atlantic in an airplane with Clarence Chamberlin, has been notified by the Department of Justice that unless he settles the government's claims growing out of sale of surplus war materials his case will be brought into the Federal courts.

It is understood that the department has offered to settle for $300,000, while Levine's attorneys are offering $100,000.

Mrs. Al Smith Surgery Patient

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the New York Governor, was removed from her rooms at the Hotel Biltmore to St. Vincent's Hospital late this afternoon and operated on for appendicitis early tonight.

Mrs. Smith first felt ill last Friday night. Her condition became more serious today and at 5 p.m. she was taken to the hospital in a private ambulance. The Governor accompanied her there.

LONDON IN PERIL YET

Tides in Thames Still Rising

Flood Held Worst Disaster Caused by River in Modern Times

Total Dead Set at Fourteen With Terrific Damage to be Estimated

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—High tides driven by a violent gale from the North Sea met the flood waters of the Upper Thames Valley in London early today, and wrought the city's worst flood disaster in living memory. Crashing through the protecting wall in two places and overflowing its banks at a number of low spots, the river swept into hundreds of dwellings, and drowned fourteen persons, and threatened the lives of thousands.

Tonight police and residents along the swollen Thames watched and guarded against a recurrence of the destructive overflow, which the authorities assert will remain a threat yet for several days.

GALLERY LOSS HEAVY

While relief organizations are caring for hundreds of destitute and homeless, and the police are clearing away the wreckage of the flood, no authoritative estimate as to property damage has been made, although this undoubtedly will reach staggering figures.

Probably the outstanding loss occurred in the Tate Gallery, officially styled the National Gallery of British Art, where 15,000 Turner drawings are among the damaged or ruined art treasures. The Turner wing contains, in addition to this vast number of drawings, numerous finished and unfinished paintings by the great artist.

Notable structures affected by the flood are the houses of Parliament, the Tower of London, Waterloo Hospital, St. Thomas Hospital, Blackwall tunnel, Chelsea power house and Woolwich arsenal. The hospitals were affected only in the basements.

Within a few hundred yards of the stately houses of Parliament, and the venerable Westminster Abbey, and across the river within a stone's throw of Lambeth Palace, official residence of the archbishops of Canterbury since the day of the Plantagenets, there are dwelling places crowded together, where many thousands of London's poorest find shelter. Upon these the flood waters came swiftly in the night.

INRUSH SUDDEN

So sudden was the inrush that the inhabitants hardly had time to put on their miserable semblance of outdoor wear. Plunging into the dark streets, they found them flowing like canals, the murky waters already stealing toward the upper rooms of the dwellings.

Mounted police battered at doors to arouse sleeping inmates. They stood in their stirrups, and reached

State Directors at San Diego

Legislative Recommendations Given to Committee for Final Approval

Officers' Installation, Ball and Banquet Feature Dual Meeting

BY C. C. COHAN
"Times" Staff Representative

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Presentation of legislative ideas pertaining to the bonding of real-estate dealers and other propositions concerning realty selling and the referring of them to the organization's legislative committee, Louis J. Pfau, San Francisco, chairman, for consideration and action, were outstanding features of today's meeting of the board of directors of the California Real Estate Association.

The midwinter quarterly session and annual inaugural meeting of the association was climaxed with an inaugural banquet and ball at the San Diego Hotel tonight, previous to which President Hotchkiss, San Diego, and other officers of the State association, with officers of the San Diego Realty Board, were installed in office.

DIRECTORS IN SESSION

The directors of the State association began their meeting this morning at the U. S. Grant Hotel, continuing it through the luncheon attended by them there, President-elect Hotchkiss presiding. The directors considered and acted on various matters threshed out by the executive council at its meeting the night before.

The budget was approved as presented by the ways and means committee, of which Robert Baker, Los Angeles, is chairman. A good surplus was shown which, added to the reserve fund, will be invested in a loan and building association. Plans for an intensive membership drive sanctioned by the executive council were approved by the directors. Approval was given suggestions presented by the resolutions committee of which W. E. Daum, Los Angeles, is chairman. Among other things, the resolutions favored a plan of property-owner memberships in the association. The resolutions also expressed appreciation for the work done in behalf of realty welfare by Gov. Young, State Real Estate Commissioner Barnson, Harry H. Culver and Harold J. Stonier. A plan for preparation of the association's history was approved by the committee.

REPORTS SUBMITTED

Reports were made by regional vice-presidents and realty board officials. The appraisal committee, Peter Hason, Pasadena, chairman, made recommendations as to realty forms and fees for the appraisal course instituted by the University of Southern California.

A vote of thanks was tendered the

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The inaugural address by President Hotchkiss was in part as follows:

"It is with a full knowledge of the work before me that I have accepted the great responsibility of presidency of the California Real Estate Association, which deals with the most fundamental economics of business, the business of real estate, which represents 65 per cent of all the wealth of our nation. It is the business on which every form of wealth is based, and to the real estate man goes the responsibility of looking after the property interests of California.

"Our State association is made up of the best-known real estate offices throughout the State. More than 150 cities are represented in its membership, and it works for the entire State.

"The California Real Estate Association today is an organization of service, both to the public and to ourselves. The real estate dealer is studying the tax problem—has helped create a State real estate department, has a strong city plan committee, an established standard form, created with the University of Southern California real estate and appraisal course; established a real estate magazine and State news service and many other departments which time will not allow me to take up.

"The work of our State association includes holding annual conventions and district conferences and the subjects studied and presented on these occasions include farm lands, industries, city planning, legislation, education, appraisals, brokerage, salesmanship, property management and real estate financing.

"We in California are fortunate indeed. We live in and are selling a great State to which the eyes of the world are turned. Our growth is starting. No one can tell how great the West Coast will become. There are only about 9,000,000 people on the Pacific Coast and California alone has room for and can comfortably support 50,000,000. We have but to get the knowledge of what California is and has back to the people of the East and population will come. It is our duty as real estate dealers to locate them, build for them and make them welcome, and above all see that they are fairly dealt with and ours will be a happy lot. We will prosper and grow with this greatest State in the Union, the Golden State, California."

INVESTMENT TOLD

Glenn D. Willaman, State secretary of the California Real Estate Association, addressing the board of directors at its meeting this afternoon on the subject of "Seventeen Million For Real-Estate Advancement," spoke in part as follows:

"The first organizations in real estate in California date back to the beginning of the present century and we have found by careful analysis of the time, effort and money spent in furtherance of the aims and ideals of the California Real Estate Association and its affiliated boards that the bill of expense of careful investments, if it were to be correctly counted up would total over $17,000,000 and that an average of 15,000 in the real estate business annually over a period of twenty-five years contributed this vast amount.

"But the real burden of the cost—more than 80 per cent of it—fell upon the rank and file of the California State Realty Federation and its member boards, now known as the California Real Estate Association as the following tells:

COSTS ITEMIZED

California licensees have paid in past years:

License fees to real estate department, $1,500,000; bonds, fees paid to surety companies, $1,200,000; educational courses, $100,000; literature (books,) $100,000; State magazine and news service, etc. $150,000; support of C.R.E.A., dues, forms, $250,000; director meetings, $100,000; conferences, $50,000; State conventions prior to World War, $200,000; State conventions since World War, $500,000; national dues, $125,000; national conventions, $400,000; local boards, dues, etc, $1,500,000; miscellaneous, $1,000,000; value of time volunteered, measured in earning power, $10,000,000; grand total, $17,175,000.

"No account is taken of the countless but timely contributions which real estate dealers have made in appraisals to their communities nor of the tremendous value of the combined realty interests to their local communities in furthering home industries, developing local agriculture and bringing in new home owners.

"The foregoing figures include more than $500,000 paid to the State in surplus fees which under the present law revert to the general fund of the State."

LO! THE POOR INDIAN GAL!

Exie Tolleson, Rich, Divorced and Temperamental Faces Suit for Stealing Love of Rival's Husband

MUSKOGEE (Okla.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Another court summons today confronts Exie Fife Jackson Tolleson, Creek Indian woman who has been twice married and divorced since she awoke one morning in her shack home at Fame to find a huge oil gusher had brought her wealth during the night.

Exie, who at 24 years of age, is known as "the poor little rich girl," yesterday was named defendant in a $100,000 alienation suit by Leona McIntosh, another Creek girl, who obtained her wealth from oil.

Leona, daughter of Eastman Richards, rich Creek of Richardsville, after whom the town was named, charged that Exie sought to gain the affection of Emerson McIntosh by offers of money and other inducements.

This suit followed within a year the investigation of Exie's divorce from Berlin Jackson, which resulted in the conviction of seven lawyers on a charge of conspiring to defraud the government. "Evidence showed she paid $50,000 to obtain a divorce from Jackson, a white youth she knew at Fame. T. A. Chandler, former Oklahoma Representative, was one of those convicted. It was asserted that Jackson received only a portion of the money.

Government investigators revealed that Exie was virtually penniless in May, 1922, and that the day before the first gusher was brought in she borrowed $1.50 from a field clerk at the Indian agency.

Exie's attorneys have not indicated what their reply will be to Leona's charges, details of which are withheld.

HEARST INQUIRY COMES TO END

Nosevitsky who, he said, had written stories for the Hearst papers telling how he made some fake documents. Both replied they do not know him, but had heard of him.

Avila added that he had been told by a detective in New York that Arturo Elias, the Mexican Consul-General, had attempted to hire Nosevitsky to fake some documents to disprove those being published in the Hearst papers.

Insisting he had never read the documents until they were published in the Hearst papers, Avila told the committee that he approached both Gonzales and Tobias first in regard to obtaining the papers and he produced a key to the Mexican Consulate office in New York which, he said, Tobias gave him.

At the executive meeting today a secret witness was heard. It is understood he is the man in Mexico who first called the attention of Mr. Hearst to the fact that documents were available.

had the opportunity to observe hundreds of varieties of tropical birds of many and varied colors. Some were a bright green and very small, while others flew along in flocks, their bright plumage standing out distinctly.

The most striking of all were some birds of a brilliant red, yellow and blue—red heads and breasts, yellow rings on the front of their wings, with most of the wings blue and red tail feathers, streaming out a foot or a foot and a half. There also were some large black birds with a white spot on their backs.

I passed over a river fifty feet wide where I observed a native dugout made of a log. It was drawn up on the shore but there were no other signs of human life.

I passed a small banana grove, but I could observe nobody. Passing the second river I saw a small native hut, but again there was no sign of a living person.

SKIMS MOUNTAINS

The strong cross winds had by now disappeared. After passing the second river I varied my course to the south in order to be sure of sighting the river to the west of San Jose as a landmark.

The elevation of the ground rose steadily from here on, and here and there, looking out of the window at the side of the ship I observed small cultivated areas. As I approached the mountains it was necessary to circle up through an opening in the clouds, which covered most of the mountainsides.

After spiraling around to an altitude of 7000 feet I was able to cross over the mountains and dip down into the valley, where I found myself over the town of Alajuela.

San Jose was clearly visible at a distance of fifteen miles.

Arriving over the field at 1:50, I saw a large crowd and, fearing that they might rush the plane, I dropped a note, written on a flying chart, asking that the crowd be moved back.

I had circled the field several times by then and was able while waiting, to get a further view of the country, which is attractive.

FIELD CROWDED

San Jose lies in the center of a valley formed by mountains, which appear blue, yellow and green, depending on the character of the vegetation.

The field is half a mile from the town and one kilometer long. It is one of the best fields in Central America, but the crowd extended on both sides and across one end.

I crossed the field, flying low, three times, and could see the bands in uniforms playing and the people waving their hats and flags. I waited for the police to move back the crowd, but while they moved back a short distance, they seemed determined to remain close about the edge of the field.

Finally it seemed the crowd was growing a little quieter. So I circled the field twice more and then descended from the west and down to approximately the middle of the field.

As the plane came to a halt I saw a mass of people break through the police lines and come rushing across the field. I started to taxi down the field so as to halt in a clear space, but the crowd was rushing out from all sides and I feared someone might come into contact with the propeller. So I cut out the switches, stopping the propeller.

PLANE SAVED

I jumped out of the cockpit to be surrounded by a mass of persons who seemed intent on embracing me. My main concern was lest they injure the plane, as dozens of them were swarming about it. The situation was saved by the police, who ran up with drawn sabers and formed a cordon about the plane.

Into the circle came the United States Minister, Roy T. Davis, accompanied by officials of the Costa Rica government. After their greetings I started down the field to meet President Jimenez, but the crowd was so dense that I made slow progress.

Finally, I reached him. Then we walked slowly toward a building at the edge of the field where the bands were playing "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the Costa Rican anthem.

On every hand a cordiality, which I sincerely appreciate, was shown. After the informal greeting we entered automobiles, forming a parade across the center of the field and down the main streets of the town which were lined with people. We passed through the principal streets and the park to the American Legation, where Mr. Davis has invited me to make my home while I am here. I look forward to my stay here with great pleasure.

The plans for the rest of my trip are not definite. I expect to take off for Panama on Monday forenoon and will remain there for some days. After that I hope to visit some of the islands of the Antilles and the West Indies.

I have received and accepted an invitation from President Borno of Haiti.

S-4 YIELDS TEN MORE VICTIMS

it was unlikely that additional bodies remain in the engine room and that while there might be others in the motor compartment they will not be removed unless they were found to be in such positions as to interfere with the work of the divers who are preparing the submarine for unwatering, so that it can be raised by means of pontoons.

It generally was agreed by officers of the salvage fleet that the engine room, in which sixteen of the seventeen bodies so far recovered were found, had not been flooded until divers let in water in entering the wreck, and that the victims had not been drowned, but probably had died from chlorine gas poisoning.

BODIES WELL PRESERVED

All of the bodies were in good condition of preservation, although one was found to have a bad bruise on the face and another a large bump on the side of the head. One of the bodies was dressed in a heavy leather jacket, in the pocket of which was found a half-eaten raw potato. Another was clothed only in cotton underwear, one sock and one shoe. The rest all were dressed in blue denim.

As the bodies of the ten victims recovered today were brought to the surface, the flags flown by the vessels of the salvage fleet were lowered to half mast. The bodies were taken aboard the U.S.S. Bushnell and draped in flags and were later transferred to the destroyer Mahan, which sailed tonight for the Boston navy yard. On arrival at the navy yard the bodies will be taken to the Chelsea Naval Hospital for identification.

GUARD COMMANDER NAMED AS DEFENDANT

BOSTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Under the admiralty rule that the commander of a vessel which is in collision with another becomes a defendant in the subsequent inquiry, Lieutenant-Commander John H. Bayliss, who commanded the Coast Guard destroyer Paulding when it rammed and sank the submarine S-4 off Provincetown on December 17, today was named a defendant before the naval court of inquiry investigating the S-4 disaster.

The action came in the midst of testimony which Commander Bayliss was giving as a voluntary witness and resulted from his formal admission that the Paulding had been in collision with the S-4 at the place and on the date named.

Asked by the judge advocate, Commander Leslie E. Bratton, whether he had ever seen a submarine operating submerged in the waters of the Cape Cod area, the witness replied:

"Until the time we had the collision with the S-4 when she emerged suddenly on our port bow I never saw a submarine operating submerged in this area."

Several other questions had been put and answered before Rear-Admiral Richard H. Jackson, president of the court, notified the witness that testimony had been presented establishing Commander Bayliss legally as a defendant before the court.

The incident caused a momentary sensation in a morning of somewhat routine evidence and it was some time before those present grasped the real significance of the presiding officer's statement.

While Admiral Jackson explained later that the changing of the status of the witness was purely formal and rendered obligatory by his own testimony, Commander Bayliss and his counsel, Commander Leroy Reinburg commanding the Third Coast Guard Destroyer Squadron, requested and finally obtained an adjournment of the court until Monday in order to prepare themselves to meet the new situation.

In a statement issued after the court rose, Commander Reinburg said his purpose was to confer between this afternoon and Monday with his chief, Rear-Admiral Fred C. Billard, head of the Coast Guard Division, Washington.

NICE, Jan. 7. (AP)—When a Monte Carlo Club offered Suzanne Lenglen the French equivalent of $2000 to appear four times a week for three months on their courts her reply was "Bah."

The former queen of tennis is wrapped up in the collection of stamps, particularly the airmail issues, an enthusiasm she shares with her former manager, Baldwin Baldwin, Californian. Baldwin is said to have spent $20,000 on airmail stamps alone within the past three months. Suzanne acts as interpreter and bargainer for him on his buying expeditions.

Her father now has the stamp fever, but is devoting himself to collecting British stamps.

LONDON TAKES TOLL OF FLOOD

to the upper windows, helping people out.

An eyewitness on Lambeth bridge at the early morning high tide described the break which overflowed Grosvenor Road, Westminster, causing the death of ten persons. He observed water pouring over the brickwork of the embankment; then with a noise like heavy gunfire the stone wall burst, and boats anchored in the river were swept through to the roadway on the crest of the flood.

He and a policeman raced shouting through the threatened streets, often through torrents hip-high. Many persons awoke to find their rooms waist deep in water; some escaped by swimming through the windows.

Similar conditions prevailed at Hurlingham, further west, near Putney Bridge, where two persons were drowned. At Hammersmith, still further west, many were trapped in their homes.

In the low-lying Thames side sections of East London the overflow came less suddenly. Nevertheless, hundreds were routed from their homes by the invading waters. Wharves were flooded; two huge barges sank and another was flung on the towpath of Regent's Canal.

TERROR PRODUCED

The river produced terror and confusion also in the poorer sections of the South Side, but no fatalities are reported.

The outer vaults of Kew Observatory, west of the city, and the outer lawn where the thermometers and main gauges are situated, were inundated. The underground railway and tram services along the Thames were paralyzed for several hours, and boats plied as cabs for early travelers to the downtown offices.

The Port of London authority, in warning of a possible recurrence of the river's overflow, says that the high tide at 1:37 o'clock this morning was six feet, one inch, above the predicted level, and no record exists of such conditions before in the tidal waters of the Thames.

The warning declares that the tides will increase in height until Tuesday, next, when the prevailing flood conditions from the recent blizzard and thaw, together with a forecast of further storms, make the menace a real one.

Experts point out that the calamity was due to three contributory causes—first, the heavy gales which banked the Thames water, preventing its escape into the North Sea; second, the tremendous amount of flood waters coming down the Thames from its tributaries swollen with melted snow and ice from the hills; third, abnormally high spring tides, which coincide at this time of the year with the full moon.

The London press demands to know who is responsible for the disaster, and predicts that the subject will be given consideration when Parliament reconvenes.

SMITH DEFIES FUND DELVERS

Repudiated Senator Balks at Any Questioning

Stirring Demand Made for His State's "Rights"

Reed Says Committee Will Report Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Denied the oath of office by the Senate because of his primary campaign expenditures, Frank L. Smith of Illinois fired back today by refusing to submit himself to the jurisdiction of its special campaign funds committee.

His voice vibrating with emotion, the Senator-elect told the committee he must insist first on "the sovereign rights" of his State to have seated in the Senate the "candidate of her choice."

"When that right is granted," he said, "then I shall freely, gladly and unafraid, meet any and all charges respecting my moral or other fitness to continue a member of this distinguished body.

"But unless and until the right of my State to such full, equal and continuous representation is first accorded, I cannot become a party to an unwarranted precedent, nor to any pretended inquiry as to my personal fitness for association with the distinguished men now composing the Senate of the United States."

REPORTS TOMORROW

With this declaration by Smith, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, the chairman, announced that the committee, which in 1926 inquired exhaustively into Smith's primary campaign, will make a report to the Senate when it reconvenes Monday.

This report is expected to consist merely of the transcript of the statements made by the Senator-elect and Atty.-Gen. Carlstrom of Illinois and John Dailey, chairman of the special committee of the Illinois Legislature appointed to urge that the Senate seat Smith.

Several courses of action are open to the Senate. In denying Smith the oath of office last month, 53 to 28, and referring his case to the special committee, it granted him the privilege of the floor and it may be that he will be invited to appear in the chamber to present a statement.

Then again there may be a resolution to declare his seat vacant without further hearings. The general belief at the Capitol is that such a resolution will be adopted. That would leave Illinois with but one Senator unless Gov. Small cancels Smith's credentials and appoints his successor.

ACTION AWAITED

Friends of Smith said he will await the action of the committee before deciding on his future course. It is indicated, however, that he will not resign, even if the Senate declares his seat vacant, and it is not expected that Gov. Small will appoint a successor unless he does tender his resignation.

When the Illinois Senator-elect was denied a seat at the last session of Congress on his appointment by the Governor to fill out the term of the late Senator McKinley, it was stated on his behalf that he would not resign and would present his credentials at each succeeding session of the Senate until his term of six years expires, on March 4, 1933.

NEW DRY MANUAL ISSU

Forbids Searching Homes Without W Warns Against Law Violations by A

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—A word of caution by the Prohibition Bureau to its agents not to violate efforts to enforce the law. A new manual of instructions the bureau forbids agents to search a private dwelling and defines a dwelling as a residence, hotel, apartment house that is not occupied transiently.

Searches may be made of other premises, the rules provide, if the agents have reasonable grounds to suspect violation of the prohibition law.

"Unreasonable search or seizure is always illegal and reasonable search always permissible," the manual stipulates. "Generally, if an officer has reason to believe that an offense is being committed he may search without warrant, just as he may arrest without warrant when an offense is committed in his presence."

WARNING AGAINST ARMS

The manual points out that the Willis-Campbell Act makes it a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment for any Federal officer to search a private dwelling without a search warrant.

Particular stress is laid on the unnecessary use of firearms. The "promiscuous flourishing and display of firearms is prohibited," the manual declares, adding that "a weapon should never be drawn on a person except in self-defense or to prevent the commission of a felony."

"The unwise and unwarranted use of firearms by officers in the past has caused the bureau considerable embarrassment and resulted in much unfavorable and harmful publicity. An officer should remember that he would be held strictly accountable and personally responsible for the fatal result of any use of firearms by him."

Agents are advised to center their efforts on breaking up the sources of liquor rather than devoting time to minor offenses. The manual recommends that where local laws are adequate and local officers efficiently carry them out, the small cases should be left to their attention.

ENTRAPMENT ALLOWED

The entrapment of a violator by the use of decoys is permitted, but agents are warned against enticing a person to commit a crime in order to make a case. Neither are they allowed to obtain confessions unless the prisoner first is informed that it will be used against him.

The agents also are cautioned "to maintain a courteous bearing" and to dress "neatly but not conspicuously." They also are warned to take care of their personal conduct and that the bureau will not tolerate the failure of agents to pay their honest debts and will not allow agents actively to participate in politics.

KENTUCKY GOES ON HOOVER LIST

Blue Grass State Delegation Follows Jersey Lead

Steady Gains Reported from All Parts of Country

Root and Edison Backers of Commerce Secretary

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG
"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Kentucky today followed New Jersey in support of Herbert Hoover to succeed Calvin Coolidge. Three Republican members of the delegation declared for him. The movement was led by Representative Robison, who successfully managed the election of a Republican Governor in Kentucky last November, and elected Gov. Sampson over tremendous obstacles. His statement is approved by Senator Sackett and means that the entire Kentucky delegation at Kansas City will be for Hoover.

Immediately after Representative Robison made his declaration, Representative Thatcher, Republican member of Congress from the Louisville district, followed and Mrs. Katherine Langley, Congresswoman from the Tenth Kentucky District, also declared for Hoover.

With New Jersey yesterday formally declaring for Hoover and selecting Hoover men for delegates and alternates, the movement of Kentucky today indicates that the Hoover movement now is on its way and is accepted by politicians who see that the movement is getting into high gear in all parts of the country. Elihu Root of New York, former Senator and Secretary of War, has declared in favor of the nomination of Hoover and Thomas A. Edison, the pioneer electrical wizard of America, also has declared for him.

STEADY GAINS CONFIRMED

Reports from Kansas City from the convention committee on arrangements that Hoover is making gains steadily all over the country are confirmed here in every direction and great progress in his favor is reported in the up-State section of New York in spite of the apparent effort of Charles Hilles to still have an uninstructed delegation for Kansas City andtry there to draft Coolidge. There are rumors of a complete revolt and an instructed delegation for Hoover and the unseating of Hilles from his present position as member of the Republican National Committee from New York are expected unless Hilles changes his attitude.

From Kansas City originated rumors that headquarters soon are to be opened for Secretary Hoover in New York, or in Washington and other large cities in the East. This is absolutely without foundation. All the sentiment for Hoover is arising in the different cities of the United States and in all the States and there will be no headquarters opened in New York or Washington for Hoover. It is unnecessary for Secretary Hoover is strictly attending to his duties as Secretary of Commerce and declining all invitations to leave his work here.

STICKING TO HIS WORK

Even when it comes time for his name to be entered it will only be necessary for Hoover to advise close friends of his that they have permission to use his name. Up until the time the convention meets in Kansas City he will stick to his present work and in no sense be a candidate with any definite movement for his nomination.

If Hoover is nominated it will be because he is the most available and dependable candidate to succeed Coolidge and because of his record as an executive and result getter. All of the attempts to show that he cannot qualify for the office, started by disgruntled place seekers, already have bee ndissipated and now the example of New Jersey and Kentucky will be followed by many other States in rapid succession as the regular politicians realize the movement for Hoover already has gained tremendous momentum and the backing of the shrewdest Republican leaders in important cities.

CLUB MAKES DEMAND

The Roosevelt Club in Boston, with more than 1000 members, has demanded the nomination of Hoover to succeed Coolidge and similar action by Republican clubs of New York is likely to be announced next week.

Representative Robison today authorized this statement in favor of Herbert Hoover:

"I strongly favor the nomination of Secretary Hoover. He is a loyal Republican. He stands squarely for the principles and policies of the Republican party. He is fitted both by training and experience to make a great President. I spent ten days during the holidays in Kentucky and inquired of many Republicans, both men and women in all walks of life and representatives of various groups of the Republican party in Kentucky and, as President Coolidge and Charles Evans Hughes have definitely put themselves out of consideration, from the expressions I heard it seems that the sentiment among Kentucky Republicans strongly favors Mr. Hoover.

"There was little expression except for him."

THATCHER STATEMENT

Representative Robison's statement was immediately followed by a similar expression from Representative Thatcher of the Louisville district. Mr. Thatcher said:

"I am for the nomination of Herbert Hoover as Republican candidate for the Presidency. Since Mr. Coolidge has eliminated himself from consideration Mr. Hoover, in my judgment, is the logical man to succeed the President and to carry on the splendid humanitarian services undertaken during and after the World War; his great work as Secretary of Commerce, his marvelous grasp of economic questions at home and abroad eminently qualify him for the Presidency, and I predict his nomination and election. I believe that Mr. Hoover is the overwhelming choice of Kentucky Republicans, and that he will receive the State's solid delegate vote at the Kansas City convention."

PLANES UNABLE TO DRAG MAN

Resister Defies Two Craft to Budge Him When He Holds to Ropes

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—A professional resister, according to his own description of himself, Allen Corelli, resisted two large airplanes which tried to move in opposite directions at Curtiss Field. He held them back with ropes simultaneously.

Pilot Charles Prohinsid drove one of the planes, while Pilot Ivan Lamb was in the other. There was a crowd to witness the stunt.

A rope was tied to the tail of each plane. Corelli held an end of each rope wrapped once around each arm. Then he folded his arms and defied them to budge him. The planes were unable to move Corelli, despite their roaring motors. He did the trick four times. Corelli weighs 137 pounds.

LIQUOR BOND OF PARENTE LOST HERE

Bay City Prosecutor Will Start Hunt for Missing Rum-Case Document

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—An investigation was launched here today by U. S. Atty. Hatfield to determine what became of a $7500 bond sent to Los Angeles last July to cover one of the numerous appearances in liquor charges of Joe Parente, generally termed the king pin of Pacific Coast rum runners. Hatfield said the bond evidently has disappeared between the office of United States Commissioner Hayden and the office of the Federal District Court in Los Angeles.

Parente recently fled San Francisco rather than be sentenced on liquor charges, after various appeals had been taken up to the Supreme Court and denied. He was subsequently found in Vancouver but Federal officials here anticipate little chance of having him sent back to the jurisdiction of United States courts as the only means of doing so will be to prove his illegal entry into Canada.

As some matter of protection, they moved and obtained the forfeiture of more than $60,000 in bonds which had been supplied here for his court appearance. It was in checking down the available assets of Parente for seizure that Hatfield made the discovery that a $7500 bond posted with Commissioner Hayden on July 14 or 15 last, and forwarded to Los Angeles Federal Court, apparently had never arrived there.

When word was received here late today that Robert Zimmerman, clerk of the United States District Court, southern district, at Los Angeles, reported no record of a bond on file, Hatfield announced he would start an investigation to determine what became of it.

Alan Harriman Dies of Injury

GREAT NECK (N. Y.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Alan Harrimon, 35 years of age, son of J. W. Harriman, pres'dent of the Harriman National Bank of New York, died today from injuries in an automobile accident last night. He was head of an automobile agency in Babylon.

Harriman was found unconscious beneath his overturned car near Massapequa yesterday afternoon by Chester P. Ketcham, former village president of Babylon and was taken to the office of Dr. John B. Healy of Babylon. Death was caused by a blood clot of the brain.

Roosevelt Goes on Stump Again

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Col. Theodore Roosevelt in a swing about New York City last night delivered four addresses in which he attacked Tammany Hall and the administration of Gov. Smith. No previous announcement of the tour had been made, and in political circles it was interpreted that he is a prospective candidate for Governor, an office for which he once was defeated by Gov. Smith.

HOTEL ROOMS GO UP FOR G.O.P.

Kansas City Hotel Men to Boost 25 Per Cent

Chairman Butler Blocks Doubling Rates

Committee Meets in April to Settle Details

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 7. (AP)—Hotel rates on increased capacity rooms in Kansas City for the Republican national convention next June will be 25 per cent higher than normal, under an agreement reached today between the subcommittee of the Republican national committee and local hotel managers.

William M. Butler, chairman of the national committee, pronounced the arrangement entirely satisfactory and said an agreement had been reached that prices of meals will not be boosted during the convention.

Ralph Williams, national committeeman from Oregon, Roy O. West of Illinois, secretary of the national committee, and Lafayette Gleason, New York, secretary of the convention, were named as a committee to assign rooms.

The subcommittee adjourned to meet here in April at the call of the chairman.

WANTED DOUBLE CHARGES

The agreement on hotel rates came after a several-hour conference at which the hotel men first presented a plan for "capacity rates" which would have meant double charges for rooms large enough to accommodate two beds.

This plan was objected to by members of the committee, who said double rates would not be keeping faith with the promise of the invitation committee in Washington that rates would not be hiked. The committee then suggested the 25-per-cent increase with extra charge for additional beds in rooms. The compromise was accepted.

The hotel operators presented figures to the committee showing that 5400 hotel rooms will be available within a radius of four blocks of convention hall and 10,000 rooms available within a radius of eight blocks. Mr. Butler said he was entirely satisfied as to the "quantity and quality" of the rooms.

PLAN HEADQUARTERS

Suggested plans to lease two floors of the new Midland Theater Building as convention headquarters were dropped when it was found the management was unwilling to hold the space open until June. Later the committee took under consideration the old University Club building at Eleventh street and Baltimore avenue, four blocks from the hall, and the engagement of several rooms in the Kansas City Athletic Club building, three blocks from the hall, for committee meetings.

Arrangements for broadcasting proceedings of the convention were left in the hands of J. Henry Roraback, National Committeeman from Connecticut who will receive applications and make recommendations to the committee. Three applications for broadcast privileges were received today coming from the National Broadcasting Company, the Chicago Tribune station WGN, and the Kansas City Journal-Post.

An expected application from the Columbia Broadcasting Company was not presented, but it is expected to be made later.

ROOM FOR ALL

George B. Longan, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, who presented the National company's application, told the committee the National company will not object to broadcasting privileges being granted the Columbia Company and WGN also.

James Frances Burke of Pittsburgh, general counsel for the committee, was named parliamentarian for the national convention this afternoon, and the rules of the House of Representatives were approved to govern the convention.

At the April meeting will be discussed the exact seating of delegates, location of the working newspaper men, seating of distinguished guests and other matters relating directly to the conduct of the convention.

The housing subcommittee announced it would meet Monday with the Kansas City housing committee to discuss hotel reservations and begin the allocation of reservations.

Miss Boll Picks Sea Trip Plane

ROOSEVELT FIELD (N. Y.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Miss Mabel Boll of Paris and New York, formerly of Rochester, N. Y., known as the queen of diamonds because of the profusion of gems she habitually wears, picked out her plane for an overseas flight today after a test hop in "Mrs. Lindbergh's plane."

Miss Boll, who is reported to have offered Charles Levine $25,000 for a seat in his plane when he was thinking of flying back to America, rode for forty minutes in the Ford cabin tri-motored monoplane in which Mrs. Lindbergh flew to Mexico City and back. Her pilot was Harry Brooks, who piloted Mrs. Lindbergh. Levine accompanied Miss Boll.

After landing Miss Boll said that she will use a plane of this type and make for an attempted ocean flight in April, with a pilot still to be selected.

STEINWAY
·The·Instrument·of·the·Immortals·

When the fingers of Richard Wagner first touched the keys of a Steinway in 1879, its reputation as the world's foremost piano was already definitely established. That reputation has grown and expanded with the years. Today the Steinway is the universally accepted instrument, not only upon the concert stage, but in thousands of cultivated homes.

There are still Steinways in active service which sounded to the touch of childish fingers, rang beneath the impact of maturer hands, and continued to make their rich and sure return even to the second and third generation . . . Such an instrument is more than an exquisite mechanism. It enters upon a personal, intimate relationship. It becomes a companion, a mentor, and a friend.

Viewed in the light of its amazing durability, the Steinway is actually among the least expensive of pianos.

JACKSON DINERS TO HEAR M'ADOO

Former Treasury Secretary Speaker at Banquet

Ex-Candidate Will Stress Party Unity

Many Democratic Leaders to Attend Event

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—William G. McAdoo has accepted an invitation to speak at the Jackson Day Democratic dinner here January 12, but unlike most of the other speakers he will not appear in the role of a Presidential candidate. Instead he is expected to draw upon the experiences to the 1924 Democratic convention in Madison Square Garden to give point to a warning that the party must not indulge in another such contest over the nomination if it hopes to win in 1928.

Gov. Smith of New York, who was Mr. McAdoo's chief opponent at the Madison Square Garden convention, has declined to attend the dinner, at which outstanding Democratic Presidential possibilities had been asked to discuss the issues of the day.

AS EX-CANDIDATE

Several others, including Senator Reed of Missouri, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland and Senator Walsh of Montana are expected to accept.

When Mr. McAdoo was asked today whether he would attend the dinner as a candidate, he replied:

"No, as an ex-candidate."

The former Treasury Secretary, whose friends waged a stubborn but losing battle in his behalf both in 1920 and in 1924, announced last September that this year he will "stand aside." In an open letter at that time he said his chief concern was "for the supremacy of Democratic principles and progressive policies" and that he felt he could do more to advance these principles as a private in the ranks than as a contender for the nomination.

SPEECH FORECAST

Although he declined today to indicate what sort of a speech he will make at the dinner, his friends expect him to reiterate the views expressed in his letter of September, and call on the party to unite behind a standard bearer who can rally all elements of the Democracy to his support.

Invitations for the dinner were extended by the Democratic National Committee, which will be in session here next week to choose a 1928 convention city. The committee has declined to make public the list of those who have accepted or declined.

MANCHURIAN AUTHORITIES RASP JAPAN

Koreans Ordered to Adopt Chinese or Foreign Garb and to Get Passports

PEKING (China) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Another sharp issue between the Peking government and Japan is being forced to the fore by the action of the Manchurian authorities, acting under approval of Peking.

In Manchuria an order has gone forth that henceforth all Koreans there must wear either Chinese or foreign clothes, the characteristic Korean garb being forbidden. Koreans are also ordered to pay all taxes levied upon Chinese citizens, and to get passports at once under penalty of expulsion.

Koreans are Japanese subjects, and enjoy the same privileges and ex-extraterritoriality which Japanese enjoy. The Tokio government cannot calmly accept this affront and attempt to differentiate between classes of Japanese citizens.

For several years Marshal Chang Tso-Lin was usually thought of as the puppet of Japan, but for the last year he has been actually truculent in his official attitude toward the Japanese.

Angeleno Given New State Post

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Seth R. Brown of Los Angeles today was appointed by Gov. Young as chief of the Division of State Employment Agencies of the State Department of Industrial Relations.

The position is a new one created by the governmental organization bills passed by the last Legislature.

He has supervision over the State free-employment bureaus. Brown's headquarters will be in Sacramento.

SHELL GETS CONTRACT TO SUPPLY STATE OIL

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Award of a contract to the Shell Oil Company of California for approximately 300,000 barrels of fuel oil needed at California's several hospitals, prisons and corrective schools during the calendar year, was announced today by State Purchasing Agent McMillin. The oil will be distributed to the institutions for 98 cents a barrel at the shipping points, a price 6 cents below the prevailing market. The State also is assured that it will benefit from any decrease.

DONKEY SNIFFS PICKINGS AFAR

Democrats' Interest Centers on California Check

Arrival of Tribute Bearers Anxiously Awaited

Bay City's Convention Bid Held Winning One

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Said to be bringing a check for $250,000 to guarantee expenses, Isadore Dockweiler of Los Angeles, Democratic national committeeman from California, and Mrs. Charles J. Donohue of Oakland, the State's committeewoman, are scheduled to arrive here tomorrow to direct California's fight to land the 1928 Democratic convention for San Francisco.

Preceding them to arrange for headquarters, John F. Shea of San Francisco, secretary of the California Northern Hotel Association, reached Washington today and already has set up a one-man ballyhoo that is attracting attention in all the downtown hotel lobbies.

Main headquarters, Shea said, will be at the Mayflower Hotel, where the sessions of the national committee next week will be held.

"Military tactics" will be employed in an effort to obtain the convention, he declared, with California's invitation extensively advertised by banners, arm bands, posters, and other insignia. "We did not go after the Republican convention hard enough and lost it," Shea declared, "and we won't lose out for the same reasons this time."

Advance speculation is to the effect San Francisco is almost certain to get the convention if the city is ready to guarantee a satisfactory purse and the report of the check for a quarter of a million dollars in the hands of Dockweiler and Mrs. Donohue dispels doubt on this score.

Former Senator Phelan and other prominent California Democrats are said to be en route to Washington also.

NEGRESS TO BE NAMED LEGISLATIVE MEMBER

WELCH (W. Va.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Mrs. E. Howard Harper today was recommended by the Republican executive committee to Gov. Gore for appointment as a member of the House of Delegates to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of her husband. Mrs. Harper, a negress, will be the first negro woman member of any Legislature in the country, leaders of her race here said tonight. The Governor is required by law to follow the committee's recommendation.

FRENCH TREATY HOPES REVIVED

New Note from Paris Brings Optimism in Capital

Arbitration Ideas Appear to be Accepted Abroad

Pact Considered More Vital Than Antiwar One

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—New life was given Franco-American treaty negotiations today by a new French note presented to the State Department in reply to Secretary Kellogg's proposals for an arbitration pact between the two countries.

The tone of the note, which at first glance appears to administration officials as generally satisfactory, did much to relieve the depression caused by yesterday's communication from Paris on the other treaty under discussion with France, an antiwar covenant.

Satisfaction was expressed by officials here that although no immediate agreement can be seen on an antiwar pact on account of France's proposal that this deal only with "wars of agression," the Paris government seems to accept American ideas as regards the arbitration treaty.

IMPORTANT AFFAIR

On account of the machinery it would set up for settlement of international disputes, it appears here that it would be a far more important international agreement than the antiwar proposal.

Today's French communication is understood to suggest certain modifications to the American arbitration proposal, but these, on a first reading at least, appear to be more a matter of form and in certain cases seem to clarify the issues involved. Agreement appears assured at any rate on the willingness of both governments to include in the arbitration treaty a preamble in which the policy of both governments to avoid forceful settlement of their differences would be stated clearly.

Arbitration then could be made the compulsory machinery for settling all disputes between the two countries with the exception of problems affecting third countries, and affairs related to the Monroe Doctrine.

ANOTHER FACTOR

The French government also is reported not to have objected to the proposed reference in the draft treaty to the Bryan conciliation procedure whereby all disputes which could not be settled by arbitration or by orderly diplomatic means should be referred to a conciliation commission for review and report. Meanwhile both disputants would agree to refrain from acts of force.

The French government in today's note, it is understood, is represented as being perfectly aware that this reference in no way would invalidate the still existing Bryan conciliation treaty with France, but that this reference instead was included purposely in the American arbitration draft to make sure that no dispute should be found to escape settlement either by arbitration or review by the conciliation commission.

Outstanding specialists of the college will deliver at each of the stopping points lectures on various phases of agricultural activity. Van Dickesen is being held in Buffalo, N. Y., under a murder charge.

CORINTO STRIKE DRAWS MARINES

Disorders Grow Serious at Nicaraguan Port

Americans Wounded in Clash With Rebels Arrive

Commandant Le Jeune Sails Tomorrow for "Front"

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Jan. 7. (AP) Airplanes returning from Quilali this afternoon with marines wounded in fighting with rebel forces under Gen. Sandino were fired on by the rebels. No hits were registered, but the machines were forced to fly high.

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Jan. 7. (AP) The attention of American marines, in the conflict with the rebel general, Augustino Sandino, today was turned to a strike at the port of Corinto, just as the first American wounded arrived after a clash with the rebel forces in the Department of Nueva Segovia.

The situation in Corinto had become so serious that Col. Louis Mason Gulick, commander of the American marine forces in Nicaragua, felt it necessary to leave today by airplane for the port. While there he will confer with Admiral David F. Sellers, who arrived at Corinto with additional marines.

The same landing field that Col. Gulick and America's good-will ambassador, Col. Lindbergh, used in departures today witnessed the arrival of the first American wounded from the two clashes with Sandino at Quilali, that resulted in six American dead and twenty-eight wounded. Among those who arrived today from the distant battlefield through the air were Capt. Richard Livingston, who commanded the patrol that took Quilali, and Lieut. Merton A. Richal.

At Corinto, a strike of stevedores, attributed to sympathy with Gen. Sandino, has caused considerable anxiety since nearly 65 per cent of Nicaragua's foreign commerce passes through the port. Depredations and disorders near the port have raised the fear than railway communication between the capital and the sea might be cut.

One of the most serious disorders was an attack by sixty well-armed and well-mounted men on a plantation at La Cabrera de Ameya, across the Bay of Estero from Corinto.

A force of 150 marines is available in the region and Admiral Sellers brought additional marines with him.

LE JEUNE PREPARES FOR SAILING TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—While Maj.-Gen. Le Jeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, was completing preparations today to leave for Nicaragua, dispatches from that country revealed no material change in the military situation. Sandino, the insurrecto, continues his operations in Northwest Nicaragua, reports said, but avoided any direct contact with marines or the Nicaraguan constabulary in the last few days.

Gen. Le Jeune will sail from Charleston, S. C., Monday, on the light cruiser Trenton, accompanied by Brig.-Gen. Logan Feland, who will assume active command of the marines in Nicaragua. Le Jeune and Feland were in conference here most of the day.

Air-Endurance Attempt Fails

SEVILLE (Spain) Jan. 7. (AP)—Capts. Jiminez and Iglesias landed here today after flying thirty-two hours in an unsuccessful attempt to break the world's airplane endurance flight record. They used a Breguet plane.

(Cornelius Edzard and Johann Risticz established an endurance record of fifty-two hours and twenty-three minutes last August at Dessau, Germany. Previously the record had been held by Clarence Chamberlin and Bert Acosta.)

Ban Placed on Securities Sale

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Stock and Bond Guaranty Company, with headquarters in Los Angeles and a branch here, was ordered today by the State Corporation Commissioner to discontinue all further sale of securities as a result of its failure to obtain a broker's license.

Howard O. Ellis, assistant commissioner, says the company's application for license was denied in November.

THREE HURT WHEN ENGINEER SPEEDS UP

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Three persons, one a Los Angeles woman, arrived on the Sunset Limited of the Southern Pacific today considerably bruised and shaken because of what was described by company officials as an engineer's effort to get out of Ventura in a hurry last night. The throttle was opened too wide, it was explained, and the resulting jar threw the three against the seats of the observation platform. Mrs. Gertrude C. Rhodes of 514 California Bank Building, Los Angeles, suffered bruises and a possible fracture of a rib; and Miss Florence Forzane of Oakland had a thumb mashed. A man who said he was only slightly bruised did not reveal his identity and declined medical aid.

CONVICTED MURDERER GETS TERM IN PRISON

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Bart A. Huil, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Mamie Schon here October 19, 1927, was sentenced to serve from ten years to life in San Quentin prison by Superior Judge Roche today.

San Francisco Ferry Got $1 Person and $3 for Horses

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—There were no commutation tickets for transbay ferry passage in 1851. Judging from a schedule of one-way fares dug up by the Southern Pacific and published in its current bulletin, perhaps the United States mint could have bought one.

The schedule shows a rate of $1 per person to San Antonio, which is the Oakland of the present day. Horses were $3 per head; cattle, $3 each; sheep and hogs, $1 each; a one-horse wagon, $3, and a two-horse wagon, $5. Freight was 50 cents per hundredweight.

TELEPHONES LINK SHIPS WITH LAND

Wireless Service Innovation on Transatlantic Liners to Become Common

BERLIN, Jan 7. (AP)—A direct wireless telephone service between trans-Atlantic liners and the mainland is the latest innovation to be introduced on the steamers of the Hamburg American Line and the North German Lloyd.

After a long period of experimental telephoning from the S.S. Columbus and the Albert Ballin to Berlin, in the course of which the hearing from midocean and even in the immediate vicinity of the American coast was reported to have been as distinct as in an ordinary city connection, it has now been decided to equip a number of passenger steamers with such wireless telephone apparatus.

Cabins de luxe and gala suites will receive apparatus connecting direct with the mainland, while the less-favored passengers will have to content themselves with getting their connection in the cabin of the wireless operator or in a special booth adjoining the salon. The service will also be available for passengers of the second and third class—although, of course, more than one telephone connection simultaneously will not be possible.

Technically such a wireless telephone connection will be established as follows: The Berliner puts in a call for the long distance central, which then carries it by wire to the wireless station at Norddeich near Emden, whence it is transmitted on electric waves to the desired steamer in midocean.

Surratt House Plotting Still

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The famous Surrat House on downtown H street, where history records that details of the Lincoln assassination were worked out, has been raided again, this time for the more modern purpose of discovering prohibition-law violators.

Sixty-three years ago officers swooped down upon the building, then a boarding-house operated by Mrs. Harry E. Surratt, and arrested her on charges of complicity in the plot which was carried to completion when John Wilkes Booth shot President Lincoln. Mrs. Surratt was convicted and hanged.

When the police flying squadron raided the building yesterday they arrested six men operating a bottling company on the premises. All were charged with prohibition-law violations.

Brenner and Wife to Part

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—The domestic troubles of Nathan T. Brenner, millionaire steel manufacturer, and his wife, Lottie, were adjusted today when the couple agreed to separate after Mr. Brenner settled $610,000 of his $2,000,000 estate in his wife's name.

There will be no divorce, their attorneys say, but they will live apart. They were married thirty-one years ago.

The settlement is a sequel to two suits Mr. Brenner filed against his wife, charging she had tried to defraud him of $750,000 while he was out on the Coast. The suits were dismissed.

Mr. Brenner formerly was president of the American Insulated Wire and Cable Company.

RADIO COMES FIRST IN THIS IOWA TOWN

FAIRFIELD (Iowa) Jan. 7. (AP)—The interest of the radio owner comes first in Fairfield, even before the commercial operation of electrical devices which cause interference with radio reception. An ordinance passed by the Town Council makes it unlawful to operate any device which interferes with the radio between noon and midnight.

JUDGE ADAMSON TO BE RETIRED IN NEW YORK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—President Coolidge has granted the request of William C. Adamson to be retired as a judge of the United States Court of Customs Claims at New York. Judge Adamson was eligible for retirement because he has reached the age limit. He was author of the famous Adamson Act relating to railroad labor.

MRS. STAMWORTH HURT

STOCKTON, Jan. 7. (AP) — Mrs. C. S. Stamworth, wife of Commander C. S. Stamworth, retired, of Vallejo and San Francisco, is in the San Joaquin County General Hospital suffering from injuries sustained when struck by an automobile at an early hour this morning. With a party of friends Mrs. Stamworth was en route to Yosemite Valley. Tire trouble developed near Tracy and in stepping from the car Mrs. Stamworth was struck by a passing automobile.

CLARK OFFERS KILLING EXCUSE

Local Youth Says Salovich Started Brawl

Victim Proves ex-Butler in Chaplin Family

Slayer Being Taken Back to Scene of Crime

NEPHI (Utah) Jan. 7. (AP)—Stoutly maintaining that he killed Don Salovich of Beverly Hills, Cal., in self-defense during a fight on the highway near Gunnison, Utah, Friday night, Sheldon Clark, 22 years of age, reached here late today on his way back to the scene of the crime.

He will be forced by officers to reenact the tragedy before witnesses. Clark told officers that the fight occurred as he and Salovich, a former dancer and film actor, were driving from California to Utah in the latter's automobile. He declared that Salovich made offensive proposals and that when he refused, attacked him with a hammer.

HAS MONEY ON HIM

Clark knocked him down, struck him twice on the head with the hammer, and then drove away in the dancer's automobile, he related. He said he did not know Salovich was dying when he left him. He admitted searching the injured man's pockets, but said he could not explain why.

When arrested Clark had about $2000 in cash.

After leaving Salt Lake City today, Clark gave officers further details of his relationship with Salovich in California and of Salovich's reported connection with the Charles Chaplin family in Beverly Hills. He served as chauffeur for Salovich in California until they arranged to enter the sheep business in Utah and started to drive to Utah.

LARGE SUM OBTAINED

Clark said Salovich had become financially involved in California with Lloyd Wright, Lita Grey Chaplin's attorney in the Chaplin divorce case, and with I. Kono, Chaplin's personal servant.

Wright, he said, advanced Salovich $15,000 with the understanding that he (Wright) was to obtain 25 per cent of a large estate which Salovich said he had inherited in Austria. Salovich was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses after Wright learned the estate story was false. Clark said Salovich's principal reason for leaving California was to escape the wrath of Kono, Chaplin's Japanese servant, who had advanced him $2500 over a period of several years. Clark said Salovich came to America as a protege of Fritzi Scheff, opera star.

MOTHER AND FATHER OF CLARK GO TO UTAH

Their son facing a murder charge, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Clark of Los Angeles, left here together late Friday night for Salt Lake City to aid him in his fight for freedom. The parents who have been estranged for some years, have joined forces to aid their son Sheldon, according to their daughter, Miss Mary Clark, 1066 1-4 West Thirty-first street.

Sheldon Clark, who is asserted to have confessed to slaying Don Salovitch, former butler of Lita Grey Chaplin, near Manti, Utah, Friday, is a graduate of the Venice Union High School and for the past five years has been a resident of this city.

"Sheldon has always been a clean boy," said Miss Clark yesterday. "He is not 25 years of age as the papers say, but only 22."

Mrs. Blanche Clark with whom the daughter resides, left after receiving a telegram from Sheldon's grandmother and her husband who is connected with the law firm of Faucet & Ring, left at the same time, the daughter said.

The slain man was a butler for Lita Grey Chaplin until about two months ago, according to Mrs. W. E. Curry, Mrs. Chaplin's grandmother. He was discharged by the divorced wife of the film comedian on her return from the East after Mrs. Curry had complained of the late hours he spent away from the house.

"He always said he was 27 years of age, and I think he was a great deal older," Mrs. Curry declared.

Prior to being engaged by Mrs. Chaplin, Mrs. Curry said, Salovich had been employed in a similar capacity by Chaplin.

"Don Salovich, the man mentioned in the telegraph news dispatches as being murdered near Salt Lake City, never was on Charles Chaplin's pay roll in any capacity," said Alfred T. Reeves, Chaplin's manager, last night.

"He used to hang around the studio several years ago, but he never worked for Chaplin. I know that he hasn't during the past ten or eleven years, for I have been with Mr. Chaplin for that length of time."

The man had been in Los Angeles about twelve years, working at various odd jobs and told Mrs. Chaplin's grandfather that when not employed as a butler, he worked in the films, playing minor parts. The studios and casting offices have no record of a Don Salovitch.

Curry also said he understood the Mr. Curry also said he understood the man came to the United States from Austria when about 6 or 7 years of age.

Students Must Not See Hanging

WINNIPEG (Man.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Students of the Manitoba University who attempt to witness the hanging next Friday of Earle Nelson, the "dark strangler," from the upper windows and roofs of university buildings, will be expelled, school officials announced today.

The authorities declare they have learned a number of students plan to watch the hanging from the university buildings which overlook the jail yard where the gallows is to be erected.

VETERAN ROBBED BY MAN HE BEFRIENDED

MODESTO (Cal.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Theodore J. McNally was robbed here today of his automobile, personal possessions and sign-painting equipment. McNally, who is a legless veteran of both the Spanish-American and World wars, said a youth he had befriended and fed, drove away with his automobile and all his property. The youth gave the name of Joe Torrence.

MEXICAN REBEL CHIEF, GEN. BARCENAS, KILLED

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7. (AP)—The War Department was advised today that Gen. Victoriano Barcenas, rebel leader who has been operating in the State of Guerrero for the past year, had been killed in a clash with Federal forces at El Gigante.

REAPER KNOWS NO GALLANTRY

Mrs. Snyder to Wait Turn While Lover Dies

Paramours Denied Farewells in Death Shadow

Guilty Pair Terror-Ridden as Doom Approaches

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—There will be no "ladies'-first" chivalry in the Sing Sing prison execution chamber at Ossining next Thursday night. Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, who stilled the death struggles of her art-editor husband, Albert, with a final blow of the sashweight dropped by her fear-stricken lover, Henry Judd Gray, will be the last of the two to die for the crime.

Months ago it was tentatively decided by officials at Sing Sing prison that the corset-salesman-killer, because of his steadier nerves, should defer to his sweetheart Ruth in the matter of sitting first in the electric chair. But this would give the lovers one more glimpse of each other, for men about to die in Sing Sing are placed in pre-execution cells, just outside what the prisoners call the "grill room" on the day of their electrocution. And from these cells the condemned men are permitted a glimpse of anyone walking along the corridor to the chair.

LAST LOOK DENIED

But even this glimpse is to be denied the wilted matron of Queens Village, L. I., and the now devoutly religious ex-paramour who helped her murder her husband. For, regardless of her physical condition, Ruth will be kept in her cell in the women's wing of the death house until after her former lover has been shocked into eternity. This announcement was made tonight by Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing.

It is possible that Ruth will have to be carried to the chair because her iron nerve has failed at last and left her a broken woman who weeps hysterically, rants at her guards, clutches at her cell bars and shrieks in abject terror as the hour of oblivion approaches.

GOVERNOR ADAMANT

Attorneys for Ruth and Judd still talk glibly of writs and court orders that may postpone the execution. But those close to Gov. Smith assert the chief executive has adopted a thumbs-down attitude from which it will take positive evidence that they did not commit the crime or that they are insane to shake him.

NEW RADIO BILL OFFERED HOUSE

Added Life Requested for Federal Commission

Increased Powers Likewise Sought in Measure

Chain Broadcasting One of Questions Involved

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Another year's lease on life would be given the Federal Radio Commission under a bill introduced today by Representative White, Republican, Maine, who proposed also that the commission be given increased authority, especially over chain broadcasting.

White is chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee which handles radio legislation, and was co-author of the act establishing the commission. Unless Congress extends its life, the commission goes out of existence March 15.

NEED STRESSED

Need for such a bill as that sponsored by Mr. White has been emphasized at the Senate committee hearings on the contested nominations of Commissioners Pickard, Caldwell and Lafounte, who are serving under recess appointments. Considerable attention also has been directed at the hearings to the chain broadcasting situation.

Discussing his bill, Mr. White said many of the old problems which prompted creation of the commission have not been solved and that more difficulties have arisen. He added that under the new measure the commission's authority will be increased to deal with these problems.

WHAT IT MEANS

"It gives the commission the power to fix the time during which chain broadcasting may be carried on," he continued, "to designate the stations which may be in a general or in a particular hook-up, to limit the number of stations which may take part in one of the chain broadcasting programs and it authorizes the commission to impose special conditions with respect to the wave length and power to be used. It also gives the commission authority to control commercial advertising through a chain of stations."

One section of his bill, Mr. White said, is "aimed directly at the alleged monopoly in radio patents," while another will authorize the radio commission to withhold a license to any applicant who has exclusive building, operating and traffic arrangements with a foreign country.

Ex-Kaiser Shown in Berlin Play

BERLIN, Jan. 7. (AP)—Despite an injunction of the lower court, the former Kaiser Wilhelm was represented at the Communist Theater last night in Erwin Piscator's production of Alex E. I. Tolstoy's drama "Rasputin."

The uncensored production of the play was ordered by the Court of Appeal, whose three judges, with attorneys representing Piscator and the former Kaiser, attended the performance to see whether the scene depicting Wilhelm was offensive.

In the play the former Emperor is represented as addressing his troops at the beginning of the war.

DOTY TRIES FOR FEEDOM

Describes Hazardous Hike to Within Seven Miles of British Frontier

[This is the thirteenth of a series of articles by Bennett J. Doty, American boy, whose valiant service in the French Foreign Legion and his subsequent desertion, imprisonment and release have made him a figure of world interest. Doty relates his remarkable experiences, and describes life in the famous legion from the "inside," as it is lived by the private.]

BY BENNETT J. DOTY

[Copyright, 1928, in all countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.]

When the column had started for Sueida, we were told that would end the war. They assured us that when this town had fallen, we would be transferred to our northern post for a much-needed rest.

Instead, however, we were put to work building a citadel, fortifying the town, and doing civilian work that bored everybody. Then came the word that we would not be able to leave Sueida until December.

At that, "la cafard" settled on every one. We were restless, sore, fed up. A number of cavalry "went over the hill," and others tried it and were either killed or captured.

PLANS DESERTION

During this time I saw a good deal of John Harvey, and we cemented the friendship we had struck up at Ezra over the canned milk and other delicacies that he got in his capacity of "dog robber." Occasionally we had a bidon of wine. William Lass and Weisser, the Germans, were with us frequently. Our constant topic of conversation was "le promenade," as the Legionnaires call desertion.

BENNETT J. DOTY

We had a map we studied carefully, and we discovered we were only twenty-five miles from the British frontier, as the crow flies. We decided to make the break.

I had just received 25 francs as a prize for my shooting at Razzas. Every year the General Commandant hung up a prize for the best marksmanship. There had been so much fighting in the last year they had been unable to hold the competition. It was decided to distribute the money among men nominated by the lieutenants for good shooting in battle.

POOL MONEY

The others had a few francs. We pooled our money and bought canned goods, cigarettes and other things from the camp followers. May 12, 1926 after the noon siesta, we left camp, each man carrying a couple of bidons and his musette.

We passed the sentries without question. It was a commonplace thing to see a Legionnaire leave camp with his musette or a couple of bidons. Below us on the slope lay one of the Sultan Attrache's palaces, in which was a cistern of the finest water in the neighborhod. Our plan was to remain there until dark and then strike out across the country and pass the frontier between Bosra and Deera.

To avoid suspicion we went to work washing our clothes. We washed everything we had, to kill time. Toward sundown we hid ourselves in a room of the palace. Harvey and I were determined to start, but Lass and Weisser could not make up their minds.

HAZARDOUS HIKE

"I've gone this far and I've missed the 6 o'clock rapporte," I said, "and I'm going."

We waited until we heard the guard changed above us. I knew then it was 8 o'clock. Then we started down the hill. The slope was cut up with a number of stone walls. We scrambled over the first of these. Coming over, Harvey dislodged a number of stones. They clattered down the wall.

We lay breathless waiting for a machine gun burst from the camp above, but nothing happened. Several minutes later we started again. The next wall we took more cautiously, and so on until we had reached the fields below Sueida.

HIDE AMONG ROCKS

We had picked a moonless night. I took our bearings on a star I calculated would bring us out of the hills at a point where we could pick up the signal lights of Bosra and Gazalie. Every night Gazalie signaled Bosra, which in turn signaled Sueida, which in turn was in communication with Ezra.

We traveled until dawn. Then we hid in a mass of rocks on top of a hill. When it became light enough I made a reconnaisance. I discovered that we were right on the hill in front of Mousseifre, over which the Druse had poured in the first action I saw in Syria. I had intended bearing more to the left, but during the night the others thought I was too far over and we had got a bit off our course. But I was not alarmed at this. We were still well in line with our objective.

We ate breakfast, smoked a cigarette or two, and took turns watching and sleeping. We could see Sueida from our hiding place. There seemed no signs of unusual activity. But there were too many people wandering round with plows for our comfort. So at 10 o'clock we struck off for bigger and better rocks, about a mile to the south. We remained hidden there until sunset.

DISREGARDS CAUTION

As soon as the blinkers started up again we set out. The going was much easier. At daybreak we picked up the railroad that runs from Bosra to Deera. We knew we were about seven miles from the frontier. We were safe as long as we kept out of sight in the daytime.

Harvey, however, was in one of his moods. He was determined to keep on, daylight or no daylight, until we had crossed the frontier. I wanted to hide in the wheat field until night, when we could make the crossing safely. Lass and Weisser were noncommital.

Harvey's carbine settled the argument. The rest of us had been unable to get away with weapons. My rifle had been with the others under guard in camp. None of us wanted to be loose in that country unarmed, so there was nothing to do but follow Harvey.

BEDOUINS MET

Across the border was the village of El Umtaiye. Between lay wheat fields. The country was occupied by Syrians and Bedouins. They were all busy harvesting their crop. As we pressed toward the frontier we attracted more and more attention from the Bedouins. They seemed friendly enough, and about 10 o'clock we stopped to talk to a group of them.

I had a premonition this was unwise. But as we hadn't had anything to eat since the night before, I was glad to stop and eat. They offered us food. While we were eating Harvey questioned them about the best place to cross the border. We were told it was easier to get across at El Umtaiye than farther east, near the village of El Deir, which they said was occupied by a bad tribe.

SENATE OFFICES SHY OF BIBLE

Testament on Which to Give Oath to Witness Can't be Found Anywhere

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—A sudden call for a Bible to swear a witness before a Senate committee revealed the fact that none could be found in the Senate Office Building, where a hearing was being held.

R. L. Lovelace, a former prohibition agent, who was testifying, made a startling statement and an attorney demanded of Senator Overman, chairman of the committee, that the witness be sworn "on the Bible." Senator Overman sent runners for a Bible, but not one could be found.

Finally a preacher offered a pocket testament and that was used.

BLAIR SUES, NAMING FIVE IN BAY CITY

Oil Official Files Action for $300,500 Damages, Charging False Arrest

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Thomas A. Blair, oil company official, filed suit here today for $300,500 damages against five well-known San Francisco business men, accusing them of conspiring to cause his arrest on a false charge of grand theft.

The defendants are named as A. N. Baldwin, private secretary to Herbert Fleishhacker, San Francisco banker; E. R. Alexander and R. Zimmerman, vice-presidents of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank; J. R. Bearwald, public accountant, and E. W. Cahill, advertising man.

Blair, former joint owner of the Vivian B. and Northern Oil companies, asserts he was arrested last September and the charge against him dismissed on October 7, 1927. Following his arrest, he asserts, a bank in which his former partner is cashier called his loans and as a result he had to sell his stock to meet the loans, causing him a loss of $100,000. His arrest was connected with a stock deal.

Hewitt-Myring Enjoys Zero Weather in Kansas City

Los Angeles, San Francisco, All Have Nice Climate

And British Visitor Thinks Riviera Overrated

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Phillip Hewitt-Myring, leader-page editor of the London Daily News and Fellow of the Walter Hines Page Memorial Fellowship who has served as "guest reporter" on the Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle and Kansas City Star on his tour in the interests of better understanding between journalists of the two great English-speaking nations, writes of his experiences with American weather in the Star as follows:

PHILIP HEWITT-MYRING

"Less than three months ago I broke my 'heat record', with 106 degrees in San Bernardino, Cal. Yesterday all my records at the other end of the scale were smashed, for I never have before experienced 'zero weather.' Indeed, before I came to Kansas City my minimum must have stood at about 20 deg.—or, as we would say in England, 'twelve deg. of frost.'

"This reckoning in so many 'degrees of frost' is significant, for it shows that in England it is the freezing point—32 deg.—and not the zero mark that enters into calculations. I do not believe the thermometer ever has fallen to zero in London since records first were kept, and any temperature below 20 is highly abnormal.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

"So we talk about one or two degrees of frost (31 or 30), or on very rare occasions ten degrees of frost (22,) and if we ever give a thought to the zero point it is only to wonder how on earth those poor mortals who have to experience it quite regularly manage to survive.

"As a matter of fact they survive very well—and I, up to the present at any rate, with them!

"For there are more factors than mere Fahrenheit degrees that enter into the argument where discomfort from weather is concerned; and the chief of them is damp. It is a commonplace that both dry, hot weather and dry, cold weather are much easier to bear and to keep well in than humid hot weather and damp cold weather, and the truism has unfortunately a very real bearing on the case when the climate of England is under discussion; for whereas the English climate is rarely abnormally hot and extremely rarely abnormally cold, as far as thermometer readings are concerned, it is unduly humid a good deal of the time; and an English winter can produce many gray days that, simply from the damp 'rawness' of the atmosphere, cause more discomfort than if the temperature had been twenty degrees lower in a dry climate with the sun shining.

FINE WEATHER IN ENGLAND

"Not, of course, that the English climate is nearly so black as it is painted. Englishmen themselves run it down, but then they take a curious pleasure in running down everything connected with their own country. I don't know why we do it—unless it is that we are so overwhelmingly proud of England that we feel we must take every precaution to prevent the facts slipping out—but the practice provides a sore puzzle for the foreigner, who assumes, naturally enough, that we mean what we say.

"To hear an Englishman talk about England's weather, one would think he lived in a perpetual fog through which was pouring down torrential rain; whereas the truth of the matter is that even London hardly ever gets more than two bad fogs a winter (and often escapes with one,) and that an English summer day may be, and often is, the ultimate perfection of all that is beautiful in the way of climate.

"That it rains not too much, but too often, in England is undeniable, and it is here the climate of many parts of America has so definite an advantage over that of the British Isles. When it rains in this country it does it thoroughly; and the storm is likely to be followed by days or even weeks of cloudless skies. In England, day after day may be ruined from the point of view of outdoor sports, motor trips, picnics, etc., by little dribblets of rain that without totaling any great amount of precipitation are enough to keep the foreign visitor at any rate continually rushing for shelter. The Englishman minds them less. He puts on a raincoat and pretends it's fine.

HE ENJOYS THEM ALL

"The dry heat of Los Angeles in October I revelled in; the more English atmosphere of San Francisco in December (yet with ten times the sunshine that one would expect from an English winter) also pleased me; the crisp, clear cold of December in Kansas City I have found delightful—and all three I prefer to a much-boomed and much overrated winter climate, that of the French Riviera.

"The fiction that the French Riviera in winter is warm dies hard. Nine-tenths of the time it is beastly cold and there is usually a vicious little wind that rubs in the lowness of the temperature. Yet the Riviera provided me with the greatest thrill, as far as weather is concerned, that I ever have experienced.

"I was staying in a villa near Sainte Maxime, and looking out of my window one morning early, found the ground was covered with snow.

"Snow lay thick, on palms, on olives, on orange trees, and a crimson sunrise, reflected both in the snow and on the waters of the Gulf of St. Tropez, made a picture of unforgettable beauty.

"This was the first snowfall on the Riviera in forty years. But then it always is. Why the figure forty originally was settled on in connection with the Riviera snow I cannot think, but it now is hallowed by tradition. On opening my paper two days ago I saw a Riviera snow picture under which it was once more stated that forty years had elapsed since a similar scene had been witnessed.

"I thought of my Sainte Maxime morning in the year of grace 1923, and of at least three other snowfalls that have taken place within the last twenty years, and smiled."

DIESEL PLANE ENGINE MADE

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Announcement by Dr. Elmer A. Sperry that he has perfected an airplane engine on the Diesel principle was hailed in aeronautical circles today as a victory for American research.

Dr. Sperry, inventor of the gyroscope compass, said that within a year he expects to have a motor of 1000 horsepower weighing two pounds per horsepower and consuming crude oil instead of gasoline with a higher power development per gallon at one-fifth the fuel cost.

Adoption of the Diesel engine to aircraft, considered one of the surest steps to huge air liners, has been the problem of aeronautical engineering throughout the world.

The Diesel motor differs from the ordinary gasoline engine in that there is no spark and that crude oil is used in place of gasoline, thus eliminating the fire hazard.

The fuel oil used in his engine, said Dr. Sperry, is so noninflammable that in experiments it even has proven a good fire extinguisher. He pointed to the great loss of life caused by planes catching fire, and declared fire still is the greatest flight risk.

The engine, which in general resembles the gasoline engine in use in automobiles, is "V" shaped, with two converting banks of cylinders, which he said will deliver 1000 horsepower, the average power now obtainable from the fastest aircraft racing motors. The motor is water cooled, but Dr. Sperry said it is not unlikely the principles of air cooling can be adapted to his engine.

Endowment to Aid Race Study

BATTLE CREEK (Mich.) Jan. 7. (AP) Plans for using an endowment given Battle Creek College by Mrs. Mary F. Henderson of Washington, as the basis for a nation-wide race betterment movement, were announced by Dr. John H. Kellogg at the third Race Betterment Conference here last night.

Mrs. Henderson, wife of former Senator Henderson of Missouri, has given the institution an endowment of $200,000 and a 40,000-acre farm in Missouri in the interest of race betterment, Dr. Kellogg said.

MEXICO FINANCE MOVE INDICATED

Series of Parleys on Nation's Situation Forecast

De La Oca Call on Morrow Gives Rise to Belief

Treasury Chief and Envoy Silent on Conference

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7. (AP)—A series of conversations on the financial situation of Mexico is forecast here today following a conference between Dwight W. Morrow and Luis Montes de la Oca, Mexican Finance Minister. The Treasury official's call on the former Morgan partner was strictly extra official. It is believed that the Finance Minister sought the American's advice in a purely private capacity, availing himself of Morrow's friendship and sincere desire to help straighten things out in Mexico.

Financial circles are expectant that the conference already held will bear fruit but nobody except Morrow and De la Oca knows what was discussed and they are silent.

The negotiations now being carried on by Department of Treasury representatives with international bankers in New York regarding the necessity of modifying the Pani-Lamont agreement in accordance with Mexico's economic possibilities, led to a belief that a readjustment of the debt service was one of the subjects touched upon. It is thought the discussion also turned to Mexico's economic situation the strain of which was largely aggravated, according to financial circles, by payments to the international bankers, because this calls for a periodic reduction of the already-depleted gold currency, thus curtailing business transactions.

Marines Depart Shanghai Bound

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Bound for Shanghai, China, the naval transport Henderson sailed from here today with 800 United States marines aboard. The men sailing today are to be used as replacement troops for the Third and Fourth regiments of marines at Shanghai and Tien-tsin.

Also aboard the Henderson were 414 bluejackets, who are to be assigned to duty with the Asiatic fleet and the China patrol.

Another force of approximately 800 marines is scheduled to depart Monday morning aboard the munition carrier Nitro for Nicaragua. With the departure of these men there will remain barely a skeleton force at the San Diego Marine Corps base.

DELETING OF OIL CHARGE SOUGHT

Counsel Pictures Sinclair as Persecuted

Presentment by Grand Jury Stirs Magnate's Ire

Plea for Expunging Calls it Blow in Back

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Picturing Harry F. Sinclair, wealthy oil operator, as "the object of the most lawless conduct of government," Martin W. Littleton, his counsel, today asked Justice Siddons, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, to expunge a grand jury presentment accusing the oil man of conspiracy. Justice Siddons took the motion under advisement.

The presentment, returned a week ago without the usual accompanying indictment, charged Sinclair, William J. Burns and five associates with having conspired to obstruct justice in the employment by Sinclair of Burns detectives to shadow the Fall-Sinclair trial jury. Littleton who asks that the presentment be expunged on the ground the jury had no authority to present it, said that should the document be allowed to stand there is no way for those named to defend themselves against the charges.

"The Constitution has been evaded, flouted or openly violated," declared Littleton, "in order that he (Sinclair) might be struck a blow—generally in the back."

Peyton Gordon, District Attorney, opposed the granting of the motion on the ground that the grand jury was within its rights and had no other course to pursue when it returned the presentment. Gordon, who had refused to draw indictments based on the presentment, also argued the court is without power to expunge the document.

Thirteen Die as Fires Destroy Two Residences

The dead are Harry Miller, 45 years of age; Opal Miller, 12; Raymond Miller, 7; Bernice Miller, 3. Mrs. Miller was badly burned and may die.

BUCATUNNA (Miss.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Nine negroes including seven children, were burned to death last night when a house occupied by the family of Calvin Smith was destroyed.

OBREGON LAUDS COL. LINDBERGH

Declares Visit to Mexico of Greatest Importance

Cites Value of Example to Youth of America

Delivers Speech at Banquet in Honor of Flyer

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22. (By Mail) (Exclusive)—Citing Col. Lindbergh as the classic type of the superman who has created a new conception of life for the American youth and pointing out to Latin America the transcendent importance of his visit, Gen. Alvaro Obregon, at a banquet tendered by him, members of the Obregon blocks in the Senate and other leading Mexican officials, in the caves of San Juan Teotihuacan, said in part:

"Besides offering the present banquet, I wish to take advantage of this auspicious occasion to express some of my opinions as to the personality of Col. Lindbergh and the transcendent importance which his presence on the stage of the world's celebrities may have for the United States of America and for the rest of the world.

"Col. Lindbergh is the classic type of the superman. Supermen achieve great deeds under the inspiration of their lofty conceptions, and never even stop to consider what the consequences of their acts may be, and what dangers their boldness may lead them into.

"Col. Lindbergh did not even meditate upon the consequences of his boldness, nor did he take into account the value of his precious existence before exposing it as an offering to an ideal which would later bring with it honor and glory to the American Union and to the present generation.

IMPORTANCE OF VISIT

"Col. Lindbergh joins to his wonderful feat of crossing the Atlantic another which serves to strengthen my theory that he is to be counted among those rare examples of genius; Col. Lindbergh refused to commercialize his achievement when he returned from the Old World covered with glory.

"Now, if we consider the far-reaching importance to the United States and to the whole world of the entrance of this illustrious personage upon the stage of the world celebrities, we must consider the fact that the United States of America, in the prodigious development of its resources and civilization achieved by it of recent years, needed to strengthen the spiritual development of its people in order not to become too material and in order that its power might not constitute a danger to the weaker nations of the earth.

"Col. Lindbergh has been the means of creating a new idea of life, a new conception of existence in the spirit of American youth. Before Col. Lindbergh had unveiled the mystery of the Atlantic by his flight without a stop, it was usual in the United States to fall into the great error of assuming that those men who possessed the greatest amounts in millions of dollars were those whose worth was the greatest.

INFLUENCE ON YOUTH

"Col. Lindbergh has now come to prove to all the youth of America that there is something which is worth more than money, because it may not be purchased with money: and that is glory. Glory is more precious than gold, because gold we lose with life and glory makes the life of him who attains it endure, and the youth of America have been shown a new path in the world of the spirit. And the transcendent importance to Latin America of a spiritual readjustment of values for the youth of the noble people of America must not escape our notice.

"Mexico, which has ever been slandered by the jugglers of America's yellow press has given them the lie before the whole world, when it received the illustrious personality of Col. Lindbergh in its bosom, and thus have we seen how multitudes contended for the honor of reaching the field at Valbuena and struggled for the privilege of approaching him and gazing upon him in order to fix in their imagination the gallant though modest mien of him who is at present the greatest aviator on earth.

"Col. Lindbergh: Mexico has received you as an honored guest and has displayed a sincerity and affection hitherto unprecedented in the case of any former reception for the purpose of honoring a foreign guest; when you return to your country tell the youth of America that the people of Mexico are not the enemies of the Americans, as says the yellow press; but that they are sincere admirers and friends of civilization and progress, and true friends of all noble sentiments and of all generous efforts; that in yourself they have received and admired the representative of the youth of America."

POWER OFF BUT BULB GLOWS

Research Engineer Discovers In Radio Experiments Magnetic Light

EAST PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Ordinary electric bulbs glow only when wired to electric power and go out instantly when the power is turned off. In the laboratories of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, however, Dr. Phillips Thomas, research engineer, has developed a bulb without wires which glows when held in a magnetic field and continues to glow for ten minutes after the power is shut off.

Were such bulbs used for lighting, a brisk person could turn out the lights in his bedroom and undress before the room was dark.

Dr. Thomas produced the bulb in the course of experiments on power by radio. He says it is not practical at present for general illumination.

PRISONERS' UNIT AIDS NEEDY ONES

League Formed by Inmates of Kentucky Reformatory Grows Rapidly

FRANKFORT (Ky.) Jan. 7. (AP)—A prisoner's welfare league, organized and financed by prisoners, which last year alone distributed $12,000 to needy families of inmates, operates within the walls of the Kentucky State Reformatory.

It is known as the Mutual Welfare League, and it had its beginning ten years ago when a group of prisoners donated funds so that one of their number might attend the funeral of his mother. The prisoners, under Warden H. M. Beard, established the league with the motto, "Devoted to Prisoners' Welfare Everywhere." Today it has a membership of 1200.

Dues of 25 cents a month and profits of the league's store, operated in the reformatory, furnish funds for the organization's work. Prisoners who can not earn more than 15 cents a day spent more than $40,000 in this store last year.

A board of directors, appointed by Warden Beard from a list of nominees handed him by the prisoners, operates the store. A former bank president is head of the organization. The league also publishes a monthly paper.

The organization has attracted the attention of many students of prison reform and Dr. John W. Smith, chairman of the commission to study prison labor in Kentucky, says "the league is rendering a superior service to many who otherwise would be practically destitute."

PRESIDENT SET FOR CUBAN TRIP

Pan-American Conference Jaunt Begins Friday

Executive Slated for Opening Address of Congress

Kellogg, Wilbur and Hughes Will be in Party

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—As a good-will ambassador extraordinary, President Coolidge will leave Washington next Friday on a trip to Havana, which he hopes will demonstrate the friendly feeling of the United States for all the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

The immediate purpose of the journey, the first outside of the United States for Mr. Coolidge since he became President, is to make the opening address of the Pan-American Congress. In the background, however, is the desire to impress upon the representatives of the more than twenty nations who will greet him that the United States holds no imperialistic designs in its relationships with the countries south of the Rio Grande.

In addition to two members of his Cabinet—Secretaries Kellogg and Wilbur—the President will be surrounded at Havana by a delegation of men whose names have for years been well known in American public life. The delegation, which will represent the United States at the sessions of the congress after Mr. Coolidge has left, will be headed by Charles Evans Hughes.

MEMBERS OF DELEGATION

The two secretaries and Mr. Hughes will make the trip south with Mr. Coolidge as will Henry P. Fletcher, Ambassador to Italy; James Brown Scott, an authority on international law; Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University, and Morgan J. O'Brien, a former Federal judge of New York, all members of the delegation.

Oscar W. Underwood, former Senator from Alabama, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union, other members, will reach Havana beforehand and the whole party will be joined there by Ambassador Judah, who recently was assigned to Cuba, and Dwight W. Morrow, Ambassador to Mexico, who complete the American representation.

The President will be away from Washington for six days. Leaving Friday afternoon he will journey on a special train of ten cars to Jacksonville, Fla., for the only stop other than for train operating purposes, on the way south. He will make an automobile tour of the city and then continue by train to Key West, where he will embark on the battleship Texas early Sunday morning. The crossing will take about six hours.

NAVAL ESCORT

The light cruiser Memphis and six destroyers will form a naval escort for the Texas. The destroyers will be the Hatfield, Brooks, Gilmer, Lawrence, Kane and Williamson.

The arrival in Havana Harbor of the Texas, accompanied by a convoy of destroyers, will be the beginning of a round of brilliant functions. The President and Mrs. Coolidge will live at the National Palace as guests of President and Senora Machado. There will be a state dinner at the palace Sunday evening and another on Monday to which the Cuban President has invited all of the delegates to the congress.

PUEBLO TOT WINS NATIONAL PRIZE

Highway Safety Essay Chosen As Best Among 400,000 In Contest

PUEBLO (Colo.) Jan 7. (AP)—Bethel Pugh, aged 13, Pueblo girl, got a trip to Washington and met President Coolidge as a reward for victory in the national safety essay contest of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Her paper on "My School's Share in Highway Safety" was judged the best among 400,000 submitted by school children throughout the country.

IMMIGRATION BAN PROPOSED

House Bill Would Prohibit Entries Until 1935

Seasonal Labor from Canada and Mexico Excepted

General Tightening of Law Will be Advocated

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—A prohibition for seven years against all immigration except seasonal labor from Canada and Mexico and a material strengthening of existing immigration laws, including certain provisions of the La Follette Seaman Act was proposed today in a bill by Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas.

Chairman Johnson of the House Immigration Committee, announced he will seek to increase by $500,000 the $925,000 appropriation carried in the Labor Department supply bill for deportation of aliens during the fiscal year beginning next July.

These developments today were preceded by a brief discussion of immigration affairs on the House floor yesterday during which Johnson declared that each year 250,000 aliens unlawfully enter the country.

He said that although assured by the House Appropriations Committee that an increase is provided for the deportation squad next year, he still does not think the amount enough and that the Immigration Bureau does "not dare to ask for anything more."

Blanton's bill proposes suspension of all immigration, except seasonal labor, "until January 1, 1935; the deportation of all aliens unlawfully in the country as well as those aliens who withdrew their declarations to become citizens to dodge military service, and the registration of all aliens remaining. The measure also would provide tightening up of the La Follette Seaman Act, which permits seamen of foreign vessels to disembark while their ships are in United States ports."

PROPOSED MARRIAGE CODE JARS

Governor of Sonora, Mex., Would Let Girls of 14 Wed Boys of 16 Years of Age

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Sonora will be the State of the near future in which to contract marriage if a reform, which was submitted by the State Governor and which has astounded residents, is given the indicated approval of the Legislature.

The girls, under the proposed code, must be only 14 years of age instead of 16, while the boys need only to have passed their sixteenth instead of their eighteenth birthday. The code, secondly, provides "severe penalty of perjury or those that give false marriage promises of sanction, which does not exist."

A union price of 25 instead of 15 pesos is to be charged for marriage at the home, and if a certificate copy of the procedure is wished—two bucks extra. It has been customary for the justice in a court wedding to offer his service gratis—now the proposal says "5 pesos."

But speed in galvanizing yourself into immediate action is paid by only having to advertise the coming event eight days instead of the previous fifteen. One newspaper in a news dispatch says, "The Legislature will approve these reforms, which are considered beneficial for a thousand reasons."

For no matter how much you are told about the wonders of this way of combating catarrhal conditions, or of the thousands who have been given complete freedom by its use—

A real test—a chance to actually try it and its reactions—in your particular case is better than all explanations.

This treatment for catarrh—for freedom from that condition, relieves and forestalls many feared and distressing situations. A real test is better even than the real testimonials from the thousands who have been given that wonderful relief. And when the gift-treatment has been tried, you will wonder why this wonderful method was never called to your attention before.

Dr. Coffee won national renown as a noted catarrh and deafness specialist. He, too, suffered with catarrh, deafness and head noises and many of its complications. Innumerable treatments failed to better his condition.

Is This Your Condition?

He experimented until he found a way that gave him real and actual relief in a permanent way. Following this, he treated literally thousands of sufferers in the same manner. Thousands have written, after completing the treatment, expressing thanks for their recovery; for their absolute freedom from colds, nose, bronchial and throat discharges; from poisoned systems, foul breath, bronchial troubles and even rheumatism and intestinal troubles. All due, as they say, to their catarrhal condition.

They are now rid of that constant hacking cough—that offensive sniffling and stifling mouth breathing. Rid of all the filthy, dangerous, offensive, disgusting things which accompany a catarrhal condition. They have been freed of that thick, poisonous, disease bearing mucus.

The presence of that germ filled, disgusting discharge alone is evidence that something is radically wrong. Do all you can to fight this condition.

Catarrh Is a Handicap

Dirt and dust, from contaminated sections are deposited in the nose and throat with every breath. Much of it finds its way into the mouth, for nasal catarrh causes the disgusting, offensive mouth breathing. The impurities in this filth laden air are deposited in the catarrhal fluid—the mucus. Soon it finds its way into the body—and it is a strong constitution indeed that can withstand the fight, once it is started.

The Bronchial Tubes:

The bronchial tubes leading into the lungs are the seat, many times, of constant irritation and distressing trouble. Dry irritating hacking coughs, feared by so many, can be traced in many instances to the bronchial tubes. Sufferers fear this—they can see the poisonous mucus; they know of its impurity and its filth filled content. They fear the colds that catarrh allows to develop—before the hacking, painful cough is noticed. This trouble often leads to more serious troubles and then comes a long, hard, expensive fight to defeat, if possible, the damage caused by catarrh.

The Throat:

So closely is the nose associated with the throat that here, too, catarrh soon evidences itself. It is from here that the filthy, disease filled mucus finds its way into the stomach, into the system generally and many different diseases may result; this weakened condition lends itself to the inroads of disease—bronchial troubles, stomach ailments, a general poisoned condition, a run-down constitution; all these things may result from a catarrhal condition. Stoppage in the nose forces mouth breathing and foul breath, and the mouth, throat and bronchial tubes receive the filth laden air.

The Nose:

It is here that a catarrhal condition first makes itself known. You catch cold easily—there is a constant, heavy, filthy, loathsome discharge. You are forced to use your handkerchief continually. You blow your nose, hack and cough; to breathe freely is impossible. You do not realize it, but constantly a portion of that poisoned mucus is seeping into your body—into your stomach and throat, depositing filth and preparing to cause great damage to your entire system.

Your Catarrh Habits Are Offensive

Nasal catarrh is without doubt the most offensive of all diseases; it disgusts and nauseates all who may be within hearing.

The constant hacking, offensive sniffling, and stifling mouth breathing—the mucous discharge, which can only be eliminated by blowing the nose or by continual hacking and spitting, is sickening to all that are near.

Why continue to embarrass your friends, your family and all of those who are close by?

HELP ALONG HOOVER BOOM

San Diego Republicans in Country-wide Move

Business Demands Nomination, Says Speaker

Prominent Party Men Head Organization

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7.—A San Diego county campaign club indorsing Herbert Hoover, a Californian, for president was organized today when representative citizens from all parts of the county assembled at Ye Golden Lion Tavern. From the enthusiasm displayed at the booster session, San Diego county can be expected to give Secretary Hoover a large vote at the primary election.

"San Diego's Hoover-for-President Club," is the name adopted for the organization. The following officers were elected to lead the club: John F. Forward, Jr., San Diego, president; Dr. T. M. Cunningham, La Mesa, vice-president; Mrs. Eleanor B. Parks, La Jolla, vice-president; Myron T. Gilmore, San Diego, vice-president; Mrs. H. C. Dunham, San Diego, vice-president; Dr. A. Morgan, Fallbrook, vice-president; Allen H. Wright, San Diego, secretary; L. R. Davis, East San Diego, treasurer.

The following county executive council also was elected, after selection by a committee composed of Lane D. Webber, C. Murray Hawkins and Frederick L. Brown; Maj. T. C. Macaulay, Chula Vista; Judge John T. Keane, La Jolla; Mrs. Lena P. Crouse, San Diego; Senator L. A. Wright, San Diego; E. Robert Anderson, San Diego. The executive committee was authorized to add to the membership of the vice-presidency and to immediately function as a campaign group.

The meeting was called to order by Judge John T. Keane of La Jolla, a lifelong Republican and an ardent worker in the Presidential campaign of 1924 in San Diego county. After paying tribute to Calvin Coolidge for his guidance of the nation through its most prosperous era and acknowledging the regret of the Republican party that President Coolidge does not choose to be a candidate for re-election, Judge Keane named Herbert Hoover as the logical successor.

"We have had among our Presidents, the soldier, the politician, the statesman, the lawyer and scholar," said Judge Keane, "but today the American people are turning to a man who is a doer of deeds—one who by the magic of his mind can take millions of dollars and thousands of men and make them willing agents in the consummation of some national project; a man calm and self-possessed, yet dynamic in action. Such a man is our great Californian, the apostle of efficiency, Herbert Hoover."

Brilliant tributes were paid to Secretary Hoover by L. A. Wright and L. M. Ward, former State Senators; President Forward pledged his efforts to what he promised will be "The most enthusiastic campaign San Diego county has yet experienced," and short talks were made by Treasurer Davis and Committeeman MacAulay.

Want Escaped Prisoner on Murder Charge

VISALIA, Jan. 7.—Police throughout the State have been asked to aid in the search for James Rojas who escaped from the Tulare county road gang on July 5, 1927, while serving a term in the Tulare County Jail on a charge of possession of a liquor still, and who is said to have since been identified as the assailant of Pedro Martinez, magnesite mine worker near Porterville on the morning of January 2, 1928.

Rojas, while working at the mine, was known as T. Santiago. He is said to have seen service during the World War as an aviator in the United States Army and to have been discharged.

The shooting of Martinez is said to have been the aftermath of a dispute of several days between the men. Martinez was called from the tunnel of the mine where he was at work, Rojas firing at him four times, two bullets entering just above the heart, one being deflected by a suspender shield. Rojas motored to Porterville with a friend who did not know of the shooting and made his escape, leaving his effects in a Porterville rooming-house where he had been staying. Among them was a photograph which is said to have identified him as Rojas instead of Santiago.

FINDS SKELETON OF PREHISTORIC MAN

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 7.—The skeleton of a man, or ape, declared by Prof. David B. Rogers of the Santa Barbara Museum to be more than 2,000,000 years old, is being excavated in the Cuyama Valley by Prof. Rogers and Fred and Edward Bottiler.

The skeleton was found imbedded in heavy rock by Fred Bottiler two years ago while he was hunting deer in the district. After lengthy drilling, a 600-pound slab of rock containing the specimen was removed, and now is being studied by Prof. Rogers to determine definitely its age and whether or not it has any archeological value to scientists.

POET POLICEMAN TO TALK TO STUDENTS

VAN NUYS, Jan. 7.—Police Sergeant Cyrus C. Johnson, poet and author of several books, will address students of the Van Nuys High School in assembly on Wednesday morning next. His topic will be "Respect for the Law." Preceding the more serious talk he will read selections from his book of poems, "Pools of Glass."

EXCHANGE CLUB OFFICERS

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 7.—Exchange Club officers elected here for the ensuing term of six months were Milo Castle, president; Clark Sammans, first vice-president; Lloyd Keith, second vice-president and R. I. Hafer, secretary. The board of control is made up of Carl Henderson, retiring president; Manly Danforth, Bill Petler and Fred Johnson. The club has given the Boy Scouts a cabin in Topanga Canyon.

SECOND TRIAL FOR PRIEST

Supreme Court Orders New Hearing for Minister Found Guilty by Orange County Jury

SANTA ANA, Jan. 7.—Rev. Philip A. Goodwin will be tried a second time for the murder of Joseph J. Patterson in Santa Ana Canyon, but will strive to have his trial held in San Francisco, instead of Santa Ana.

These two developments came today with the announcement that the California Supreme Court yesterday denied the petition of Dist.-Atty. Z. B. West Jr., for a writ of review of the court's earlier opinion, ordering a new trial for the priest. At the same time the court refused to release on a writ of habeas corpus, filed by his attorney, Buel Wood of Los Angeles, who has supplanted Kit Gould of Fresno.

With the denial of a rehearing of the appeal, the District Attorney announced that he would immediately proceed to have Rev. Goodwin brought back to Santa Ana for a new trial.

But Goodwin, it was learned, will exert every effort to avoid an Orange county jury, one such jury having doomed him to die on the gallows. This fate was saved him by the Supreme Court, which held that the priest's denial of the crime sounded more truthful than the story of his codefendant, Albert Dewey Gaines, who charged Goodwin with the killing.

The Supreme Court having disagreed with the jury, the Rev. Goodwin is said to be planning a change of venue of the case to San Francisco. This word was brought back from San Quentin late yesterday by Sheriff Sam Jernigan, who learned of the proposed move while at the prison.

Local officials are not taking the priest's plan very seriously, holding that the only grounds for a change of venue in the case would be a showing that there is such prejudice in Orange county as to prevent a fair trial.

Ranch Hand is Victim of His Own Act

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 7.—Strangulation by hanging was responsible for the death of John Jakob, 69, whose lifeless body was found hanging from the rafters of a barn at the Lakeside ranch late Friday, according to officials here. Jakob, a resident of Kern county for thirty years, employed as a milker at the Kern county land company ranch for more than sixteen years, committed suicide by tying a one-inch rope around his neck, attaching to a rafter, and jumping from the top of a tall can.

His body, hanging suspended about three feet off the ground, was found by Fred Hill, superintendent of the ranch, after a search was instituted. Investigation disclosed that the man's neck was not broken.

In the pocket of the dead man's coat was a will, written in his own hand writing, instructing the Security Bank and Trust Company to give all of his property to his sole heir, a niece, Anna Gerber, residing in San Francisco. It is estimated that Jakob leaves an estate valued at approximately $10,000 consisting of bank accounts and four residential lots in East Bakersfield.

The motive for the suicide remains a mystery to officers. That Jakob was not troubled with poor health, is the general opinion, and that he had no financial worries, is evident from the estate left his niece.

Operation May be Successful

MONROVIA, Jan. 7.—Showing the first signs of returning consciousness after a week of coma, Ruth Stoneholm, 15-year-old Monrovia girl who was injured early last Sunday morning in an automobile accident, was able to understand words spoken by nurses and doctors, it was stated today at the Monrovia Hospital.

Nurses took a baby into Miss Stoneholm's room today and asked the girl to look at the child. Although she had not opened her eyes since the accident, she weakly raised one of her hands and opened one eyelid, it was stated, looking at the baby which the nurse was holding.

With this sign of consciousness, physicians are hoping that she will recover.

On Wednesday a trepanning operation was performed on the skull of the girl by a Los Angeles specialist, who removed a blood clot from the base of the brain. The accident resulted in the death of Albert Stahler, 21, of Duarte.

FIREMEN GIVE BLOOD IN TRANSFUSION CASES

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 7.—Fourteen pints of blood was given voluntarily by fourteen members of the Bakersfield fire department in blood transfusion operations performed at Mercy Hospital during 1927, according to a notation in the annual report of Fire Chief W. E. Van Meter.

Twenty-seven members of the department volunteered for blood transfusion operations, in order to assure the hospital authorities of immediately available and desirable patients at any time such operations might become necessary.

All of the firemen came through the operations with comparatively slight inconvenience, the chief reported.

RANCHER REFUSES TO GIVE TESTIMONY

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 7.—A. V. Leoni, Nipomo rancher, stood on his constitutional rights and refused to testify at an inquest conducted over the body of Jack Halamuda, Santa Maria police officer, who was found dying of gunshot wounds over the heart last Sunday on Leoni's ranch. San Luis Obispo officers who investigated the shooting declared that Leoni and Halamuda had been drinking.

Halamuda was said to have fired six shots at Leoni before the latter brought a shotgun into play, resulting in the almost instant death of the officer. Leoni is held in the San Luis Obispo County Jail.

USE OLD ADOBE IN REBUILDING MISSION

REDLANDS, Jan. 7.—Arrangements are being made by George W. Beattie, a member of the Chamber of Commerce committee for the removal of the 10 by 10 adobe building now on the N. L. Levinger property at 129 East Pearl avenue, to the site of the San Bernardino Assistencia Mission, which is to be restored.

The building had been accepted following advices of R. B. Peters of Devore, that the blocks could be moved and used in the restoration of the mission without too great a loss because of their excellent state of preservation.

PASTOR TO REMAIN

LAGUNA BEACH, Jan. 7.—The Rev. Percy Wise Clarkson, formerly rector of the Chapel St. Francis-by-the-Sea, will continue to hold one service each Sunday evening in January, by permission of Bishop Stevens of the Los Angeles district of the Protestant Episcopal Church, it was announced today. Rev. Clarkson will continue the service until the diocese decides whether it will pay the interest on the mortgage held by the former rector and Frank Hitchcock of Orange on the church property.

SHIP FIRST NAVELS

COVINA, Jan. 7.—The first cars of the 1928 orange crop of this locality were packed this week by the Covina Citrus Association, the fruit is Washington Navels and Thompsons. The Covina Orange Growers expect to begin packing next week. Tests for sugar content show the fruit to meet the requirements prescribed by law. The navel crop, it is estimated, will be normal in this vicinity, but the Valencia crop will be lighter than that of last year.

Planters Need Mexican Labor

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 7.—Gage of battle against any plan for the restriction of Mexican labor imports to this county was thrown today by directors of the Farm Bureau in session at the Courthouse. Any plan which will restrict the importation of Mexican labor to California will be opposed solidly by the Kern County Farm Bureau, according to a resolution passed by the directors of that organization.

E. G. Buerkle, a director of the association, stated in decisive tones that Mexican labor was the backbone of the cotton industry in this county. The margin of profit is not sufficient to make possible the hiring of expensive labor for the harvesting of the cotton crop, was his implication, and the importation of cheap labor from Old Mexico was the specific solution to the problem. The quota law restricting the importation of foreign labor across the Mexican boundary line is opposed in the motion passed by the directors. There was only one vote against it among the assembled directors.

Expert Opposes Rice Planting

IMPERIAL, Jan. 7.—Declaring that extensive rice planting in Imperial Valley would overtax the irrigation canals and result in waterlogged lands, Engineer M. J. Dowd of the Imperial Irrigation District, speaking before the Associated Chambers of Commerce here last night, deplored the campaign now being conducted to bring the rice industry to this district.

Dowd admitted that rice culture would improve some of the alkali lands in the valley, but asserted that the crop would do more harm than good in areas where there is poor drainage. As an added argument against rice planting here, he pointed out that pending the erection of a storage dam in the upper Colorado River the valley has no excess supply of water during August and September and that the heavy demands of extensive rice acreage might result in a shortage of irrigation water.

As the result of recommendation by Clark Adair, expert on fertilization, and others 4455 acres were planted to rice during the past season and excellent results obtained on a number of ranches. Adair has been urging still greater acreage next season.

RAT TRAPPING IS PROFITABLE STUNT

EL CENTRO, Jan. 7.—Muskrat hunting in Imperial Valley is a profitable industry, according to figures disclosed by C. M. Berry, purchasing agent of the Imperial irrigation district, who stated that he had paid $5241.75 for rat tails since the district started offering a bounty of 25 cents a tail a few months ago.

One group of hunters, Berry said, brought in 2400 tails for which they paid $600 last week. The district buys the tails and then burns them to prevent duplicating.

While $5000 seems quite a sum to pay for evidence of dead muskrats, it is pointed out by District Engineer M. J. Dowd that it is possible for one of these rodents to burrow through a canal bank and cause a break which will result in greater damage to the district and to ranchers, than the entire expenditure for bounties in a whole year.

NEW OFFICERS FOR MASONIC LODGE

ONTARIO, Jan. 7.—Ontario Lodge, No. 301, F. & A. M., is in charge of a new corps of officers today, following annual installation at Masonic Hall last night. The officers for 1928 are Rhea Robinson, Worshipful Master; William Nugent, Senior Warden; Arthur Francis, Junior Warden; Albert V. Hughes, Senior Steward; Lyle L. Rathburn, Junior Steward; Sherman Hoyt, Senior Deacon; Francis P. Williams, Junior Deacon; Jess Winton, Marshal; William Hart Spencer, Chaplain; John Phillips, Tyler; J. Scott Bentley, Secretary; Howard Berg, Treasurer.

Past Master Don Craig was installing officer and Past Master John Pennington was master of ceremonies.

The Past Master's jewel was presented to Craig by Isaac Jones.

COMMUNITY PLAYERS PRESENT PREMIER

Inglewood Organization Makes Hit in Bernard Shaw Play

Principals in Costume

INGLEWOOD, Jan. 7.—Premier season's production of the Centinela Community Players, "The Devil's Disciple," by Bernard Shaw, last night proved a brilliant event both from the thespian and the social standpoint, the play being attended by the elite of the valley.

Robert Day, taking the title role of Dick Dudgeon, "the Devil's Disciple," was quite Mansfieldian in this part created by the great Richard Mansfield years agone.

Essie, a young girl ruled by the stern hand of uncompromising elders, was portrayed with exceptional interpretative ability by Miss Doris Weary.

Roy Winborn as Rev. Anthony Anderson, and Betty Farrington as the aged Mrs. Dudgeon, played character parts with telling effect.

Gen. Burgoyne, Gentleman Johnny to his friends, was the suave British officer to the life as cleverly done by Stuart Wilson, while Ed Cooley was as indubitably thick in the head as the bluff role of Maj. Swinton called for.

Minor roles as played by Sid Busby, Frank Ruse, Helen Ruse, Milton C. Wade, Gertrude Kramer, Earle Peterson, Walter Cleaver and George Clark added much in effecting the authentic atmosphere of history, melodrama, wit and satire that distinguishes this Shavian production. R. Oliver Lee of the Inglewood Union High School dramatics department, coached the players and also supervised the making of the settings, the most elaborate yet seen on Inglewood Union High stage.

BULLET WOUND FATAL

Prominent Attorney Said to be Responsible for Act Which Ends His Life

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—Henry Clay Fisk, former attorney, newspaper publisher and United States Consul at Quebec, Can., died early today at the Pasadena Hospital, the victim of a bullet wound which police say was self-inflicted.

Mr. Fisk was taken to the hospital last Monday night, after his son, Carroll Page Fisk, prominent real estate man of Pasadena, discovered his father lying in their home, a revolver by his side and a bullet wound below his heart.

The elder Fisk is reported to have suffered from a chronic digestive malady which physicians believed would be fatal. He had grown despondent over his illness.

He had lived for the last year at 500 South El Molino avenue, coming here from Florida where he had lived since 1912. Most of his life was spent in Vermont, his native State. He served a term in the State Legislature there and a term in the State Senate. He was Consul to Quebec during President Garfield's administration.

During the early part of his career, he published a newspaper at Morrisville, Vt., his birthplace, and later practiced law extensively. His half-brother, George Hendy, was formerly Governor of Vermont.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Isabelle Fisk, and five children, Carroll Page Fisk an dHenry C. Fisk, Jr., of Pasadena; Mrs. D. H. Scribner of Hyde Park, Vt.; Miss Lillian Fisk of Paris and Mrs. Albert D. Simpson of Hartford, Ct.

Funeral arrangements, which are in charge of Ives & Warren, have not been completed.

Hard Luck in Large Doses

UPLAND, Jan. 7.—The world is full of woe at best, but the letter received by Judge George R. Crane in Upland Justice Court wrung his heart because fate should be so unkind to some. One youth tossing snowballs in San Antonio Canyon New Year's Day has caused a Glendale family untold misery as to how to meet Judge Crane's official order, and the judge is today wondering how he can carry out his mandate against Spencer Johnson, the Glendale figure in the case.

Spencer was due to appear in Judge Crane's Upland court to answer to the charge of heaving snowballs in San Antonio Canyon. He didn't come, but a letter from the youth's father was placed in the judge's hands. It stated the reasons why Spencer was not present when his name was called in the courtroom. A few reasons were: The automobile the lad went to the canyon in had since collapsed like the one-hoss shay. The lad had no money. He, himself, the father, had no more money than his son. He had to pawn his watch to buy food for the son.

So, unless some means of conveyance is provided, Mr. Johnson, Sr., said he doesn't see how the boy can reach the Upland court.

Final Rites for Pioneer

EXETER, Jan. 7.—Final rites for D. R. Griffith, 76 years of age, native of Wales, a pioneer of Tulare county who as a stone-cutter aided in construction of the Tulare County Courthouse, the Kings County Courthouse, the Tudare County Jail and many other stone buildings in the San Joaquin Valley, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from the San Joaquin Valley, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from the Methodist Church at Txeter. Interment will be in the Exeter Cemetery, the Odd Fellows' Lodge of which he was a member conducting a ritual at the graveside.

Mr. Griffith dropped dead yesterday afternoon while calling at the home of Eddie Cox in Visalia. Death was presumedly due to heart trouble.

The deceased was a co-owner of the Rocky Hill Stone Quarry in Exeter district with Richard Owen. He was prominently affiliated with the local Lodge of Odd Fellows, Orange Blossom Lodge of Rebekahs of Exeter and Visalia Canton, I.O.O.F. He is survived by a daughter residing in England.

PORTERVILLE, Jan. 7.—The sum of $187,000 is to be spent by the Southern California Edison Company in Porterville district during 1928 for extensions and reinforcements, according to A. W. Frost, district manager. In addition to this, Porterville proportion for generation and transmission equipment, will be $270,900 making a total of more than $450,000 to be spent in the territory.

Mrs. Busch at Pasadena Home for Long Stay

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Lily C. Busch, widely-known philanthropist and widow of Adolphus Busch, famous brewer, arrived in Pasadena today in her private car, accompanied by friends, relatives and her private physician. Mrs. Busch, who is nearly 90 years of age, is reported to be in poor health, and is confined to her bed.

She announced that she would remain at her Pasadena home, 1021 South Orange Grove avenue, indefinitely, unless her health improves greatly. It was in an effort to recover her health that she made the trip from her St. Louis home.

Mrs. Busch was removed from her berth in her private car, the Washington, and placed in an automobile, which took her directly to her residence. She is under the constant care of Dr. Walter Pfeiffer, Berlin specialist, who accompanied her.

Other members of the party included her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Faust, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Loeb of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Conradis.

Mrs. Busch created the internationally-famous Busch Gardens, on which her home is located. Since the World War she has contributed more than $100,000 to the American Legion here for the relief of disabled war veterans. The money came from admissions charged visitors to the gardens.

Large Returns From Orchards

PLACENTIA, Jan. 7.—Revealing that 551,789 boxes of citrus fruit brought a gross return to 260 growers of $1,879,816.95 during the past year, the annual report of the Placentia Orange Growers' Association was today completed for presentation at the annual meeting of association members which will be held next Saturday at 10 a.m. in the high-school auditorium, according to J. A. Prizer, secretary-manager.

The report shows that the local packing-house on East Commonwealth avenue shipped 1379 cars of oranges during the past year, each car containing 400 packed boxes to make up the total of 551,789 boxes marketed. This total was divided among four varities: Valencias, 479,194; navels, 63,663; St. Michaels, 6618, and Mediterranean sweets, 2579 boxes.

During the past year the report discloses from 125 to 130 persons were employed in the packing-house 200 to 300 pickers in the field, eleven fumigating crews and other employees. The total pay roll amounted to $207,824 during the twelve-month period.

A full attendance of the 260 members of the association which is said to be the largest in the State is anticipated at the yearly meeting. Election of officers and selection of the board of directors is planned at the business session, at which W. L. Hale, president, will preside.

WALKED INTO JAIL IN TULARE COUNTY

VISALIA, Jan. 7.—L. B. Sweet, 40 years of age, of Perris, who appeared at the Tulare County Jail, and, according to officers, represented himself as a deputy sheriff from Riverside county, asking aid of county officers in securing an automobile, which he said was his, and in possession of a woman, is being held for Riverside officers.

When questioned, Sweet finally admitted he was not now serving as a deputy sheriff. Sheriff Hilton, telephoning to Riverside, was asked by officers there to hold Sweet for them. Nature of the charge against him is not known here.

GIVES HEAVY MORTGAGE

STRATFORD, Jan. 7.—One of the heaviest mortgages under trust deed ever recorded in this county has just been filed. It is by Ambrose C. Lulu Belle, A. E. and Floyd Blakeley to the Missouri State Life Insurance Company in the sum of $341,108, covering lands in this vicinity, on the western Tulare Lake border. The interest payments are $27,288 annually at 6 per cent. A crop mortgage covering certain lands was also given by Floyd E. Blakeley and others to the Caterpillar Tractor Company covering five notes amounting to more than $16,000.

Murder Rumor Stirs Police

GLENDALE, Jan. 7.—Mysterious information filtering into the detective bureau here last night sent the police out on what promised to be a murder mystery but that turned out to be a wild goose chase.

The person who phoned in the message told the police that a shot had been heard in a house at 1310 Opechee Way, that it had been followed by a woman's scream, and that no one had been seen around the house since that time.

Detective Lieutenant Charles P. Blake and Supt. F. C. Williams of the identification bureau, spurred on by the report that there was an underground passage under the house where the body was almost certain to be hidden, started out to unravel the mystery, and after an hour's investigation came back to headquarters to report that there was no corpse, no underground passage, nothing but an empty house full of dust and dirt.

Schoolgirls Have Play Day

ALHAMBRA, Jan. 7.—More than 700 girls from nine Southern California high schools took part today in the annual "Play Day" sponsored by the Girls' Athletic Association of Alhambra High School. The affair was staged on the A.H.S. athletic field.

Teams and groups of girls from Alhambra, Pasadena, South Pasadena, Long Beach Polytechnic, Woodrow Wilson, Anaheim, Fullerton, Monrovia and Glendale marched in the parade which opened the day's program. Glendale was awarded first place; Pasadena, second; Fullerton, third, and Monrovia, fourth, the awards being given on the basis of posture, marching ability, neatness and uniformity and number participating.

The sports program which followed included basketball, volleyball, archery, tennis, hockey and speedball contests. The events were refereed by women physical education students of the University of California at Los Angeles.

YOUTHFUL DESERTERS CONFESS TO POLICE

ALHAMBRA, Jan. 7.—The nervous actions of two youths as they walked down Main street today aroused the suspicions of a policeman. He questioned them. So many conflicting stories of their residences and occupations were forthcoming that they were taken to the police station for investigation.

There they admitted, police say, that they are army deserters from a Coast Artillery battery at Hawaii. They gave their names as Stanley Sims and Chester Huff.

The youths told the police that they had been shanghaied on an oil tanker bound for the mainland.

SANTA MONICA IN PRINT

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 7.—A new booklet descriptive of Santa Monica, published with city funds by the Santa Monica-Ocean Park Chamber of Commerce and the Greater Santa Monica Club, was ready for distribution today, 13,500 copies having been printed. This city as a place of homes and all-year playground is attractively described, with chapters on industries and business interests. The booklet is beautifully illustrated, and contains statistics of interest.

HELD FOR DEFRAUDING JAPANESE

Humane Officer Said to Have Sold Horse Given Into His Care

EL MONTE, Jan. 7.—Judge F. G. Wilson of the Municipal Court, bound over to the Superior Court B. P. Histed, a State humane officer this morning, on a charge of larceny by trick and device.

B. Kanno, a Japanese, who operates a truck garden on Garvey Road south of El Monte, was the asserted victim of a clever bunko device whereby Histed, who is said to be a principal officer of the California Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, is said to have taken a horse from Kanno and sold him for $70.

Kanno and his helper, K. Omokana, were arrested September 14, last, by Histed and taken before a police justice who fined them $25 each after they had pleaded guilty to a charge of working a horse with a sore shoulder.

Kanno at the hearing yesterday said that he did not understand English and had been denied the services of an interpreter, but paid the $50 under protest. After the Puente hearing, Kanno swore that he signed a paper giving Histed the right to dispose of the horse because Histed had told him that it would cost $150 to cure the animal and he did not think the horse was worth it.

Further testimony brought out the fact that the horse had been sold by Histed for $70, to another Japanese much to the surprise of the original owner who saw the horse he thought to have been shot working in a field.

The same scheme was said to have been worked on T. Fugi of Downey Road, whose horse was taken from him and later returned with a bill for $49 and the injunction to let the horse rest a few weeks before working him.

Dismiss Charge of Contributing to Delinquency

SANTA ANA, Jan. 7.—Lack of evidence to justify further prosecution of the case was assigned by Dep. Dist.-Atty. S. B. Kaufman today as grounds for his motion to dismiss the charge against S. A. Coulon and Mrs. Ruby Bartol, Talbert couple, accused of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Superior Judge E. J. Marks granted the motion and ordered the charge dismissed, thus terminating one of the most curious actions recently before the Orange county courts.

Coulon and Mrs. Bartol, it was shown at the preliminary hearing, have been living together as man and wife, with a business partnership in a dairy held jointly in their names. This double partnership has existed for years, during which time the woman's family of young children grew up, married and founded homes of their own.

Only one child, a girl of 15, remained with the couple when a neighbor caused their arrest on a charge of contributing to the child's delinquency by living together, unmarried.

Testimony developed at the preliminary hearing by Defense Counsel D. G. Wettlin, who cross-examined the prosecution witnesses, disclosed that this supposedly immoral environment had produced young men and women of good moral character, in the opinion of neighbors, who said they had been aware of the situation in the Coulon-Bartol household, but admitted that no fault could be found with the character or behavior of the children.

GOOD SEASON IN COTTON VALLEY

BLYTHE, Jan. 7.—Total cotton ginning for the season for the Palo Verde Valley, up to Saturday night, the 7th inst., amounts to 12,500 bales, according to the production reports received from the Palo Verde Ginning Company, and the Peetit & Manuah gins.

A general estimate given by cotton buyers and ginning experts claim that about 2100 bales yet remain in the fields to be picked, making the season's total production 14,600 bales. This estimate falls but 600 bales short of the total ginning for last year.

Cotton picking now is hitting a full stride, as the effects of the recent rains are barely felt. Little damage was done this season to late cotton by rains, and up to the past two weeks, only staple cotton was being ginned. All of the fleece now being gathered is strictly middling. It is anticipated that every bale will be ginned by February 1.

ASK NEW TRIAL OF DAMAGE SUIT

SANTA ANA, Jan. 7.—Motion for a new trial of the damage suit which recently resulted in a $15,000 verdict for Julian Heim, Santa Ana, was denied today by Superior Judge James L. Allen and may be followed by an appeal.

Attorneys for Charles Tipple, defendant in the damage case, presented their motion before Judge Allen on the ground that he had issued improper instructions to the jury and alleged insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict.

Heim, son of Carl Heim, Santa Ana attorney, was run down by an automobile driven by Tipple in Santa Ana. Suit was brought against Tipple and the Duro Engineering Company for $25,000 damages, but the engineering company was later relieved of responsibility.

POISON GAS ON HIGHWAY

Lives of Many Endang at Riverside

Tank Falls to Pavement fr Automobile

Victims All Escape Serio Results

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 7.—Several per-sons had a narrow escape from dea from cyanide gas when a tank of the deadly substance fell off an automobile in West Riverside late yesterday afternoon, investigation by Sheriff Sweeters revealed today. J. H. Black is said to have been carrying the poison-gas container on the front bumper of his sedan. The tank tore loose from its fastenings as Black attempted to pass another car and falling to the pavement caught in the chassis of the automobile. Dragged along the highway for several feet before Black could check the speed of his vehicle, the container was broken open and a stream of the gas began to seep upward around the automobile.

In the rear seat of the sedan were Black's two little sons. Before the fatal fumes could penetrate the closed car, the frantic father seized his lads and half-dragged, half-carried them to the middle of a nearby field. The smaller of the two went into convulsions, the other apparently suffering little harm. Black's car had been halted immediately in front of a service station operated by A. C. Ertle. Although a considerable distance separated the container from the station, fumes seeped through the intervening air. Ertle, his wife and small son were all rendered temporarily unconscious. As soon as the gas had passed and Ertle regained consciousness he rushed his family to the Riverside Community Hospital for emergency treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Nogle drove up from the rear a few minutes after Black had stopped his car and not realizing the hazard, slowed down to investigate. Nogle began to lapse into unconsciousness and before he could halt the automobile it had crashed into the ditch at the side of the road. Mrs. Nogle leaped from the car and fell almost senseless on the pavement.

Sheriff Sweeters is planning to launch a thorough investigation of the manner in which cyanide gas used in fumigating orange groves and for other commercial purposes is carried on public highways. Should a truck of the gas figure in a collision enough of the deadly fumes would be released to kill 1000 persons, Riversiders experienced in handling cyanide, say.

Tournament of Roses Float Wins Honor

GLENDALE, Jan. 7.—So great has been the interest aroused by Glendale's dragon float in the Tournament of Roses parade at Pasadena that Fresno asks to enter it in the celebration that will mark the Raisin Festival during the coming spring.

City Manager John W. Charles has received a communication from an official of the association in charge of the plans for the Raisin Festival, asking whether it would be possible for Glendale to enter the dragon float in the parade to be held in Fresno. Ways and means are now being discussed here to determine the cost of transportation to and from Fresno, together with the outlay that would be necessary to clothe the dragon again in flowers. If it is ultimately decided to send the dragon to Fresno, Glendale will have captured an honor that has never before fallen to the lot of a city south of the Tehachapi, that of being invited to participate in the famous festival to which all of the San Joaquin Valley flocks every year at raisin time.

So great has been interest manifested in the dragon since it was placed on display on North Brand Boulevard, that it has been decided to keep it on exhibition until Monday noon.

DINUBA BUILDING NOT PURCHASED BY BANK

DINUBA, Jan. 7. — The Dinuba Bank Building owned by the United States National Bank, defunct, has not been sold to the Security Bank and Trust Company of Bakersfield, according to C. K. Newhall, receiver of the United States National Bank.

Newhall expressed surprise at announcement that the Bakersfield bank had been granted permission to establish a bank in Dinuba and declared he knew nothing whatever of the report that the new institution would occupy quarters of the defunct United States National Bank.

The building in question was erected in 1908 by G. W. Wyllie, former Assemblyman of this district. It was occupied by a mercantile firm until 1911, when it was remodeled and occupied by the United States National Bank, of which Visalia Wyllie was the first president. Later the bank quarters were purchased by the bank and are now among assets controlled by Newhall.

NEW OFFICERS FOR REDLANDS BOA

REDLANDS, Jan. 7.—E. A. M was re-elected president of the Redlands Realty Board at the annual meeting today, and strong resolutions urging the County Supervisors to establish a county air port midway between Redlands, Colton and San Bernardino were adopted.

George J. Fowler was the choice for vice-president, and W. H. Johnson was re-elected treasurer for the ensuing year. After H. P. D. Kingsbury refused the nomination of secretary, that honor was tendered J. E. Hosking, who was unanimously elected.

Quality Shown in Outward Beauty—Whippet established the modern tendency in light car design by introducing the vogue for smart, compact bodies with low, fleet lines. Now pleasing new colors and new body refinements further add to the appearance and quality of this perfected car.

Big 4-wheel Brakes—more braking surface per pound of car weight than any other light car. You can stop from 40 miles an hour within 51 feet.

Rear Gasoline Tank—for utmost safety—with vacuum fuel feed. This costs more to build, but is much safer, as Whippet's low insurance rates indicate.

164 Inches of Springs, giving that extreme riding comfort that only very long springs can give. Snubbers prevent rebound and insure the highest degree of smoothness over rough roads.

Long Leg Room in front and rear. The unique design of Whippet's body and cowl makes this possible.

Force-Feed Lubrication—The only light car with drilled crankshaft for full pressure lubrication to the main, connecting rod, generator shaft and camshaft bearings.

Adjustable Steering Wheel—enables you to raise or lower the steering wheel to the most convenient height. Either a tall or short driver may be entirely comfortable at the wheel of the Whippet.

Increased Speed—Whippet superiority is also expressed in greater—and safer—speed; 55 to 60 miles per hour, and many owners say 65.

Greater Gasoline Economy—Whippet holds the A.A.A. Coast-to-Coast economy record of 43.28 miles per gallon. In a nationwide test among 5,508 owners, the average was 38 miles to a gallon.

Lower Center of Gravity—Whippet introduced lower center of gravity among light cars—for greater safety at higher speed—and still leads in this vital feature.

Faster Pick-Up—Whippet's pick-up of 5 to 30 miles in 11⅘ seconds gives you the advantage when the traffic light says "Go."

Silent Timing Chain—as used on the most expensive cars. Adopted after long experience with other types.

Other Important Features—Interchangeable Chadwick-type main bearings, single plate clutch, generator driven by silent timing chain, longer connecting rods, banjo-type rear axle housing with removable shaft, and modern Hotchkiss drive are other quality car features of the Whippet.

RADIO ACTIVITIES

From Broadcasting Stations to Receiving Sets

MILLION-WATT STATIONS MAY BE ADOPTED NEXT

Picture Transmission, Broadcasting From Outlying Areas and Remote Reception Control Discussed

BY DR. RALPH L. POWER

The current issues of some twenty radio magazines show that four ideas now are receiving more than passing interest among those who are acquainted with radio, technical or otherwise.

One of the most prominent radio engineers in the country suggests that within the next two years million-watt transmitters will be the style rather than the few 50,000-watt stations which today are the "superstations."

These enormous broadcasting outfits would have a station coverage undreamed of when broadcast came into being in 1922. Of course until the new million-watters are actualities there will be many problems to be solved, including government licensing for the enlarged stations.

PICTURE MAY BE RECEIVED

The second item up for study in radio engineering circles is picture reception in all its principles and allied lines. Even now there is a device which slowly is emerging from its experimental stage. This appliance, at the cost of $30 or so, is designed to be attached to the ordinary receiver and, in this way, the scenes in the broadcast studio will be taken into the home via the receiving set.

Such a departure would revolutionize the methods of radio procedure so far as the broadcast angle is concerned.

The third important event in radio channels is a movement which really had its beginnings a year or more ago. That is, the removal of station transmitters outside of congested areas.

Many eastern stations now equip their studios in the heart of the city where talent is plentiful and run their transmitter ten to thirty miles out into the country.

RECEPTION IMPROVES

From the technical standpoint the improvement in reception conditions more than makes up for the expense attached to the undertaking.

A score and more of stations already have done this. The general exodus already is under way. As a matter of fact, if the present Radio Commission continues in office another year it undoubtedly will require the larger broadcast outfits to trek into the hills or outlying sections with the transmitting apparatus and equipment.

The fourth point aptly brought out in the current radio press is the remote control invention adapted to the receiving set.

We have become accustomed to the remote control slant of stations in which the remote control lines enable the broadcaster to reach in one direction for a dance program, in another way for a church service, and so on. The programs are brought via telephone wires into the main studio and thence to the air channels.

CHANGES MADE ANYWHERE

Inventors have carried this out in its adaptations to the radio receiving set so that you can turn on the current for the electric or battery set and, instead of remaining directly in front of the receiver, you can go out on the porch and from that point change from station to station.

Through the use of the little invention you can dial from station to station from any point where you wire the necessary equipment.

If there is a loud speaker and a remote control on the sun porch, with the receiver in the living-room, you can change from station to station on the porch. Or in the garden, for that matter, if all the equipment is in.

ALL IMPORTANT

So the New Year apparently brings these four innovations to broadcasters and listeners. Every one of them is just as important an improvement for the technical radio man or station owner as it is for the radio audience.

The remote control of the receiver will enable the listener to hear programs in greater comfort and consequently many probably will keep their sets tuned in a greater amount of time daily.

The transfer of transmitters outside city limits will bring clearer reception to listeners as well as a larger coverage to the transmitting station.

This likewise will be true of the 1,000,000-watt transmitter, while the advent of pictures via radio will create another industry adjunct to the manufacture of receivers.

Yes, in 1928 predictions are in line with big things. But, best of all, it looks now as though they can square promise with performance.

MUSIC DEALER PUTS ON AMPICO CONCERT

The 6:15 to 6:45 p.m. period of KHJ every day in the week is now sponsored by the Fitzgerald Music Company of Los Angeles with an ampico and panatrope concert half-hour. The regular daily period will be augmented from time to time by special concert features.

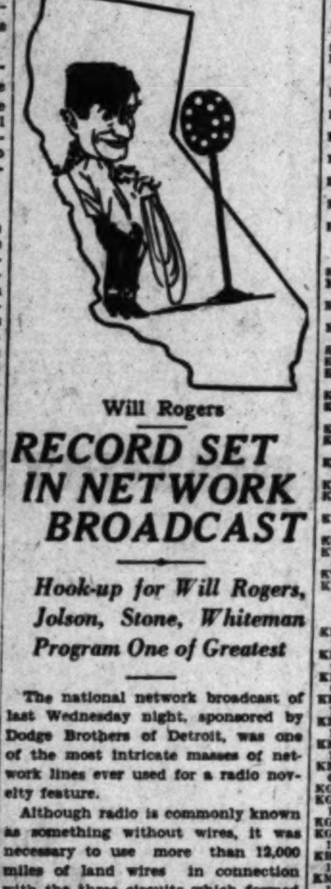
NAVY STATIC RAPIDLY BEING ELIMINATED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Navy static is ceasing to be the target of radio fans pestered by interference. Some time ago protest letters from listeners near navy stations pounded in by the hundreds. Now the receipt of such a complaining letter is rare, navy radio men say. Much of the interference was due to arc and quench spark transmitters which the navy gradually is replacing by vacuum tube transmitters, Lieutenant Commander Tully Shelley of the radio engineering division, declares.

DIAL NUMBERING OPPOSED

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Disapproval of the plan to number wave-length channels has been expressed by the engineering division of the Radio Manufacturing Association. It has been proposed that instead of designating each channel by wave-length or kilocycle, it be given a number, starting from one and continuing through the broadcast band. In advising the Federal Radio Commission that they are not ready to accept the proposal, the RMA engineers said that much confusion will result. It also was pointed out that dials of receivers will have to be altered.

COMEDIAN PRESIDES FOR RADIO NOVELTY



Will Rogers

RECORD SET IN NETWORK BROADCAST

Hook-up for Will Rogers, Jolson, Stone, Whiteman Program One of Greatest

The national network broadcast of last Wednesday night, sponsored by Dodge Brothers of Detroit, was one of the most intricate masses of network lines ever used for a radio novelty feature.

Although radio is commonly known as something without wires, it was necessary to use more than 12,000 miles of land wires in connection with the three circuits which formed one of the greatest mechanical achievements in the history of radio telephony.

Will Rogers, as master of ceremonies, was at his best. He spoke from his Beverly Hills home, while Al Jolson sang in New Orleans, Fred Stone was heard in Chicago, and Paul Whiteman with his band in New York.

The various parts were blended into the one program and everything went through with clockwork precision.

Programs to be Sponsorod by Film Stars

Now that the Radio Film Club is on the air over KHJ's microphone each Saturday, between 7 and 8 p.m., a prominent film star will sponsor each program.

GRETA GARBO

Last night's radio performance was sanctioned by Greta Garbo, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, exotic Swedish screen charmer who has the role of "Anna Karenina," in the M.-G.-M. production of "Love," adapted from Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina."

The Radio Film Club gives a musical hour interspersed with the biography of a prominent picture personage and a feature guessing contest.

ANOTHER FEATURE GIVEN BY KMTR

The past week has seen another change in the program of KMTR week days. Walter Biddick introduced a new fifteen-minute period commencing at 6:45 p.m. to be known as Timely Topics.

This will include current events daily happenings, notices of meetings, public announcements and data from civic organizations.

The Timely Topics broadcast immediately will follow the 5 to 5:45 time during which Mr. Biddick gives his week-day entertainment known as the certified air bulletin program.

SUBSEA TESTS MADE

Radio Transmission Via Cables Tried by Europeans

Submarine broadcast would seem to be an anomalous undertaking, as indeed it would be if the actual broadcasting were to be done in the depths of the sea. But the transmission of radio programs by submarine cable from one country to another is being undertaken with promise of valuable results.

Experiments in this line are being conducted by the British Broadcasting Corporation and the Belgian Radio Broadcasting Company, and are reported to be increasingly successful. Similar experiments have been made, also with success, between Koenigsberg and Berlin, by way of the Koenigsberg-Stettin-East Prussia cables.

The chief problem to be determined is whether the clustered parallel wires in the cable, busy with other telegraphic messages, can be prevented from interfering with the radio transmissions, apparently a problem in perfect insulation.—[Canadian Radio News.

NEW BATTERY GRIDS PERFECTED

Radio and automobile batteries with rigid grids of pure lead, which cannot be overcharged, are reported to have been perfected by a British electrical concern. Overcharging has long been the bane of many users of batteries.

TROUBLES HUNTED FOR RADIO FANS

Fourteen Cars Solving Interference Problems in Dominion of Canada

There are now fourteen radio-equipped interference cars throughout the Dominion solving interference problems for radio listeners free of charge. These are operated by the government and are stationed in the principal cities, from where they make trips into the rural districts and the smaller cities.

Inspector S. J. Ellis, stationed at Toronto, and now in charge of practically all Ontario, from Kingston to Port Arthur, reports that his cars are out on the job all the time, and that the people in the rural districts are finding the service of great value. He has numerous complaints of interference from telephone and electric light lines, oil furnaces, etc., to investigate not only in the cities but throughout the province.—[Canadian Radio News.

Reveille Hour Supervised by Mr. Wellman

From Monday to Friday inclusive Charlie Wellman is now giving the Sperry flour reveille hour over Don Lee's KHJ on the 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. broadcast.

CHARLIE WELLMAN.

The broadcast is in the nature of an at-home hour in which the listeners are urged to help with the program to the extent of writing in ideas for the entertainment features.

LEIPZIG RADIO FAIR TO SHOW LATEST

The latest developments of every phase of radio will be shown at the great international radio show at the Leipzig Spring Fair, 1928. More than 500 exhibitors from the leading countries will take part, making it possible to compare the recent progress in the science throughout the world. A special invitation to America to attend will be broadcast from the high-powered station at the Leipzig fair on a convenient short wave length, and during the fair daily bulletins will be sent overseas. The fair will be held from March 4 to 14.

SINGLE WEATHER CODE SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Confusion caused by the diversity of foreign codes in which weather information is broadcast to trans-Atlantic flyers probably will be eliminated by the adoption of an international system of signals. The making of a world weather map to be broadcast in one code by stations in all parts of the globe is the goal of meteorologists. This problem was considered by delegates to the recent international radio telegraph conference here.

OCEAN PHONE TALKS SOCIAL

A New York trust company, in a recent statement on the development of communications, points out that 60 per cent of the messages across the ocean by radio-telephone are social in their nature, indicating that the high rates for trans-Atlantic radio-telephone calls will retain for the cables the bulk of commercial messages between the United States and Great Britain.

RADIO TURNS ROOFS INTO AERIAL FORESTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—A forest atop a city—that is what radio has done to the quarters of the apartment-house dweller. So thick is this growth of aerial masts that roof walking sometimes is almost as precarious as a ramble through a virgin forest.

DX POOR IN DAYTIME

Daylight distances of radio broadcast are considerably less than night distances, accounting for the fact that DX-ing in the daytime is usually a dismal failure. It is estimated by Army and Navy radio experts that the distance of a 5000-watt transmitter in daylight, using the average receiver now employed by listeners, is approximately 100 miles. The distance of a 10,000-watt transmitter is estimated to be about 175 miles in daylight, that of a 20,000-watt transmitter about 250 miles, and that of a 50,000-watt transmitter about 350 miles.

The stations will have one operator who will act as caretaker and weather observer.

The stations planned are intended to expedite the handling of weather information which is not now available at those locations. One of the sites selected is about forty miles from the nearest power or communication line.

MONA LISA PROVED BY X-RAY TO BE AUTHENTIC

Science Finds Real Treasure, Not Copy, Returned to Louvre by Italy After Theft

PARIS, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—A famous lady's reputation has been saved by modern science. An "expertise" of the Mona Lisa of the Louvre Museum by the X-ray and ultra violet ray has failed to reveal a single doubt about her authenticity, or a single blemish on her family tree.

For many years a legend has been built up that this Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece which was returned to the Louvre by the Italian government in 1913—it had been hidden in a dingy hotel room in Florence for two years—was not the original that Vincenzo Perugia, the Italian Bohemian artist, had carried out of the Louvre in his umbrella in 1911.

"It is certainly a copy," the late Jules Guiffrey, a distinguished art critic and director of the Gobelin works, remarked many times.

LEONARDO'S FINGERPRINTS

"The original had a transparent shadow on the lips, which is not on this one," other artists pointed out.

"This painting is much darker than the one that was stolen," others contended.

Louvre authorities laughed at these allegations, although the documentary proofs they exhibited would be considered very incomplete today. They had photographed Mona Lisa, or 'La Joconde,' as she is known in France, shortly before she was cut from her frame and carried off, and they compared a copy of this photograph showing the thousands of fine lines that constitute a painting's "craquelure." The cracks in the painting returned from Italy were identical with the ones in the photograph of the original. The vast majority of experts accepted this proof as conclusive.

TESTED BY RAYS

With the developments of new photographic processes—in particular, the X-ray, ultra violet ray and microphotography — Monsieur Henri Verne, director of the Louvre Museum, recently made the daring decision to examine his 9000 paintings by these methods.

It was a very brave thing to do, even if the results were not made public. The two rays, and especially the ultra violet one, instantaneously reveal the full history of an old painting—the alterations, restorations, suppressions, additions and a host of other vital details, as well as exposing modern fakes. In poking into the history of 9000 paintings, even in the finest museum in the world, there were bound to be many sensations. The mysterious light rays would show that some famous works were fakes, that others had been partly ruined at various times and repainted by obscure persons, and that the original designs of some old masterpieces had been completely changed by modern meddlers.

It was not only a question of stirring up a lot of big scandals, but of trifling with a treasure that is valued at many millions of dollars. The exposures would cause no end of difficulties. If a famous work was discovered to be a fake should it be taken down and tossed into the cellar? Should the public be told the truth or left in ignorance? What would be the effect on the Louvre's prestige? The authorities are still puzzling over these problems.

HUGE UNDERTAKING

Monsieur Verne entrusted this delicate undertaking—it meant photographing all these works, of which 5000 are actually hung and the others loaned out or stored away, by six different processes—to Col. Fernand Cellerier, director of the testing laboratory of the Arts et Metiers Conservatoire, a state scientific institution.

The first painting chosen for the test was Leonardo da Vinci's noted masterpiece, the enigmatical Mona Lisa. It was secretly taken to the laboratory one morning this week when the museum was closed and in the presence of Monsieur Verne and Monsieur Guiffrey, conservator of the Louvre picture galleries, Col. Cellerier put the lovely Florentine lady through a scientific inquisition from which she came out more smiling than ever.

None of them hoped to find any spectacular proof that she was the authentic 'Joconde'—for example, a secret message from da Vinci saying she was the original one and all the others were copies—but, from the Louvre viewpoint, the examination was highly satisfactory.

AGE OF PIGMENTS

A study of the pigments under the light showed that they surely dated from about the year 1500, which was the period in which the Mona Lisa was painted. This was highly important as most of the thirty-two well-known copies were made one or two centuries later when different pigments were employed. The X-ray and ultra violet ray also revealed for the first time that there had not been a single alteration since the work was finished, which is considered a good sign.

By studying the painting under the ultra violet rays the experts could clearly see that da Vinci had changed his conception many times, and this was extremely important as the painter had worked for four years on his masterpiece. Altogether, with the aid of the new identification methods, they found a score of points to indicate the authenticity of the Monna Lisa of the Louvre, and not a single one to throw any doubt on it.

"We undertook this work with a double purpose," Monsieur Verne explained.

HISTORY UNVEILED

"We wanted to learn the history of all our paintings, but what is far more important, we need a complete photographic record of all these treasures so that if they are ever stolen and returned we can identify them without any doubt.

As long as we have an X-ray and ultra violet ray photograph of a painting no one can ever deceive us.

"These records will be carefully filed away and if any question of identity ever comes up we have only to consult them.

I asked him if it would not make a great scandal if some folks were found during the examnation, and also how many had been found already.

PUBLICITY QUESTIONED

"We are going to keep those secrets to ourselves," he replied with a sly smile, explaining that none of these identification photos will be made public.

"Are you really going to suppress the news of any sensational discoveries?"

"We really haven't decided what to do about that," he smiled again.

CAUSE OF EXAMINATIONS

The chain of circumstances that finally caused the Louvre authorities to embark on this scientific examination of its treasures had a very curious beginning.

A few years ago a crook, posing as an alleged picture buyer, arrived at a small French provincial town and visited an elderly woman who was the aunt of Admiral Fatou of the French Navy.

"I see you have a poor copy of the Monna Lisa," he remarked to the lady. "I might buy it if I was sure of finding a client, but I don't want to go to the trouble of finding a buyer and then take a chance of not getting it. Will you give me an option?"

CONFEDERATE RETURNS

After much discussion the lady agreed to sell it for 10,000 francs, and to give him a permanent option on it for 1000 francs.

He went off and a few days later his accomplice, also posing as a picture buyer, came along and called on the lady.

"I am buying famous paintings for the Brazilian government," he explained. "I hear that you have a magnificent Monna Lisa and I have come here to buy it. You can name your own price, Madame. I can pay up to 500,000 francs, and perhaps even a little more. Here is a certified check. I should like to carry it off with me."

BUYS BACK OPTION

The admiral's aunt explained in tears that she had sold the option to another dealer.

"Then you must buy it back, Madame," the second crook exclaimed earnestly. "Buy it back at the first opportunity, seno for me at once and I shall give you 500,000 francs.

She paid a large sum for the option, and naturally never saw the second rascal again, but the point is that Admiral Fatou inherited this painting just after the war, turned it over to a picture dealer to sell to some rich American and forgot all about it.

UNFOUNDED REPORT

For some mysterious reason, a Parisian reporter raised a hue and cry a few months ago that he had found the original Monna Lisa and that the one in the Louvre was a copy.

The Louvre authorities almost choked with indignation, and then decided to make a modern photographic record of their paintings.

AIR EXPERT FEARS FLYING

DAYTONA BEACH (Fla.) Jan. 7. (AP) Despite the fact that his name has been linked intimately with one of the most daring aerial exploits of history, T. H. (Doc) Kincade, motor expert, has a "horror of airplanes" and would not get into one unless he had to.

Most commercial airplanes of today are unsafe, but the time is coming when such means of transportation will be as safe and sane as trains or motor cars, yesterday said the man who for sixteen years has been field expert for the Wright Aeronautical Corporation and who last year conditioned the motors used in trans-Atlantic flights and the North Pole flight of Commander Richard Byrd. Kincade also is one of the eight survivors of the Roma airship disaster of a few years ago.

Lady Astor Raps Men's War Views

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Christopher Columbus did not stay in America because his wife was not with him, it was suggested here by Lady Astor who was putting in a good word for wives generally.

"The more I see of men, the more I believe in women," Lady Astor observed at a dinner of the Three Towns Association.

"As for those famous pioneers of history we have heard about, they would not have stayed a week in other countries if their wives had not been with them.

"Why did not Columbus settle in America? Because he had not got his wife along with him.

"I am an unrepentant believer in women. If you are to stop wars women must stop them. Men have too much rubbish in their minds about patriotism and war and that sort of thing, and they may on that account bring about the ruin of the world."

ITALIAN KING MAKES RAPIER-LIKE THRUST

PARIS, Jan. 7. (AP)—A French diplomatist returned from Italy tells this:

"King Victor Emanual and Mussolini were together at a great state function. The King dropped his handkerchief. Mussolini picked it up and handed it to His Majesty, who replied:

"'Thank you. I appreciate your courtesy all the more as this is one of the few things in which I may still stick my nose.'"

LOUD SPEAKER FOILS QUEST FOR FUGITIVE

PARIS, Jan. 7. (AP)—Telephone connections and a loud speaker enabled Leon Daudet, fugitive French royalist, to address a meeting of royalists here while private detectives waited to arrest him. Daudet escaped from prison and fled to Brussels. When detectives heard he was to speak here they set out to catch him. But after an introductory speech a traveling case was put on the platform and Daudet's voice issued forth to the audience by telephone from his Belgian retreat.

NEW YORK AUTO EXHIBIT OPENS

Bright Color and Trim Lines Mark Latest Creations

Forty-three Passenger-Car Makes on Display

Heavy Reductions in Prices Feature of Show

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—The 1928 automobile is a fast, low-hung, small-wheeled brightly colored machine with narrow radiator, sleek lines and interior fittings of greater luxury than ever before.

More powerful and more comfortable than any of its predecessors, it carries the last word in automotive engineering and design to the twenty-eighth annual national automobile show which opened today at Grand Central Palace.

Forty-three different makes of passenger cars are on display, each different in its own way from all the others, yet each embodying the same basic refinements.

Even the doorknobs show the trend of constant effort at improvement and there are new designs in lamps and radiator caps, upholstery and all the inside hardware that makes the modern automobile a thing of luxury.

ATTRACTIVE FEATURES

The mechanically minded find their thrills under the hood, where the powerful new engine is hidden. But the women admire the chased metal fittings, the hidden side pockets, the ingeniously placed memo pads, chauffons and diamond-shaped side lamps. The vases, smoking equipment, receptacles for smelling salts and assorted aggessories oring to the new car features which cannot fail to appeal to the feminine purchaser.

The more violent colors clothe the sport models but even the touring cars and limousines have shed the drab shader of other years and emerged in flashing colors. Less apparent refinements are those which built new speed and power into the motor and new comfort into the interior.

PRICE REDUCTIONS

Drastic reductions in price by makers of large as well as small cars, indicates sharp competition for the favor of small-salaried buyers. More than a dozen exhibitors shows models priced at less than $1000.

The underslung chassis which made its first appearance several years ago is lower than ever, in the interest of safety. Some cars have lenghtened the wheel base and some have shortened it, but none has sacrificed interior comfort.

While 274 exhibitors are displaying their wares at the national show, the Ford Motor Company is preparing for an independent display of its own products at Madison Square Garden, larger quarters than those used in any previous year for the Ford exhibit.

MATAMOROS TO INSTALL TELEPHONES

First Service for Mexican Town in 100 Years of Its Existence

BROWNSVILLE (Tex.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The installation of approximately 700 telephones in private residences and business houses will begin within a few weeks in Matamoros, Mex., opposite here, giving that city its first telephone service in its more than 100 years of existence, according to Don Carlos Tofinder, one of the chief engineers and executives of the Mexican Telegraph and Telephone Company.

Matamoros has had no telephone system in the city, except one wire during the past few years. This wire is strung from the garrison where the jail is located, to the international bridge, its primary purpose being for the jail guards to notify the Mexican bridge authorities in case of a prison break, or any other disturbance where it would be necessary to get in touch with the bridge.

Residents of the city of Matamoros are preparing for telephone service and much interest is being manifested. The service will probably be ready during the month of February, according to telephone officials.

Beauty Remedy Brings Divorce

RENO (Nev.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Treatments by a Los Angeles beauty specialist damaged his wife's looks and spoiled her disposition Phillip L. Jourdin, former Angeleno, testified in his suit for divorce from Mrs. Elizabeth Jourdin. He said that she became cruel, jealous and domineering, caused his discharge from positions bringing him in contact with women, and neglected her household.

Jourdin declared his wife made false charges against him to his employers, accused him of being interested in women, and nagged him constantly. Mrs. Jourdin made no defense and the decree was granted by default.

LAND AND SEA NO BAR TO WILEY DAN CUPID

BERLIN, Jan. 7. (AP)—Cupid used a box containing a comb and a harmless slip of paper to bring Lisbeth Aepfler of Naumburg and Robert Press of New York together for life.

Fraulein Aepfler, 21 years of age, blond and of a jolly disposition, is packer in a comb factory at Naumburg. One day as she was doing up an order destined for America, she decided, just for fun, to put into the package a slip of paper with the words, "Kind regards from the old fatherland," and her name and address.

Robert Press, 23, a New York chauffeur who had emigrated to the States from Frankfurt-on-Main seven years ago, found the slip, wrote to Lisbeth, exchanged photographs with her and finally boarded a steamer to see her.

The engagement was promptly announced.

CAIRO OBSERVATORY RECORDS EARTHQUAKE

CAIRO (Egypt) Jan. 7. (AP)—The observatory at Helwan recorded a violent earthquake at 9:38 last night. The epicenter was calculated to be 3000 miles distant.

FAST HIGHWAY PLAN STUDIED

National Auto Express Line System Proposed

House Leaders Consider Federal Action

Toll Proposed to Finance Speedway Building

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Studious consideration is being given by Republican House leaders to the advisability of the Federal government embarking on an automobile express highway construction program that ultimately would link up all sections of the country.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the House majority leader, said today that he has discussed the question with Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Public Roads Bureau, and has asked him for an expression of opinion from bureau officials on the proposals.

TALKS WITH FURLOW

He said also that he has conferred with Representative Furlow, a Minnesota Republican, who has introduced a bill to create a commission to "study proposals for the establishment of a national system of express highways," and report its finding to Congress. While nothing definite has been decided upon, Mr. Tilson summarized what is being discussed at present as follows:

"Between New York and Boston, automobile traffic already is seriously congested. This could be relieved by an express highway upon which traffic could move at a high speed.

"It is proposed to have these highways routed around congested centers and connected with them by cut-off roads. The highways would bridge all other roads and railroads so there would be no cause for slowing down traffic at any point. The arterial highways, under plans already prepared by construction engineers, would be connected with other roads and other arterial highways by cut-off roads at the point of intersection.

"Inasmuch as one road is elevated over the other, it would be possible to so route traffic that left-hand turns could be eliminated and thus prevent congestion.

"The cost of constructing these highways, it is proposed, would be met by collection of tolls. It is believed that these tolls would be more than offset by the saving effected on a long trip in time, gas and wear and tear on a car. Any profit from the toll collected could be used to build other highways and expand the system. Eventually the system would link all important industrial centers in all parts of the country.

PRIVATE MOVE FORECAST

"The highways themselves would have an express passenger section and also an express commercial traffic section.

"It is the belief that such highways shortly may be started by private enterprise if the Federal government does not enter the field, and undoubtedly private capital would profit to a large extent if so employed."

While Mr. Tilson did not touch upon this phase, Congressional committees at times have been told by various witnesses that a system of express highways would be of material value from a standpoint of national defense needs.

Nevada Gamblers Hi-jackers' Prey

RENO (Nev.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Hi-jacking, long used by gunmen preying on bootleggers, has been extended to the illegal gambling games of Nevada. Recently several gaming resorts in Reno, Winnemucca, Ely and other towns have been raided by bandits, bankrolls at the various games seized, and tills rifled.

The proprietors fear to ask the aid of the police as they are themselves violating the antigambling laws of the State. Some of the largest resorts are attempting to cope with the situation by employing two-gun men to protect their establishments.

A similar practice prevailed in the days of the Old West, when every man was a law unto himself.

Fear Vancouver Man Drowned

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—That Prof. Milton Clay well-known musician of Vancouver slipped while attempting to land from a rowboat in Howe Sound and was drowned is the belief of authorities following discovery of the derelict boat with its oars shipped properly and the missing man's club bag intact. He left Vancouver to visit a friend on the shores of Howe Sound.

A Reply to the Thousands Who Are Seeking to Learn the Truth—"Can Virile Life, Health and Spirit of Youth Be Renewed?"

Living Proof—More Convincing Than All Theories—Attest the Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler Simple Gland Therapy

DR. CLAYTON E. WHEELER
Former Stanford House Surgeon, San Francisco Hospital Clinical Instructor, Stanford University Assistant Gynecologist, San Francisco Hospital

"Can those who are ailing, heavily burdened with sickness; wrinkled in face and withered in form, have reason to believe that men of science can aid them back to normal body and mind? Is it possible for the prematurely 'old,' those who may never have enjoyed full normal development, or, those who have passed the meridian of life to find themselves practically useless, hope to be improved physically to a point where living is no longer a burden?" From every section of the land sincere seekers of health are writing Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler asking practically these questions.

Dating back several years, when Dr. Wheeler was clinical instructor at Stanford University, he stated that the endocrine glands of the human body controlled all mental and physical functions, and that if these were normal disease would be non-existent, other than of germ origin.

He added to this, that our looks, personality, length of life, thought, happiness, sickness and human energy, all, were controlled by the endocrines (ductless glands.)

During the past several years—at his Los Angeles and San Francisco offices—Dr. Wheeler has performed more than 14,000 of his simple, knifeless gland operations, a greater number, according to the best information available, than that of all other gland surgeons combined.

Hundreds of letters from men and women in all walks of life attest the great benefits they derived at his hands, and there can be no more convincing answer made earnest investigators than these human documents. Truly grateful former sufferers are willingly meeting those afflicted with ailments similar to those of which they were relieved.

New Life and Usefulness Restored to Man of 69—"I Feel Like I was Only 25 Years Old."

933 Paloma Ave.,
Burlingame, Calif.
July 25, 1927.

Dr. C. E. Wheeler,
535 Powell St., San Francisco,
Calif.

My Dear Dr. Wheeler: I feel it my duty to write and thank you for the wonderful results following the gland treatment given me. The day I took that first operation I could hardly walk up to the operating room and I am sure had I put it off another week, I would have been in the cemetery, for I had been fighting off this deadly disease for about ten years, and will say the money I paid you was the best investment I ever made for after one week after my first operation I went to work, and have been doing the hardest kind of work every day since and I have earned double the money I paid you since that date, about nine weeks ago, and if anybody suffering with gland trouble will call and see me, I will cheerfully tell that Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler has put new life in my old system. I am 69 years of age and I feel like 25 years old.

You can use this letter, by showing or publishing it. This is my wish for you, that you may live to help and cure thousands suffering from this dreadful disease.

Yours very truly.
(Signed) GEO. E. McLEOD.

Author Drafts Form Letter on What Young Writer Must Do With Manuscript

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—George Bernard Shaw, deluged with requests to "read" unacted first plays, has taken "$12,000 worth of time" off from writing his own plays to draft a form letter on "what a young playwright should do with his first play." This he now incloses with each play, all of which go back to their authors by the very first post.

"As a beginner generally begins by doing the wrong thing, it is necessary to tell him at once what not to do," is the premise outlined by Mr. Shaw.

"First, and very emphatically do not send your play to anyone but a manager. Above all, do not send it to your favorite playwright with a request that he will read it. The reasons for this piece of advice are:

ADVISES YOUNG PLAYWRIGHTS

"(a) That nobody but a manager can produce it.

"(b) That if your play contains a valuable dramatic motive, every born playwright who reads it will assimilate it and use it himself, consciously or unconsciously.

"(c) That his opinion, if unfavorable, may discourage you needlessly, as he knows no more than you do what the public will fancy.

INTRODUCTION SUPERFLUOUS

"(d) That when managers come to him, they come for his own plays and would be infuriated if he advised them to try a beginner instead.

"(e) That as dramatic authorship is a public profession the business appropriate to them is not conducted by private introductions and 'influence,' but is transacted in the open market in which the demand for promising plays is greater than the supply.

"(f) That when an introduction is superfluous, it is mischievous and often extremely annoying, as it robs the manager of such credit and gratitude as to the discovery of a new genius."

NEW POSTAL RATE TO AID IN AVIATION

Calles to Submit Proposal to Congress for Increasing Price of Stamps

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) By increasing the postage stamps in price for all letters two centavos, about one cent in American money, the government will be able to raise annually more than 1,200,000 pesos, which would be applied to stir up civil aviation in Mexico, according to information from the Secretariat of Communications and Public Works. President Calles has taken the matter under advisement and will submit the project to Congress.

It is indicated the measure will be put into effect, shortly, if passed. This is deemed the most advisable way to stimulate aviation in Mexico during 1928. The money is to be applied toward establishment of air routes and aerial communication with the United States, it is said.

The establishment of a commercial aviation school, to train efficient pilots, with an adequate study of air routes, is also included as part of the income from the projected increase.

Present mail stamps are eight centavos, four cents in American currency, but under this proposal would be raised to ten centavos.

ICE SHEET PATH TRACED IN CLAY

Geologists Follow Retreat of Vast Glacier

Record Northward Movement for 2550 Years

Savant Tells How Deposits Reveal History

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Entries from the world's oldest logbook—the geological journal of Mother Earth—are being transcribed at the American Museum of Natural History as scientists trace the northward retreat of the last ice sheet.

Dr. Chester A. Reeds, curator of invertebrate paleontology, is assembling the ancient record in paragraphs of clay, so to speak, for he is following the glacier's retrogression year by year through the annual soil deposits laid down by the ice as it slowly receded from its extreme southern frontier near New York.

Working in clay pits of the Hackensack River Valley at Little Ferry, N. J., Dr. Reeds has been able to record the movement of the glacier during 2550 years of its retreat. At Haverstraw, N. Y., north of this city, he has found the story of another 750 years' recession.

These accurate studies are possible because each annual glacial deposit of sediment is clearly marked in shaded bands of clay. Dark strips denote the winter accumulation, while intervening lighter colored bands represent the summer deposit.

Swedish geologists, working with Baron Gerard de Geer, have learned from these bands that it took the ice 13,500 years to recede from Central Scania, the southernmost part of Sweden, to the present small ice caps in the north central part of that country.

Using similar methods in New England, Ernst Antevs, another Swedish scientist, counted back 4100 years in the Connecticut Valley and 7300 years in Canada. Dr. Reed's work brings the total to 14,700 years, but there are still many links missing in the chain that leads from the ice border of 25,000 years ago to its present location in the subarctic.

"The clays from which we are obtaining this record are of glacial age," says Dr. Reeds, "since each layer had its origin in an annual retreat stage of the ice. They are developed as follows:

As the ice melted and receded slowly northward during the warm summer months of each year the swollen rivers that flowed out from under the ice mass picked up the fine sand and clay particles and transported them to fresh-water lakes which occupied the lower portions of the enclosed basins in front of the glacier.

"As the stream currents on entering the still waters of the lake gradually lost their power to transport their load of sediment the fine sand and coarse clay particles settled down over the lake bottom to form the sandy summer layer. During the cold winter months the ice-front became stationary, the englacial and subglacial stream courses either ran dry or congealed and little, if any, sediments were transported by the rivers into the lakes.

"The surface of the lake also became encrusted with ice and snow, and the fine clay particles, which had been held in suspension in the milky water following the summer incursions, slowly settled to the bottom to form the bluish, reddish or dark winter layers composed of pure clay. Before the end of the winter season the lakes cleared and a sharp line of demarcation was established between the top of the 'winter' layer and the base of the succeeding 'summer' layer. This well-defined line is of value in separating the seasonal layers into varves of annual deposits.

"These geologic events immediately precede the present day. How far back they go in time we can but estimate, yet the exploration and counting of the clay varves is affording a precise record of the annual retreat stages of the ice and the duration of the glacial lakes."

TEXAS HAS VAST AREA RAILLESS

State Led Nation Building Transportation Lines During 1927

KERRVILLE (Tex.) Dec. 7. (AP)—Although most once-wild regions of America now are bound under a network of railroads, a vast domain of 50,000 square miles in Texas is still as free from iron rails as when it was first traversed by early Spanish explorers. And this in spite of the fact that Texas led the nation in railroad building in 1927.

Into the railroadless region of Texas could be crammed the States of Maryland, ermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware and Rhode Island. The territory, spreading west from Kerrville to Alpine, embraces a fifth of the area of Texas.

Yet the sparsely settled region is not unproductive. It is known as the leading wool and mohair producing territory of the world. Its mineral resources have been pronounced rich by government authorities, who name potash as one of the chief deposits.

Discovery of oil in the Pecos and San Angelo regions has resulted in the laying of pipelines across this hill country to inland shipping points and to ports on the Gulf of Mexico.

Railroads penetrate no farther than to San Angelo, Alpine, Del Rio, Kerrville, Llano and Menard. In the thinly settled interior, inhabitants without benefit of railway travel rely upon motor car and radio to relieve the monotony of their isolation.

JAPANESE SEE EUROPEAN WAR

Press Urges Nation to Stand With United States

Says Nippon and Uncle Sam Should Keep Aloof

Cite Back-Door Diplomacy as Inciting Debacle

TOKIO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—That war-clouds of a very menacing hue are gathering in Europe and that, come what may, the United States and Japan should not be drawn into the maelstrom of European quarrels, is the gist of several articles that have recently appeared in the Japanese papers and magazines.

The situation in Europe, especially in Northeastern Europe, is reviewed at great length and the majority of publicists here express the fear that the chancellories of Europe are drifting into another tussle of strength which, if the other nations are not sufficiently careful, may involve them too. The papers call attention to the increasing frequency with which cabled reports tell of preparations for war in bankrupt Europe and compare the military nervousness and international distrust now pervading a good part of Europe with the atmosphere that existed in that section of the Old World prior to 1914.

"It does not need very much foresight," says one writer, "or a high degree of intelligence to know that if the present international wranglings and jealousies in Europe continue, there will be but one result—another war in which the civilian populations will suffer every whit as severely as those at the front."

FORMER INCIDENTS

It is recalled that, when the last relapse into savagery got under way, Japan and the United States were considerably reviled because they did not plunge into the tumult at once. Later, when Japan, under the terms of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, threw her lot in on the side of Great Britain and France, the United States was dubbed a coward and a brigand, a coward for not coming into the fray right away—as though courage means the readiness of a rough-neck to exchange blows—and a brigand because the European governments were nailed down to their commitments for loans and ammunition.

When America did enter the war, she was hailed as the savior of the civilized world, but after it was over over there, the United States was again called a skinflint and a Shylock because the State Department would not countenance anything so dishonorable as repudiation of debts.

The Japanese think that another grave debacle is soon due, especially as Europe is armed to the teeth and the old kitchen-stairs, back-door, balance-of-power diplomacy has again taken the place of the free-covenants-openly-arrived-at diplomacy which Europe pledged Woodrow Wilson to accept.

DESTINIES OF NATIONS

"Japan and America," says one writer, "can render a signal service to the rest of the world by keeping aloof from European entanglements, whatever the temptation offered and, if dog must eat dog, then let Europe go at it." The writer adds that the destinies of these two nations are woven around the Pacific, and they are morally responsible for all the nations abutting on this great ocean and should see that the European conflagration is not allowed to spread to this part of the world.

"All said and done," remarks another Japanese writer, "the smaller countries of Europe do not mean a thing in the national or social life of the United States or of Japan, and the chorus of contemptuous sneers that greets any suggestion for honest-to-God disarmament illustrates amply the state of mind of the nations of Europe."

He concludes by saying that not 1 cent, and not one man, should leave the Pacific for Europe if trouble breaks out there and if Japan and America do this future generations will bless their wisdom, foresight and caution which is "just the same sound commonsense as when one does not permit mad dogs to come into one's private premises."

Telephone Line Traps Bull Elk

GLACIER PARK (Mont.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—During a hunting expedition in the Lewis and Clark National Forest, Bryant Grass and Victor Hughes, old-time Glacier Park guides, had an unusual experience. Led by the sound of a telephone wire snapping off an insulator, they came upon a large bull elk tangled in a fallen wire.

The wire was wrapped around the elk's antlers, and the animal was rushing frantically to and fro in the space allowed him by the length of the loose strand, 200 feet or more. From the condition of the ground the hunters concluded that the elk had been held by the wire for several hours. Shots from their rifles put an end to the captive's struggles. The fallen telephone line was a result of the recent severe storm.

Díctase una Disposición Sobre Ventas de Cerveza de Jengibre

WASHINGTON, Enero 6.—Según disposición dictada hoy por el subsecretario Lowman, encargado del cumplimiento de la prohibición, los clubs y restaurants nocturnos que sirven hielo, cerveza de jengibre y otros ingredientes no alcohólicos que se usan para hacer bebidas mezcladas, no cometen violación ninguna de ley, a menos de vender esas cosas sabiendo que van a ser utilizadas para hacer bebidas intoxicantes.

Caso que vendan esos ingredientes sabiendo de antemano que los parroquianos van a mezclarlos con licores alcohólicos, cometen una violación técnica de la ley prohibitiva de la venta de licor, y quedan sujetas a la ley del candado. Ya se han hecho varios arrestos por infracciones de esta disposición.

Robos Hechos para Procurarse Educación Escolar

tanto averiguan los detectives si hay verdad en la acusación que se le hace de haberles robado $35,000 a sus patronos para completar su educación.

Dice la policía que desde el 30 de Noviembre de 1927, Erdrich sistemáticamente ha estado falsificando cheques de la Nueva York Merchandise Company, donde trabaja desde muy chico, y donde ha conquistado ascensos por su inteligencia y aplicación. Dice que la pobreza de su familia lo impulsó a cometer hurtos mayores como solución de sus problemas.

Confesó ya el joven haber abierto nueve cuentas bancarias con el dinero robado, las cuales ascienden a un total de $7000. Les entregó $25,000 en efectivo a los detectives que lo arrestaron anoche, en los momentos en que se hallaba en una clase de la Universidad de Nueva York.

Hermosa Cárcel que Podía Ser Alquilada

SAN RAFAEL, Enero 6.—El condado de Marín, que se halla bahía de por medio con San Francisco, y tiene más de 30,000 habitantes, busca algo en que utilizar su cárcel, pues salvo un preso "de toda confianza", al que ya no se encierra para nada, la cárcel está absolutamente sin huéspedes, y lleva ya varios meses de estar vacía. Las autoridades del condado dicen que es necesario conservar allí a dicho preso para que cuide del césped. Por lo demás, él está muy lejos de ansiar la libertad.

En Inglaterra Rechazan con Indignación el Nombre de Hollywood

LONDRES, Enero 6.—Dice el Daily Express que el nuevo centro peliculero de la Gran Bretaña ha rechazado indignado el nombre de Hollywood, pues los ingleses, con razón o sin ella, asocian la palabra "Hollywood" con sucesos vergonzosos y siniestros, y los promotores del centro cinematográfico, ubicado cerca de Elstree, en Hertfordshire, tuvieron que abandonar ese apelativo.

Esa decisión fue tomada en vista de las protestas lanzadas contra él por los residentes de la región y por otras personas.

Lloyd George se Encuentra Ahora en el Brasil

RIOJANEIRO, Enero 6.—Ha llegado aquí hoy, acompañado de su esposa e hija, para pasar cortas vacaciones en el Brasil, David Lloyd George, ex-primer Ministro británico.

Habrá Reñido Conflicto del Ensanche de un Bulevar

Ante el Concejo Municipal se leyeron ayer peticiones encontradas relativas al proyecto de ensanche del bulevar de Wilshire—antes calle de Orange—desde la calle de Alvarado hasta la de Figueroa. Esto hace prever que será muy reñida la contienda entre ciudadanos rivales cuando el proyecto se discuta en el municipio.

Contra el propuesto ensanche protesta un numeroso grupo de propietarios urbanos de dicho barrio, cuyas firmas llenan ochenta y ocho pliegos. Los que han hecho circular estas protestas confían en que el cómputo del ingeniero de ciudad venga a demostrar que esa petición representa la mayoría de propietarios de la vecindad afectada por la proyectada mejora. Si así sucediere, el municipe Hall, en cuyo barrio tendría que hacerse la mejora, pedirá que se abandone ésta.

Presentóse una segunda petición cuyos firmantes están de acuerdo en que se ensanche hasta noventa pies el trozo oriental del bulevar de Wilshire, pero se oponen a que se hagan desmontes muy profundos para bajar la rasante de la calle, pues ellos resultarían muy costosos.

Ambas peticiones fueron turnadas al ingeniero de ciudad para que las examine e informe sobre ellas, y el concejo ha señalado la fecha del 19 del actual para tratar en audiencia pública lo del propuesto ensanche.

Se le Previene al Municipio que no Tire tan Aprisa el Dinero

El contralor municipal Myers ha notificado ayer al Ayuntamiento que está éste autorizando gastos superiores al dinero de que se dispone para hacer los pagos, y el citado contralor ha pedido, para poder hacer frente a los desembolsos de Enero, que se haga un traslado del saldo de $3152, que resulta de consignaciones no agotadas.

NEWSPAPER PAVES WAY TO INCOME

Column Contributors Profit by Getting Names Prominent in Public Eye

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Being a contributor to a newspaper column sometimes becomes more than a labor of love with the only reward the satisfaction of having a bright quip or bit of verse published.

For several months, there appeared in "The Line O' Type or Two" column in Chicago an occasional child verse signed "Dorothy Aldis." The writer became popular through the contributed efforts and now a book of the verse has passed a sale of 17,000 copies.

"Snowshoe Al" was another Chicago "contrib" whose humor became so popular that it reached good sized sales in book form.

And no less than "F. P. A." of New York started as a "contrib."

COAST RADIO STATIONS TO GET PERMIT

Lafount Promises No Broadcaster Will Lose License Summarily

"No stations in the Los Angeles area will be summarily deleted through the non-renewal of a license," said Federal Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount in Los Angeles yesterday.

"This will be my recommendation to the commission on my return to Washington."

This is the first concrete evidence that stations will not be ruthlessly slaughtered during the changes of February 1, which will affect the Midwest and East, and the changes of March 1 which will have to do primarily with Pacific Coast broadcasters.

Mr. Lafount has been in the city since Thursday holding private conferences with station owners. He has held such meetings with a representative of every radio station in the States of Utah, Washington, Oregon and California.

The radio authority belittled any effort to exact a fee from radio-set owners, such as the dollar license which every set owner in Canada must pay. "There might have been a time early in the history of public broadcast," he said, "when such an undertaking might have been put through. But now there is no possibility of enacting such legislation, nor would it be desirable."

Although radio station owners of the area in and around Los Angeles need have no fear of being deleted, according to the commissioner's statement of yesterday, there will be, he said, a tightening of police authority which the commission exercises through the Department of Commerce radio division.

"Stations deviating from their assigned wave length frequencies will be summarily put off the air," he said, "while the Coast changes will call for more time division between stations and, in some instances, a lowering of power allotments."

During Mr. Lafount's inspection in Los Angeles, he spoke before the Radio Trades Association of Southern California, the Chamber of Commerce and the Breakfast Club. Marco Hellman, ardent radio fan, last night honored him with a dinner at his home to which many friends were invited.

Mr. Lafount will leave late this afternoon on the Union Pacific for

CLUBHOUSE CONTRACT LET

Southern California Athletic Organization Will Launch Drive for New Members

Completion of a definite program for the financing of the construction of the Southern California Athletic and Country Club and the awarding of the building contract to Meyer & Holler, Los Angeles architects, was announced yesterday by President Charles H. Thompson.

Thompson said the site, building and equipment for the new edifice at Wilshire Boulevard and Coronado street will cost approximately $4,500,000. The date for the beginning of construction is expected to be announced within the next ninety days.

MORE MEMBERS SOUGHT

Thompson pointed out that the club now has a membership of 3500. An intensive campaign to obtain additional members will be started tomorrow from the club headquarters in the Lincoln Building under the direction of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, pioneer motion-picture producer and nationally known clubman.

"A splendid plan for a thirteen-story building has been created and the contract let for the completion of this building at a cost not to exceed $2,894,000," said Thompson.

"The financing has been accepted and the contract negotiated with one of the leading financial institutions of Los Angeles, which has contracted to write a first mortgage bond issue of $2,250,000, and Meyer & Holler have accepted a mortgage of $650,000 as a part of the contract price."

MEMBERS APPROVE

"The board of directors has received from the State Corporation Commissioner a new and amended permit for the sale of additional memberships on a basis to meet the present conditions. The action of the board in creating this indebtedness has been approved by a large majority of qualified members."

Discussing the plans of his firm, Mendel Meyer of Meyer & Holler, said:

"The plans have been carried to a point that has enabled us to give a definite bid on the club building. This bid is in the hands of the board of directors. We also have definitely committed ourselves to a second mortgage bond issue which, together with the commitment on the first mortgage bond issue, covers the entire cost of the building."

P.-T.A. BRANCH TO MEET

The January meeting of the Aragon avenue P.-T.A. will be held Friday, at 2:30 p.m. J. L. Lacy, principal of Dayton Heights School, will give an address on "Citizenship: How Developed." The Boy Scouts of the school will furnish the entertainment. A prize cake is given at each meeting to the lucky one whose name is drawn.

Trojan Campus Bench Design Winner Named

Leland Thorne, student in the sculpture class of the University of Southern California, submitted the winning design for a special bench on the campus to be cast in art stone as a student-designed and bestowed gift to the alma mater, it was announced yesterday. The idea was originated by the Trojan Knights, a collegiate group of selected students who felt there is dire need for such a piece on the campus.

Seeking a distinctive design in keeping with the Spirit of Troy, the knights asked their fellow-students in the school of architecture to get busy, and as a result many ideas were submitted to Merrell Gage, instructor in modeling, and A. C. Weatherhead, dean of the architectural school. Thorne's design was modeled in clay, and will be placed in a setting of shrubbery on the old college campus when cast into its final permanent form.

INDUSTRIAL TREND AIDS HOSTELRIES

Biltmore Manager Points to Increased Interest of Financial Leaders

"Reservations and inquiries of the winter season indicate a greater interest in Los Angeles on the part of eastern manufacturers and producers than ever before," said Charles Baad, manager of the Biltmore, yesterday.

"While we anticipate a record business from recreationists and tourists, Los Angeles may be proud of the increasing attention being paid by captains of industry, as indicated by piles of telegrams and correspondence. It means not only prosperity throughout the nation, but also that large producers are considering more seriously than ever before the advantages which Los Angeles has to offer in cheap power and oil, average climatic endowments and general working conditions.

"Our hotel business of the season is no longer dependent on the so-called tourist trade. I have never liked the term, and I welcome the indication that it is to take second place to industrial and financial interest."

MASONIC CLUB TO MEET

Members of the Masonic Club of Los Angeles will be guests of the president at a supper conference Thursday evening. Entertainment is to follow the conference, which is announced to cover subjects of unusual significance.

BOY SCOUTS OF CITY EASILY MOBILIZE FOR HURRY CALLS

Mobilization of 5000 Boy Scouts in Los Angeles within a few minutes for aid in any disaster that might befall the city or for any other emergency has been worked out carefully and given preliminary tests. The organization follows a request from the American Red Cross in Los Angeles, the national organization utilizing Scouts in many instances for first relief work in time of great catastrophes.

At any time their services may be needed mobilization will start with a telephone call or telegram from Boy Scout headquarters to a Scout major in each district who will have means of quick communication to a captain in each of the troops of his district. These captains will summon the other members of their troops to the district meeting point.

Scouts can be assembled quickly in Hollywood, northwest district, university district, central district, Highland Park, southeast district, Lincoln Heights, southwest district, Hollenbeck Heights, south district, Atwater, Inglewood and San Pedro. The various groups then will be transported anywhere their services are needed.

Among the preliminary tests have been those given in certain districts where, at the request of the police department, Scouts hurriedly were assembled to scour parts of the city for automobiles in which, bandits were supposed to have been riding. These parts of the city quickly were covered with Scouts who inspected every automobile license.

Majors of the various districts will meet at a weekly dinner, beginning this week, to keep in close touch with each other.

GOOD PAY FOR GOOD FUN

Prizes Totaling $5000 Will be Distributed in New Picturegame Contest Starting in "Times" Today

Cash prizes amounting to $5000 will be distributed among 730 players in the Los Angeles Times' big new Picturegame, complete details of which are given in a full-page announcement elsewhere in today's Sunday Times. Men, women, boys and girls residing in California, Arizona or New Mexico are invited to play the game and share in the prize distribution by selecting book titles to fit a series of simple pictures.

The awards range as high as $1000 and will be decided by a committee of judges to be appointed later, on the basis of best title lists submitted.

PICTURE EACH DAY

One puzzle picture is to be printed in The Times each day, drawn to represent the title of a book. The first picture appears today, another one tomorrow, and so on, until seventy-seven pictures have been printed. Players are to cut out and save the picture each day, writing below it the title chosen, and submit their answers when the set of seventy-seven pictures is completed.

Participation in The Times $5000 Picture game in certain to revive memories of happy and instructive hours spent with favorite books. It is not, however, essential that one have a knowledge of books in order to try for a prize.

The Times has prepared an official catalogue of several hundred book titles, available to all who wish to become players. Only titles in this catalogue are to be used, thus assuring those who read few or no books of exactly the same opportunity to win a prize that the most ardent booklover would have.

EVERYONE ELIGIBLE

With this catalogue in the player's possession, it is easy to run through the list and select the best title for the picture each day. Every winning title is in the list.

Everybody is eligible to compete, whether a Times subscriber or not—excepting Times employees and their families—the only proviso being that a player must reside in California, New Mexico or Arizona. There is no work to do—no canvassing. Just a simple, easy game that will stir the imagination and provide fun without end. It's a splendid opportunity to show one's good judgment and win as high as $1000.

Look through today's Times for the full-page Picturegame announcement.

Democrats Pay McNab Tribute at Club Session

Tribute to the late Gavin McNab as a great leader and a man of lofty ideals, was paid by the Democratic Club of Los Angeles in a resolution adopted at its weekly meeting Thursday, it was announced yesterday.

"In the early nineties," the resolution states, "McNab began a career that was destined to impress its influence upon the people of California and beyond its borders. In 1892, under his youthful leadership, the Democratic party of the State was realigned and reformed. A regime and control inimical to party welfare was displaced, and, in its stead, an organization succeeded that meant higher and better ideals for the Democratic party in this State and, indeed, for the politics of the State as a whole."

The tribute was signed by Isidor B. Dockweiler, Mattison B. Jones and Milton K. Young.

ENGLISH newspapers seem to be getting nerve jumpy on the subject of America.

Their latest grief is that a new dance is being cavorted in London under the name of the Yale Blues.

The London Express—one of the most solemn of all the English papers—has come forth with an indignant protest.

With proof enough to overwhelm the League of Nations, the London Express points out that the dance was invented by an Englishman, and should, therefore, have been called the Oxford Blues.

Imagine the coming of a day when calm old Oxford gnashes its teeth with jealous grief because a dance adapted from the kick-ups of negro roustabouts on a New Orleans levee is named for another great university!

DRAMATIC CRITICS

If there are limits as to what a dramatic critic can say about an actor, the edge seems near at hand.

A marked change seems to have come into the business of criticism within the last few years.

Recent issues of a theatrical trade paper tell of the discharge of an actor in New York because a critic said that he had a voice like the beating of a wet drum; and the rest of the critic's remarks about his appearance and personality were on the same line.

And another young critic has come to the front in New York who just sweeps everybody off the map with a single gesture, starting with the much-adored Pauline Lord.

A "GOOD PLAY"

After all, I wonder if there is really any province for critics. If there is really such a thing as a good or bad play.

If you like it, then it is a good play so far as you are concerned. If you do not, then it is bad.

HICKMAN PICKS 16 WITNESSES

Educators and Others Hoped to Aid Insanity Plea

Lawyer Has Long Conference With Murderer

Slayer Hanged in Effigy by Fellow-Prisoners

Sixteen Kansas City citizens, many well known in educational and social circles, will be interrogated by Jerome Walsh, attorney for William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Marion Parker, before the lawyer's return here to combat the kidnaping and murder charges against his 19-year-old client.

The list of witnesses in Kansas City whose depositions are to be taken was filed with Superior Judge Hardy before Walsh started east. Richard H. Cantillon, local attorney associated with Walsh, yesterday admitted the authenticity of the list.

LIST OF WITNESSES

Following a long conference with Hickman in Jailer Dewar's private office Cantillon admitted the sixteen witnesses will be interrogated and their depositions taken. The following named persons will be represented by these depositions when the case against Hickman is called by Judge Hardy:

Otto F. Dubach, principal of Central High School, from which Hickman graduated in 1926; J. Lyman Laughlin, vice-principal; Claude L. Smith, Philip Morgan, Y.M.C.A. secretary; Owen Baughman, Edward Dyer, Joe Tiffany, Baylor Sutton, John Proudfit, Don Johnstone, David M. Brown, Frank Dubach, David Newcomer, Howard Lee Hibbs, Carl Matthews and William Hemenway.

The listed witnesses are those expected to contribute to the defense plea of insanity. Walsh expects to return here within twenty days with the depositions. Cantillon indicated yesterday the defense will be ready when the case is called.

Walsh was accompanied by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Costello, who will also interview the witnesses in Kansas City as well as numerous others in that region on behalf of the prosecution.

WIRES TO LAWYER

Cantillon spent more than four hours yesterday in conference with Hickman and shortly thereafter dispatched a telegram to Walsh, en route to Kansas City. Information as to the contents of the telegram was unavailable last night.

Information that Walsh is receiving advice from Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal attorney, was unearthed yesterday when it was rumored that the Kansas City representative of Hickman arrived here with letters of introduction from Darrow. To whom these asserted letters were addressed was not learned.

In an effort to save him from the gallows formal tests to determine whether Hickman is insane will be begun tomorrow by alienists employed by Hickman's attorneys, it was learned yesterday.

Cantillon said that although several alienists have visited Hickman in his cell and have made preliminary observations, no formal tests have been made.

HANGED IN EFFIGY

Announcement that the mental calibrators will go to work came after it was learned that fellow-prisoners in the County Jail paid their respects to Hickman further yesterday by indulging in a form of hanging him in effigy. During the morning inspection, jail attaches found hanging outside one of the tanks an enlarged picture of Hickman. It was hung by a rope which had been inserted through two holes and run around the neck. Reports of the episode when given to Hickman are said to have caused the prisoner considerable worry.

The identity of the alienists who will examine Hickman for the defense was not disclosed, nor was it said how many specialists will take him over for testing. If the doctors follow the usual course in psychoanalyzing criminals in the jail, Hickman will be asked to perform certain mental gymnastics such as answering "trick" questions, and solving simple problems of conduct.

PRACTICES PART

Jailers reported that Hickman apparently has been doing a little prepping of his own for the insanity racket. He has performed antics usually credited to persons mentally unbalanced—such as sitting in his cell staring at the wall and indulging in fits of sullenness.

In the meantime the State has had its own alienists making note of the prisoner's actions—mostly when he has not been aware that there was an alienist within miles of him.

The three winners of the recent high school oratorical contest are to be special guests.

THE ALLIGATOR MARKET

Alligators measuring from two feet to seven feet are the choice ones for the hide market, an alligator hunter explained, stating that no matter how long an alligator is the markets pay only for a seven-foot length. The skin is not taken off the backs of the larger alligators, but the full skin, back and all, is taken from the smaller ones.

Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., and Patty Dupont

For once in his life, Erich Von Stroheim carried a spear yesterday.

Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., who never got any further than extra work in the films, played the lead. Opposite him was Patty Dupont, whom Von Stroheim has helped make famous by casting her as one of the "Foolish Wives." The director was Judge Crawford of the Superior Court.

Stokes and Miss Dupont became man and wife. No one was surprised, because their intention to wed attained publicity a week ago when they arrived at the marriage license office a few minutes after the doors had been locked for the Saturday half-holiday and learned they would have to wait three days longer than they had expected.

Tuesday they came back, filed their application for a license and yesterday morning they returned and got it. Then they hastened across the hall to Judge Crawford's court.

Von Stroheim was best man and the conventional tears were supplied by Mrs. Von Stroheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes left immediately to motor to Ensenada, where they will purchase a yacht and start on an ocean honeymoon.

WORK WILL BEGIN SOON ON TEMPLE

B'nai B'rith Will Conduct Ground-Breaking Ceremony on the 15th Inst.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for a new B'nai B'rith temple, to be built at Hobart avenue and Wilshire Boulevard at an approximate cost of $750,000, will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. on the 15th inst., according to tentative plans announced yesterday by Dr. E. F. Magnin, rabbi of the congregation.

The present property of B'nai B'rith members has been sold for $500,000 to a New York company and the dilapidated building will be demolished to make room for a modern structure.

E. M. Edelman is architect for the new temple, which will have a frontage of 150 feet on Wilshire Boulevard and 270 feet on Hobart avenue. In style the new structure will represent the Florentine period and is to be octagon in plan, surmounted by a circular dome, rising 130 feet above the sidewalk and covered with Mosaic tiles.

The main facade of the temple will be on Wilshire Boulevard, with three arch entrances of richly carved marble, opening into a spacious vestibule at each end of which will be a broad stairway leading to the balcony. The main auditorium will be 100 feet in the clear and will have a seating capacity of 1800. A two-story extension on Hobart avenue will contain quarters for the rabbi, offices for the secretary and other officials, an auditorium capable of seating 800 persons and a banquet room on the second floor.

OIL MAN'S SON FIGHTS FOR LIFE IN HOSPITAL

A determined fight for life is being waged at the Good Samaritan Hospital by Andrew McLaughlin, 18 years of age, son of A. C. McLaughlin, vice-president of the Associated Oil Company, following an operation for injuries received when his car was struck by another traveling at a high rate of speed. McLaughlin, returning from the Stanford-Pittsburgh football game New Year's Day, was driving to the M. H. Whittier home, 1001 Sunset Boulevard, and was just turning into the driveway when the other car sideswiped his machine with such force that he was thrown violently to the pavement. His skull was injured and he was injured internally, according to advices from the hospital. His condition was reported as only fair, following the operation at 10 a.m. yesterday.

WHERE CHARM IS FOUND

In the Times Midwinter Edition charming California trips were held out as tempting bits for tourists.

But they left out—

If you have to stick to cities, the most interesting place in California is North Main street, where Sonoratown spills over into Chinatown.

SWEET COMPLACENCY

The very atmosphere of the place is soothing and restful. No one is in a hurry. They drowse in a sweet complacency.

The old buildings, redolent with memories, have a sort of quaint, tumbledown old beauty. You feel friendly to everyone.

Out of one doorway an old fish peddler comes running to know where you have been all the years.

And in a little whispering alley in Chinatown you meet some other old pal you have known for years—pattering along in his old slippers with his yellow teeth and his long pipe.

OTHER DAYS

There is something about the place that is a surcease from sorrow.

I can go down gnawing my lips from worry and anxiety; and come out with a light heart.

The truth is, I have just discovered that I am an anachronism. I hate modern civilization; it is geared up to a pressure that is too high.

And Sonoratown has not yet caught the germ. It is still lingering sweetly along in dim forgotten ages.

LATIN COURSE TO OPEN

Y.M.C.A. Institute Class Scheduled to Begin Friday

A course of instruction in Latin, under the direction of W. H. Taylor, for thirty years a student and instructor of that and other classical subjects, is to be offered by the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. Institute, 715 South Hope street, beginning Friday at 8 p.m. The first lesson is to be free to all, it is announced.

"Latin was the language of many of the greatest and most profound men and women," the teacher said yesterday. "These scholars left a rich literature that is gradually seeping into English, but it is all accessible through a knowledge of Latin easily acquired by the Tusculan system."

Here to Market Part of Home Town

They Want Friends For Victoria

Mayor and Mrs. J. Carl Pendray of Victoria, B. C., on visit here to offer some city-owned lots to Angelenos.

PART OF VICTORIA FOR SALE

Mayor of Canadian City Here to Offer 2500 Lots Municipally Owned to Angelenos

J. Carl Pendray, four-term Mayor of Victoria, B. C., has come amarketing to Los Angeles. Accompanied by his wife he arrived yesterday morning, is stopping at the Biltmore and expects to remain three weeks.

"It's a long junket but an interesting one," he said. "I have been authorized by the Board of Aldermen of Victoria to make investigations and report on the advisability of selling part of our city to Angelenos.

"I was born in Victoria, have lived there all my life and believe Victoria has more real friends in Los Angeles, year in and year out, than any other city on the Pacific Coast. About 2500 lots were taken over by Victoria as a result of depression following the World War and include all street improvements, water and public utilities. It is not so much the money we want as friends. Victoria is a little bit of England set out on the Pacific Coast. We propose to make Victoria a little bit of the United States as well."

Immediate population, 40,000; adjacent population, 65,000; increase in building permits last year, 160 per cent; deposits in banks, $91,000,000, showing an increase of $48,000,000 in one year; bonded debt, $13,000,000, with the city having paid off $1,000,000 last year and an annual surplus of $300,000.

"Victoria is the first port of call for oriental trade and has equal freight rates with Vancouver and Seattle," he continued. "We own our own water system, have cheap hydro-electric power and here is what we have just done to invite industry:

An English worsted mill is moving its entire plant across the Atlantic and the North American continent to Victoria. We gave them free land, with free water and taxes for ten years and guaranteed a $150,000 bond for twenty years. For a cold-storage plant we gave free land and guaranteed the interest at 7 per cent on their bonded debt for ten years."

Only one other man has served four terms as Mayor of Victoria and Mayor Pendray has been returned for two terms unopposed.

"This is my last year as Mayor and I have now until next January to inject new blood and Los Angeles pep into the city I love. That is what I am here for."

Orient Buying More Herring

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Increased demand for herring in the Orient is revealed by an official statement issued by J. P. Babcock, deputy commissioner of fisheries for British Columbia, who states that the herring catch during 1927 was 15,113 tons compared with 5280 tons during 1926.

Almost as large an increase occurred in the catch of pilchards which were reduced for fish meal and oil. The British Columbia halibut catch for 1927 was 25,708,000 pounds which added to 19,221,780 for United States points, made a total of 44,929,780 pounds—a slight reduction on 1926 figures.

SKELETON OF TRAPPER DISCLOSED BY HUNTER

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—While removing some rocks to enable his dog to hunt a racoon near the shore of Hyacinth Bay, B. C. Eric Krooks of Heroit Bay uncovered a cave in which reposed the skeleton and clothing of a white man. The body had evidently been laid at rest there and the mouth of the cave covered in by rocks. Authorities state he probably was Joseph Moore a trapper who mysteriously disappeared from his cabin and trap line near Village Bay during the spring of 1925.

GENEVA YIELDS TALES OF LENIN

GENEVA, Jan. 7. (AP)—Lenin lived in Switzerland much of the time between the years 1907 and 1917. He was at Zurich, Berne and other Swiss cities, but chiefly at Geneva.

He lived so quietly and unostentatiously and was so busy writing and organizing underground work which culminated in Bolshevist control of Russia that he made few acquaintances outside of his fellow exiles from Russia and other lands, and the Swiss have little knowledge of how he passed his time.

But when the Russian delegation came to Geneva to attend the economic conference, members endeavored to locate Genevese friends of their lamented leader and sought information about his life in Geneva.

WAITER KNEW LENIN

At The Brasserie Landolt, a beer and wine restaurant near Geneva University, they found a French waiter, Antoine Reibaut, who was able to point out to them the table in the restaurant where Lenin had a cup of coffee nearly every day during 1909 and 1910.

"Lenin, who we all knew as Monsieur Ulianov, used to come and take his regular seat here every afternoon about 1 o'clock," Reibaut told the Associated Press. "He was always alone. His wife never came with him. Often he was joined in the restaurant by a few friends, generally Bulgarians from the university.

"He always took a glass of coffee with cream, never anything alcoholic. And he always gave a tip, although we understood from his manner of living that he had little money. He lived in a small apartment not far from the restaurant and had little to say to any one except the friends who met him. He wore a moustache and short beard and looked just as his pictures represented him after he became prominent in Russia. We knew he was under police surveillance and understood his reticence. He was always courteous and polite and all the waiters liked him."

ATTRACTED NO ATTENTION

Strangely enough the Geneva police seem to have little information about Lenin's life here. He came and went so quietly and kept within his own little apartment so much of the time that neither he nor his wife Krupskaya attracted any particular attention. He often sat in the park along the lake front and walked about in the old city.

But Geneva is always full of foreigners and the Genevese, not an inquisitive folk, apparently knew nothing about the intense propaganda which Lenin and his wife were carrying on through their writings in the press of Russia and their pamphlets circulated secretly by the social revolutionists who were later to become Bolshevists.

When the World War broke out Lenin was in Poronin, Galicia. The Austrians expelled him and he returned to Switzerland. He then began his intensive international work directed against the war and was prominent in organizing the first conference of European Socialists opposed to the war, which met at Zimmerwald, Switzerland, in September, 1915.

The left wing of this conference became the nucleus for the future Communist international. Lenin was in Switzerland when the Kerensky revolution took place in Russia in February, 1917. England opposed his return to Russia, but he appealed to Germany, which sent him back to Russia in April of that year, and he immediately became the leader of the Russian Bolshevist movement which upset the Kerensky government the following October.

GLEE CLUBS CONTEST FOR NATIONAL HONORS

GREENVILLE (S. C.) Jan. 7.—Football, baseball and other sports have no monopoly in the field of intercollegiate competition. The glee club is claiming its place.

When the Southern Intercollegiate Glee Club Association holds its annual contest here February 10, a male chorus of 1000 voices will be presented. Twenty-eight colleges and universities from North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida will compete in State meets and the winners will come here to sing for the honor of representing the South in a national contest in New York a few weeks later.

The chorus will be comprised of voices from these clubs and South Carolina colleges.

JULIAN JURY DELAY LIKELY

Hopes of Finishing Panel by Tomorrow Night Now Appears Remote Due to Type of Questions

Prospects of obtaining a jury by tomorrow night to try the ten defendants charged with overissuing nearly 5,000,000 shares of Julian Petroleum Corporation stock, appeared remote yesterday, it was admitted by several defense attorneys.

Shortly after the trial began Thursday, both defense and prosecution predicted that a jury would be selected in record time, but after a new line of questioning prospective veniremen developed late Friday, it became obvious that a great deal of caution will be exerted by both sides.

MANY CHALLENGES

Of the original 120 peremptory challenges, which are divided equally between prosecution and defense, only eleven had been exercised at adjournment Friday night, and it is expected that both sides will make the most of their challenges in effort to get a jury of men and women as far away from any connection with the Julian collapse as possible.

One hundred witnesses, who have been subpoenaed by the prosecution, and who were excused Thursday until tomorrow, are scheduled to be ready in Superior Court Judge Doran's court when the case reopens at 10 a.m.

Attorneys now predict that practically all of the coming week will be taken up in the selection of the jury and it will not be until the following week that testimony will begin.

PROSECUTION READY

However, should the jury be selected sooner, the District Attorney's office announced it is prepared immediately to bring its witnesses into court and begin introducing the voluminous evidence now on hand awaiting the beginning of the trial.

More than two tons of documents of every description in connection with the collapse of the Julian organization, are stored in an anteroom to Judge Doran's court awaiting taking of testimony.

The ten defendants, all of whom were connected with the Julian Company in one capacity or another, are charged with violation of the State Corporation Securities Act, by overissuing the stock, and of obtaining money under false pretenses by sale of the same.

The trial is expected to consume at least six weeks.

CAT CLUB SHOW TO OPEN NEXT FRIDAY

The Los Angeles Cat Club, member of the American Cat Club, will hold its twenty-fourth annual show the 13th and 14th inst., at a place to be later announced. President Frank Bundy yesterday announced the entries to date exceed 100 cats, and current indications point to the largest exhibition of feline finery the West has seen. The various breeds to be shown will include the rare Siamese cats, famous for their cream coats, with seal points and blue eyes.

CHAPLAIN PROXY FOR CHURCHMEN

Washington Pastor Agent of 60,000 Members and Acts as Vice-gerent for All

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Hospital chaplain for the Washington Federation of Churches, Rev. C. V. Van Der Linden follows endlessly a mission of mercy—the "proxy" of 60,000 church members.

He acts as the agent of each one, and the vice-gerent of them all. From the humblest to the mightiest in position and wealth, he constantly is subject to call, the bearer of confidential tidings or the ambassador of spiritual benefaction. He represents 113 churches and nineteen denominations, all moving as a unit to alleviate the distressed.

Through the wards and private rooms of five hospitals he carries to the ill and distressed words of cheer from their relatives, personal greetings from friends, and ecclesiastical benediction and prayer. His duties are manifold and varied. He fraternizes with the war-wrecked, seeks aid for the injured, comforts the suffering and runs errands for the bedfast and afflicted.

CRYER RECALL LISTS SHY

Check Indicates Shortage of 15,000 Signatures; City Clerk Plans Report Tomorrow

That the recall petition filed against Mayor Cryer last Friday will lack in excess of 15,000 signatures of being sufficient to call a special election was certain yesterday as a result of the first three days' check of the petition by City Clerk Domingues and his force of 100 deputies.

The City Clerk plans to report to the City Council tomorrow the complete results of the check. Under the law, Mrs. Estelle C. Holman, former City Planning Commissioner, who started the recall movement, will have ten days in which to circulate and file a supplemental petition in the hope of obtaining a total of 82,000 signatures of registered voters necessary to call the special election.

Working night and day, the City Clerk's force checked 27,757 signatures up to midnight Friday. Of this total, 12,210 were those of registered voters and 15,547 signatures were declared invalid. These totals show 44 per cent signatures valid and 56 per cent invalid, on the checking up to midnight Friday.

City Attorney Stephen is expected to rule tomorrow on the question as to whether the supplemental petition can be legally signed by registered voters of the registration which went out of existence last Saturday. The recall proponents have a number of sheets of signatures in reserve, but these were signed by voters on the old registration list. If the City Attorney rules that the law provides that the signers of the supplemental petition must be from the new registration, which started on Tuesday of this week, it will make it practically impossible for the proponents of the recall to obtain 15,000 valid signatures of newly registered voters within the ten-day legal time limit, and the recall will fail.

One-Child House Plan Starts Row

OLDBURY (Eng.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Oldbury's one child house scheme has kicked up a fine row here.

Some of the rate payers, at special meeting, have characterized the town council's plan "as an insidious form of birth control."

The councillors' idea in ordering a series of houses for couples with not more than one child was to aid in relieving the housing shortage, as they took the view that with limited means at their command, it was better to have smaller houses and more of them.

The council contends that if and when the families increase the tenants must give up possession of the one child houses. The point is made that if a father thinks he is able to provide for two children he should also take into consideration the fact that larger quarters are necessary, and therefore move into a residence with more rooms.

HICKMAN PICKS 16 WITNESSES

Educators and Others Hoped to Aid Insanity Plea

Lawyer Has Long Conference With Murderer

Slayer Hanged in Effigy by Fellow-Prisoners

Sixteen Kansas City citizens, many well known in educational and social circles, will be interrogated by Jerome Walsh, attorney for William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Marion Parker, before the lawyer's return here to combat the kidnaping and murder charges against his 19-year-old client.

The list of witnesses in Kansas City whose depositions are to be taken was filed with Superior Judge Hardy before Walsh started east. Richard H. Cantillon, local attorney associated with Walsh, yesterday admitted the authenticity of the list.

LIST OF WITNESSES

Following a long conference with Hickman in Jailer Dewar's private office Cantillon admitted the sixteen witnesses will be interrogated and their depositions taken. The following named persons will be represented by these depositions when the case against Hickman is called by Judge Hardy:

Otto F. Dubach, principal of Central High School, from which Hickman graduated in 1926; J. Lyman Laughlin, vice-principal; Claude L. Smith, Philip Morgan, Y.M.C.A. secretary; Owen Baughman, Edward Dyer, Joe Tiffany, Baylor Sutton, John Proudfit, Don Johnstone, David M. Brown, Frank Dubach, David Newcomer, Howard Lee Hibbs, Carl Matthews and William Hemenway.

The listed witnesses are those expected to contribute to the defense plea of insanity. Walsh expects to return here within twenty days with the depositions. Cantillon indicated yesterday the defense will be ready when the case is called.

Walsh was accompanied by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Costello, who will also interview the witnesses in Kansas City as well as numerous others in that region on behalf of the prosecution.

WIRES TO LAWYER

Cantillon spent more than four hours yesterday in conference with Hickman and shortly thereafter dispatched a telegram to Walsh, en route to Kansas City. Information as to the contents of the telegram was unavailable last night.

Information that Walsh is receiving advice from Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal attorney, was unearthed yesterday when it was rumored that the Kansas City representative of Hickman arrived here with letters of introduction from Darrow. To whom these asserted letters were addressed was not learned.

In an effort to save him from the gallows formal tests to determine whether Hickman is insane will be begun tomorrow by alienists employed by Hickman's attorneys, it was learned yesterday.

Cantillon said that although several alienists have visited Hickman in his cell and have made preliminary observations, no formal tests have been made.

HANGED IN EFFIGY

Announcement that the mental calibrators will go to work came after it was learned that fellow-prisoners in the County Jail paid their respects to Hickman further yesterday by indulging in a form of hanging him in effigy. During the morning inspection, jail attaches found hanging outside one of the tanks an enlarged picture of Hickman. It was hung by a rope which had been inserted through two holes and run around the neck. Reports of the episode when given to Hickman are said to have caused the prisoner considerable worry.

The identity of the alienists who will examine Hickman for the defense was not disclosed, nor was it said how many specialists will take him over for testing. If the doctors follow the usual course in psychoanalyzing criminals in the jail, Hickman will be asked to perform certain mental gymnastics such as answering "trick" questions, and solving simple problems of conduct.

PRACTICES PART

Jailers reported that Hickman apparently has been doing a little prepping of his own for the insanity racket. He has performed antics usually credited to persons mentally unbalanced—such as sitting in his cell staring at the wall and indulging in fits of sullenness.

In the meantime the State has had its own alienists making note of the prisoner's actions—mostly when he has not been aware that there was an alienist within miles of him.

Kirby Page, editor of the World Tomorrow, will be the guest of the Council of International Relations at its annual meeting in the Windsor Tea Room, 527 West Seventh street, Friday at 6:15 p.m. He is to speak on "Ways of Preventing Wars." The three winners of the recent high school oratorical contest are to be special guests.

THE ALLIGATOR MARKET

Alligators measuring from two feet to seven feet are the choice ones for the hide market, an alligator hunter explained, stating that no matter how long an alligator is the markets pay only for a seven-foot length. The skin is not taken off the backs of the larger alligators, but the full skin, back and all, is taken from the smaller ones.

Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., and Patty Dupont

FOR ONCE in his life, Erich Von Stroheim carried a spear yesterday.

Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., who never got any further than extra work in the films, played the lead. Opposite him was Patty Dupont, whom Von Stroheim has helped make famous by casting her as one of the "Foolish Wives." The director was Judge Crawford of the Superior Court.

Stokes and Miss Dupont became man and wife. No one was surprised, because their intention to wed attained publicity a week ago when they arrived at the marriage license office a few minutes after the doors had been locked for the Saturday half-holiday and learned they would have to wait three days longer than they had expected.

Tuesday they came back, filed their application for a license and yesterday morning they returned and got it. Then they hastened across the hall to Judge Crawford's court.

Von Stroheim was best man and the conventional tears were supplied by Mrs. Von Stroheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes left immediately to motor to Ensenada, where they will purchase a yacht and start on an ocean honeymoon.

WORK WILL BEGIN SOON ON TEMPLE

B'nai B'rith Will Conduct Ground-Breaking Ceremony on the 15th Inst.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for a new B'nai B'rith temple, to be built at Hobart avenue and Wilshire Boulevard at an approximate cost of $750,000, will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. on the 15th inst., according to tentative plans announced yesterday by Dr. E. F. Magnin, rabbi of the congregation.

The present property of B'nai B'rith members has been sold for $500,000 to a New York company and the dilapidated building will be demolished to make room for a modern structure.

E. M. Edelman is architect for the new temple, which will have a frontage of 150 feet on Wilshire Boulevard and 270 feet on Hobart avenue. In style the new structure will represent the Florentine period and is to be octagon in plan, surmounted by a circular dome, rising 130 feet above the sidewalk and covered with Mosaic tiles.

The main facade of the temple will be on Wilshire Boulevard, with three arch entrances of richly carved marble, opening into a spacious vestibule at each end of which will be a broad stairway leading to the balcony. The main auditorium will be 100 feet in the clear and will have a seating capacity of 1800. A two-story extension on Hobart avenue will contain quarters for the rabbi, offices for the secretary and other officials, an auditorium capable of seating 800 persons and a banquet room on the second floor.

OIL MAN'S SON FIGHTS FOR LIFE IN HOSPITAL

A determined fight for life is being waged at the Good Samaritan Hospital by Andrew McLaughlin, 18 years of age, son of A. C. McLaughlin, vice-president of the Associated Oil Company, following an operation for injuries received when his car was struck by another traveling at a high rate of speed. McLaughlin, returning from the Stanford-Pittsburgh football game New Year's Day, was driving to the M. H. Whittier home, 1001 Sunset Boulevard, and was just turning into the driveway when the other car sideswiped his machine with such force that he was thrown violently to the pavement. His skull was injured and he was injured internally, according to advices from the hospital. His condition was reported as only fair, following the operation at 10 a.m. yesterday.

WHERE CHARM IS FOUND

In the Times Midwinter Edition charming California trips were held out as tempting bits for tourists.

But they left out—

If you have to stick to cities, the most interesting place in California is North Main street, where Sonoratown spills over into Chinatown.

SWEET COMPLACENCY

The very atmosphere of the place is soothing and restful. No one is in a hurry. They drowse in a sweet complacency.

The old buildings, redolent with memories, have a sort of quaint, tumbledown old beauty. You feel friendly to everyone.

Out of one doorway an old fish peddler comes running to know where you have been all the years.

And in a little whispering alley in Chinatown you meet some other old pal you have known for years—pattering along in his old slippers with his yellow teeth and his long pipe.

OTHER DAYS

There is something about the place that is a surcease from sorrow.

I can go down gnawing my lips from worry and anxiety; and come out with a light heart.

The truth is, I have just discovered that I am an anachronism. I hate modern civilization; it is geared up to a pressure that is too high.

And Sonoratown has not yet caught the germ. It is still lingering sweetly along in dim forgotten ages.

LATIN COURSE TO OPEN

Y.M.C.A. Institute Class Scheduled to Begin Friday

A course of instruction in Latin, under the direction of W. H. Taylor, for thirty years a student and instructor of that and other classical subjects, is to be offered by the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. Institute, 715 South Hope street, beginning Friday at 8 p.m. The first lesson is to be free to all, it is announced.

"Latin was the language of many of the greatest and most profound men and women," the teacher said yesterday. "These scholars left a rich literature that is gradually seeping into English, but it is all accessible through a knowledge of Latin easily acquired by the Tusculian system."

Here to Market Part of Home Town

They Want Friends For Victoria

Mayor and Mrs. J. Carl Pendray of Victoria, B. C., on visit here to offer some city-owned lots to Angelenos.

PART OF VICTORIA FOR SALE

Mayor of Canadian City Here to Offer 2500 Lots Municipally Owned to Angelenos

J. Carl Pendray, four-term Mayor of Victoria, B. C., has come amarketing to Los Angeles. Accompanied by his wife he arrived yesterday morning, is stopping at the Biltmore and expects to remain three weeks.

"It's a long junket but an interesting one," he said. "I have been authorized by the Board of Aldermen of Victoria to make investigations and report on the advisability of selling part of our city to Angelenos.

"I was born in Victoria, have lived there all my life and believe Victoria has more real friends in Los Angeles, year in and year out, than any other city on the Pacific Coast. About 2500 lots were taken over by Victoria as a result of depression following the World War and include all street improvements, water and public utilities. It is not so much the money we want as friends. Victoria is a little bit of England set out on the Pacific Coast. We propose to make Victoria a little bit of the United States as well."

Immediate population, 40,000; adjacent population, 65,000; increase in building permits last year, 160 per cent; deposits in banks, $91,000,000, showing an increase of $48,000,000 in one year; bonded debt, $13,000,000, with the city having paid off $1,000,000 last year and an annual surplus of $300,000.

"Victoria is the first port of call for oriental trade and has equal freight rates with Vancouver and Seattle," he continued. "We own our own water system, have cheap hydro-electric power and here is what we have just done to invite industry:

An English worsted mill is moving its entire plant across the Atlantic and the North American continent to Victoria. We gave them free land, with free water and taxes for ten years and guaranteed a $150,000 bond for twenty years. For a cold-storage plant we gave free land and guaranteed the interest at 7 per cent on their bonded debt for ten years."

Only one other man has served four terms as Mayor of Victoria and Mayor Pendray has been returned for two terms unopposed.

"This is my last year as Mayor and I have now until next January to inject new blood and Los Angeles pep into the city I love. That is what I am here for."

Orient Buying More Herring

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Increased demand for herring in the Orient is revealed by an official statement issued by J. P. Babcock, deputy commissioner of fisheries for British Columbia, who states that the herring catch during 1927 was 15,113 tons compared with 5280 tons during 1926.

Almost as large an increase occurred in the catch of pilchards which were reduced for fish meal and oil. The British Columbia halibut catch for 1927 was 25,706,000 pounds which added to 19,221,780 for United States points, made a total of 44,929,780 pounds—a slight reduction on 1926 figures.

SKELETON OF TRAPPER DISCLOSED BY HUNTER

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—While removing some rocks to enable his dog to hunt a racoon near the shore of Hyacinth Bay, B. C. Eric Krooks of Heroit Bay uncovered a cave in which reposed the skeleton and clothing of a white man. The body had evidently been laid at rest there and the mouth of the cave covered in by rocks. Authorities state he probably was Joseph Moore a trapper who mysteriously disappeared from his cabin and trap line near Village Bay during the spring of 1925.

GENEVA YIELDS TALES OF LENIN

GENEVA, Jan. 7. (AP)—Lenin lived in Switzerland much of the time between the years 1907 and 1917. He was at Zurich, Berne and other Swiss cities, but chiefly at Geneva.

He lived so quietly and unostentatiously and was so busy writing and organizing underground work which culminated in Bolshevist control of Russia that he made few acquaintances outside of his fellow exiles from Russia and other lands, and the Swiss have little knowledge of how he passed his time.

But when the Russian delegation came to Geneva to attend the economic conference, members endeavored to locate Genevese friends of their lamented leader and sought information about his life in Geneva.

WAITER KNEW LENIN

At The Brasserie Landolt, a beer and wine restaurant near Geneva University, they found a French waiter, Antoine Reibaut, who was able to point out to them the table in the restaurant where Lenin had a cup of coffee nearly every day during 1909 and 1910.

"Lenin, who we all knew as Monsieur Ulianov, used to come and take his regular seat here every afternoon about 1 o'clock," Reibaut told the Associated Press. "He was always alone. His wife never came with him. Often he was joined in the restaurant by a few friends, generally Bulgarians from the university.

"He always took a glass of coffee with cream, never anything alcoholic. And he always gave a tip, although we understood from his manner of living that he had little money. He lived in a small apartment not far from the restaurant and had little to say to any one except the friends who met him. He wore a moustache and short beard and looked just as his pictures represented him after he became prominent in Russia. We knew he was under police surveillance and understood his reticence. He was always courteous and polite and all the waiters liked him."

ATTRACTED NO ATTENTION

Strangely enough the Geneva police seem to have little information about Lenin's life here. He came and went so quietly and kept within his own little apartment so much of the time that neither he nor his wife Krupskaya attracted any particular attention. He often sat in the park along the lake front and walked about in the old city.

But Geneva is always full of foreigners and the Genevese, not an inquisitive folk, apparently knew nothing about the intense propaganda which Lenin and his wife were carrying on through their writings in the press of Russia and their pamphlets circulated secretly by the social revolutionists who were later to become Bolshevists.

When the World War broke out Lenin was in Poronin, Galicia. The Austrians expelled him and he returned to Switzerland. He then began his intensive international work directed against the war and was prominent in organizing the first conference of European Socialists opposed to the war, which met at Zimmerwald, Switzerland, in September, 1915.

The left wing of this conference became the nucleus for the future Communist international. Lenin was in Switzerland when the Kerensky revolution took place in Russia in February, 1917. England opposed his return to Russia, but he appealed to Germany, which sent him back to Russia in April of that year, and he immediately became the leader of the Russian Bolshevist movement which upset the Kerensky government the following October.

GLEE CLUBS CONTEST FOR NATIONAL HONORS

GREENVILLE (S. C.) Jan. 7.—Football, baseball and other sports have no monopoly in the field of intercollegiate competition. The glee club is claiming its place.

When the Southern Intercollegiate Glee Club Association holds its annual contest here February 10, a male chorus of 1000 voices will be presented. Twenty-eight colleges and universities from North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida will compete in State meets and the winners will come here to sing for the honor of representing the South in a national contest in New York a few weeks later.

The chorus will be comprised of voices from these clubs and South Carolina colleges.

JULIAN JURY DELAY LIKELY

Hopes of Finishing Panel by Tomorrow Night Now Appears Remote Due to Type of Questions

Prospects of obtaining a jury by tomorrow night to try the ten defendants charged with overissuing nearly 5,000,000 shares of Julian Petroleum Corporation stock, appeared remote yesterday, it was admitted by several defense attorneys.

Shortly after the trial began Thursday, both defense and prosecution predicted that a jury would be selected in record time, but after a new line of questioning prospective veniremen developed late Friday, it became obvious that a great deal of caution will be exerted by both sides.

MANY CHALLENGES

Of the original 120 peremptory challenges, which are divided equally between prosecution and defense, only eleven had been exercised at adjournment Friday night, and it is expected that both sides will make the most of their challenges in effort to get a jury of men and women as far away from any connection with the Julian collapse as possible.

One hundred witnesses, who have been subpoenaed by the prosecution, and who were excused Thursday until tomorrow, are scheduled to be ready in Superior Court Judge Doran's court when the case reopens at 10 a.m.

Attorneys now predict that practically all of the coming week will be taken up in the selection of the jury and it will not be until the following week that testimony will begin.

PROSECUTION READY

However, should the jury be selected sooner, the District Attorney's office announced it is prepared immediately to bring its witnesses into court and begin introducing the voluminous evidence now on hand awaiting the beginning of the trial.

More than two tons of documents of every description in connection with the collapse of the Julian organization, are stored in an anteroom to Judge Doran's court awaiting taking of testimony.

The ten defendants, all of whom were connected with the Julian Company in one capacity or another, are charged with violation of the State Corporation Securities Act, by overissuing the stock, and of obtaining money under false pretenses by sale of the same.

The trial is expected to consume at least six weeks.

CAT CLUB SHOW TO OPEN NEXT FRIDAY

The Los Angeles Cat Club, member of the American Cat Club, will hold its twenty-fourth annual show the 13th and 14th inst., at a place to be later announced. President Frank Bundy yesterday announced the entries to date exceed 100 cats, and current indications point to the largest exhibition of feline finery the West has seen. The various breeds to be shown will include the rare Siamese cats, famous for their cream coats, with seal points and blue eyes.

CHAPLAIN PROXY FOR CHURCHMEN

Washington Pastor Agent of 60,000 Members and Acts as Vice-gerent for All

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Hospital chaplain for the Washington Federation of Churches, Rev. C. V. Van Der Linden follows endlessly a mission of mercy—the "proxy" of 60,000 church members.

He acts as the agent of each one, and the vice-gerent of them all. From the humblest to the mightiest in position and wealth, he constantly is subject to call, the bearer of confidential tidings or the ambassador of spiritual benefaction. He represents 113 churches and nineteen denominations, all moving as a unit to alleviate the distressed.

Through the wards and private rooms of five hospitals he carries to the ill and distressed words of cheer from their relatives, personal greetings from friends, and ecclesiastical benediction and prayer. His duties are manifold and varied. He fraternizes with the war-wrecked, seeks aid for the injured, comforts the suffering and runs errands for the bedfast and afflicted.

CRYER RECALL LISTS SHY

Check Indicates Shortage of 15,000 Signatures; City Clerk Plans Report Tomorrow

That the recall petition filed against Mayor Cryer last Friday will lack in excess of 15,000 signatures of being sufficient to call a special election was certain yesterday as a result of the first three days' check of the petition by City Clerk Dominguez and his force of 100 deputies.

The City Clerk plans to report to the City Council tomorrow the complete results of the check. Under the law, Mrs. Estelle C. Holman, former City Planning Commissioner, who started the recall movement, will have ten days in which to circulate and file a supplemental petition in the hope of obtaining a total of 32,000 signatures of registered voters necessary to call the special election.

Working night and day, the City Clerk's force checked 27,757 signatures up to midnight Friday. Of this total, 12,210 were those of registered voters and 15,547 signatures were declared invalid. These totals show 44 per cent signatures valid and 56 per cent invalid, on the checking up to midnight Friday.

City Attorney Stephen is expected to rule tomorrow on the question as to whether the supplemental petition can be legally signed by registered voters of the registration which went out of existence last Saturday. The recall proponents have a number of sheets of signatures in reserve, but these were signed by voters on the old registration list. If the City Attorney rules that the law provides that the signers of the supplemental petition must be from the new registration, which started on Tuesday of this week, it will make it practically impossible for the proponents of the recall to obtain 15,000 valid signatures of newly registered voters within the ten-day legal time limit, and the recall will fail.

One-Child House Plan Starts Row

OLDBURY (Eng.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Oldbury's one child house scheme has kicked up a fine row here.

Some of the rate payers, at special meeting, have characterised the town council's plan "as an insidious form of birth control."

The councillors' idea in ordering a series of houses for couples with not more than one child was to aid in relieving the housing shortage, as they took the view that with limited means at their command, it was better to have smaller houses and more of them.

The council contends that if and when the families increase the tenants must give up possession of the one child houses. The point is made that if a father thinks he is able to provide for two children he should also take into consideration the fact that larger quarters are necessary, and therefore move into a residence with more rooms.

GOING HOME

Girls in an eastern college are learning to walk. It comes in handy occasionally.

HELPS TO REDUCE

A slender income is quite effective in holding down those who are inclined to wax fat.

GREASING THE WORLD

Over 115,000,000 barrels of oil were shipped from Los Angeles Harbor last year. If the old earth's axle really needed greasing it is estimated by the lightning calculator that this mass of oil would keep it spinning for nine years.

A MODEST PREMIER

Stanley Baldwin, the British Premier, says that aside from politics and business, what he desires is to read the books he likes, lead a decent life and keep pigs. Some retired statesmen have ability enough to make hogs pay. Baldwin may be one of them.

ROADS TO RENO

More than 2200 divorce cases were docketed in Reno during last year and more than half the business is directly attributed to the new law which permits action after a three months' residence. This virtually makes it possible for one to get a decree on a mere stop-over on a California ticket.

UPSKY AND DOWNSKY

Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist party some time ago and is now reported as having been also fired from the soviet executive committee. Trotsky has been having his ups and downs since he left his job in New York to embark upon a revolutionary career—and lately they have mainly been downs.

A DILL IDEA

Senator Dill of the State of Washington wants to have each desk in the Senate chamber equipped with a microphone, so that the proceedings can be broadcast all over the country, and has introduced a resolution calling for such equipment. Yes, that would be mixed pickles for radio fans, especially when some filibustering Senator was delivering a three-day speech on nothing in particular.

COLUMBUS MEMORIAL

The peoples of the Pan-American republics are expected to get together and build in Santo Domingo Harbor the most imposing lighthouse in the world. It will be the western hemisphere's memorial to Christopher Columbus and the bones of the great discoverer will be placed beneath its shining beacon. It will cost about $4,000,000 and more than a dozen countries will contribute to cover this impressive item. If this materializes the ancient admiral will receive a belated monument commensurate with his worth.

THE TORCH BEARER

The greatest of woman preachers in the British Empire has been expected to make an evangelistic tour of this country. Arrangements were being made for her appearance in a number of cities, but it is now reported that several of her engagements have been called off on the assertion that the lady smokes cigarettes. There are numbers of church people in this country who cannot imagine a lady preacher lighting the way to heaven with a tailor-made fag. The woman preacher will at least be expected to swear off smoking while she is in this country.

OVER THE BORDER

Our lady of the snows has become Uncle Sam's best customer. Our exports to Canada last year aggregated nearly $630,000,000 in value and the increase over the business of the previous year is a substantial one. Our trade with England used to be the heavy item, but now the commerce with the daughter is greater. All the more reason why our understandings at the border should be amiable and frictionless. We have more than 3000 miles of border and the people upon both sides speak the same tongue and have the same thoughts and aspirations. The bond should be strengthened and never strained.

FILM FIGHTS

They have better fights in many film stories than are to be found at the ring battles put up by the professional promoters of the boxing game. The former pictures may be sent anywhere for exhibition at any time, but films of the regular mill may not cross the borders of any State. If they do cross they may be shown if the exhibitor cares to take the chance or they may be rephotographed and presented at will. This makes the law much of a joke. If prize fighting is legal—as it is, and if fight pictures may be shown—as they may, any law to forbid the interstate movement of the films is bound to be viewed with wonder by the average citizen.

THE NEW PEACE PACT

"A treaty among the principal powers of the world, open to signature by all nations, condemning war and renouncing it as an instrument of national policy in favor of the pacific settlement of international disputes." This is not the dream of an idealist, to be laughed to scorn in the chancelleries of the monarchies of Europe. It is composed, to be sure, of the stuff of which dreams once were made; but this stuff has now become the warp and woof of international diplomacy. It is an extract from a communication sent by our Secretary of State to the French government.

At no other time in the history of the world could such a proposal have been made with any prospect of its general acceptance or even consideration. War is older than history. It was the sport of kings, the favorite strategy of diplomats, the scourges of peoples who slew and were slain without asking or knowing why. Countless generations have lived and died under the menace of this scourge. It was the instrument alike of the church and the state. The weak were sacrificed and plundered to satisfy the whim and the greed of the strong. The sword was the arbiter, the cannon the last argument of kings. The god of war was the deity before whom all others must bow the knee.

But a generation has been born among whom human rights take precedence before royal prerogatives, a generation to which the divine right of kings is an exploited fallacy. The last absolute monarchy has passed. Laws are made not alone with the consent of the governed, but by the representatives of the governed. Peoples have learned to attain their ideals through their own industry. One no longer seeks to become rich through the plunder of one's neighbor. Wealth is taken from the earth and the sea. "Thou shalt not kill!" applies to peoples as well as to individuals.

France and America, most renowned of the world's republics, two peoples who have demonstrated that representative government under free institutions based on universal suffrage gives more freedom to the individual and a greater incentive to progress to a whole people than any other—these two peoples purpose to pledge each other never to resort to war to adjudicate their disputes; and they may ask the other leading nations of the world to join them in a similar pledge.

With these two peoples such an agreement is no experiment. Their pledge of amity has not been violated in a century. It was embodied in an arbitration treaty signed twenty-five years ago. That treaty expires next month. Foreign Minister Briand of France proposed that the treaty should be renewed with more definite pledges. Our own Secretary of State, expressing the will of the President, now accepts all the mutual pledges proposed by the French government for a bilateral treaty renouncing war as a means of settlement, and proposes that the two governments ask the other governments of the world to join in a multilateral treaty which shall place war outside the pale of enlightened diplomacy.

Minister Briand's proposal for the new treaty outlawing war in all relations between this country and his own has already been the subject of favorable editorial comment by The Times. That draft pact proposed that the two governments—> should solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war, renounce it as an instrument of their national policy toward each other and agree that a settlement of disputes arising between them, of whatever nature or origin they may be, shall never be sought by either party except through pacific means.

A treaty embracing such a declaration will find no opposition in either this country or in France; but the test will come when the French government and people are asked to enter into similar agreements with governments and peoples with whom they were lately at war. They may reply that they indorse the sentiment which might be paraphrased to read "Peace on earth to men of good will," but that they are not convinced that certain peoples are composed of "men of good will." They may point to their cemeteries, their mutilated veterans and to the scars on the fair face of Northern France as visible evidences of the danger of a general amnesty.

It is one thing for our government to propose such treaties, and another thing to secure their general acceptance. Even if France should decline, however, to make such treaties universal, there is no apparent reason why the peace declaration should not be embodied in a treaty between our government and that of Great Britain. Such a move might serve to put a stop to the insidious propaganda that seeks to stir up strife among the English-speaking nations. If both governments should place themselves squarely on record rumors of war would receive less credence. The Irish question once stood as a barrier to such a sweeping renunciation; but that has been practically settled by giving to the Irish local self-government. Why should a treaty renouncing war as a means for settling disputes between the English-speaking peoples be longer delayed? Mayor Thompson of Chicago might ask for a reservation excluding his municipality from the general amnesty, but even that might be arranged.

As for Geneva, no serious opposition is probable from that source. Some voices in the Assembly may ask that it be extended to embrace total disarmament; but in the Council, where decisions are made, the abstract best is not likely to be opposed to the concrete good.

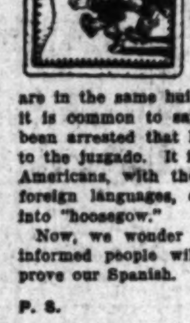
Whatever the final result, the effect of the proposal will be to turn the minds of all peoples to the possibilities of an enduring peace. It is another milestone marking the progress of mankind in the footsteps of Him who preached the Sermon on the Mount.

MEXICAN ART

A group of more than a score of Mexico's most talented artists are now giving an exhibition of their paintings in New York and it is creating considerable friendly interest. Some of the canvases possess merit that would be recognized in any salon and it would make for better national appreciation and understanding if the exhibition could be passed into two or three other large communities in this country. Of late the nation has not been taking its art from New York. We are in better position to understand and appreciate Mexican art here in California than they are on Manhattan Island. The Mexican position in literature and art as well as industry is being strengthened every day.

The
LEE SIDE O' L.A.
BY Lee Shippey

ALL over the United States, "hoosegow" is used as a common nickname for jail—but most of the users don't know why. New Yorkers and New Englanders use it as a colloquialism of their own, not suspecting it is just one more of the many things the country at large has been given by California and other States once under Spanish rule.



"Juez" is Spanish for "judge," and the place of judgment is known as the juzgado, pronounced hoosgado. As the police courts in Mexico usually are in the same buildings as the jails, it is common to say of one who has been arrested that he has been taken to the juzgado. It is easy to see how Americans, with their native gift for foreign languages, could corrupt that into "hoosegow."

Now, we wonder how many better-informed people will write in to improve our Spanish.

P. S.

We won't mind that. But we would like to have it understood that we did not gain information for the foregoing in Tia Juana.

Our Gift for Tongues

The average American tourist considers himself extremely cultured when he can make mistakes in three languages instead of only one.

Virginia Hams

"Why," a perplexed but trusting correspondent writes in, "are none but Virginia hams served in hotels and restaurants?"

That is such a tremendous problem it staggers us to realize we had overlooked it till this moment. According to the United States Department of Agriculture, none of the greatest hog-raising States is named Virginia. Further consideration shows that that department must be sadly at fault, for more Virginia ham is served in Los Angeles alone than it credits Virginia with producing, besides the hundreds of tons which the rest of the country daily consumes. And what becomes of all the California, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois ham? Not a mouthful of it ever seems to enter into the kingdom of caterers, no matter how model a life it led when on the hoof.

Or is it just the contrary—that all good hams become Virginia hams as soon as they shuffle off the shackles of existence, just as all good people become angels?

Frankly, we cannot say. But this we know. It is a wonderful tribute to Virginia cookery; and this would be a gladder world if we had fewer Chicago and Kentucky feudists and more Virginia foodists.

Human Interest

This seems a good place to work in the following indignant query from C. J. H.: "Why don't you write less about food in your column and more about the arts?"

Well, we've known enthusiastic eaters who didn't care greatly for art, but we never yet met an artist who wasn't constitutionally ready to eat. If you doubt that, invite one.

Drug Much Prescribed

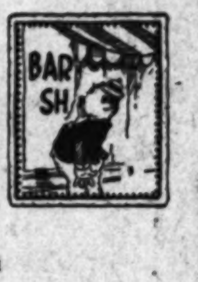
A druggist informs us it isn't true that more liquor is being consumed. On the contrary, he says, liquor is getting to be a drug on the market.

But most people are too hasty in suspecting establishments of being speak-easies. "Tish" writes in excitedly that on East First street is a sign which reads:

BAR
SH

We called for volunteers, and when Bill came back he reported that the other half of the sign was on the adjoining window pane, and read:

BER
OP



Tired, But Hopeful

Sir: The tired business woman, who has to go home during the rush hour every evening, calls them pray-as-you-enter cars.—Edward Felgate.

We suppose her prayer is: Give us this day our weekly seat.

THAT MANCHURIAN LOAN

Much disappointment is expressed in Japan over the reported failure of the proposed American loan to the South Manchurian Railroad. The Japanese company wanted to borrow $40,000,000 from our financiers, but both the Nanking and Peking governments protested to our State Department, asking that we should not "help Japan's encroachments in China." This protest was unnecessary. It is against American policy to permit the single-handed exploitation of Manchuria by Japan, and though small private loans may be made, large ones will not be countenanced by our government.

In 1920 there was organized an association of banks of America, Britain, France and Japan to control and pool loans to the Chinese central and local governments. Japan tried at that time to have Manchuria excluded from the scope of the association's operations on the ground of her "special interest" in that area. To this the American government was opposed, but Japan was allowed to finance the Manchurian railroad project alone, which it did. Now Japan wants our bankers to loan money for the extension of the Manchurian lines.

China apprehends that if the $40,000,000 loan is granted that our banks may in time grant still larger loans, which virtually would give Japan control of the development of Manchuria and enable it to annex it, which the Chinese say is the aim of the Japanese government.

None of the powers is willing that this should be done, as the policy of each of them with respect to Chinese territory is against anything by way of parcelling out either now or later. The country should remain open to American and European enterprise, and the trade or industry of no district should be monopolized by Japan or any other nation.

NO ECONOMICS IN LANGUAGE

Pan-Americanism as it will be expressed at the Havana conference by President Coolidge knows no geographical or language partitions. Its aim is the welfare of all peoples in the Americas, and neighborly co-operation toward that end. In proportion as the people of the United States shed undue suspicions about the Latin Americans and the peoples of the Latin Americas discard similar suspicions toward the Saxon Americans, will a new Pan-Americanism be born in the Cuban meeting.

There is no great adhesion between the nations of Latin America, but new attempts to set up a strong Latin-American spirit are under way in Mexico. The Mexican Congress has adopted a proposal that would lead to amendments in the constitutions of all the Latin-American nations, so phrased as to give citizenship in every Latin-American country to a citizen of any one of them. This is a novel move and has the marks of an attempt to create a Latin-American alliance based solely on language. The Spanish-speaking peoples of Latin America are not all of one race.

The Mexican proposal holds in itself no direct menace toward real Pan-Americanism, but it evidences in a small way the belief that there is a logical difference and division between the Saxon Americans and the Latin Americans. The economics of nations influence and govern their friendships more than their racial blood and their languages. The United States of America and the Dominion of Canada have a great community of interests, but it is based upon economic conditions and commercial relations rather than upon blood or language relationship. Both the Dominion and the United States have interests in Mexico, Central America and South America, and their continued and enlarged participation in general development in the southern countries will contribute more to their welfare than a southern alliance based on language alone.

The conference at Havana, it is hoped, will serve to convince the peoples of all the Latin-American countries that the United States wishes to co-operate with its southern neighbors in a wholly unselfish way, regardless of geographical lines and languages.

CHILDHOOD'S HAPPY DAYS

Nowadays if a boy or girl were caught reading Plutarch's Lives or Scott's historical novels in the seclusion of the home there would be call for a mental examination. The poor kid would be considered foggy in the bean. To be considered normal in these days a boy must be able to bleat through a saxophone or shake his hoof for four straight hours to the music of a jazz band. Syncopated music has taken the place of classical literature.

EASY MONEY

Henry Ford used only the daily newspapers in giving publicity to his new line. He did not seek the billboards, the magazines or other devices for reaching the masses. He spent $1,200,000 in a five-day campaign and he more than got the money back in the first five minutes after his cars were on the market. In many towns the customers had to be pushed back by the police.

PROTECTIVE COLORING

By James J. Montague

Chameleons are a kind of eft—
A lizard nature has bereft

Or power to bite or scratch or claw
To fill an enemy with awe.

Nor are they swift to get away
When larger creatures look their way

And so they simply change their hue
To green, or red, or brown, or blue,

Or beige, or peach, or tan, or fawn
To match the object they are on.

When on a lily leaf they curl
They swiftly change to whitish pearl,

And eagles, preying from the air
Do not discern that they are there.

When on a rock their heads they lay
They shift their shade to brownish gray

And jaguars cannot find out
That they are anywhere about.

And so, though neither weak nor strong
Their lives are usually long;

In short they use the crafty tricks
Which men engaged in politics

Have utilized since days of old
To keep the offices they hold.

A POLITICAL SURVEY

BY KYLE D. PALMER

Presidential potentialities, possibilities and personalities, or, more specifically, Presidential politics, will increasingly hold the attention of the country during the next ten months—for this is a Presidential election year, and the business of electing a President and Vice-President continues to be one of the great quadrennial undertakings of the people.

A Presidential election, while subject to the good and bad influences of wide political ramifications, closely involves basic principles of public well-being, not only from the standpoint of governmental efficiency, but from the far less tangible basis of that greatly desired condition of trade activity and economic health commonly known as business confidence.

The sensitive stock market, no less than the agitated heart of any engaged actively in political affairs, throbs hopefully or apprehensively according to Presidential prospects. Not so many years ago there seemed to be a tendency upon the part of business men and financiers to throttle down the machinery of industry and commerce during the political uncertainties preceding a Presidential election.

Now, it is fortunately true that business is less sensitive to the political weather barometer. This safer and saner attitude is due to many things, principally, perhaps, to the fact that government is more scientifically adapted to the economic fabric of the nation, more permanently adjusted to the fundamental phases of national existence.

Nevertheless, neither scientists nor efficiency experts, nor satisfied business men, have or can take the old-fashioned fun out of a Presidential election. Some of the red fire is missing, the marching clubs are sadly lagging and the banner-carriers are less prominent than heretofore, but the excitement, the brilliant and bewildering contests between political antagonists, the oratorical bursts, the heated arguments, the pointings with pride and the viewings with alarm—all remain.

Existing conditions in Presidential politics are somewhat different this year because of the attitude of President Coolidge, who has eliminated himself as a candidate at a time when virtually all unbiased observers of political trends in the nation were agreed that he would be, or could be, re-elected regardless of the nature of his opposition.

Few Presidents, themselves retaining the good will and loyalty of a party, have voluntarily retired with less effort, real or inferred, to control a choice of a successor. Whatever preferences Mr. Coolidge may have, he has not made them known. Neither has he sought to aid or obstruct any candidacy. His speech to the Republican National Committee in Washington was not alone a report and an analysis of aspirations and accomplishments, but constituted in very real fashion an enunciation of Republican principles and a sound platform for the Republican campaign this year. The President probably has a preference. Doubtless at a time he considers proper he will do what he can to aid his own choice—meanwhile the field is open and free.

The Republican National Convention will meet in Kansas City, June 12. During the next thirty days the Democratic National Committee will choose a convention city. San Francisco, which accommodated the Democrats so creditably in 1920, is a strong contender for the party's 1928 convention. A little more than four months will be given over to the actual election contest ending November 6.

Preceding the national conventions of the major and minor parties, the several States, either by primary elections or State conventions, will name delegates instructed to carry out the wishes of the voters. In most States delegates will be instructed to vote for a specific candidate. Uninstructed delegations will be elected in States not having "favorite sons" or in others where political strategy and expediency seem to dictate such a course.

As the Presidential political pot begins to simmer it appears that the contest will resolve itself around less than a dozen Republicans and Democrats—always bearing in mind the possibilities of deadlocks and dark horses.

Among the Republicans there seems to be ample grounds for concluding that Secretary of Commerce Hoover leads the field despite his failure thus far to announce himself either as an actual or a receptive candidate. Other Republicans whose names will be discussed and whose candidacies in one form or another will appear in convention deliberations, are former Gov. Lowden of Illinois, Vice-President Dawes, former Secretary of State Hughes, Senator Willis of Ohio and Senator Curtis of Kansas.

Scrutiny of the Democratic Presidential possibilities shows Gov. Smith of New York in the lead, but with prospects of a repetition of the opposition that successfully withheld the nomination from his hands in 1924. Those who have read the New York Governor's message to the Legislature regard the document as a carefully prepared statement of the platform upon which he will make his appeal for the Democratic Presidential nomination. This speech is one of the longest public utterances submitted to an American legislative body. With necessary headings and typographical arrangements it would fill more than four pages of a standard-sized newspaper.

Digestion of the message will require much time and considerable close attention both from the Governor's foes and his friends.

Senator Reed of Missouri is lending an attentive if not an eager ear to the suggestion of his friends that he come to the rescue of the Democracy. His activities in the Senate have reflected, and doubtless his course during the next few months will continue to indicate, his aspirations for the nomination.

One of his colleagues, Senator Walsh of Montana, is favored by many Democrats unable to espouse the cause either of Smith or Reed. California Democrats opposed to the wet Governor of New York and the wet Senator from Missouri are enthusiastic in applauding the dry Walsh of Montana.

Gov. Donahey, Democrat, of Ohio, has been a Presidential porsibility in so far as his ambitions for the nomination are concerned. Likewise, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland is an active aspirant. It seems that some preliminary organization work has been undertaken in Mr. Ritchie's behalf. The Maryland Governor is listed on the wet side of the political column. Former Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, one of the government's prosecutors in the oil-lease scandals, is a potential candidate.

All of the Republican aspirants thus far seriously mentioned for the nomination are acceptable to the dry element of the party. The issue of wet and dry is not, as a matter of fact, a part of the Republican problem.

Political predictions at all times are unreliable. At this early date even speculation is somewhat unprofitable, but one thing is certain. Inescapable, inevitable—the campaign of 1928 will not be lacking in those aspects of fire and fervor, praise and reprehension, clamor and conflict ordinarily associated with such phenomena in this country.

If such a trite comparison may be permitted it seems safe to infer that the Republicans will present to the country the aspects of the doughnut of solid accomplishment during the last eight years—and the Democrats will look at the hole in dismay and in indignation. In any event, the battle is about to join.

THEIR GAY BROWN HORSES

BY EVELYN McDOWELL

The war has been over for lo! these many years, and Paris is again entertaining German tourists along with those of other nationalities, so that we occasionally hear the language of the Kaiser spoken on the streets. Nevertheless, it was a shock to see a poster displaying words in that alien tongue on one of the Grands Boulevards, right in the heart of Paris, a while ago. A circus was advertising its "lustige braune Pferde."

Of course this grated on the sensibilities of the French, too, who are still undergoing many hardships as a result of the war. It was not surprising that at least one of the Paris newspapers should mention this matter editorially. A writer in the Intransigeant devoted a column to it. Although he tried to approach the subject in a dispassionate manner, it was not difficult to detect an undercurrent of strong feeling.

"We wish to speak with moderation, without hatred, and certainly without rancor," he said. "All France loves peace. We know that, and could prove it easily. But if there were only one peaceful place in all France, that place would be in the hearts of those who fought. For if all French people suffered anguish and grief, we who fought suffered far more. We descended into hell. We lived there four years. We have no desire to return there; nor, above all, to have our sons descend there."

To live, it is not enough to refrain from coming to blows with one's neighbor, in the opinion of this writer. There is every-day, practical, commercial life. Then let us make commercial treaties with the Germans. Perhaps they will keep these, even though they haven't kept other agreements.

"I don't even care if the personnel of the circus is recruited for the most part among the Germans," he said. "The civic status of a trained dog doesn't matter much to me . . . But this is what I don't like: that right here, in the heart of my city, words in the German language should appear; that the Germans should not have the elementary courtesy to translate that advertisement into French! . . . No! Too many words in that language, too many 'nach Paris,' for too long a time, soiled the walls of too many cities of France with their big black letters."

Even their war was gay in 1914, he said, like their horses of today. He could tolerate it if the "lustige Pferde" came in here quietly, but he didn't like to have them advertised. The parent of one who had been killed in the war might see it. A little more modesty! Modesty doesn't cost anything, and the French would gladly teach it.

SAWTELLE VETERANS

The pepper trees at Sawtelle
  Are rugged, gnarled and old,
The halest, greenest veterans
  Of all within the fold.
Though stooped by years, still staunchly,
  In ranks still almost straight
They seem to march undaunted—
  To the cemetery gate!

They make redoubts of shadow
  And roof of filigree
And cast a most comradely shade
  For such as weary be.
They bless the world they live in
  Though they but stand and wait—
And seem to march undaunted clear
  To cemetery gate.

LEE SHIPPEY.

APPLE LOST OUT IN A TASTE TEST

Roger B. Corbett of Rhode Island State College took four varieties of apples, peeled them and cut them into cubes, which he placed before eleven different men.

The apple that was rated first when seen whole, shining in its brilliant red skin, ranked last in taste. In the taste test the McIntosh won first place, the Baldwin second, the Rhode Island Greening third and the Rome Beauty last. The Rome Beauty, a dessert apple that is a favorite in stores and on fruit stands, when peeled was found the least tasty.

OPEN TO EVERYBODY!

You, and all the members of your family, can play this fascinating Picturegame. It is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—residing in California, Arizona or New Mexico. No work to do—just look through an alphabetical list of book titles and select the one you think best fits the picture each day. Think of winning $1000 for a few moments a day in such a pleasant pastime! You can do it! Seven hundred and thirty players MUST win prizes in this Picturegame, and YOU might as well be one of them!

Here Are the Rules Governing the Picturegame. Read Carefully

1. The Los Angeles Times' Home Picturegame consists of 77 pictures, for each of which the participant is to submit at least one and not more than three titles. The titles must be found in the Official Picturegame Catalogue, and only titles taken from this Catalogue can be used.

2. The list of book titles (Catalogue) may be consulted free of charge at the office of the Los Angeles Times, or a participant may ask the authorities of any regularly constituted public library to obtain the list of book titles (Catalogue) from us. It will be supplied gratis on request to one public library in any city or town within the territory prescribed in these rules. The list of book titles (Catalogue) can also be secured as announced in offers in this newspaper.

3. This Picturegame is open to everybody resident in the States of California, Arizona and New Mexico, with the exception of employees of the Los Angeles Times and members of their families, and members of the Committee of Judges and their immediate families.

4. No assumed names can be used; that is, each participant can participate only as one, in his or her own name. Two rewards will not be given to members of the same family, or persons living at the same address. Each participant may send in as many as three complete sets of answers, but each set will be judged by itself, and only one set submitted by any participant (that participant's best set) may receive a reward. Answers to the pictures must be sent in all at once; that is, the answers to the entire set of 77 pictures must be sent in at one time. A duplicate list of the answers submitted is to be retained by the participant for self-checking purposes. Full instructions will be printed in the Los Angeles Times at the close of the Picturegame regarding this. Proper compliance with these instructions is obligatory and very important.

5. On each of the 77 days a picture will be found in a ruled space, with lines left blank below as an answer form for inscription of one book title, as well as the participant's own name and address. Therefore, titles for the pictures are to be inscribed on the official answer forms appearing in this newspaper, or participants may submit each answer on a sheet of white paper 5x8 inches in size on which must be drawn, not traced, in pencil or ink only, a facsimile of the picture and coupon, or the answers may be submitted in the convenient Official Picturegame Answer Book which may be secured in accordance with offers to be printed later on in this newspaper. Titles must not be sent in until the close of the Picturegame. Then each participant is to deliver his or her own set or sets of answers as per instructions which will appear in this newspaper. Writing of titles, name and address, may be done with pen or pencil or on the typewriter. After the appearance of the 77th picture in the Los Angeles Times sufficient time will be given to participants to properly prepare their sets of answers. The time for turning in these sets of titles will be announced later.

6. Judgment of the lists of titles, and selection of those deserving rewards, will be made by a Committee of Official Judges. The Committee will consist of persons of honor, capability and good judgment. Their decisions will be final and participants enter with this understanding.

7. The list of rewards announced in the Los Angeles Times will be awarded in order to the highest ranking participants on the following basis: Those participants will be judged to have achieved winning results who supply most appropriate or "best" titles for the pictures. The person submitting the highest number of such titles will be awarded the first reward, the person submitting the next highest list of such titles will be awarded the second reward, and so on. If there should be an equality between two or among more than two participants, then the decision will be given according to superiority in the following requirements, each being necessary only in case there is an equality on the preceding point: (a) the least number of incorrect (the titles which are not "best") answers; (b) the highest relative position of the participant's complete set of answers, as, when three answers are given by a participant for one picture, the correct answer is on top rather than in the position of second or third choice among the answers for that picture; (c) the least number of words in the whole set of answers; and (d) the least number of letters in the complete set of answers. In the event of an ultimate tie, each tying participant will receive the full reward tied for.

8. The articles "A," "An" and "The" at the beginning of the titles (or placed at the end when listed) as well as other articles in the wording of titles must be carefully observed as they occur in the Official Picturegame Catalogue of Book Titles. Use the same form and spelling of titles in your answers as you find listed there. For the purpose of the Home Picturegame the Catalogue of Book Titles is the standard for all to go by. Write answers to the pictures exactly as you find them listed in the Official Catalogue.

9. It is desired that every participant shall carefully study out his or her own titles, although the casual gratuitous aid of relatives, teachers and other friendly disposed persons may be accepted. Every precaution will be taken to safeguard the interests of all who enter the Picturegame, and the Committee of Judges will be entitled to discard any set or sets of titles if these rules have not been complied with and where unfairness is obvious.

10. Announcements will be made from time to time in the Los Angeles Times regarding the Picturegame, and participants should carefully read the instructions, which will be printed, and must be governed thereby.

These rules are copyrighted together with the whole plan of the Picturegame, and must not be copied, or used, either in whole or in part, without consent of the owner.

Picture No. 2 will appear in The Times tomorrow and another each day thereafter. Don't miss any!

GLASS COMPANY TO GIVE RIGHTS

Illinois Pacific Planning for New Financing

Announcement of Plan Made in Bay Region

Local Factory Will be Built from Proceeds

Stockholders of Illinois Pacific Glass Corporation, which manufactures about 75 per cent of the glass bottles used on the Pacific Coast, will receive rights to subscribe to additional stock when the directors meet about February 1, and will also receive an extra dividend of 50 cents a share, it is reported by Leib-Keyston and Company of San Francisco. Proceeds from the sale of the stock will be used for the erection of a plant in Los Angeles the report states.

In Los Angeles the rumor is that the rights will be issued in the ratio of one to ten. Substantiation of the San Francisco story is also found in the announcement made here several months ago that the erection of a plant in Los Angeles would be financed through the sale of stock.

Work on the building of the plant is expected to begin about April 1 on a seven and one-half acre site at Vernon. The plant will be of the single-tank type and will cost about $750,000. A warehouse already stands on the property, fully stocked with glassware.

The first unit of the Los Angeles plant will have an estimated annual capacity of 250,000 gross bottles. It is planned to increase facilities gradually to allow for an annual output of 650,000 gross. Upon completion of the Los Angeles plant, the saving in freight charges is estimated at $100,000 annually, with another $50,000 possible through segregation of bottle types in manufacturing.

Business of Illinois Pacific Glass dates back to 1881, and since 1896 the company has also been engaged in the allied business of manufacturing paper board into corrugated packing and reshipping cases. Glass manufacturing is now carried on in a three-tank plant located in San Francisco, having a bottle capacity of 650,000 gross annually.

Capitalization of the company consists of 60,000 shares authorized of "A" common, of which 59,240 are outstanding, and 250,000 authorized of "B" common, of which 110,760 are outstanding.

Stock Market Trading Value Gains for Week

Trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange for the week just closed reached greater proportions than in the preceding week, both in respect to volume of shares and in total value, according to figures compiled by the statistical department of the exchange.

During the five days following the New Year holiday, 312,329 shares crossed the board with an aggregate value of $7,915,145.43, as compared with 301,481 shares traded with a total value of $5,171,352 in the week ending December 31, last. This is an increase of 10,848 shares and a gain of $2,743,793 in total value.

Increased activity in the bank and oil issues was responsible for the sharp rise in total value. There was less activity in the mines and industrial lists.

STATISTICAL SOCIETY TO MEET AT DINNER

The dinner and regular meeting of the Western Statistical Association will be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday, next, in the Brack-Shops Building, it was announced yesterday by Willard W. White, secretary. Charles H. Titus, assistant professor of political science at the University of California, will be the principal speaker of the evening, choosing as his topic, "Some Guesses on the Population of Some California Cities."

BANK GROUP IN BAY CITY SETS MARK

Resources of Thirteen Record Gain Exceeding $500,000,000 for Year

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Record-breaking growth in the San Francisco banking situation has taken place during 1927, according to a compilation of the thirteen principal local institutions, which shows a gain of more than $500,000,000 in resources.

The $2,000,000,000 mark was passed for the first time, with resources of these banks totaling $2,069,903,817 at the close of December, 1927, compared with $1,556,138,183 at the end of December, 1926. This gain of over $500,000,000 was principally accounted for by the following large resource increases during the year:

Bank—	Gain
Bank of Italy	$304,207,205
United Bank	110,206,673
American Trust	92,014,273
Bank of California	6,263,113
San Francisco Bank	5,618,667
Crocker Bank	3,187,144
Wells-Fargo Bank	1,050,491

Other banks to show gains of smaller amounts were the Pacific National, while the Anglo and London Paris National, the Anglo California Trust, the Humboldt and the Hibernia showed very slight decreases, which in their total did not reach $10,000,000.

The advance of the Bank of Italy followed its merger with the Liberty Bank and its absorption of numerous other banks throughout the State, as well as the natural growth of a $750,000,000 institution. The gain of American Trust is considered due principally to the merger of the American Bank and the Mercantile Trust.

The United Bank increase evidently resulted from its policy of State-wide branch banking and the acquisition of more than fifty institutions, which are placed in the United Bank and its affiliated institutions, the Security Bank and Trust Company of Bakersfield and the French-American Corporation.

Growth of the other banks is attributed solely to their normal increase in business.

Greater Care in Realty Loan Placing Urged

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Declaring that greater care than ever must be exercised in 1928 in placing valuations on real estate for lending purposes, President E. D. Schumacher of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America stated yesterday that there need be no fear for the future of mortgage securities if lenders will "comprehend conditions from all angles and not resort to guessing." Mr. Schumacher heads the Southern Bond and Mortgage Company of Richmond, Va.

"One paramount factor in governing the placing of money on real estate is the accuracy of the appraisers in the examination and valuation of security," he pointed out. "We are now called upon under existing conditions to exercise extreme care in placing valuations, by use of efficient examiners in constant touch with the trend of events."

UTILITY FINANCING PLANS PARED DOWN

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Public Utilities California Corporation has the approval of the Railroad Commission to absorb by purchase the Capitola Company's gas, electric and water utilities, but the amount involved is not satisfactory. The buyer proposed to finance the purchase by the issuance and sale of $60,000 in common stock and $85,000 in first mortgage 6 per cent twenty-yea rbonds. The commission declared that $44,000 in stock and $66,000 in bonds was enough and issued an order accordingly.

FISH CATCH HIGHER FOR ELEVEN MONTHS

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Landings of fish by vessels at Boston, Gloucester and Portland for the first eleven months of 1927 are calculated at 243,500,000 pounds by the Bureau of Fisheries, valued at $8,226,000, compared with 219,145,000 pounds, valued at $8,120,000 in the corresponding 1926 period. Among the fresh fish, haddock showed a gain of 34,000,000 pounds, cod a loss of 12,637,000 pounds and mackerel a loss of 4,000,000 pounds.

ANGLO-CALIFORNIA TRUST PROFITS UP

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—An increase of $153,942 in undivided profits, which is equal to $10.60 a share, was reported yesterday by the Anglo-California Trust Company as of December 31, 1927. This is after payment $12 per share in dividends, or equal to earnings of $22.60 a share on the stock during the year. Based on a market quotation of $400 a share, the stock yields 3 per cent and is earning 5.65 per cent on its present bid price

ARIZONA POWER MAY PASS

Negotiations for Sale of Control Reported; Foshay and Ohrstrom Groups Named in Rumors

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Arizona Power Company, one of the few independent utilities remaining in Arizona and one of the largest companies operating in the State, may soon pass to one of the public utility holding companies, if reports from Arizona are correct. From Phoenix the story comes that S. S. Perry of Prescott, president of Arizona Power, is on his way East to confer with one or two groups who have been bidding for the property.

While Electric Bond and Share, which controls Central Arizona Light and Power through the medium of American Power and Light, is regarded as the most logical buyer of Arizona Power, the opinion among utility operators is that one of the smaller holding groups will win out. S. Z. Mitchell, overlord of the Electric Bond and Share chain of companies, is understood to have adopted the waiting attitude, relying on the close business connections between Central Arizona and Arizona Power to ultimately close the trade. Central Arizona buys about 50 per cent of its energy from Arizona Power.

BIDDERS NAMED

Until lately the deadlock has stood without promise of compromise, but the recent entrance into the State of the Foshay, the Ohrstrom and the Condon interests has changed the complexion of the situation. It is understood that one of this trio stands a good chance of buying the property at this time, with the advantage in favor of the Foshay and the Ohrstrom groups.

W. B. Foshay, who heads the Public Utilities Consolidated Corporation of Arizona, has built up a large investment in Arizona utilities. Starting with the Southern Arizona Power, which serves the territory adjacent to Yuma, the Foshay interests have purchased Desert Power and Water, serving Kingman, Catman and a number of other mining communities; J. J. Mackay Water Company of Lower Miami, and Claypool Water Company, Claypool.

The program laid down for expansion in the Western States by Public Utilities Consolidated lends some credence to the rumor concerning the negotiations for Arizona Power. Several months ago it was announced that nine small utilities in California were under contract for purchase, and that other companies are bound in every western State with the exception of Nevada.

OHRSTROM MENTIONED

G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., mentioned as a likely buyer of the Arizona Power, was formerly interested in the Arizona situation through the People's Arizona Gas and Electric Company. These properties have been sold, but it is possible that the Ohrstrom group might still entertain the idea of building up another company for disposition later on. E. J. Condon of Chicago, another prospect, controls the Arizona Edison Company, which owns properties in Yuma, Bisbee and Douglas.

Arizona Power owns and operates two hydroelectric plants having an installed capacity of 11,300 horsepower, located in the mountains near Prescott, and also a modern steam plant at Clarkdale. Electric and gas generating and distributing systems are operated in Prescott, and electricity is distributed at Fort Whipple, Clarkdale, Jerome, Humboldt, Mayer and Cottonwood. Power for mines and smelters in the Yavapai county copper district is an important source of revenue, but the chief source is the sale of power to Central Arizona Light and Power, which serves the city of Phoenix and adjacent district.

Arizona Power Given Copper Mine Contract

Negotiations have just been concluded whereby the Arizona Power Company contracts to supply the United Verde Copper Company with its power requirements for five years from October 1, last, it was announced yesterday by B. M. Wotkyns, director of the Arizona company.

The contract assures Arizona power of a large and steady load from this one source for the five years, and should have a stabilizing effect on the market price of its securities, according to Mr. Wotkyns, who said also that quotations have been somewhat affected by false rumors to the effect that the company had lost the business of the United Verde Copper Company. Another advantage accruing to the power company is that it is enabled to buy waste heat power from the copper company on good terms, for use during peak conditions.

The United Varde Copper Company owns one of the largest and richest copper mines on the North American continent, and operates in connection with its mine, a large concentrating mill and copper smelter.

Car and Rail Buying Heavy

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—A large order for rails has been distributed by the St. Louis Southwestern Railway (cotton belt.) Bethlehem Steel received 5000 tons, Illinois Steel, 4500 tons, and Inland Steel, 4300 tons.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe has been given orders for 100 caboose cars to American Car and Foundry; 100 dump cars to Magor Car Company, and the Mobile and Ohio has placed 450 freight cars with the Mt. Vernon Car Manufacturing Company and 250 with General American Tank Car. The Central of Georgia is in the market for 500 flat cars.

Building-Loan Reports Growth

Resources of the Railway Mutual Building and Loan Association as of December 31, last, amounted to $663,061.02, as compared with $262,043.05, on June 30, last, an increase of $401,017.97, or 150 per cent for the six months, according to a statement of the company issued yesterday.

The association has been in operation only fourteen months, and reports loans in force of $592,112.78 for that period. The third semiannual dividend at the rate of 8.4 per cent per annum, paid to shareholders on the 1st inst., amounted to $13,780.60.

FEATURES OF WEEK ON MART TOLD

Reaction and Recovery of Stock Prices Among Outstanding Events

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Credit conditions were the determining influence in the price movements of stock prices in this week's market. A reactionary trend early in the week was directly attributed to the apprehension developing over the mounting level of brokers' loans, while the subsequent recovery was influenced by the lowering of call money rates and the reassuring statement of President Coolidge on the loan situation.

Trading in the first week of 1928 was larger than any corresponding week on record, running close to 14,000,000 shares for the five sessions. Today's trading set a new high record for Saturday business.

The huge January reinvestment demand undoubtedly was a factor in the week's buying movement, although major operations continued to center in stocks believed to be under pool sponsorship. Short covering was in unusually large volume, leading to the belief in some quarters that the market's technical position had again been weakened.

The reported pick-up in the steel and motor industries was one of the week's major trade developments. Chain-stores sales for December also were unusually heavy, but the final compilation of November railroad earnings statements was disappointing. Oil and packing shares which have not participated extensively in the current "bull" market, showed a decidedly firmer undertone which also was attributed to improving conditions in those industries.

Cotton Prices Turn Lower on Quiet Market

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The cotton market was quiet and a little easier in tone today, mainly from the usual local selling in realizing profits on speculative holdings over the week end, and also a moderate amount of southern selling. The Liverpool markets made a full response to our closing advance of yesterday, but further responsive buying either from important trade interests here or from outsiders was lacking.

There were also reports overnight of an agreement among many of the yarn spinners in North and South Carolina to curtail production and likewise among cotton duck manufacturers in other localities to curtail, due to the overproduction of the latter as well as yarns and sheetings.

This offset the somewhat bullish week-end statistics on the visible supply of raw cotton, showing a decrease for this week of 95,536 bales against 9691 for last week and 3315 for last year, bringing the world's visible supply of American cotton now down to 5,976,000 bales against 7,328,000 a year ago.

At Liverpool spot cotton closed with an advance of 12 English points to 11.04d for middling, but futures there finished with an advance of but 1 to 4 points from the good spot demand, failing to develop much new trade or speculative buying of futures.

Prices here for the general contract list scored declines of 10 to 12 points from yesterday's closing in the early trading, March going off to 19 1-4 cents, May 19 3-8 cents, July 19 1-4 cents and October of the next crop to 18.67 cents. Most of this was recovered in sympathy with the bulge in the stock market, but prices went off again during the second hour's trading on the scattered liquidation and southern selling above referred to.

BANK LIST FEATURES MART

Activity During Week Largely Responsible for New High Dollar Value of Total Turnover

BY FRANK L. GARDNER
Banks, Huntley & Co.

Bank stocks were again largely featured in the shortened week just closed on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Activity in these issues was productive of some new record-peak prices, and was in a large measure responsible for the establishment of the greatest dollar volume of business in the history of the exchange.

Market action in the oil group suggested an awakening of speculative interest on the part of well-informed operators, who apparently believe that the future holds possibilities of improvement. Also the market in the group gave evidence of recovering from the depressing influence of tax-selling during the closing weeks of 1927.

Bank of Italy, assisted by official statements as to earnings for 1927, coupled with rumors of further stock dividend action in the near future, forged upward to a new all-time high at 265 3-8, a gain of over 15 points from the previous week's close. In the latter sessions a reactionary tone predominated, and the close was at 262, with low sales at 260. Bancitaly Corporation continued an improvement which started in the previous week, and sold at a high of 143 1-2, up 6 points. Low sales were at 139 and final transactions at 140.

Los Angeles First National was active in a wide range, from 103 1-8 to 106 1-2, with closing sales at 105 1-4. Merchants' National Trust and Savings sold at 515, an odd lot of California Bank $100 par value stock changed hands at 500 and the new $25 par sold at 126, while a small block of Security Trust and Savings went across the board at 485.

RUMOR AIDS OILS

Persistent rumors of an impending deal between the Texas Corporation and California Petroleum attracted a large speculative following to the latter stock. A strong buying movement carried the stock from a low at 24 3-8 to a top yesterday at 27 1-8. Official admission that negotiations were pending, of course, supplied no details nor any assurances of consummation.

Richfield Oil, selling ex-dividend during the week, ranged from a low at 26 7-8 to 27 3-4 and final sales at 27 1-2. Standard of California moved within a comparatively narrow range between 55 3-8 and 55 7-8, closing at 55 1-2. Market performance of Union Oil of California continued to suggest accumulation, a sizeable volume of stock being absorbed between 43 3-4 and a close at 45. Union Oil Associates maintained its position about a point behind the free stock with a range from 42 7-8 to 43 1-2. Shell Union moved in small volume between 25 3-4 and 26. Bolsa Chica reacted from 56 to 53, and Holly Development ranged from 1.25 to 1.30.

The public-utility listings continued to give a good account of themselves.

Southern California Edison common was apparently under accumulation with a range from 43 7-8 to 44 1-2, and a close at 44. The 7 per cent preferred improved fractionally to a close at 28 7-8, the 6 per cent sold at 26, and the 5 1-2 per cent at 24 1-4.

INVESTMENT LEADS

In the miscellaneous department Los Angeles Investment was the leader in volume of sales, a considerable amount of stock chang'ng hands between 2.75 and 2.80. Broadway Department Store ranging from 105 to 105 1-2, was up about 2 points from recent levels.

United Bank and Trust of San Francisco in the unlisted division manifested a reactionary tone to decline from 222 to 217 finally. Pacific Finance common sold at 175 and 175 1-2, and Pacific Lighting common ranged from 76 3-4 to 78. Pan American Western Petroleum improved slightly to close at 20 1-4 from a low at 19 3-4, while Tidewater Associated common ranged from 16 7-8 to 17 1-4.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Quotations for bonds continued to move upward in today's market, with a minimum of week-end profit-taking. With the week's new issues totaling only about $85,000,000, the list had little outside competition, and no great volume of offerings was forthcoming. President Coolidge's comment on the brokers'-loan situation gave additional help in relieving the recent "money scare" over the mounting volume of this phase of credit.

Popular railroad liens were again in the ascendancy among listed bonds. Erie 5s again sold freely at their record high price and the general lien 4s of the same road established a new peak since 1916. Wheeling and Lake Erie 4½s and Missouri Pacific 4s both exceeded their highest prices of 1927.

Bethlehem Steel 5½s selling at 105½ for the first time in more than a year, stood out in the industrial group. Oil bonds, which spurted upward yesterday, were rather quiet, although California Petroleum again attained a new top on buying influenced by merger talk. Copper issues, firm at the opening, were offered freely in the final hour.

New high records for all time were marked up by Treasury 3 3-4s and 3 8-8s. Other Federal government bonds were dull. As in other sessions this week, the buying of the Treasury issues developed in the last few minutes.

Firmness of Polish and Mexican securities featured the foreign group. Italian, French and German issues followed mixed trends.

The quotations represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars) and the high, low and closing prices in the order given. To expedite transmission, the close is omitted when the same as the low and both low and close when same as the high.

of the day's net changes being of a mixed fractional character.

All the leading foreign exchanges were reactionary, with a drop of more than half a cent in sterling cables to $4.87 7-32 as the outstanding feature. This removes the possibility of any near shipments of gold to England in exchange transactions.

The weekly clearinghouse statement showed a deficit in reserve of $62,374,620, against a deficit of $51,651,040 last week. Aggregate reserve totaled $616,998,000. The detailed statement of actual conditions this day showed decreases in most of the principal items. Loans, discounts and investments dropped $153,070,000; reserve in the Federal Reserve Bank of member banks, $33,594,000, and net demand deposits, $170,341,000. Cash in own vaults gained $1,055,000, and time deposits increased $26,359,000.

CATTLE—Receipts during the past week were fairly liberal, but with broad demand ready clearances were made on every session. The yards were closed last Monday and 2513 cattle arrived Tuesday. Prices on all killing classes closed unevenly 25@50c higher, she stock and steers showing the maximum advance, while low cutter and cutter cows and bulls showed the minimum gain. Steers and she stock were about evenly divided as to numbers, with Arizona and California supplying the majority. Utah was well represented, while Idaho and New Mexico shippers were on the market with a few loads.

Four cars of California and Utah steers averaging under 1107 pounds topped at 12.00, while the majority of steers, medium and low good grades, turned from 10.75@11.75, mostly 11.25@11.50, including an eight-car string of 979-pound Arizonas at 11.40. Common steers sold from 8.50@9.75, including light Arizonas at 9.75 and Mexicans at 8.75 and 9.85. Very thin steers and kinds on the cutter order sold down to 7.00, while plain steers for feeding purposes sold from 7.50@8.50, four loads of plain qualitied 686 to 694-pound Arizonas making 7.50.

Half a load of good 779-pound Utah heifers turned at 10.00, while the price spread of 8.75@9.65 took in the bulk of heifers, including Utahs, Californias and light Arizonas. Carlots of cows made 8.50, while small lots sold up to 9.00, including good weighty dairy types. The price spread of 6.50@8.25 took in the bulk of cows, including most of the Arizonas under 7.50, although good light Arizonas sold up to 8.15. Cutters sold mostly from 5.00@6.00, with low cutters from 3.50@4.75. Good bulls were numerous from 7.00@7.50, with common and medium kinds from 5.75@6.75.

CALVES—Active demand existed and all offerings were cleaned up in good season, with closing prices generally 25@50c higher than a week ago. Milk vealers were fairly liberal from 12.00@12.50, while the bulk of 275 to 350-pound calves cashed from 10.75@11.50, with a load and a half of 276-pound New Mexicos topping at 11.65. Plainer kinds sold down to 10.00, with plain heavy calves from 8.00@9.50.

HOGS—Sharply higher prices was the direct result of light receipts and active demand. Closing prices were unevenly 75c@1.00 higher than the previous week's close. The high time was on the closing days when 11.25 was paid for a car of choice 182-pound Nebraskas. The next best price was 11.00, with the bulk of 140 to 210-pound averages selling from 10.75@11.00. Local fed trucked-in butchers averaging under 265 pounds turned from 10.25@10.75, while a car of 220-pound locals made 10.00, with 263-pound locals at 9.35. Packing sows gained 50@75c, the majority selling from 8.00@8.75.

SHEEP—Nothing arrived during the past week and the general undertone to the market was quoted firm or from 12.50@13.50 on good and choice light and handy weight lambs and from 10.75@12.50 on common and medium kinds and down to 9.00 on culls. Good and choice light weight full-wooled ewes were quoted from 6.00@7.00 and from 4.50@6.00 on common and medium kinds and down to 3.00 on culls.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Further and impressive progress in a decidedly broad buying movement at today's opening on the curb market was effective in cancelling the losses suffered in the midweek depression and in some instances lifted quotations to new high levels for all time.

Initial improvement included a 20-point rise in Shaeffer Pen, 6 1-4 points in Adolf Gobel and Alabama Great Southern which moved up 7 1-2 points to 175. General Baking issues continued in active demand, scoring new high levels and gains of a point or more appeared in Puget Sound, American Rolling Mills and Bancitaly Corporation. Public utility shares also contributed numerous upturns of substantial dimensions.

Trading increased in vigor as the trading proceeded into the last hour and the volume of sales reached the largest total for a half-holiday session. At one time the ticker facilities ran fourteen minutes behind actual completion of transactions. Other issues to attract notice in view of range were United States Battery which lifted 8 1-4 points, Tubize Artificial Silk 19 points and Leonard Tietz warrants up 30 points on a small lot.

Illinois Pipe was a strong feature in the oil group scoring a sharp gain of 3 1-2 points. Standard Oil of Kentucky also displayed strength selling up 2 5-8 to 133 and establishing a level above last year's high record.

The closing price is omitted when same as the low, and both low and close when same as the high.

Grain Futures Fraction Up at Close of Week

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Interest in the grain markets was light and largely of a local character with fair buying developing on the breaks. The finish was unchanged to ⅛c higher on wheat, with March 1.30⅛@1.30¼, May 1.31⅛@1.31¼. Corn was ⅛@⅜c higher, with March 87⅜c and May 91⅛c. Oats lost ⅛@⅜c, with rye off ⅜c.

Price fluctuations in grain during the past week were erratic, with wheat at the last unchanged to ⅝c higher as compared with the previous week, while corn was ⅜@1⅛c higher. Oats was off ¼@⅞c, rye ⅛c higher. Lard lost 7@7½c, ribs 17½@3¼ and bellies 10@13½c for the week.

Wheat futures held within a range of ⅜@⅛c, with the pit element doing the bulk of the trade, although there was some selling early by houses with northwestern connections. There was nothing in the general run of the news that attracted attention. Winnipeg closed ⅛c lower for the day, and the usual Saturday dullness was reported in export circles, with no sales of consequence made abroad.

Argentina wheat markets showed an easier undertone with prices in Buenos Aires steady. Liverpool was ⅛d higher with buyers disposed to go slow in taking hold, as the first arrivals of new crop Argentina grain showed excellent quality, and the demand has switched to that grain in preference to Manitobas.

A government report to be given to the trade on acreage of corn harvested for grain, cut for silage and used for hogging down, grazing and forage during the past year will be issued on the 10th inst at 2 p.m. Chicago time, as well as an estimate of production of corn for grain and for corn silage for 1927 and 1926. The average trader construed the announcement as indicating that the mystery of the last official report would likely be solved, and there was some buying on this view, but the general run of trade was not large.

Corn prices had a range of ⅜@½c for the day with the local bears taking the selling side on the bulges. Buenos Aires finished 1c lower and Rosario ⅛@1c, the weakness being due to showers over a good part of the belt, which will be highly beneficial. Country offerings to arrive were reported as slightly larger. Nothing was heard regarding export demand.

Oats market showed an easy undertone, due to scattered commission houses and local selling, and with a lack of aggressive support prices averaged lower. Export bids for rye at the seaboard were reported as out of line. Trading in futures was light.

Trading in provisions was small, with limited pressure on lard so that prices for futures closed 5c higher. Short ribs were 12½c lower to unchanged, and bellies unchanged to 7½c lower.

Losses from railroad freight robberies were $632,041, the smallest on record, during the first half of 1927, decreasing $84,464 from loss for the period last year and more than $5,000,000 from the "peak robbery" period in 1920, the American Railway Association says.

What of the Pecos?

In the year nineteen hundred and twelve the discovery of petroleum in the Mexican field at Tampico revolutionized the oil business in North America. Wells of from 50,000 to 200,000 barrels production such as came in in the new field to the south of us fairly staggered the oil world and predictions were freely made that such an enormous output would not hold up. The experts were mistaken.

About that time the Doheny fortune began its meteoric climb for the old ex-miner was up to his neck in Tampico oil. He formed the Mexican Petroleum Company, which, in a little while, soared to well over $200 a share.

The Pan American later absorbed the Mexican Company, or, better said, nearly all of it, for tradition has it that a movie actor in Hollywood, just beginning his accumulation of wealth, bought as his initial financial venture some Mexican Petroleum about the time that the stock was first offered and has ever since held on to it. The actor, now a millionaire, has received fabulous returns from that first speculation, and if the story is true, the company is kept alive almost solely for his benefit, for he steadfastly refuses to convert.

What happened back there in the earlier years of this century is now being repeated in the Texas fields, for what may easily become the world's premier oil country has lately been discovered down in the Pecos region.

Long ago, Arthur Stillwell, the most glorious example of the potency of Christian Science, built a railroad through that Texas wilderness—a railroad that hauled few passengers and, until the boom came, starved for freight. Now its facilities are taxed to the limit and the psychic faith of its builder has been justified.

What these big 50,000 to 75,000 barrel Texas wells mean to California oil companies, will shortly be of surpassing interest to the stockholders of these corporations. Many of these California oil producers control vast acreage in the new Texas fields—acreage which cost little and which has been heretofore carried as a liability rather than an asset.

Even the stockholders, at least, a great majority of them, in one California oil company listed on a California Exchange do not know that their concern has 100,000 acres in Texas,—much of it in the very heart of production. Only a few days ago a 4,000 barrel well came in within 1800 feet of one of that company's properties. In the face of this, the stock has stood almost stationary in price because not a dozen people know of the enormous additional values that have overnight been added to the company's wealth.

I shall be glad to give suggestions as to what California oil companies are most likely to benefit materially by the astounding oil findings in Texas and your request for such information will be promptly answered.

VENICE CANALS CONTRACT FILED

Storm Drains to be Laid and Streets Put In Federal Permit Needed for Water Outlet

War Department Engineer to Hold Hearing

The contract awarded by the Board of Public Works for filling in the canals at Venice yesterday was signed and filed with the board by R. A. Wattson, to whom the board awarded the contract. His bid and the price at which he agreed in his contract to do the work is $636,202.85. For this amount he will fill in the Venice canals, lay storm drains and then pave over the canals so that where canals now exist there will be public streets. The project is designated the Windward Avenue and Second Avenue Improvement District.

President Eldridge of the Board of Public Works cannot execute the contract, however, until the Federal government has given the city a a permit to turn the storm drain water from the canals into the ocean at Venice. The water from the canals now is handled through Ballona Creek and thence passes into the ocean at Playa del Rey. As the city proposes a new outlet for this storm water near Venice, a Federal permit is required. No difficulty is anticipated by the board in obtaining the permit. When this is obtained the contractor can start work.

The local district War Department engineer will hold a hearing in this city Tuesday on the question of granting the permit for the storm drain ocean outlet.

TESTIMONY CONCLUDED IN JOB ROW

Civil Service Commission to Rule Next Week in Power Gang Fight

Whether two union men, dropped from a line-gang of the water and power department after they are asserted to have quit their work in the middle of a shift, will be reinstated without loss of pay, will be determined late next week by the Civil Service Commission which concluded hearing testimony in the case yesterday.

The hearing was granted by the commissioners at the request of O. H. Hidden and John C. Ladd, linemen, who are said to have climbed down from the poles where they were stringing wires last October and to have demanded their pay.

The workmen in question contended before the commission, they did not quit their jobs as the bureau asserts, but simply asked to be transferred from that particular job. They asked the transfer, they testified before the commissioners, because the work they were doing was dangerous and proper safeguards had not been taken.

Yesterday's session of the Civil Service Commission was devoted to lengthy testimony and questioning to reveal the routine workings of the department in the handling of the men on line gangs. Both sides produced witnesses to show that construction would naturally be placed upon their actions and words when they left their posts.

Bureau witnesses, as well as those of the two men, testified that when a man asks for a transfer his time card bears a notation for him to report to the foreman's immediate superior and that when a man quits a job or is discharged, the card reads "last shift."

Witnesses were introduced by the men to show that the usual procedure of line-stringing gangs in the department does not provide for grounding reel-lines, which, they contend, is an essential safety element. Previous testimony in the case showed the line in question had been grounded.

The commission adjourned to take the matter under advisement and decision will be rendered after transcripts are prepared sometime next week.

Europe's Film Theater Crowds Not High Brow

European motion-picture audiences are indifferent because of the continued use of strong drink and a general lethargic attitude toward life, according to Dorothy Farnum, scenarist, who arrived yesterday on the Santa Fe Chief from a four months' tour of Europe with her husband, Maurice Barker, head of the Cinema Finance Company.

"Before this visit, I always thought European audiences were highbrow and that erudite touches overlooked here in a screen production would be greatly appreciated there," said Miss Farnum. "I found the contrary to be true, particularly in Italy, and I think I can safely say the vigor and vitality and mental alertness that constitute critical audiences are all in this country.

"The motion-picture theaters in most instances are simply huge drinking-places and the audiences stare indifferently at the films."

Miss Farnum wil start work at once on a new script at the Culver City studios of the M.-G.-M. organization.

TRADE SHOW ACTIVITIES IN FULL SWING

Talks and Demonstrations Resumed Regularly With Holidays Over

Activities at the Manufacturers' Exhibit, Southwest Building, 130 South Broadway, are in full swing again after the holidays, and the regular routine of lectures and talks has begun again.

Mrs. Mae Cummings, whose demonstrations of the Dangler range with Loraine oven control have attracted much attention, will assume charge tomorrow again, beginning at 1:30 p.m. on which occasion she will open her special cooking class. On Tuesday and Friday afternoons, Mrs. Mabelle (Chef) Wyman will hold her regular classes, at the same hour, and at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Mrs. Rose Waterman Harris will offer her lectures, with living models, on the "Body Beautiful." All of these are held in the food-demonstration halls, on the third floor, reached by elevators direct.

Thursdays at 2 p.m. Dr. Phillip M. Lovell, editor of "Care of the Body" in the Sunday magazine of The Times discourses on things making for health, and answers questions submitted to hostesses, who convey them to him. These health talks have attracted very large audiences and have proved very popular in recent weeks.

Hal Roach studios are installing a special exhibit on the main floor in the motion-picture section, illustrating the activities of "Our Gang" and other stars.

ARMY-NAVY PLAYGROUND IN USE SOON

City Acquires Acreage to Provide Recreation for Local Service Men

A great playground for joint use of Army and Navy as well as for community service has been acquired by the city through the courtesy of Lieut.-Col. W. O. Peace, Third Coast Artillery, commanding Fort MacArthur, who has favorably answered the request of the Los Angeles Playground and Recreation Department for use of ten acres of the parade ground.

Physical instruction work at the Army post for harbor defense has been light for some time, and no provision made for the supervised recreation of the men because of a lack of Congressional appropriation. This the playground department will provide.

That the enlisted men of the Navy be permitted to participate in the recreational programs is agreeable to Col. Peace, and the naval personnel will now have an adequate place for land sports and games. The playground department will maintain a director in charge.

Man Seized in Cafeteria Held on Grand Theft

J. W. Helbling, who was captured Thursday night in the Boos Brothers' Cafeteria, 648 South Broadway, after he had seized a money bag containing $500 and attempted to flee, yesterday was charged with attempt to commit grand theft in a complaint issued by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Judson.

Helbling, after his capture, told officers that he is a real-estate salesman and had been driven to crime by business reverses which made it impossible for him to provide for his family.

BIG ED DUDLEY PICKED TO ANNEX $10,000 OPEN

BY PAUL LOWRY

Although "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, who won the first annual $10,000 open, is out in front by a single stroke and looks "hot," I am going to stick by my original pick and name big Ed Dudley of Hollywood to walk off with the bacon and eggs today.

BOBBY CRUICKSHANK.

Ed is strong and hefty, has the ideal golfing temperament and is hitting his shots with a power, crispness and nonchalance that is refreshing. He can stand the gaff of thirty-six holes today better than anybody else in the tourney, in my estimation, with the possible exception of MacDonald Smith.

MacDonald Smith seems to be right on his game and, with a 70 yesterday, finds himself one stroke in back of Dudley and two strokes behind Cooper.

Big Ed and Mac Smith are as steady as a couple of eight-day clocks, and if the volatile Cooper gets off line today, these two will fight it out for the highest laurels. Smith is a veteran of many a tourney, but until the $10,000 open at El Caballero last year nobody in this territory ever heard of Dudley.

I didn't pay any attention to him either until Seth Strelinger of the boxing commission wheedled a nickel bet out of me last year. After I lost on big Ed "breaking," I have been investigating Ed's ability with the golf sticks ever since.

And the more I investigate the more firmly I am convinced that big Ed is the best golfer in the tourney. I didn't see Seth around yesterday, so there was no chance to get even, but I did see the new commissioner, Jim Woods, under escort of D. Scott Chisholm, the celebrated plaque presenter.

There was no getting a bet with Jim because he immediately sided right in with me when I began talking up big Ed, and he agreed again when I said something nice about MacDonald Smith, and declared I was right in asserting that Cooper would win if he shot a couple of more 69 rounds like he did yesterday.

Even R. D. Knickerbocker, the gentlemanly attorney who got shoved into the Wrigley Field fiasco in some way or other, refused to be inveigled into expressing any preference contrary to my convictions.

Everybody seemed so friendly about the matter that I finally gave up trying to find any contrary minds. I know there were a lot of them there, and Darsie L. Darsie told me he had a favorite, but somehow I never did fall for his judgment because he once shot a hole in one with his eyes closed and I never did believe in picking things blind, so I didn't pay any attention to who he said would win the frolic.

Along with a lot of other highbinders I paddled along back of Dudley on his last nine holes, and watched him overcome a 37 on the first nine with 34 on the last nine—two strokes under par.

This was two better than perfect figures on the home nine, representing birdies on the fourteenth and eighteenth holes. He rimmed the cup on the twelfth and sixteenth holes, so you can see for yourself

ARMY-NAVY GRID GAME MARKED OFF CALENDAR

ANNAPOLIS (Md.) Jan. 7. (AP)—The service classic, the Army-Navy football game, was wiped off the 1928 sport calendar today as the basis for the only amicable agreement that could be found in a conference of heads of the naval and military academies, upon the athletic relations controversy.

Announcement of the decision was made here by Commander H. G. Patrick, aide to Rear-Admiral Louis M. Nulton, superintendent of the naval academy, upon telephoned instructions of Admiral Nulton after he had conferred in Washington with Maj.-Gen. Edwin B. Winans, superintendent of the military academy at West Point.

Admiral Nulton's brief statement given out here emphasized the friendly fashion in which athletic relations between the two great service institutions were discussed, but said the two academy heads were unable to reach an agreement on the three-year eligibility rule and mutually agreed that the 1928 football game would not be played.

Commander Jonas H. Ingram, director of athletics at the naval academy, had pointed out earlier in the break when West Point authorities refused to be bound by the three-year eligibility rule, upon which the naval academy stood firm, that for the present only the 1928 football game was involved.

Navy and Army will meet on the basketball floor this winter and on the baseball diamond next spring and in track and tennis on schedules already under contract.

The next occasion when the views of the two academies on eligibility rules may clash will come after the Army-Navy basketball game at West Point February 25, next, when athletic directors prepare their schedules for next winter. Presumably West Point will be offered a contract containing the disputed three-year rule, the freshman rule and the one-year residence rule and the question of whether the break is to extend to other sports will then be open.

Commander Ingram today had nothing to add to the announcement from the superintendent of the academy, which he declared spoke for itself.

RABBIT PUNCHES

[illegible] RICKARD and Jimmy Dougherty are saying nasty things about one another [illegible] days. Dougherty is trying [illegible] George Godfrey recog[illegible] as the outstanding challenger for Gene Tunney's crown, [illegible] says the big black is [illegible] fighter he ever saw in [illegible] that there is no place [illegible] elimination ranks for [illegible] and that anyway Tunney won't fight a negro under [illegible] conditions.

"[illegible] you in the [illegible] and it is a negro [illegible] to drive you out." [illegible] is quoted as saying [illegible] to Rickard. [illegible] Godfrey is a clean-liv[illegible] American ex-sol[illegible] heavyweight [illegible].

[illegible] be glad to enter [illegible] in your so-called elimi[illegible] tournament if you [illegible] could be beaten. "I [illegible] of Joe Woodman [illegible] if he thought [illegible] could whip [illegible] and that you would be [illegible] to stage the match if [illegible] be licked."

[illegible] Dougherty charges [illegible] heavyweight situation [illegible] muddle and [illegible] is controlled by [illegible] Rickard the chief of the gang. He says it is common knowledge that Rickard's knowledge of fighters is limited. And so on, ad lib.

The upshot of it seems to be that Jim is bringing his ebony heavyweight to the Coast for a match with Paolino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper. Dougherty charges that Rickard is attempting to prevent the barnstorming tour of the Spanish heavyweight, but that the members of the latter's board of strategy are tired of being given the run-around by Rickard.

So it seems that "Col." Jack Doyle will stage the affair in his spacious arena some time next month, and we shall observe for ourselves the skill with which black Gawge can handle the Spaniard, who was brought to this country by Rickard to be

WATCH HIS SMOKE—HE'S OUT IN FRONT BY A STROKE

Behold "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, who won the first $10,000 open golf tourney, forced Tommy Armour into a play-off for the national crown last summer and with a brilliant 69 yesterday forged into the lead at Wilshire. The final two rounds of the Los Angeles classic will be played today, and "Lighthorse Harry" is one of the big favorites. [Photo by George Watson, Times staff photographer]

HARRY CLICKS OFF 69 TO PASS BRILLIANT FIELD

Ed Dudley's 143 Ranks Second at Halfway Mark; Mac Smith and Cruickshank Near Leaders

BY BILL WISE

Harry (Hurricane) Cooper shook a 69 from his bag at Wilshire yesterday to chalk up a 36-hole mark of 142 and slip into a one-stroke lead at the halfway post in the third annual $10,000 Los Angeles open golf championship.

Ed Dudley, youthful Hollywood Country Club professional, rode home a thirty-foot putt for a birdie 3 on eighteen to equal par with a 71 and is second in the most spirited competition west coast golfdom has ever known, with a two-lap card of 143.

Mac Smith

MacDonald Smith, veteran Great Neck (Long Island) stylist — twice California open champ — picked up the feel of the Wilshire layout yesterday and was rewarded with a 70. The distinguished golfing visitor, after a 74 his first time out Friday, is in third place with a two-day score of 144.

Bobby Cruickshank scored a 71 yesterday for a half-way mark of 147, in defense of the representative title he won at El Caballero last year, and will start the final thirty-six-hole grind this morning but three strokes behind the leaders—and for Bobby, the most commanding position in the field.

WATROUS TURNS IN 74

Al Watrous, 73 with a 9 on a par 3 hole Friday, fought hard for a 74 yesterday, while Tommy Armour, national open champ, tied for the lead with a 71 his first trip out, slipped up to a 77—and through the medium of enough bad breaks to ruin the disposition of even the king of United States golfers. Tommy smacked the back of a number of cups—but so did Watrous—and, in fact, every golfer in the field.

Armour labored under the additional handicap of an outgoing medal of 42—seven strokes over par. Tommy started losing strokes when his second rolled over the fifth green into what Tommy could easily have recognized as an "unplayable" lie. Armour used up three strokes getting back on the green but was apparently safe in his stride when he ran down a long putt, over a slippery green, for a six.

Trouble stalked Armour again on the sixth when he missed a short approach and caught a trap. He was again forced to accept a six. The short seventh also contributed to Tommy's downfall and he required five shots on the par-three unit. He slipped one over again with a five ont he eighth, but managed to ram down a par four on the ninth.

Watrous, one under fours after a perfect birdie four on the second, played from the tree-studded barranca guarding the bottle-necked fifth hole, but was safe with a five and was again one under when an unjust penalty resulted in a six on nine.

WATROUS PENALIZED STROKE

Championship golf courses generally ignore tree basins and Watrous's second trickled into the well-cultivated base of a small sapling. Watrous should have been permitted to drop from that particular basin—and all similar basins, without penalty, but the Los Angeles affair bears all the earmarks of a real championship—and the penalty was one stroke.

A gallery conservatively estimated at 3500 fans—still discussing the nine that Watrous marked up on the tenth Friday, assembled en masse—to watch the Grand Rapids professional play the hole yesterday. Al had every [illegible] in the world—nine of them [illegible]—to "guide" his tee shot home, and he never stroked a smoother mashie. The ball carried hole high, [illegible] feet from the flag and Watrous left himself a ten-inch putt for a par three.

Armour started his brilliant homeward journey with a birdie 3 on the tenth—slipped one over with a 5 on eleven—birdied twelve, parred the 150-yard thirteenth—watched his ball hit the cup and slip over fourteen in another birdie try and, after missing a short putt for a par 5 on sixteen, picked up a perfect par

San Mateo Poloists Clash With Midwick Country Club Riders Today at Alhamb

PERKINS AND BOESEKE TO CAPTAIN OPPOSITE TEAMS

Rival Mallet Stars to Meet Today in Second Contest of Season at Monterey Park Field

BY FRANK ROCHE

Arthur Perkins and his San Mateo riders will make a second attempt to lower the colors of the Midwick Country Club when they encounter a picked Midwick team in a special match game on the Monterey Park field this afternoon. Perkins's team went down to defeat Friday in the opening game of the season before a Midwick four captained by Eric Pedley.

Elmer Boeseke

The sensational playing of Neil McCarthy upset the dope in this contest and the San Mateo outfit was mowed under before they could get started. In today's clash, however, clash, Mateo players contend there will be a different story to be told when the last whistle is blown.

Perkins has a fine team which rates sixteen goals. On the squad are Willie Tevis, Jr., a cracking good player; Kenneth Walsh, a youngster, but a real comer; W. W. Crocker, another youngster, who is making a real name for himself in polo, and Perkins himself. Perkins is one of the greatest players in the game when he is right and in Friday's game he was far from being himself. Today, however, he may give a better performance.

The Midwick team opposing the San Mateo four today will be captained by Elmer Boeseke, Pacific Coast riding wizard. Boeseke will have Teddy Miller, Hal Roach and Howland Paddock on his squad today. Boeseke is an old rival of Perkins, and whenever the two collide on a polo field the fans are in for a thousand and one thrills. Elmer rides like the wind and takes all kinds of chances especially when the going is the toughest. Perkins relies on his backhand shots and his marvelous blocking for results.

RIVALS CLASHED LAST YEAR

Last year these two rivals met when Boeseke was playing with Santa Barbara and Perkins with Midwick. The game in which they opposed one another is still the talk of polo players and fans. It was the longest contest on record in this section of the country. Perkins's team finally won after eleven periods.

Today Boeseke, who is now with Midwick, plays against Perkins who has switched his polo interests to San Mateo. The contest should be worth going miles to see. The Midwick players on Boeseke's team are all well known to local fans. Hal Roach, the left-handed star; Teddy Miller, member of the Midwick Big Four, and Howland Paddock have all helped to make polo history at the local club.

The line-ups:

San Mateo		Midwick
Kenneth Walsh	No. 1	Hal Roach
W. W. Crocker	No. 2	Ted Miller
Arthur Perkins	No. 3	Elmer Boeseke
W. Tevis, Jr.	Back	Howland Paddock

DUDLEY PICKED TO ANNEX OPEN

that he was always up there putting for his birds.

There were a lot of features yesterday, but probab'y the freakiest of all was the 13 Joe Turnesa took on the sixteenth hole. This was so enormous that it even surpasses the 9 Al Watrous took on the tenth hole Friday

Al believed he had all high-score honors sewed up, but Joe, who, two years ago was only a stroke behind in the national championship, upset his calculations by playing back and forth across the barrancas at sixteen, requiring six in all before his little white pill came to rest on the green.

And it would have been so simple had Joe only played the barranca as it can be played in accordance with U.S.G.A. rules—as a water hazard—and lifted back with the penalty of a stroke.

He did that very thing when he came to the eighteenth green and found himself in another barranca, but it was just like closing the barn door after the horse has escaped.

That flurry of shots on sixteen eased him out of the last two laps today because only the low sixty-four scorers stay in, and Joe's 13 gave him an 84 and a 161 all told for the first thirty-six holes.

Joe's mental lapse in the gorges of sixteen was just like the quarterback who forgets the scoring play when he gets to the goal line and hasn't a Pop Warner on the bench to send in a fresh quarterback with the signal.

But, anyway, come on out to Wilshire today, and watch my boy, Ed Dudley, MacDonald Smith and Cooper fight it out. Bobby Cruickshank, who copped last year with a phenomenal last round of 68, may come through with another terrific outburst like that, but Bobby hasn't been going brilliantly enough lately to indicate he has that kind of a round in his system, although you never can tell what will happen in golf.

Following are the cards that bettered or equaled par during the first two rounds of play:

ILLINOIS WRESTLERS WIN

URBANA (Ill.) Jan. 7. (AP)—The Western Conference championship wrestling team of the University of Illinois defeated Missouri's wrestlers today, 24 to 3, in the first match of the year for the Illini.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER, BILL HENRY

WE REMARKED shortly after the New Year's Day game that we had stood for a lot of stuff from various alumni but that if anybody said Stanford's touchdown against Pitt was made on one of Pop Warner's scoring plays we were going to get annoyed. It stirred up the animals. You know, they have a way of looking upon Pop as a sort of a supersomething or other up at Stanford because he pulled them out of their long slump in 1924 with a remarkable last-minute rush to tie California, 20 to 20, after the Bears had been ahead, 20 to 6, with less than ten minutes to play.

On that celebrated occasion after the Bears made their last score, he yanked Mitchell and sent Solomon in at quarterback and a shower of passes, with Cuddeback starring, gave the Cards a tie. Shortly after that the Stanford alumni began whispering a story to the effect that when Pop sent Solomon in the game he gave him thirteen plays and told him that if he'd pull those thirteen plays in succession, he'd tie the score—and he did. We don't believe, personally, that Solomon or any other quarterback could remember thirteen plays and call them all in their right order, but there you are.

Anyhow, that convinced the Stanford boys that Pop could do anything. And, mind you, we don't believe that Pop has any superiors at handling his team from the bench. He seems to have an uncanny way of making the right substitution at the right time. But the trouble is that, having made this reputation for himself, Pop is now endowed by the nutty alumni who sprout from Stanford just as they sprout from all other institutions, with divine powers. No matter how badly Stanford fumbles or foozles a play, if a Stanford man picks the ball up and makes a gain on it, the'll tell you it wasn't an accident, it was one of Pop's cute bits of strategy.

For that reason we shuddered when Wilton grabbed the pill that Sims fumbled, and galloped across the line for the touchdown that tied the score for Stanford. We could just naturally see coming a great avalanche of inside dope from the wise guys who would tell us that Pop sent Lewis in to play quarterback with instructions to have Sims stop on the two-yard line and toss the ball back to Wilton. We served notice then and there that we didn't believe in Santy Claus—and we don't.

However, we'll say this. Pop is so darn smart and he has so thoroughly convinced everybody at Stanford that anything he orders them to do will work, that he could probably have told the Stanford team to try a place kick from their own twenty-yard line, and they'd have done it, and probably scored. All Pop has to do is to tell 'em to pull something or other and they get right out and do it because they believe Pop can't be wrong. That's the ideal spirit for a football team to have and a team that feels that way about its coach isn't going to lose many ball games—when he's there to send in a new quarterback.

The proprietor of this column is firmly convinced that modern football is too much a coach's game and not enough a player's game. In our estimation the ideal way to play the game would be to have the coaches teach the boys everything they know from Monday to Friday and then lock the coach up in the City Jail on Saturday so that the game will be a real test between the two teams and not be decided, as so many games are, by the better handling of the teams from one beanch or the other.

When we say this we're not accusing Warner or any other coach of illegal tactics. Under the present rules of football the coach is permitted to sit on the bench and direct his team's play to a degree, by means of substitutions, and the coach who doesn't do it isn't giving the college that pays him its money's worth. He's expected to do anything permitted by the rules.

But just the same, the system's wrong. We'd like to see a game played between the football team of Southern California and the football team of Stanford rather than see a contest of wits between Howard Jones and Pop Warner. However, we'll go out and watch 'em play regardless of whether we approve of the system or not. Football is our weakness—or one of 'em.

ELECTOR, FAMOUS NAG BOUGHT BY HANSON

SAN CLEMENTE, Jan. 7.—Elector, world-famous racing horse, valued at $25,000 by its former owner, H. H. Cotton, has just been purchased from Cotton by Ole Hanson, it was learned here today. Elector has won many purses at Tia Juana and other tracks.

WESTERN BOYS STAR ON PRO GRID SQUADS

Some of the best professional football players in the business today are Pacific Coast athletes. Wild Bill Kelley captained the Montana eleven in 1926 and was a frequent choice on All-American selections. He plays with Grange's club. Roy Baker formerly performed with the Trojans. Bradshaw never made an All-American team but he's been a riot from the instant he stepped into pro ranks. All three play at Wrigley Field this afternoon.

De Palma and Souders Meet in Duel Race

Ralph De Palma

Unless there is no truth at all in signs, Ralph De Palma, for years the outstanding star of the automobile racing game, and George Souders, youthful winner of the 1927 Indianapolis 500-mile race, will furnish the greatest speed duel in dirt-track history at Ascot Speedway next Sunday afternoon. They have been matched by Harlan Fengler for the best two out of three five-lap heats, after speedways all over the country had been attempting to get these two stars together.

The meeting of the veteran and the youngster was assured in Los Angeles because of the splendid condition of the Ascot oval, which will now permit maximum speed with a minimum of danger. More money was offered by a score of eastern tracks, but both pilots preferred to let speed conditions rather than financial inducements determine the site of the contest.

A rich money prize has been offered by Fengler and his Ascot associates, and it is reported that Bill White, manager of Souders, has wagered $2500 on the chances of the Purdue University youth. De Palma has for years made it a rule not to bet on events in which he is a participant.

Both pilots will be at the wheel of a Miller motor. Both are working night and day to get these crack racing creations in the finest condition for the three heats, which racing men agree will be the most grueling sprint ever staged at Ascot. De Palma's track strategy and years of racing experience will be pitted against the fire and dash of youth, coupled with the cold nerve which enables Souders to keep the throttle depressed all the way. Each of the contestants has predicted new records before the end of the event.

In addition to the match event, General Manager Fengler has scheduled a number of other speed combats that promise the most thrilling afternoon of racing in local dirt track history.

Two motor bike races of ten laps each will see Joe Paralli, national champion, defending his laurels against such competition as can be furnished by Bob Sarkegian, holder of many board and dirt track motorbike records; Miney Waln, one of the greatest bike pilots in the game; Jim Davis, Bill Church and many others. Scores of motor bike fans have been watching the tuning-up process during the week.

A ten-lap dash and a fifty-lap race for speedway cars is also listed. Babe Stapp, Louie Schneider, Fred Frame and others will go to the post in this event.

A Ford race has also been booked to go fifteen laps and the first two cars to finish in this event will be permitted to start in the fifty-lap race for speedway cars.

The famous Ascot feature—the Italian helmet dash—will also be renewed Sunday, with the massive gold crown going to the pilot who makes the fastest lap in the time trials. Only speedway cars are eligible for this event.

Danny Kramer Tops Program at Pasadena

Danny Kramer, one of the finest little featherweights that ever stepped into a California ring, will endeavor to show local fight fans that he has really come back when he tackles Marcelino Lomeli in the ten-round feature arranged for the Pasadena Arena Thursday night by Manager Morrie Cohan. Kramer is a veteran of the old four-round days at Vernon and he licked the best boys in his class. Lomeli is a newcomer, but he has made quite a hit at Pasadena and other clubs with his fighting.

These two lads, the veteran on the way back and the youth on his way up, should give the fans quite a thrill Thursday night when they clash. Lomeli gets quite an opportunity when he meets Kramer. If he can lick Danny he will get in the big shots at the ranking clubs. Kramer, however, is in the best of shape and that means it will be a tough job for anybody to beat him. Only a month ago he was in the East, where he battled a boy like Red Chapman. Danny lost his last fight at Pasadena on an unintentional foul. The six-round semi-wind-up will bring together Billy Clarke and Bobby Whitman, two welterweights. There are three other bouts on the card.

TROJAN TRACKMEN START WORK FOR TOUGH SEASON

Trojan track hopefuls already are starting work on Bovard Field, with the hardest schedule in recent years staring them in the face. Gwynn Wilson, graduate manager of the Trojan forces, has carded five big dual meets for the Cardinal and Gold performers in addition to the I.C.A.A.A.A., Pacific Coast Conference, Olympic tryouts, and the A.A.U. affairs.

The big dual meet of the season probably will be the Stanford affair, which is scheduled for the Coliseum March 31, but another feature event will be the appearance of the University of Illinois runners here on April 7. The other dual meets are with California, the Olympic Club, and the L.A.A.C.

The complete schedule to date is as follows:

March 3. A.A.U. relays.
March 17. Olympic Club (tentative) here.
March 24. Open.
March 31. Stanford here.
April 7. Illinois here.
April 14. California at Berkeley.
April 21. A.A.U. championships.
April 28. Open.
May 5. Open.
May 12. L.A.A.C. at Coliseum.
May 19. Open.
May 25-26. I.C.A.A.A.A. championships at Cambridge.
June 1-2. Pacific Coast championships at Missoula.
June 9. Open.
June 16. Olympic tryouts at Coliseum.

STRONG IN SPRINTS

The Trojans this year will be exceptionally strong in some events and woefully weak in others. In the sprints, Coach Dean Cromwell will have Charley Borah, Weldon Draper and Paul Borgfeld. Borah, of course, is good for ten points in almost any meet. He hasn't started training yet, due to a recent attack of a slight illness, but intends to start work at once. Draper was laid up with a bad leg all last season, and did not perform in the Trojan colors. He is ready for a big year. This is Borgfeld's first year on the varsity.

In the quarter Chink Sauers and Bruce Smith of last year's squad are both back, with Brick Maxwell and Lee Bastajian coming up from the frosh as the best prospects. Ed Gloege and Vose Adams are both back in the half. Bryce Schurr, last year's two-miler, may try the shorter event this season.

The return of Chesley Unruh gives the Trojans a bit of hope in the mile event. Unruh took a leave of absence from the university last semester, but intends to reregister in February, and is doing a bit of private working out until he can officially join the squad. Ellsworth Patterson of last year's frosh and Jim Hussey will assist Unruh.

The Trojan two-milers look better than in some years with Warren Woodruff occupying the spotlight. Woodruff recently demonstrated himself to be in shape when he won an up-and-down two-mile cross-country event in close to ten minutes. He will be aided by Gordon Smith and Blake Hansen.

The hurdles look especially strong. Cromwell will have Clif Reynolds, Charley Webber, Alex Graham, Jimmy Payne and Duncan Powers. That's just a starter. The rumor persists that Mort Kaer will return to the university next semester, and the Red Bluff Terror has another year of track eligibility if he cares to utilize it. Jess Mortenson, at present functioning on the basketball team, is a hurdler of some ability.

FIELD EVENTS WEAK

With the exception of the pole vault, the field events are all weak. In the aerial event Cromwell has Capt. Lee Barnes, Jack Williams and Bill Hubbard, all three capable of clearing thirteen feet or better.

In the high jump Henry Coggeshall and Al Bowen will be the only veterans of any ability. Reynolds and Jesse Hill will be the hopefuls in the broad jump. Jim Stewart will be the sole Trojan representative in the weight events, and Edwin Talmadge is the only javelin-tosser of any ability to yet appear for the squad.

Stanford again looms as the strongest team on the coast. Coach "Dink" Templeton lost four or five men from various events, but in every case, with the exception of Biff Hoffman, he already has men who are doing better than the graduates. And to replace Hoffman he has this husky Krenz youth, who won the national A.A.U. shot-put event. Fleishhacker, Forster, Way and Evans all are back in the weights.

Reports from the East indicate that the Illinois team, which has won something like nine Big Ten championships in the past fifteen or twenty years, has another great team in the making. The announcement of the trip to the Coast has brought forth a record turnout of athletes.

STUDIO CLEANERS WIN

The Studio Cleaners cleaned up Friday night on the Alhambra Athletic cagers, 33 to 26. The Cleaners have only lost one game this season and that was to the Alhambra club early in the season. They claim to have one of the best casaba outfits in the Southland, having a victory over the fast Hollywood Athletic Club five.

built up as a foe for Tunney. In the past year Godfrey has knocked over eighteen opponents, none of whom lasted longer than four rounds. Regardless of how you rate black Gawge, this is exactly the way in which Jack Dempsey acquired his reputation as a mighty hitter.

Dougherty, a notoriously bad speller and mispronouncer of names, has just dropped me a letter, in which he refers to Tex Rickard as his best press agent, and says the promoter by his tactics is making Godfrey more popular than Tunney. The effervescent "Baron of Leiperville" writes as follows:

"I am going to give Rickard plenty of h--l, doing all he can to stop Polonica (Uzcudun) from coming to the Coast. I am making a sacrifice for Doyle for the purpose of getting Polonica in the ring. If Doyle doesn't appreciate it and tie up Polonica and Godfrey at once he is going to lose one of the best houses he ever had, as Godfrey is a better attraction than the champion and is recognized as the champion here in the East."

FISH AND GAME BOARD PRAISE RAINBOW CLUB

Some very high compliments were paid to Leigh Garnsey, manager of the Rainbow Angling Club, last week by George B. Clarkson, Southern California member of the State Fish and Game Commission. Clarkson, accompanied by Eugene D. Bennett, visited the club and told Garnsey that the crop of trout was in a very healthy state and that the club in general was run in a very satisfactory manner.

of the pigskin and can kick out of bounds practically anywhere along the sidelines. "Bo" Molenda, the former Michigan battering-ram, will play fullback for Grange.

The linemen are Flaherty and Lawson, ends; Owens and Earpe, tackles; Michalski and Kramer, guards, and McArthur, center. The forward wall averages 220 pounds from tackle to tackle.

Wilson's team is strictly a Pacific Coast outfit and so far has managed to uphold the standard of football as it is played in these parts. "Rabbit" Bradshaw, the terror of all opposition, will be seen at quarterback, and our guess is that Jimmy will steal the show again today just as he did a year ago in several games here. Red Strader is Wilson's running mate at halfback, with Ted Bucklin, formerly of Idaho, at full.

On the line, Reed of Oregon and Vesser of Idaho are the ends, Newmeyer of California and Erickson of Washington the tackles; Abe Wilson of Washington and Carey of California the guards, and Stephens of Idaho the center. Red Badgro of U.S.C. is used at end also. Wild Bill Kelly, former Montana riot, is one of Wilson's backfield aces.

Bears Favor Annual Post Season Game

BERKELEY, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Possibility that the University of California will establish the New Year's post-season game as an institution stood out today following the unqualified success of the contest December 31, 1927, with the University of Pennsylvania, in which the Golden Bears emerged victorious, 27-13. With the last regularly scheduled pigskin scrap occurring the latter part of November in the "big game" with Stanford, the lapse between this time and the opening of the spring semester of school is easily big enough to allow for at least one major sports event, athletic authorities at the university believe.

Chats on Fish & Game

By E. D. MARX GREENE
Former Executive Officer
California Fish and Game Commission

As shown in its previous article, the draught, therefore, on our fish and game has increased beyond all conception. The balance of nature has been so upset that man-made aids, such as game farming and fish planting, cannot keep pace with the demand. Nature also has been against us. Drought conditions and floods have taken their toll. Flooded areas where formerly birds might breed and rest have now been drained; conversely, dry areas have been flooded. Power and irrigation projects dry our streams and place artificial barriers to stop the natural run of fish to the spawning grounds. The complexities of modern civilization have combined to multiply our difficulties.

BEST METHODS

It will be the scope of these articles to attempt to show the most advanced methods now being inaugurated throughout the country to restore our fish and game. I shall treat of the control measures necessary. For example, partial and totally closed seasons; bag limits; size limits; sex protection; methods of capture; game refuges; fish refuges; predatory animal control; prohibition of sale; game farming; importation of new species; building up native stock; fish rescue work; and last, but not least, education and co-operation.

The fortunate thing about all conservation laws concerning fish and game is that they are founded upon the legal principle that the fish and game belong to the people of each State in their sovereign capacity. Each Legislature can, therefore, make such laws as are necessary to perpetuate its own wild life.

THE LAW

No citizen ever, individually, acquires title to fish or game except upon the terms laid down by the State. A man may not hunt, even upon his own land, without permission from the State. If possession of a certain animal is forbidden in a State, it may not be imported from another State where its taking is legal. Building up from that principle we all, as citizens and joint owners of all fish and game, are vitally interested in its propagation and protection. This, I think, explains the newly awakened interest in conservation. He who illegally takes fish and game injures his fellow-citizens and all posterity.

America can well feel proud of her sons rallying to the flag of conservation.

Mr. Greene will answer questions on any fish and game topic. Address him Care Sports Editor, this paper, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope. The reply will be either direct or in this column.

College Basketball and Track Activities Move Into Sporting Spotlight

BY WALTER ECKERSALL

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—With the 1927 football season a matter of history interest in intercollegiate athletes is now centering around basketball and other lines of indoor activity.

Chief among these is track-and-field athletics. Unusual interest will be shown this winter and spring in this branch of sport because of the Olympic Games which will be held this summer in Holland. Practically every athlete who competes this winter and spring will have his mind set on winning a place on the American team.

Coaches are alive to the fact that some honor reflects upon them if their athletes are chosen. Consequently thye will bend every effort to develop men who will be efficient in their specialties. In many cases this process of development already has started and will be carried through the annual sectional intercollegiate meets held in May and June.

America has been extremely successful in Olympic track and field competition. In the past we have sent some sterling athletes to these contests and they contributed their quota of points to the American total regardless of the opposition or any unforeseen handicaps.

Following a custom established several years ago, sectional tryouts will be held in all divisions of the A.A.U. The American Olympic committee may elect to permit the sectional intercollegiates to the tryouts for certain groups of athletes. Others, the smaller colleges especially, may have to compete in the A.A.U. tryouts to gain recognition.

The national A.A.U. outdoor championships, however, will be the final tests. This event will be held in the East a week or so before the American team is scheduled to sail for Holland. Athletes then selected will remain in training in the East.

Colleges and universities will be compelled to contribute most of the athletes. The A.A.U. has many certain point winners in its ranks but the university stars will supply the talent which goes toward the make-up of a well-balanced team and will be relied upon to pick up the points offered for positions other than first places.

The usual number of indoor meets will be held during the winter. In the East large invitation and open affairs will be held in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The western indoor conference meet will be held at Iowa City and the University of Illinois will stage its relay carnival in the Illini Armory. The Illinois A.C. will conduct a set of open handicap games in Chicago.

The Missouri Valley indoor conference championship meet will be held in Kansas City and a number of the athletes of the section will compete in the Illinois relays. On the Coast the athletes are out of doors practically the year around and always are in good condition.

Charley Paddock of Los Angeles A. C., has stated he again will try for the American team and intends to start light training before the end of the month. Charley asserts he has lost none of his old-time speed.

The outdoor relays will be the final tests for the sectional tryouts. Among the relays announced for this spring will be those of Kansas, Drake, Pennsylvania, Ohio State, Texas and Rice Institute. In the past these sets of relays generally have uncovered athletes who later have broken records or proved reliable point winners.

The American Olympic track team will be directed by Lawson Robertson, coach of Pennsylvania. Robertson has acted in a similar position in other years and has proven a capable coach. He has been connected with the game as competitor and coach for years.

With university, college and A.A.U. athletes now in active training the American Olympic committee will make known its plans as fast as they are perfected. The process of raising a fund by popular subscription to defray all expenses of the American team will be made known in the near future and a committee delegated to take charge of this work.

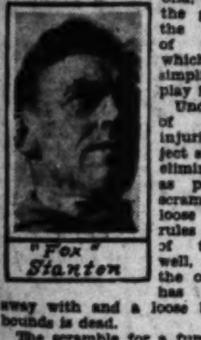
FOOTBALL RULES IN NEED OF SIMPLIFYING, SAYS STANTON

BY W. L. "FOX" STANTON
Head Coach California Institute of Technology

Changes in the rules should keep in mind two points: first, the elimination of unnecessary injuries; second, simplifying the game from the standpoint of the rules, which means simplifying the play itself.



"Fox" Stanton

Under the head of unnecessary injuries the object should be to eliminate as far as possible the scrambling for a loose ball. The rules take care of this fairly well, now that the onside kick has been done away with and a loose ball out of bounds is dead.

The scramble for a fumble on the field of play still exists and should exist so long as there are fumbles.

The simplification of rules and the game is a present need. Last year's lateral pass rules introduced a complication as to what and when is a lateral pass and when is a lateral pass a fumble.

CALLED PASS A FUMBLE

In the Pomona-Caltech game in the second half wiht the score even, the referee called a short attempt at a lateral pass a fumble, giving the ball to the opposing team within short scoring distance. The decision may have been the turning point of the game for a score almost immediately followed.

Under the present rule the decision was in error. But the rule of former years, or lack of rule covering it, would have called such a play a fumble. Such is also a common sense interpretation, as the ball was being fed directly from one back to another when fumbled.

The rule defining a lateral pass should read that a ball so fed by one player (not the center) to another without the ball being momentarily in the air should be declared a fumble if dropped.

I doubt the wisdom of the need of any lateral pass rule if the pass is worked or attempted from scrimmage. Teams who have in other years used the lateral pass more or less successfully have made some of their best gains after the ball had been picked up off the ground. Now the ball is dead when it hits the ground with always a loss to the offensive team.

The present ruling seems to have been made to encourage the use of the lateral pass. It does so only when a team attempts a lateral pass on receiving a kick-off or when receiving a punt. The opportunity for these two possible methods of passing are very limited and, therefore hardly justify complicating the rules to encourage them.

The placing of the goal posts on the end line instead of the goal line seems good because it eliminates the possibility of injury. It need not eliminate tries for goal from scrimmage. If the goal posts are ten yards farther away then the try should be made ten yards closer. The trouble now is that teams expect to try for a goal at the same old distance. When fourth down finds them on the ten or fifteen yard line they forward pass or continue their running game with the chance against them. The Caltech-San Diego game was won this year by kicking a goal under these conditions.

TECH NEXT ON POMONA LLEGE COURT SCHEDULE

Pomona has six games on its schedule this year, meeting every team in the conference. Right now, it looks as though the struggle for the championship rests between Whittier, the perennial challengers, and Occidental. Oxy has placed a strong team in the race this season and should be able to give the Poets a great run. Pomona may break in on these squads somewhere, but should be only an underdog when they clash.

The game with Tech will be the first real test of the season. La Verne was strong, but it will remain for the hardy Engineers to produce the real workout of the year. If Pomona gets past that team, Coach Heath can feel pretty certain of finishing somewhere near the top in the standings. About the only method of comparing scores on the teams is the fact that both played the U.C.L.A. Bruins and were defeated by the same lop-sided score.

BAY LOOP QUINTETS TO CLASH

Season Opens Friday With Three Games on Tap; Close Race Expected

Ending several weeks of good, stiff practice, the Bay League basketball season will officially open Friday, the 13th inst., for varsity and lightweight teams. The Class C's and D's, the real little boys, will tangle on Thursday.

Amid fan predictions galore, the probable title - winners have been picked and repicked, but the winning squad will probably have a tough time battling its way to the top. Drawing their conclusions from the early season dope, the fans have classed Huntington Park, Woodrow Wilson and Redondo as the leading candidates for the mug, with Venice and Santa Monica as "dark horses."

Huntington Park, which was runner-up for the State title last season, will have two returning letter men upon which to base their claims. Things may be changed a little when the Parkers travel to Redondo in the first game.

Woodrow Wilson was just breaking into the Bay League when the cage sport rolled around last year, but put out a pretty tough team at that. Four letter men are reporting for practice.

January 13—Santa Monica at Inglewood, San Pedro at Compton, Huntington Park at Redondo, Woodrow Wilson at Venice.

January 20—Santa Monica at San Pedro, Inglewood at Compton, Redondo at Venice, Woodrow Wilson at Huntington Park.

January 27—Compton at Santa Monica, Venice at Huntington Park, San Pedro at Inglewood, Redondo at Woodrow Wilson.

February 3—Huntington Park at Santa Monica, Compton at Venice, Redondo at San Pedro, Woodrow Wilson at Inglewood.

February 10—Venice at Santa Monica, Huntington Park at Compton, Redondo at Inglewood, San Pedro at Woodrow Wilson.

February 17—Compton at Redondo, Inglewood at Venice, Huntington Park at San Pedro, Woodrow Wilson at Santa Monica.

JAYSEE CAGERS CLASH

Pasadena and Long Beach Favored in Coming Race for Basketball Championship

The opening of the Southern California Junior College Conference basketball season on the 14th inst. from all present indications, will find Long Beach and Pasadena installed as heavy favorites to annex the championship. San Bernardino and Compton are strong contenders, and may finish high. Glendale and San Bernardino are rated as "dark horses," while Riverside, Chaffey and Citrus are apparently weak this year.

The league is divided into two parts, the western and the eastern. The western section includes Compton, Fullerton, Glendale, Long Beach, Santa Ana and Pasadena. The eastern division is composed of Riverside, Chaffey, San Bernardino, Citrus and Pomona junior colleges. The two winners of these divisions will play off on February 18, with the winner playing the champions of the southern division composed of Brawley and El Centro junior colleges, for the Southern California junior college championship.

The southern division, composed of the junior colleges at Brawley and El Centro, will play a schedule of two-best-of-three games between themselves, to select the team to play the winner of the western-eastern playoff. Brawley seems to be the pick of the two teams, but being traditional rivals, the dope bucket can be easily upset.

The opening games on the 14th inst., find Compton playing Fullerton J. C., Glendale engaging Long Beach, and Santa Ana opposing Pasadena Junior College. Riverside will journey to Chaffey and San Bernardino will oppose Citrus at Citrus. Pomona Junior College draws a bye. The feature attraction of the opening games should be the Glendale-Long Beach battle. Long Beach has been concentrating on basketball ever since the beginning of the school year, not being able to edge in on the football schedule of the junior colleges this year. Glendale, on the other hand, is an unknown quantity, but bids fair to establish itself as the league dark horse. This meeting should be the only decisive game of the first week's schedule, as not much opposition is expected to be afforded Pasadena, Compton and San Bernardino in their tilts with their respective opponents, Santa Ana, Fullerton and Citrus.

The schedule has been well arranged, in that Pasadena and Long Beach, the two favorites, do not meet until the last game of the season, February 11. Long Beach has the easiest schedule of the loop, having possible "weak sisters" interspersed between the hard games. They start off with Glendale, on their home floor, quite an advantage in the Long Beach gym, and then take on Fullerton, a probable weak team, also on their home floor. On January 28, Long Beach takes on Compton at Compton, and next has a doped-to-be-easy game with Santa Ana. Then comes the clash with Pasadena at Long Beach, to wind up the western schedule. Contrasted with that, Compton seems to have drawn a hard schedule, meeting in succession Long Beach, Pasadena and Glendale. However, these games come at the end of the season, which may be of some advantage to Compton. The schedule follows:

JANUARY 14

Western—Compton at Fullerton, Glendale at Long Beach, Santa Ana at Pasadena.

Eastern—Riverside at Chaffey, San Bernardino at Citrus, Pomona, bye.

JANUARY 21

Western—Compton at Santa Ana, Fullerton at Long Beach, Pasadena at Glendale.

Eastern—Chaffey at Pomona, Citrus at Riverside, San Bernardino, bye.

JANUARY 28

Western—Long Beach at Compton, Fullerton at Pasadena, Santa Ana at Glendale.

Eastern—Citrus at Chaffey, Pomona at San Bernardino, Riverside, bye.

FEBRUARY 4

Western—Glendale at Fullerton, Long Beach at Santa Ana, Pasadena at Compton.

Eastern—Riverside at Pomona, Chaffey at San Bernardino, Citrus, bye.

FEBRUARY 11

Western—Glendale at Compton, Fullerton at Santa Ana, Pasadena at Long Beach.

Eastern—Pomona at Citrus, San Bernardino at Riverside, Chaffey, bye.

Sammy Baker Makes First Start of New Year in Bout With Long at Olympic Tu

NEGRO FIGHTER FACES SOLDIER

Ex-Top Kick Renews Career After Long Layoff

Shows Confidence in Taking Match With Charley

Omaha Battler Has Two Wins Over Bert Colima

Sergt. Sammy Baker has picked out a rough playmate to start off the new year. He meets Charley Long, black middleweight, at the Olympic next Tuesday night.

HAYDEN WADHAMS

The fact that Baker is renewing ring work after a long lay-off and that he is giving away weight to the black fighter shows what confidence the Sergeant has in himself.

Long has established himself as the "bad man of the ring" by his knockout of Bert Colima and scoring a slashing victory in a rematch. The second fight proved the first was no fluke.

"If I can't knock a fellow like Long out in a few rounds, then I ought not to be thinking about getting in the ring with Ace Hudkins and Joe Dundee," says Baker.

"Long will never be able to fight me in the clinches and he can't fight much at long range. That's the way I figure him."

HUDKINS BEHIND LONG

Clyde Hudkins, who has recently blossomed out with a black army of fighters which includes Jack Thompson, Harry Wills and Long, is using Long as a buffer for Brother Ace, it is said.

While a third Baker-Hudkins fight will draw a lot of money wherever it is staged, there is some strong talk going around that the Wildcat would just as soon not meet the Sergeant again.

Baker knocked Hudkins out in New York and in the return match here, which drew $93,000, at Wrigley Field, Ace evened the score by whipping Sammy. Both were terrific encounters.

Although Hudkins got the decision here, he paid dearly. Such fights shorten one's ring days. Since Baker has no title, Hudkins would rather take his chances against Dundee.

BIG THREE OF WELTERS

As they now stand, Hudkins, Baker and Dundee are the big three of the welters. If they fight it out this summer, either Hudkins or Baker is very likely to be wearing the welterweight crown. Some rate Baker over Hudkins. Some like the Wildcat over the army boy.

Long may or may not prove to be the buffer. But, in addition to his victories over Colima, he has boxed Dave Shade a draw and whipped Frankie Schoell, Morrie Schlaifer, Allentown Joe Gans and Red Uhlan.

Baker made himself a "home" in California by stopping Hudkins in New York and knocking out Mushy Callahan in Chicago before coming west.

By kayoing our two best cards, he was probably the "hottest" attraction that ever came to Los Angeles.

WATTERS BOXES FERNANDEZ

Mike Watters and Roberto Fernandez, junior lightweights, will box the semi-wind-up on the supporting card for the Baker-Long match.

Fernandez is a Mexican boy who rivals Dario Barron for honors in the local colony. He can hit and he is flashy.

Watters has become one of the busiest fighters in California since he turned professional. He gets more offers than he can fill as a main-event attraction to the smaller clubs. He and Fernandez should make a sizzling scrap.

Louis Andrews and Billy Blake box the special event. The two fours are Bobby Corbett vs. Charley Samms and Al Neff vs. Willie Fausto.

Baker and Long meet at catchweights.

WHEN FIGHTS WERE FIGHTS

THE FAMOUS KID LAVIGNE'S MEMOIRS OF A SAVAGE RING

VI.—THE KID MEETS JOE WALCOTT

BY GEORGE (KID) LAVIGNE

Former lightweight champion of the world, whose many victories included two over Joe Walcott and one over England's famous champion, Dick Burge.

(As Told to E. P. Rucker)

[Copyright, 1928, in all countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.]

The greatest welterweight of all time was Joe Walcott, known as "the Barbadoes Demon," and "the Giant Killer." He gave me the two hardest battles of my life. Walcott was a terror to the men of his class. Welterweights avoided him like poison. Even Tommy Ryan, himself a great welter champion, couldn't be bribed or coaxed into a match with Walcott.

A ferocious fighter, fast, cruel, almost impossible to hurt, a terrific, two-handed puncher, Walcott was one of the most formidable men at any weight that ever beat down a foe.

KID LAVIGNE

Walcott was a stable-mate of Tom Sharkey under the management of Tom O'Rourke, when the sailor was at the top of his form as a heavyweight. Walcott and Sharkey frequently put on the gloves together in training. I have heard O'Rourke say he never was able to tell which would win in a real fight.

When it became known that Sam Fitzpatrick had matched me with Walcott, even my warmest admirers shook their heads in dismay.

DYNAMITE IN SMALL PACKAGE

Imagine a 140-pound man, only 5ft. 1in. tall, meeting and beating into helplessness such powerful, big fellows as Joe Choynski, "Australian Jimmy" Ryan, Dick O'Brien, Dan Creedon, "Kid" Carter, "Wild Bill" Hanrahan, Jack Bonner and George Gardner, all light-heavyweights. Walcott slaughtered them.

It was not thought within the bounds of reason for so great a fighter to be beaten by a lightweight.

Such a scourge was Walcott that finally it became impossible for his manager to get even the big fellows to meet him. O'Rourke had challenged "Kid" McCoy, Tommy Ryan and "Mysterious Billy" Smith until he got tired.

In 1895, O'Rourke, in desperation, issued a challenge to the lightweights, Jack McAuliffe or "Kid" Lavigne preferred.

O'Rourke offered to bring Walcott in at 133 pounds and to wager $1000 to $500 that the colored fighter would stop any man at that weight in fifteen rounds.

McAuliffe, still the champion, ignored the challenge. When I called Fitz's attention to it, he snorted, "to hell with that guy—we'll let Mister Walcott alone."

INSISTS ON MEETING WALCOTT

But I insisted I was afraid of no man at my weight. I urged Sam to make the match.

The next day Fitzpatrick and Phil Dwyer met O'Rourke on Broadway.

"What's all this stuff about that fellow of yours doing thirty-three?" said Fitz.

"No fake about that," replied O'Rourke. "Walcott can make thirty-three and be strong enough to murder all the lightweights in one night."

"You must be going to cook him into condition," said Sam. "How long do you need to boil him?"

"Oh, five or six weeks'll be plenty," was the answer.

A meeting was arranged at the Gilsey House, and articles were signed in the presence of the two managers, Al Smith (not the New York Governor,) Jerry Dunn, and Howard Hackett, sporting writer on the New York World.

KNOCKOUT OR FORFEIT

The agreement stipulated that Walcott had to knock me out in fifteen rounds or forfeit the entire purse.

It will perhaps amaze many old-timers when I record that Walcott and I tipped the scales at exactly 131½ each at 3 o'clock the day of the fight.

We met December 2, 1895, at Maspeth, L. I. The betting was heavy. Odds were eight to five Walcott would stop me. My friends couldn't resist the temptation of those odds, and they got down their money in chunks. For a time the fight arena looked like the big betting sheds at Sheepshead Bay.

When the gong sent Walcott and me tearing in, I had a new experience in fighting. Never had I met such a ferocious attack as that stumpy black boy cut loose. His muscular body seemed to grow in size and power as he hooked and swung at me, seemingly determined to get it over in the first round.

"DEMON'S" SAVAGE ATTACK

From a newspaper description in my scrap-book I quote:

"The whole house was bewildered by the swiftness and savagery of Walcott's attack. It seemed that Lavigne would go under in the very first round, but he clinched and for a brief second recovered sufficiently to ward off the demon's terrific body blows.

"In the breakaways Walcott landed several swinging blows on the head, and just as time was called, Lavigne ducked a straight left for the jaw that surely would have knocked him through the ropes had it reached the spot."

As I walked to my corner after that fearful round I realized that I would need all my superhuman stamina and capacity to take punishment.

"Better let him set the pace for a few rounds," whispered Fitzpatrick anxiously.

"I don't see what else I can do," I answered. "He surely is doing it up grand."

"Fight for the body," advised Sam.

That, also, was all I could do, for Walcott had practically no neck, and when he pulled down his bullet head under his huge shoulders, there was little target to shoot at above.

(Next—The Killing Pace Set by Walcott.)

BILL HOLMAN LEADING HOLLYWOOD SQUASHER

Bill Holman, former Hollywood Athletic Club squash champion, won his way to the top of the squash chart, yesterday, when he won two out of three games from Leslie Klawiter, the national junior A.A.U. squash champion by the scores of 15-21, 21-15, 21-15.

The former club champion lost the first game, but came back in the next two and showed a spectacular brand of squash to win the highest honors at the club.

Holman is president of the Southern California squash league and meets with officers of that league tonight to work out ways and means of raising several thousand dollars to send a squash team east on an exhibition tour.

ZORILLA MEETS PONCE AT WILMINGTON BOWL

Generally regarded as two of the outstanding attractions of the harbor section, Mexican Kid Ponce, San Pedro's contender for featherweight honors, and Santiago Zorilla, San Blas Indian, clash in a return engagement on Wednesday night at the Wilmington Bowl. The coming fight marks their third. Both previous bouts were fast and close, with Zorilla acclaimed the winner by a shade.

Zorilla defeated Midget Mike O'Dowd in his last Wilmington appearance, while Ponce won seven out of ten rounds from Dixie La Hood, defeating Hood by a much wider margin than did Zorilla, who faced La Hood two weeks following the latter's bout with Ponce.

Harold Brown, popular member of the Hollywood Athletic Club, and manager of the basketball team, will be the guest of honor Thursday night at the Film City club when the Tank Gang, an organization in the club, honors Brown with a huge banquet. Brown announced several days ago that he and pretty Miss Lois Johnson, former Manual Arts High School girl, would get married next month.

Before coming to Los Angeles Brown attended the University of Minnesota. He is now a big sand and gravel man of Hollywood.

KING TUT SUSPENDED BY ATHLETIC BOARD

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—King Tut, whose name outside the squared arena is Henry Tuttle, has been suspended by the State Athletic Commission for one month for fouling his opponent in the New Year's bout at San Francisco. The suspension was announced today by Walter A. Yarwood, secretary.

There also were several other suspensions ordered by the commission as follows:

Walter Still, Sacramento, one month, fouling.

Michael Siegel and Johnny Burns, Oakland, indefinitely, disorderly conduct; B. F. Toth, Santa Rosa, indefinitely, in custody; Eugene Hollenbeck, Placerville, two months, nonappearance, and Edward Manning, one month, fouling.

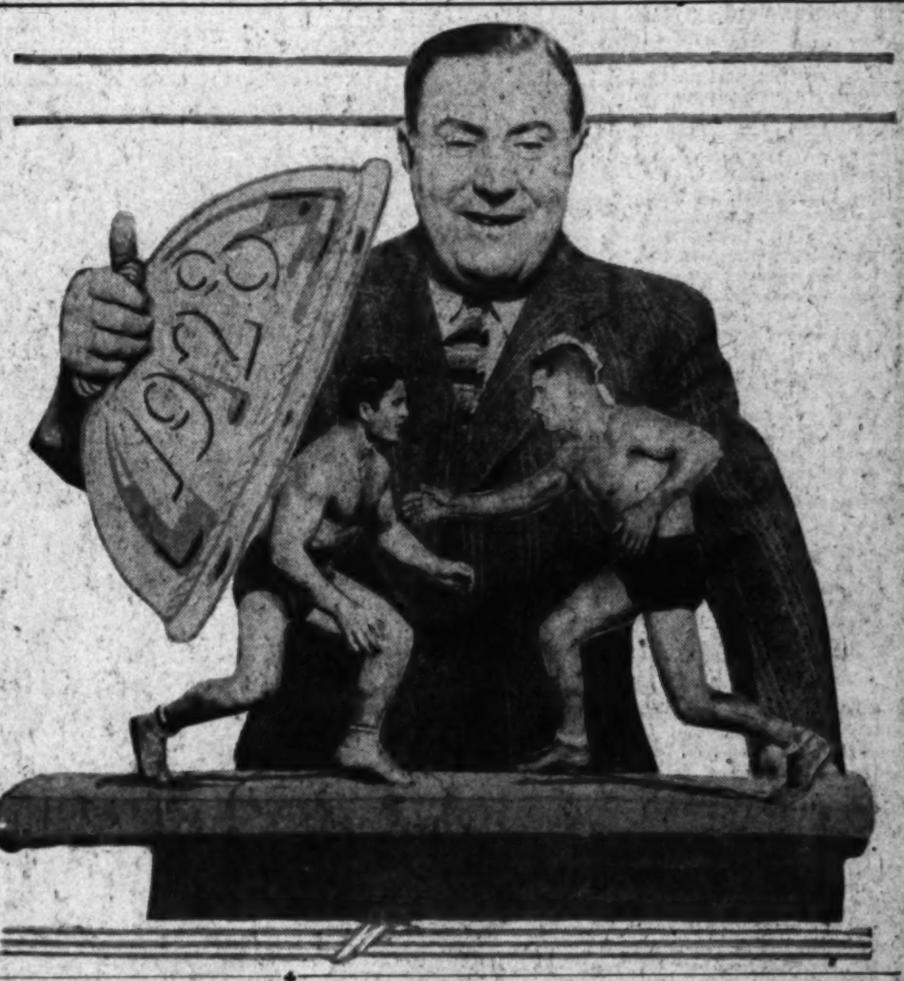
HOLLYWOOD GYM TEAM HOLDS ANNUAL DINNER

Bob Howard's Hollywood Athletic Club men's gym team will hold their annual banquet dinner next Wednesday night. Howard is working on a plan to hold the club's first boxing smoker that night. Tom Gallery, boxing commissioner, will decide officially tomorrow night when he meets with his boxing commission.

Tom Elliott, the Pacific Coast heavyweight champion, will feature the show and will be pitted against the best local boy Howard can sign up.

THEY TILT THE LID ON 1928 WRESTLING

"Carnation Lou" Daro will present Jim Londos, left, and Pete Sauer in his first mat offering of the new year at the Olympic Wednesday night. They will clash in the two-hour feature event. In the semi-wind-up Y. Fujita, jiu-jitsu expert, will attempt to strangle Marion Zikovich to death.



EMANUEL TO HEAD NEXT LEGION BILL

San Francisco Heavy Meets Tom Corbett in Main Event

Two San Francisco boys, Armand Emanuel and Tom Corbett, will fight for the Pacific Coast heavyweight championship at the Hollywood American Legion stadium Friday night. It promises to be one of the best heavyweight battles seen in months.

Armand Emanuel is the heavyweight sensation of the Pacific Coast right now. He hasn't lost a fight since he turned professional more than a year ago. His latest win was last week in San Francisco, where he beat Frank Muskie, a sparring partner of Gene Tunney.

The sensational knockout Emanuel scored over Vigo Doman three weeks ago at Hollywood is still fresh in the minds of the fight fans.

Just once has Tom Corbett fought in Southern California. He beat Ernie Owens at Hollywood but was awarded a draw. Corbett has class and it is really a toss-up which is the better fighter, Corbett or Emanuel.

The semi-wind-up is another heavyweight fight but the principals have not the class of the main-eventers. Jack Roper and Tom Randolph are down for six rounds in this spot. Roper has his good nights and his bad ones. He is due for a good one. He recently fought Tony Fuente and dropped a decision because he had been out of the ring for three months. Randolph has had just one fight and that was with Joe Woods.

Tony Portillo and Frank Stetson are in the special and Hurley Breen will fight M. Treyino in one four-rounder, while Charles McClintock opens the entertainment with Mike Lewis.

Bramstar Wins Border Event

TIA JUANA RACE TRACK, Jan. 7. Bramstar, Mrs. Louise Viau's good 3-year-old, a candidate for all the major stakes at the Tia Juana track, showed this afternoon that he will have to be reckoned with all along.

Bramstar made a show of his field to win the Sunkist, a six-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds, in the time 1:14 1-5, over a track that was rated as good, but not fast. Bramstar took command at once and won by five lengths from Vowed Vengeance, Mi Comparo and others. The colt is entered in the Speed Handicap, first of the Tia Juana stakes, which will be run February 12.

Miniator, former New York horse, won the Bostonia claiming handicap, secondary feature on the card, at a mile. Jack Fairman, as usual, made all the pace in this affair, but could never get far enough in front of Miniator so that when he tried in the stretch the Baroni horse won. Realist got the show. Time here was 1:41 3-5.

Tomorrow's feature races, the Baja California and Ocean Park handicaps, will see several Coffroth Handicap contenders—including Grippenimaud, Watkinson, American Son—in action. Results:

First race, five furlongs, claiming, purse $800—Quince Garden (Luther) won, The Corsair (Pollard) second, Quota (Francis) third. Time, 1:11.

Second race, mile and seventy yards, claiming, purse $800—President (Walden) won, King (Lowman) second, Gay Boy II (Owen) third. Time, 1:46 4-5.

Third race, mile and seventy yards, claiming, purse $800—Shasta Comet (H. Philpot) won, Latisha (Rennie) second, Zorca (Bunch) third. Time, 1:48.

Fourth race, five furlongs, claiming, purse $800—Betty O'Neal (Horning) won, Another Deck (Luther) second, Peep O' (Inzelone) third. Time, 1:02 4-5.

Fifth race, mile and seventy yards, claiming, purse $800—Brigadoon (Peternel) won, Bryndear (Critchfield) second, Starless (Robertson) third. Time, 1:46 3-5.

Sixth race, one mile, the Bostonia Claiming Handicap, purse $1000—Miniator (H. Ray) won, Jack Fairman (Horning) second, Realist (J. Kelly) third. Time, 1:41 3-5.

Seventh race, six furlongs, the Sunkist, purse $800—Bramstar (H. Philpot) won, Vowed Vengeance (Pendergrass) second, Mi Companero (Bensie) third. Time, 1:14 1-5.

Eighth race, one mile, claiming, purse $800—Deck It (Luther) won, Rolling Star (Russell) second, Red Dragon (Stevens) third. Time, 1:42 4-5.

Ninth race, five and one-half furlongs, claiming, purse $800—Virginia Carlton II (Lindseth) won, Time Exposure (Rennie) second, Lechee (Baker) third. Time, 1:08 1-5.

SAUER FACES MAT TEST

Pete Takes Biggest Step in Comeback Campaign in Bout With Londos Wednesday

BY KAY OWE

"Carnation" Lou Daro, who has been promoting wrestling matches in Southern California for more than five years, will send Pete Sauer, who has made a sensational mat come-back after being out of the game for two years, against Jim Londos, one of the best wrestlers in the world, in the feature event of his first mat show of the new year at the Olympic Wednesday night.

The name of the referee who will officiate is expected to be named tomorrow. One thing is certain, it will not be the one who has been booed so much during the past year and a half, it is said.

LOU DARO

Unless Londos has decided to do all of his wrestling in the ring instead of running to the ropes every time he is in danger, a la Champion Joe Stecher, whoever the referee is will have a big job on his hands keeping the Greek away from the hemp. Londos's trainers, however, declare the Greek star will stay inside of the ropes and give Sauer the worst mauling the local youngster has ever received.

LONDOS TRAINS HARD

Londos has been training harder than the overworked Trojan during the past four days. He has been brushing up on many of the best holds known in catch-as-catch-can and giving his famous reverse headlock, which failed to function against Sauer in their first battle about a month ago, a rest. In the two hours that Londos was in the ring with Sauer, he failed to find any weakness in the young grappler on which he could concentrate.

Sauer is very strong in the legs, shoulders and arms. He has yet to be brought down with a reverse headlock. He is as fast and faster than most welterweights on his feet. He has long arms and legs and getting holds on his opponents is about the easiest thing he does. He is a cool worker, and the way he handled Dick Daviscourt two weeks ago demonstrated he can be rougher than the roughest.

PETE TO TRY NEW GRIP

Sauer, whose cradle-lock failed to work on the Greek in their first match, is said to have worked out several new angles to the grip which will make it easier to apply. The new way he has worked out will enable him to get the hold from a reclining position. With the revised cradle-lock will go an arm-lock which leaves the receiver nothing to do but lie on his back while the referee counts him down.

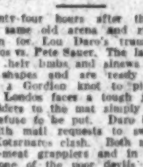
The first meeting between the Greek and the local youngster was one of the roughest, wildest as well as one of the best bouts held at the Olympic.

JAP IN SEMI-WIND-UP

The special event will see Y. Fujita, the best jiu-jitsu wrestler of his weight in the country, 165, in action againsts Marian Zikovich, 210-pound Jugo-Slav, who several months ago, held Prof. T. Higami, another Japanese exponent of the scientific art of strangling, to a twenty-minute draw.

Chris Michaels of Hollywood and Leo Papiano, Greek "bobber," will clash in the opening event.

CAULIFLOWER ALLEY NOTES



"Well—here you are boys," smiles Si Masters (who was almost the head man in the Adam and Eve show) "if this isn't a pip, then the old gloves had better be tucked away in lavender." Sly old Si adverts to his Charley Long-Sammy Baker mix-up at the Olympic Auditorium next Tuesday night. The bout may not be replete with all the flowers of glove rhetoric throughout, but boy—oh, boy—while it lasts, the old Olymp should groan from turret to foundation stone with the frenzied gymnastics of wrought-up fans.

Baker declares that Long will take on the hue of Haley's comet before many rounds have elapsed and Long gets back at him with—"If I'se arrested for murder, I'll plead insanity in de fust degree." From the opening gong tap, Sammy will undoubtedly begin dusting all the dandruff out of Charley's coco. It is generally believed that the sergeant's savage onslaught will soon spell wrack and ruin for his ebony opponent. Long is expected to center on a submarine ramming and his henchmen look to see the worthy craft Baker foundered long before the heavy seas have been reached. A clean knockout is almost certain to crop up. Baker is at his best and his offense is merciless. A Long victory will come in the way of a surprise party and is sure to be followed by a great jamboree up and down Ebony Broadway. Remember—fistic morons—there will be no gopher feathers lying around loose in this fight.

Just twenty-four hours after the Baker-Long melee, the same old arena and ring will prove a grid iron for Lou Daro's trump attraction—Jimmy Londos vs. Pete Sauer. The lads have pulled and hauled their limbs and sinews into all kinds of pretzel shapes and are ready to tie themselves into a Gordion knot to please the cash customers. Londos faces a tough job in pinning Pete's shoulders to the mat simply because Sauer says they refuse to be put. Daro has been overwhelmed with mail requests to swing a Daviscourt and Kotsanaros clash. Both men are known as the raw-meat grapplers and in case the bout comes off, one of the poor devils is sure to be carried, piece meal, from the ring. Daviscourt totes a glass chin and Kotsanaros a peach of a right, and who knows but what the wily George will beat his man by a clean knockout.

The gang never wants a loser. One of the disgruntled hollered to McCoy—"how in the heck can you think with you brain all exposed (Mac is a total loss in baldness) Why—you big stiff—you can get your hair cut with your hat on."

One of those aftermath pugs from one of the local camps met Jerry McCarthy up on Flower street last Tuesday afternoon and tried to mace him for a cigarette. "Well, old pal," soothed Mac, "I haven't any just now." "Why don't you run across the street to the Y.M.C.A. and buy a package, Jerry," suggested the macer. "I can't," uppercut McCarthy, "I've only a dollar and a half."

Clyde Hudkins aspires to be the head man in the pugilistic show and with that idea in view has assembled the greatest stable of fighters ever let loose on resined canvas. Among the list are Jack Thompson, Young Harry Wills, Charley Long, Ace Hudkins, Tiger Jack Burns, Benny Chavez and Al Neff. Clyde is very sweet on Jack Thompson and would give half he possesses to swing Jack against savage Sergeant Sammy Baker. He has it in his noodle that Thompson can put Baker where the divers will have to go down and get him, but stipulates 142 pounds. Gee, what a wham of a scrap this would make.

Tom Gallery, egged on by his henchman, Gene Doyle, has corraled a dash for next Friday night in the pugilistic forms of Tom Corbett and Armand Emanuel. If the stadium's vast clientele will remember right, Corbett, old boy, is the nifty lad that sunk his left into Ernie Owens's beak some weeks ago, and it required several surgeons to extract the imbedded mitt from Ernie's sneezer. On that momentous occasion many thought that Corbett should have had his fin hoisted after the final gong sounded. If Len Covert stays away from this scrap, then surely indeed, the blood in his corpuscles is about only one-third of 1 per cent dago red.

Mushy Callahan, insanely jealous of Jack Dempsey's synthetic proboscis, has had a hundred bucks worth of improvement put into his own smeller and the funny part of the whole shooting match is that Mushy now looks like a real Irishman.

"Push, pooh, about all those crazy ginks spouting about the best heavyweight of all times," laughs Gene Doyle. "The greatest heavyweight in the last hundred years or so is Uncle Sam, give or take ten pounds, and what's more he'll be the champ for many years to come."

Floyd Johnson, looking very much like the Floyd of old, is with us again—this time bringing with him a whale of a promising heavyweight. Johnson's man is Terry Howard Hansen, a 203-pounder—six foot four and with an 82½-inch reach. Hansen has had eighteen fights, twelve of which were won by kayos. Johnson believes that his man's formidable reach and ranginess should make him hot medicine in the heavy line later on. Hansen walked around Barney Dempsey's camp last Tuesday afternoon with a chip on his shoulder, but he hadn't been there long before the knocked off chips almost looked like a heaped-up lumber yard.

Ray Newman, as chipper and kittenish as a grasshopper filled with tobacco juice, showed up at the Manhattan last Tuesday afternoon, toting an injured right arm, a legacy from King Solomon, the man with the adamant jaw. Ray thinks it will require about a month or so for the fin to get back into its right moorings and then he will be ready for all those big boys that have lately been pulling down fat purposes at Holly and the Olympic. Watch this Newman when he gets right and see if he doesn't make some of the big palookas step to town to clip his crest.

Herb Blair, the Philadelphia Kid, has pulled up stakes in Los Angeles and hied to the Atlantic Coast. Most of the time that Herb was here he was the guest of Jimmy Burns, who tried to break him of shouting at the "git ups," but alas and alack—'Tis got it all. Herb says he never knew what bees and honey meant until he came to Los Angeles.

About fifteen minutes before the train left Chicago some time ago on which Jack Dempsey and his factotum, Jerry the Greek, had engaged passage to Los Angeles, Jack said, "Jerry, you're going to ride in the draw car—now what do you know about that?" "Thanks, boss, that's great," smiled the Greek with a puzzled look on his pan. Dempsey then missed his man Friday until about a minute before the choo-choo pulled out. Up rushed the Greek all out of breath, flashing a hand full of black crayons and shouting lustily as he did, "Jack, I had an awful time getting the chalk, but I don't know what in the thunder I'm going to do; I don't know a damned thing about drawing."

John Miljus Led Hurlers in National; Ray Kremer Second on List

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Buried among the deluge of statistics being handed out from day to day by the National League are some interesting lines that may have escaped the eye of the none too deep student of figures. One shows that John Miljus, who wild-pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates out of a world championship game in New York last fall, ranked as the most effective hurler in the older league, though Ray Kremer, his teammate, appearing in many more games, has a large margin in point of service.

JOHN MILJUS.

Coincidentally, the averages from the Pacific Coast show Miljus as the most effective pitcher in that league. Pittsburgh commentators, who ever are ready to give the home-bred the honor he deserves, point out that it is the first time a pitcher ever led two leagues in point of effectiveness in one season. Miljus's average run a game in the National League was 1.89, while in the Pacific Coast League it was 2.54.

SANTA ANA PREPS IN WORKOUTS ON TRACK

SANTA ANA, Jan. 7.—Representing the largest, as well as the earliest, turnout in the history of Santa Ana High School athletics, forty promising candidates already have begun training for the 1928 track-and-field season under the direction of Coach "Tex" Oliver, and even this number is expected to be increased materially when the Saint basketball schedule is completed in March.

KID LEWIS DRAWS SQUIRES IN BOUT

JOHANNESBURG (South Africa) Jan. 7. (AP)—Kid Lewis today fought a fifteen-round draw with Johnny Squires, heavyweight champion of South Africa.

(Ted (Kid) Lewis, former world's welterweight champion, lost his title to Jack Britton in 1919. Since then he has won and lost several other regional titles in other classes.)

MEN HILL HAD TO WAIT NG TIME TO GET CHANCE

Hill's story of how his arm was cured is as interesting as that of Dazzy Vance. In Hill's home town there was a station agent who dabbled with osteopath methods with miraculous results. He cured hopeless cases of crippled arms and legs that limped from far distances to feel his healing touch. This station agent cured the visitors and sold them tickets to their homes. He laid his hands on Hill's wounded wing one day and the pitcher was himself again. Hill is in deep and deadly earnest when he tells about that station agent man with the miracle touch in his fingers.

But no sooner was his arm healed than Hill was stricken down with a bad attack of stomach trouble. He was out of the game during most of 1920. That was the year he refused to report and was suspended. He pitched for Zanesville of the Outlaw League in 1920 and 1921. He was reinstated the next year and became the property of Indianapolis, where his work won him a trial by John McGraw. He reported to the Giants in the fall of 1922 but he evidently failed to impress the old master of baseball men, for he was sent back to the Wabash, and there it seemed that he was doomed to remain forevermore. Five years did Hill pitch for the Hoosiers, and then in the fall of 1926 Dreyfus bought back his cast-off pitcher of 1915 for $40,000 and two players. And he made a great buy, for Hill, the veteran minor leaguer, pitched the Pirates to a pennant with his twenty-two sterling victories during the season just passed. He ranked eighth in effectiveness with an earned run record of .324, and he took part in forty-three games, only Root and Jack Scott appearing more often than Hill on the pitching hill.

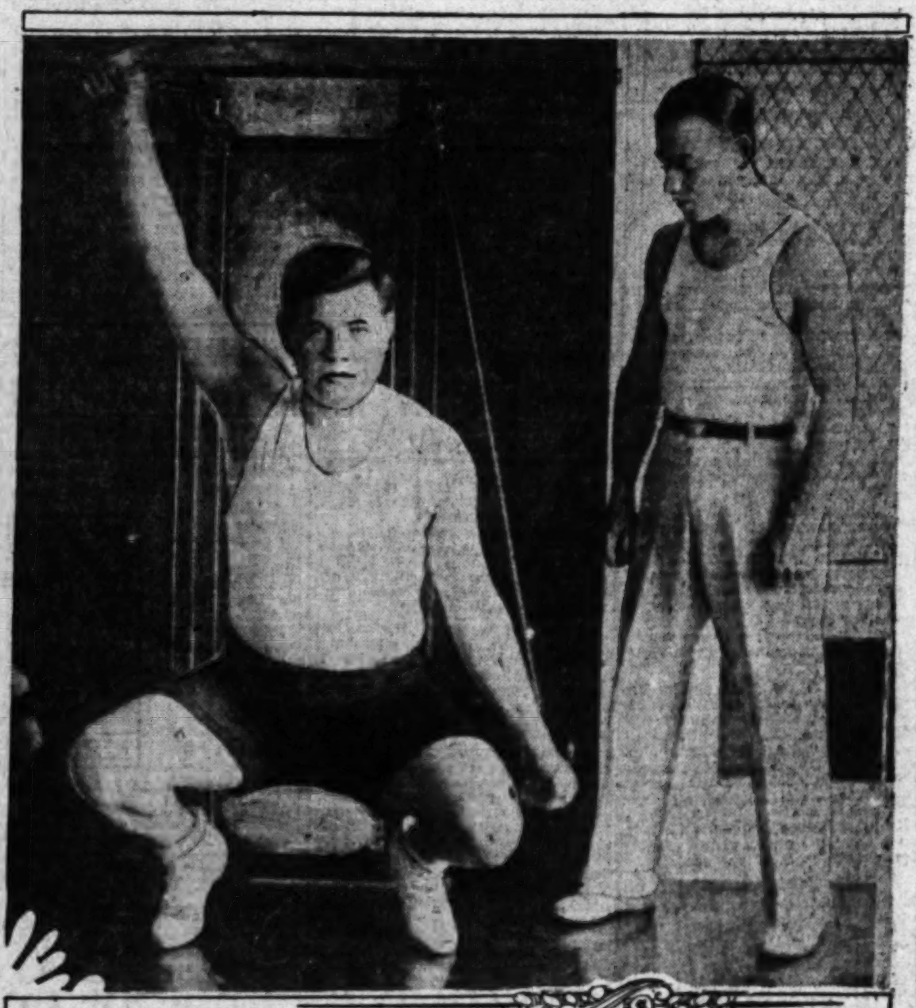
Hill makes Indianapolis his home now. Asked what he does in the winter, he replied: "That is the trouble. No job in the winter. It is hard for a ball player to get a regular job that is worth while in the short off season. Every player ought to master two professions."

"Where did you get that name, 'Carmen'?"

"My mother got it out of a book," replied the Pirate pitching star.

ANOTHER WAR OF "61" STARTED

Yess'r, folks, Babe Ruth isn't satisfied with a home-run record of sixty that he hung up last year and has already started his campaign to raise the figure to sixty-one or better. The Bambino plans to get in shape for the start of the 1928 race and is now working out daily in Artie McGovern's gymnasium. McGovern conditioned Ruth last winter, but declares the Babe is in much better shape already this year, so there's a chance that the Bambino may crack out sixty-one homers at that. Photo shows Ruth tugging the weights, with McGovern standing by. [P. & A. photo]



MILLER HUGGINS NO LONGER "THE SAP;" YANKEE SKIPPER IS NOW RATED REAL PILOT

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—So gradually that you will hardly have noticed the change, little Mr. Milk-Toast Huggins, the manager of the New York Yankees, has come to be regarded as a very respectable baseball manager, the change representing a triumph for patience, perseverance and the soft answer which turneth away raspberries.

MILLER HUGGINS

For a long time Mr. Huggins was not supposed to be any sort of manager at all and for a fact he wasn't, because he did less managing per capita than any other manager ever known to the major leagues. This was during the years just after the Messrs. Jake Ruppert and Til Huston went up to Boston and bought him a lot of great ball players who happened to include among their number some of the most ornery critters in the industry.

They got him Carl Mays for one, and Carl Mays was a big, surly, irritable fellow, not given to any special vices, but just hard to get along with. They also got him Waite Hoyt, who was then in the callow stage of masculine development, a burly kid with a great arm, but badly spoiled and in need of domineering management, and they also got him Babe Ruth, who was full of youthful spirit, among other stimulants.

Mr. Huggins never was a commanding figure of character, being small and skinny of stature and peaceful of nature and, to make matters no better, just at that time, he was not feeling well. I believe he was teething, for I recollect occasional pieces in the sport pages under various date lines reporting that Mr. Huggins had left the ball club for a day to have some teeth blasted out at some clinic. Of course, it is no pleasure to have a tooth pulled out, but at that period Mr. Huggins probably regarded these little absences from the ball club as restful interludes in an unhappy life. And when he was with the ball club in the diners or in the hotel restaurants, he would listen with a wan expression as the athletes ordered their meals, because they usually ordered things that took a lot of chewing, whereas he was on a soft diet himself. That was how they happened to call him Milk Toast Huggins. But you will realize that this was also an insidious reflection on his character.

NOT COMMANDING FIGURE

One night some of the athletes got particularly uproarious during a sleeper jump between Chicago and St. Louis and decided to play a joke on Mr. Huggins. One idea was to throw him through a window and another was to hold his throat and make him swallow a whole quart of whisky which, in the prevalent state of his health, probably would have killed him. I believe they finally decided to make him eat a Pullman towel and then report him to the Pullman company for stealing the towel. The attempt failed because Mr. Huggins couldn't chew the towel and for the life of him he couldn't undertsand why those boys woudn't leave him be.

One day down in Knoxville, or thereabouts, Mr. Huggins took Waite Hoyt out of the box during an exhibition game and Hoyt was so annoyed that he threw the ball over the grand stand. He suspended Hoyt for that, and when the news reached New York one of the public wits remarked that Hoyt deserved suspension for making the wrong play, because he should have thrown Mr. Huggins over the grand stand.

When the papers got down to St. Petersburg one of them showed Mr. Huggins's picture and over it the line "The Sap."

But Mr. Huggins thought I was calling him a sap and he became aroused for the first time in all his years as the manager of the Yankees. Up to that time he had allowed the athletes to practice or not, as they pleased, and they had been beaten in every exhibition game they had played. The morning after the northern papers showed up in St. Petersburg Mr. Huggins took charge of the workout himself and it is a matter of official statistics that those ball players then went through a streak of fifteen consecutive victories.

QUESTION OF DRAFT UP AGAIN

Minors Meet Tomorrow at Chicago; Modified Plan Expected to Stand

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—That draft bugaboo, which has been bobbing up regularly to disturb the peace of mind of the major and minor league factors since the baseball boys got organized, comes up again Monday, when the various minor league bosses gather here with Judge Landis to reach another understanding.

JUDGE LANDIS

At the minor leaguers' recent annual meeting, in Dallas some of the smaller leagues got together and voted out the modified draft plan, under which the American Association, Pacific Coast, International, Southern and Three-Eye leagues were working with the majors. The little fellows complained that with them under the subject of universal draft and the other five leagues under the modified version, the smaller leagues were at a disadvantage. Therefore the modified draft ruling was voted out and threats were made that perhaps the minors might break off relations with the majors altogether.

However, the minors bit off too big a chunk when they threatened to break off with the majors, who merely said that it was okay with them. The majors knew that they could get all the better of it in a baseball war with the minors, because they can pay the big money to the athletes.

Just at present, it appears as though the minors will rescind their action against the five leagues and allow them to operate under the modified draft once more. Judge Landis probably has a plan to submit and it may be that the minors will accept the commissioner's draft idea. Landis is a staunch believer in universal draft.

YANKEES' POWER DOESN'T WORRY BUCKY

(This is the fifth of a series of stories on the 1928 prospects of major-league clubs.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The potential power of the New York Yankees has not shattered the morale of the Washington American League Club, and both President Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris are going about preparing for the 1928 campaign without shivering at the mention of the name of Miller Huggins's formidable array of stars.

Even with the absence of Walter Johnson, Harris believes that in Lisenbee, Hadley, Van Alstine, Sad Sam Jones, Zachary, Marberry, Burke, Braxton, Gaston and several promising pitchers from the minor leagues he has the best mound staff in the league. This group, wisely divided between left-handers and right-handers, also has been selected with a due regard to having a few seasoned men, along with those of less experience. Hadley and Lisenbee are now looked upon by the club as being in the star class.

MAY TRADE JUDGE

Strength has been added to the infield by the acquisition of George Sisler, who, according to Griffith, will alternate with Judge at first base. Wise Washington fans, however, cannot see a player of Judge's caliber kept on the bench at any time, and expect that he will be used in a trade to strengthen the club elsewhere.

The other positions on the infield are assigned tentatively to Harris, Reeves and Bluege, but the club has several minor-league youngsters for duty on the inner works, notably Gillis from Birmingham, who showed impressive form in a few games at the close of last season. He may replace Bluege or Reeves if he shows more promise.

The outfield trio of Rice, Speaker and Goslin is backed up by West and Ganzel, the latter having batted for more than .400 in quite an extended period of play last year. Tentatively Speaker has been assigned in the outfield, but few expect him to remain with the team for another season.

But even in his absence, the Griffith-Harris clan believe they will present a strong outfield.

JOHNSON ABSENT

The absence of Walter Johnson, who will manage the Newark club of the International League next season, will be felt more from a psychological than from a material standpoint. The veteran was of little use to the club last year after an injury to his leg, and before midseason he announced that he never would take his regular turn in the box again.

Ruel and Tate will again be the mainstays behind the bat. Although Ruel has slowed up somewhat, he still is regarded as one of the best catchers in the league and will be the No. 1 man.

With the rumors of trades and the puzzling Sisler-Judge situation, club officials have intimated that Sisler may be played in the outfield, regardless of the number of good men already available for duty there. Whether this will settle the situation remains to be seen.

BABE RUTH'S CASH REGISTER RINGS UP $200,000 IN 1927

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—They say that when all returns were in Babe Ruth earned close to $200,000 for the year 1927.

Only $70,000 of this came from the New York Yankees. It becomes apparent with increasing clearness that the prerequisites of baseball fame rather than the salary itself are of the greatest financial importance.

Nap Lajoie did not collect $200,000 in salary for his entire baseball career. Honus Wagner never came near that total for his many years of stellar work with the Pirates.

Baseball seems to be moving along.

BASEBALL VETS PRAISE CISSELL

White Sox Confident Young Star Will Deliver

South Siders Paid $100,000 for Turner's Find

Isbell and Kaiser Both Put in Boosts for Lad

BY JOHN P. GALLAGHER

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—With football out of the way until next fall it is now safe for the baseball scribes to return to what is commonly called the national pastime. In the national game as in any other game that is played on American soil the Pacific Coast, and especially the southern portion of it, has a leading part; in fact, a major part, as the rest of the country is year by year forced to acknowledge. Not so many years ago the renowned Walter Camp was picking all-American football teams and pretty well confining his material to the Atlantic seaboard. Who could pick an all-American team today and ignore the west coast? So it is in baseball.

During the coming year American League fans will give Chalmer Cissell, whom the Chicago White Sox purchased from Portland, the once-over with a critical eye. The Sox are in sad need of a competent short-fielder and if Chalmer makes good he surely will be a welcome asset to the South Side. Cissell is coming to Chicago well recommended as will be noted from the following statement by Harry Grabiner, secretary of the White Sox club. He says:

"If Chalmer Cissell is one-half as good as baseball men on the Pacific Coast say he is, then we will feel we owe the Portland club some more money."

COST SOX $100,000 CASH

The White Sox have already paid $100,000 in money and tossed in Pitcher Bert Cole and Outfielder Ike Boone, both ex-Coast Leaguers, to get this young Mr. Cissell, who isn't yet of voting age. While Schalk, Grabiner and Comiskey were at Dallas recently attending the gathering of the minor-league magnates, all they heard from Coast League men were splendid predictions of what Cissell would do in the big leagues and naturally they are quite elated over their deal.

According to Mr. Turner, the boss of the Portland club where the lad played last season, the Sox have procured a man as great at shortstop as Hans Wagner, as great on the bases as Ty Cobb, and as great at the bat as Rogers Hornsby. Turner could not sing the praises of the boy loud enough.

But Turner wasn't the only one. It was the words of Frank Isbell, an old-time White Sox player and loyal friend of Charles A. Comiskey, that carried the most weight with the Sox delegates. While in Dallas Louis Comiskey was presented with a quarter of a buck deer by Bib Falk, Sox outfielder, who was there, so Louis staged a dinner and invited a lot of friends to help devour the venison.

ISBELL ADDS PRAISE

Among those invited was Frank Isbell, who now is a retired gentleman farmer, living near Los Angeles. He passes most of his afternoons in summer attending ball games at the Angels' park. Consequently he saw young Cissell perform every time the Portland team was there. Isbell's words on him were about as follows:

"They will have a hard time preventing that boy becoming the best shortstop in the big leagues. I know there are a lot of youngsters who start off great in the Minors and then flop when they get a chance at the big stuff. It isn't always their fault, either. Sometimes they can't stand the gaff of the big leagues. Other players ride them down or maybe a manager keeps them on the bench. But as I say, they will have a hard time stopping this boy, because he knows something about taking care of himself in any kind of a contest, and if they will just let him go he'll very quickly show them some new things about playing shortstop."

Leo Kaiser, boss of the Des Moines club, who first had Cissell when he took him out of the Army to give him a job playing baseball, also added praises of the boy.

Rangers Meet Pasadena Team in Soccer Mix

The Southern California soccer loop stages a full schedule of seven games today on the various circuit grounds. The outstanding match will be that of the Rangers and Pasadena, who play off their challenge-cup tie at the Los Angeles High School. Both squads are in tip-top shape and the play should reach a high standard. The local squad, under the direction of Manager Jimmy Young, have made a great improvement since the last meeting of these clubs and are confident of surviving to the second round.

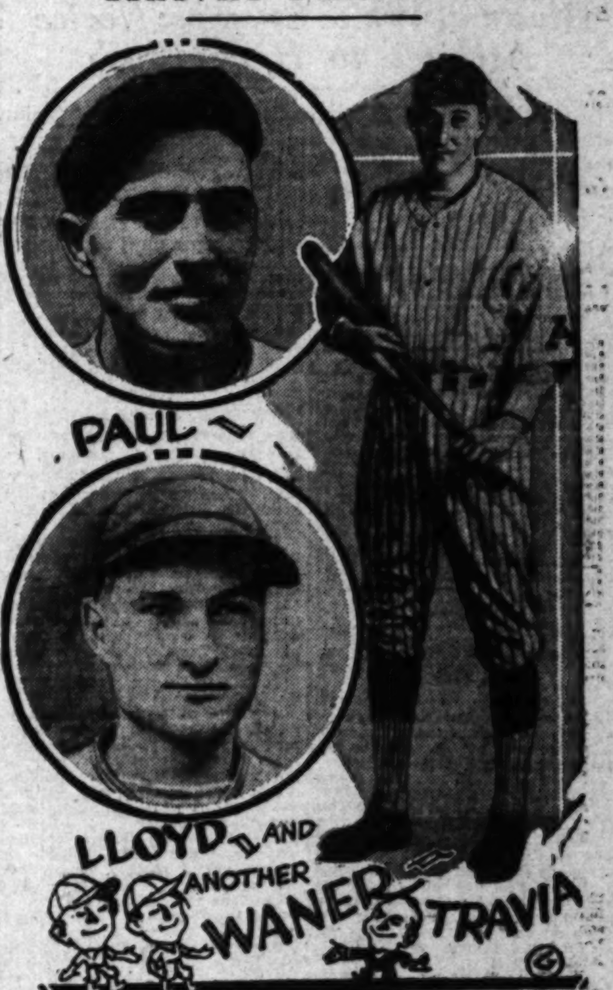
The league-leading Caledonians of Long Beach tie up with the Spanish American aggregation at Hazard playground. The local boys are confident that they can inflict the first defeat of the season on the beach eleven. The Turnverein Germania tackle the Rovers in a second-division fixture at the Ross Snyder Field and a very close game is anticipated. At Manchester Field the Magyar Reserves will continue to fight to retain possession of the John C. Howe Memorial Cup, second division championship trophy. The Hungarian squad is scheduled to meet the Italians, who may surprise many with their rejuvenated team.

Three games are scheduled for out-of-town grounds. The Excelsiors tangle with the United at Long Beach Recreation Park, the Victorias tie up with Santa Monica Sons at the Bay City High School, while the Los Angeles Athletic Club Reserves, second division leaders, go to San Pedro to tackle the Scandia. Next Sunday eliminations in the California Cup competition are scheduled, five games to be played.

CUBS TO MEET FLEET TEAM

"Hoot" Gibson's Cubs, whom the movie star recently purchased, will meet the U.S.S. Mississippi nine this afternoon at 2:15 on the North Hollywood field. Gibson's team formerly was known as the North Hollywood Cubs, an aggregation of semipros that has been playing in the Lankershim Valley League.

WANER ACT GAINS NEW RECRUIT WITH COUSIN TRAVIA PIRATE-BOUND



The sandlots of Ada, Okla., have produced another Warner for the big leagues. Eighteen-year-old Travia Waner, pitcher and outfielder, will join Paul and Lloyd at Pittsburgh this spring with a chance of completing an all-Waner outfield if he makes good in that position.

ADA (Okla) Jan. 7. (AP) — That Waner act in the National League may be staged by a trio next season.

Travia Waner, a cousin of Paul and Lloyd, will sign a contract with Pittsburgh at the end of the basketball season. He is a star forward on the East Central Teachers' College quintet, and the Oklahoma collegiate conference outlaws athletes who may have signed to play in any professional sport.

O. A. Green, manager of the Ada amateur baseball club, believes Travia within two years will be able to step the pace set by his cousins. The third Waner battled .420 in more than twenty games last summer. He pitched and held outfield posts.

Travia is 18 years of age. He is six feet tall and weighs 150 pounds.

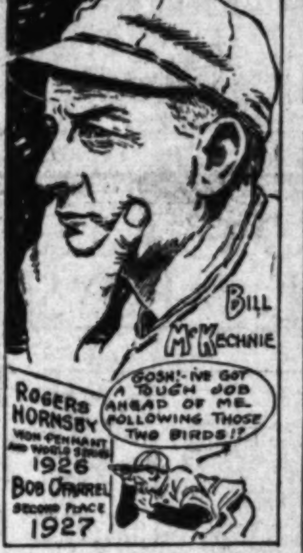
Paul and Lloyd Waner were also recruited by the Pirates from the Ada sandlot. Their cousin will be the sixth Ada man to join the Corsair crew. Kelly Wilson, a pitcher, and Earl Johnson, an infielder, have been farmed out to the Columbia club in the South Atlantic League, and Parker Brewer, pitcher and outfielder, recently signed a Pittsburgh contract.

BALL PLAYERS LEAGUE BIG

The National Association of Baseball Leagues, made up of twenty-four leagues in 174 cities and towns of the United States and Canada, has a total of 6736 players.

McKechnie is Sure to Lose as Card Boss

BY AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)



BILL McKECHNIE
GOSH!- I'VE GOT A TOUGH JOB AHEAD OF ME, FOLLOWING THOSE TWO BIRDS!?
ROGERS HORNSBY WON PENNANT AND WORLD SERIES 1926
BOB O'FARRELL SECOND PLACE 1927

Bill McKechnie, newly appointed manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, has a tough spot for the next baseball season.

Rogers Hornsby won the pennant and the world's championship for the Cardinals in 1926 and then was shipped to the Giants.

Bob O'Farrell then got the job, and in spite of a lot of hard luck, finished second last year, only to be reduced to the ranks.

So even if McKechnie finishes high next year, he may get the gate. He is in the same spot that Jack Coombs was the year he was appointed manager of the Phils right after Pat Moran had won a pennant and had a couple of good seasons.

President Baker met Pat on the street one day and handed him his release.

"Why, what's the matter?" demanded Pat. "Haven't my services been satisfactory?"

"Perfectly satisfactory," said Baker.

"Well, what's the idea then?"

"Oh, I just wanted to make a change," said Baker.

HUNTING NOTES

The arrival of warm weather last week slowed up duck hunting to a certain degree, but, nevertheless, a good many shooters are looking forward to one or two more good shoots before the season closes.

Pete Peterson, hunting authority at the B. H. Dyas Company, reports that the season in general has been good. This season's closing day will be on Sunday, the 15th inst., allowing most every shooter a chance to get out on the final hunting day.

A wire received by Peterson from Wasco up Bakersfield way tells of many birds there. [illegible] Gilbert also brings back word from the Wasco section, telling of plenty of birds and excellent hunting.

Word from Morena Dam in San Diego county tells of many canvasbacks flocking around, the birds making Henshaw Dam a feeding ground.

With the close of the duck season on the 15th inst., there will be no more hunting seasons in this State until next fall. However, sportsmen are now turning their attention to steelhead trout fishing. Some nice catches have been made at the mouth of the Santa Ynez River.

Although the trout season is still some distance in the future, anglers are already feeling the call and have been combing over their tackle and polishing up their rods. Several changes have been made in the trout season. The State in former seasons opened throughout on May 1. This year district 1 and the Southern California districts will open on May 1, but the season in district 4½ (Mono and Inyo counties in the High Sierras,) where some of the best trout fishing is to be had will not open until June 30.

Speaking of trout fishing, Outdoor Franklin, Buick road scout for the Howard Automobile Company, and Pete Peterson, Dyas's outdoor man, returned yesterday from the Rainbow Angling Club with a supply of live trout for the aquarium at the store. The two scouts will leave again soon for Rainbow to get another supply of live trout for the aquarium at the Dyas Hollywood store, now nearing completion.

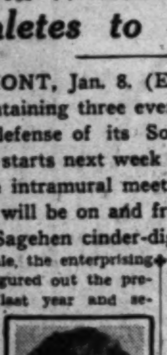
Pomona Trackmen Start Work Early to Defend Southern California Conference

SAGEHENS LINE UP THREE PRESEASON TRACK MEETS

Intramural Event Opens Season for Blue and White Champs; Novice Athletes to Have Clash

CLAREMONT, Jan. 8. (Exclusive)—A strong preliminary season containing three events for the purpose of training the squad in defense of its Southern California Conference championship, starts next week at Pomona College. With the opening of the intramural meet the 11th inst., this preseason track carnival will be on and from that time until actual varsity opening, Sagehen cinder-diggers will be constantly busy.



BOB STREHLE

Coach Bob Strehle, the enterprising Pomona leader, figured out the preliminary season last year and secured all the dates for it. He is working on the theory that these various meets will be better training for the trackmen than ordinary nightly workouts, for the reason that more interest and competitive spirit will enter in. Strehle has discovered that one of the chief enemies of good conditioning in track is the monotony of training and has taken this means to circumvent it.

Three track meets are on this schedule of Strehle's, following each other closely as to time. The boys lead off with the intramural event, starting the 11th and continuing through the 17th inst. No sooner is that out of the way than the novice meet comes up. A week later the always-colorful and interesting interclass affair comes off. It is just possible that Strehle will also inaugurate the custom of an interfraternity meet, which will help to serve the same purpose. That is practically a certainty for other years. It is only a matter of conjecture now, because of the lack of time.

These three meets grow more important as to the talent engaged. The intramural excludes all varsity and freshmen insignia wearers. The novice meet allows sophomores with freshmen numerals to compete but keeps out all varsity men. The interclass is wide open and it is one of the highlights of the whole season both in point of interest and competition.

Inasmuch as he has practically the same corps of track and field men who swept everything in the Southern Conference before them, last year, performing under his banner again, Strehle feels confident that only a season of good training will be required to defend the championship. The heavy artillery ranks of weight heavers were badly cut into by graduation, but the rest of the squad is practically intact, so Strehle plans to base his hopes on them and has doped out this strenuous training siege to condition them.

HOUNDS CAN'T BEAT HORSES

Greyhounds run faster than sprinters, but cannot outdistance racehorses.

Whittier Cops Casaba Title

WHITTIER, Jan. 7.—By virtue of their 30-to-23 win over the fast Hollywood quintet here last evening, the local players annexed the championship of the Coast division of the Southern California Y.M.C.A. Basketball League for this season.

Whittier has but one more game to play and that is with Pasadena, whose team lost three games, while Whittier has lost but one, so in case the locals would drop the coming game to the Crown City casaba chasers they would still retain the championship. There are eight teams in the league.

At half, the score was: Whittier, 20; Hollywood, 9.

It was one of the fastest games ever played on the local court. Royer, forward for the visitors, was high-point man in the game, having sunk the ball for a total of fourteen points; McWhirter, Whittier forward, was high-point man for his team, with nine points.

The outstanding feature of the game was guarding, particularly in the first half. Church, guard for Whittier, sunk two baskets from mid-floor. The line-ups:

Whittier (30)		Hollywood (23)
McWhirter (9)	F.	Royer (14)
Moss (2)	F.	Foster (3)
Tschabold (4)	C.	Johnson (6)
Church (6)	G.	Be'dan
Keck (7)	G.	Pierce

Substitutions—Whittier: Zint, Reese, Newsom (2,) Ringland. Hollywood: McCullough, Palmer, Finley.

Officials: Douglas, referee; Landreth, umpire; Gregory, timekeeper; Ringland, scorer.

COOPER TOPS GOLFING FIELD AT HALFWAY MARK WITH 142

4 on seventeen. Tommy's ball caught the back of the cup for a birdie 3 on eighteen, but the ball would not drop.

Watrous, after a birdie 4 on fourteen, pitched from a trap guarding the fifteenth and ran down a ten-foot putt for a par 4. After parring sixteen, Watrous slipped one over with a 5 on seventeen and later executed a beautiful recovery from the barranca guarding eighteen, but was forced to use two putts.

FLASHIEST ROUND OF DAY

Cooper's 69 yesterday was probably the flashiest exhibition of the day. Mac Smith's 70 resulted from perfect stroking—Dudley's 71 might easily have been a 67—Paulson's 69 was the result of real concentration—Mortie Dutra's 69, ditto, but the 71 chalked up by John Black, Kansas veteran, was the most deserving of the day.

John Black will be recalled as the unheralded and unknown professional who came within strokes of puffing an old black pipe to first honors in the national open—way back in 1922. Black's only gallery for the first three days on that memorial golfing jaunt in Chicago, consisted of his playing partner and two caddies and John was leading the field with two fine 71s. The gallery just about ruined John and his pipe during his third round and he wavered up to a 75. The gallery hastily deserted and old John—plugging along in the wake of his famous pipe, marked up another 71—golf that should have won the championship.

John used up seventy-five strokes during his initial round, in spite of three birdies, but yesterday marked up sixteen perfect pars—one birdie and went one over to mar an otherwise perfect card. John is right up with the leaders, with a 146, and here's hoping John finishes even better today.

It's hard to laud success—then swing right into misfortune, but Joe Turnesa, with thirteen strokes on the par five sixteenth yesterday, failed to qualify. In addition, Joe lost a lot of friends through his remarks concerning California, but Joe did NOT criticise his scorers for not telling him his third shot—over the green into a barranca—might have been lifted and dropped back for a penalty of one stroke.

HAD RIGHT TO CRITICISE

If using eight strokes over par before a gallery of several thousand fans doesn't entitle a golfer to criticise any and everything—nothing in this world ever could. Joe had a kick coming. It takes more than sunshine and an incomparable climate to constitute hospitality—and youthful Joe—a prime favorite with every professional golfer in the world, is a visitor in California. Joe should have known the rule or should have consulted his scorecard. Joe is a fine boy—California is all right and—100 years from now—but why worry. Joe collected ten friends for every one he lost yesterday.

About Mr. Cooper, 'Ammering 'Arry pounded his way through George Von Elm to win the first Los Angeles open crown, two years ago. Since that time, Harry arose to magnificent heights by tying with Tommy Armour in the last national open—decisively trounced Walter Hagen in Texas last winter—but lately, had apparently mislaid just about every shot he had in his bag.

Cooper yesterday was again the golfing tornado that endeared him to galleries of old. Harry's birdie 3 on the third yesterday was the first indication that he was off to another career—if not another title.

The better-than-par hole fell just early enough to carry Harry to the turn, for he slipped one over on nine. Harry dropped birdies on eleven, fourteen and fifteen coming home—after taking a 4 on the par 3 tenth.

GOLF HISTORY REPEATS

Cooper is again paired with Von Elm for the final thirty-six holes today—and while the former national amateur champion is eight strokes back with a 150, George has two good rounds coming up. If memory serves correctly, Von Elm picked up seven strokes on Cooper at Los Angeles during the third eighteen-hole round two years ago. Jim is due for a real workout today—and the handicap is severe enough to insure the greatest shot-making exhibition of the day.

Dudley finished under wraps. The youthful Hollywood professional—out in 37 had difficulty counting up to a 34 on his incoming nine. Big Ed simply was golf wild, coming home, and if the good-looking, easy-swinging shot maker doesn't surprise even his most optimistic friends today, we'll attempt to chronicle the reasons tomorrow. Dudley is simply a finished golfing machine. If Ed will just continue in that perfect stride, Mrs. Ed and little "Miss Eddie" are designed to be wife and daughter of the next Los Angeles open champion.

Bill Mehlhorn drew his customary hard-luck round yesterday. Out in 35, even with par, Bill stopped on ten to think of Al Watrous and slipped three over with a 6. Bill is playing sound golf and got two strokes back with birdies on fourteen and fifteen when the three toughest finishing holes in this vicinity exacted an extra stroke each, and Mehlhorn was home with a 75 and is back in the field with a 146—still within easy striking distance of the leaders.

MAC SMITH DANGEROUS

MacDonald Smith will always be one of the most dangerous challengers in any competition. Mac's health failed just about one year ago, but he is back in great shape this season. Mac simply knows too much golf for most contestants. Mac never "cracked" in his life. When he is putting and approaching Mac is always near the top. Mac's approach shots yesterday were just as good as his putts and both were perfect. Wilshire will be easier today than at any time during the tournament. Counting Mac Smith out of first money this afternoon is going to require the concentrated stroking of a better-than-par exponent. Mac is paired with Ed Dudley, and, while it looks like Cooper tonight, it's going to look a lot like Mac Smith or Dudley later in the day.

Watrous must pick up five strokes during his two-round jaunt today. Al is just capable of doing it, too. Harry Cooper is just about as dangerous as dynamite—particularly when he is in front as today. Harry either will, or won't—but, either way, he is bound to contribute the most sensational exhibition of the day.

There are three great golfers between Bobby Cruickshank and his second open crown—but Bobby will be better today than he was yesterday when a 71 threw him into a tie for fourth. Abe Espinosa and Mortie Dutra are bracketed with Bobby at 145 each. Abe is just about as dangerous—and nearly as flashy as Harry Cooper. Bobby has the ability to drive under pressure—and Bobby starts really working this morning.

MEL SMITH GOLFING

Mel Smith, purposefully ignored for the first two days, is well up with the leaders with two 73s for a 146. Like Dudley, Smith has been golfing under wraps for the past two days and the Portland celebrity will get going today. G. D. Paulson, Indianapolis youngster, knocked down a 69 yesterday—and he was more than entitled to it, too. Paulson ruined a good score with an 81 Friday, but he is once more back in the running and a lot of confidence comes with a better than par round.

Fay Coleman, California Country Club youngster, is leading Von Elm for amateur honors by one stroke. Fay is 149 while George is 150. Coleman drew enough bad breaks to ruin even Tommy Armour when he used up 41 strokes going out, but rallied gamely with a 36, even par, coming home.

The greatest drive in West Coast history is scheduled for the Wilshire course today. Spectators should reach the scene of the tournament as early as possible and secure vantage points—and remain "secured." Club officials will be hard pressed to care for the crowds today and any little help will be appreciated—and help should first be extended to all contestants. Fans in one gallery—but what's the use.

Don't pass up the Cooper-Von Elm match—don't overlook Watrous and watch for a probable winner in the Mac Smith-Dudley threesome—keep at least one eye on Bill Mehlhorn—another on Little Abe Espinosa—still another on Brother Al—don't forget Little Vic D'Alberto picked up a 74 after having a nine on his card yesterday — Pull for John Black—if Jack Tarrant starts putting—trail the former "Texas Wildcat," and give Wee Bobby Cruickshank a long, lingering look—and Tommy Armour is still very much in the championship, ditto, Leo the Diegel—Charles the Guest—John the Black—Tom the Stevens, Hutt the Martin, Dallas Jeffers—and others.

For real entertaining excitement, gallery Harry Cooper—it will be worth it!

ROOSEVELT CAGERS WIN FROM SAN PEDRO

Roosevelt High's casaba squad successfully invaded San Pedro yesterday, returning home with two victories over the local high school. Both games were very closely contested, Roosevelt winning the heavyweight tussle by a two-point margin, 19-17. The lightweight game was even closer, the Rough Riders taking it on the thin margin of one point, the score being 18-17. The line-ups:

Heavyweight—San Pedro: Wolfe, lf; Ray (3) rf; Jeffery (6) c; Maland (6) lg; Hashford, rg; Cpalin (1) sub.

Roosevelt—Jesse (8) lf; Shepard, rf; Cohn (4) c; Helden (3) lg; Wilson, rg; Gold (4.)

Mate in two. White (4 pieces) K-KR4; Q-QB2; B's-QR2 & KB8. Black (1 piece) K-K4.

Solution No. 8: N(R4)-B5.

Solvers' list: R. W. Stewart, C. H. Baldreige, W. B. Toder, H. F. Schopf, Charles Broughton, Pasadena; J. O. Doige, J. M. Meinhardt, A. J. Grant, Whittier; Clara Cameron, Pomona; Fred Biebesheimer, Al Bucher, E. G. Goodman, Mrs. Isabel Cole, Tacoma, Wash.; Robert L. Burns.

The annual meeting of the Los Angeles Chess and Checker Club was held Saturday afternoon, December 31, at the club's rooms, 921 Union League Building. The only business outside of the election of officers was the adoption of two resolutions, introduced by Lewis W. Palmer, retiring secretary, one authorizing a program of expansion in four ways: larger and better quarters, broader activities to include other games than chess and checkers, a paid manager or secretary, and the addition of a ladies' room; the other resolution calling for a revision of the constitution. The following officers were elected for 1928: President, Clif Sherwood; vice-president, I. W. Gleason; secretary, Thomas Word; treasurer, Andrew Wallace; board of directors, Dr. M. Scholtz, G. S. G. Patterson and Hugh Wilton. Chess tournament committee: Dr. E. H. Sawyer, chairman; Harry Borochow and Sidney Weinbaum. Checker tournament committee: H. L. LeClere, chairman; W. I. Lundy and John Dougherty. House committee: Fred Andre, chairman; Douglas Graham and Richard Palmer. Librarian: Kenneth L. Haegg. A committee to revise the constitution was named, as follows: Spencer Austrian, chairman; Lewis W. Palmer and Hugh Wilton. The vice-president and treasurer were the only reelections. A vote of thanks was given the 1927 officers for their splendid work.

About twenty-one years ago a dozen or so Los Angeles checker and chess fans played their favorite pastime in a basement coffee shop on Court street, near Main street (now on the site of the new City Hall.) As the place became too crowded John W. Watson, local checkerist, rented space upstairs, bought the tables, etc., and started a regular club. For about three years Mr. Watson also paid most of the expenses. The club soon outgrew its quarters and moved into larger rooms in the Higgins Building. About seven years ago another move was made into the Union League Building, eighth floor, and later to the ninth floor, where the Los Angeles Chess and Checker Club is still located. Mr. Watson is so proud of the growth of the organization that he has repeatedly refused reimbursement for any of the funds he provided to help finance the club during the first few years of its existence.

The finals of the 1928 championship tourney of the Los Angeles Chess Club were started last night. Play will be continued each Saturday night until completed. The following six players headed the preliminaries in the order named, permitting them to enter the finals, carrying their scores with them: Sidney Weinbaum, G. S. G. Patterson, E. Schrader, Harry Borochow, Prof. H. Bateman and Alfred N. Pray.

Starting next Thursday the Mercury, official weekly of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, will resume its chess column edited by G. S. G. Patterson.

You can't help but enjoy running over a game like the following, played in the Berlin tournament, 1927.

A Moscow dispatch advises that the Soviet government would welcome Dr. Alekhine, new world champion, should he return to his fatherland. Should he loyally support the new Russian government, it is intimated his estates would be restored to him, as the soviets consider his great talent in the intellectual game as an invaluable aid for the mental uplift and development of the masses.

The President of Cuba has recently conferred a signal honor on the great chess players of the world by appointing Capablanca minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary at large of the Cuban Republic. This will allow him to travel at state expense to all leading chess tourneys. For over ten years Capablanca has done more to make his country known abroad than any other man.

HOLLYWOOD SWIM STAR OUT TO BREAK RECORD

Harold Plossel, the Hollywood Athletic Club national A.A.U. seventy-five-yard swimming champion, who failed by a fifth of a second of breaking the world's record for the 100-meter backstroke, will get another chance to smash the record for that distance next week.

Coach Swendson of the H.A.C. has been developing Plossell slowly for the past year and is expecting the youngster to make the Olympic team this year.

ALL-AROUND STAR

Lionel Conacher, the "Big Train" of the New York Americans hockey team, is probably the best all-around athlete Canada has ever produced. He was in a class all alone as a rugby player, a fine lacrosse player, a good wrestler, a star on the baseball field and a better than average boxer.

DOUBLE SOCCER BILL SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

Making the initial bid of the new year, four teams of the Los Angeles Soccer League clash this afternoon at Loyola Field in a double bill that each hopes will be their start toward the leadership of the league. The feature game will find the Los Angeles Athletic Club squad opposing the Vikings while the Magyars and the Richfield aggregations will play the opener. The first game is slated to start at 1 o'clock with the feature contest billed for 3 o'clock.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club team is trailing with the also-rans for the first time after ruling the loop for four years. Oscar Kozma, manager of the Mercury squad, has drilled his team on team play and with Al Milford, soccer commissioner of the club, has primed the team on an attack that they figure should "take" every team in the league.

Mervyn Scott, stellar center forward, is the key man to the Mercury attack backed up by such tricksters as Robertson, Joe Tunnecliffe, Jimmy Allen, Bobby Low and others.

The Vikings with their brilliant trio of forwards, Brix, Cleve and Frederickson have one of the most spectacular individual offensives in the league. Brix never fails to give the fans a thrill with his single-handed thrusts for a score.

The Magyars with Pepi and Felix as their best scoring bets are depending on their star goalie, Kolmel, to keep the Richfield offense subdued. Johnny Bain, leader of the Oilers, has followed the team attack idea and is relying on a concentrated offensive to snow the Magyars under.

TOMMY ARMOUR DEFENDS LONG BEACH GOLF TITLE

BY BILL WISE

TOMMY ARMOUR

Tommy Armour, national open champion, well up with the favorites in the $10,000 Los Angeles championship that will conclude with thirty-six holes at the Wilshire club today, will start defending his Long Beach crown in the third annual Virginia club classic, scheduled to get under way next Friday.

Tommy won the Long Beach championship at the end of fifty-four sensational holes last year, but the noted Congressional club professional will have to stave off an even more brilliant field this year and the competition has been extended to seventy-two holes.

Armour flashed home under a great golfing group last year—smacking iron shots and putting with an uncanny precision that no other contestant in the championship was able to duplicate. Tommy swung back into his real stride—the stride that carried him to the major title in United States golf—with the opening of the Los Angeles classic last Friday.

Cruickshank, the most dangerous challenger in the Long Beach field last year, is again playing great golf and will score well over the revamped Virginia club layout.

Visiting golf dignitaries have always liked the Virginia course. The play this year will open with an informal amateur-professional event over the Long Beach municipal course Thursday. The first eighteen-hole qualifying round will be played over the same course Friday the day following.

Affairs of the Week

By Juana Neal Levy

California, known internationally as the Land of Sunshine and Flowers, is coming into its own with a most glorious and well-deserved fame for winter sports, many of the resorts vying for first place against Lake Placid and many of the well-known winter resorts of the East.

Yosemite is a mecca for hundreds of lovers of out-of-doors winter sports and the New Year's festivities were much enjoyed by a bevy of well-known Southern Californians who motored up and passed the holidays at the splendid new Hotel Ahwahnee in the Yosemite National Park.

Snowshoeing, skiing, tobogganing and coasting, tramping over the snow-clad fields, and enjoying having their faces washed in true old eastern fashion in the snowbanks are among the many sports which are becoming more and more popular.

Among the Angelenos who enjoyed the New Year's festivities at the Ahwahnee were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Janss, their attractive young daughter, Miss Paula Janss, and sons, Bodie and William Janss.

The latter lads were especially taken with the bobsleds, and mastered its intricacies with skill, coasting down the toboggan and landing in glee at the snowbank at its base.

Mr. and Mrs. Janss and Miss Paula are extremely expert with snowshoes and skis and had the time of their lives in the clear, crisp air, which made leggings, mufflers, tams and mittens of wool most acceptable.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradner Wells Lee, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Leimert and their young son, Tim, also tried out the joys of snowshoes, skis and bobsledding and are enthusiastic over the snow sports.

Others participating in these attractive and strenuous activities were Miss Barbara Douglas, Dr. A. Peterson and M. B. Silverberg, who, with Mr. and Mrs. Janss and Miss Paula Janss, accompanied Al Kay, who drove the two great horses attached to the sleigh, plodding through the drifts and down the snowy roads through the great forests and after these delightful outings all returned to the Ahwahnee for evenings passed around the great fires in the lobby.

Campus News

Two weeks of glorious fun are now but a memory to the co-eds of the University of California as they returned the first of the week to resume studies and prepare for coming academic examinations. Gay house parties and other social affairs marked the closing of the Yuletide season when the Sigma Alpha Kappa's smart cabin, located at Manhattan Beach, was the setting of an enjoyable house party over the week-end. Dancing, hiking, swimming and bridge were the forms of entertainment. Thirty guests were present.

Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Mary Katherine Moore, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Charles B. Moore of North Avenue 54 to Bruce Merton Lawson was solemnized December 27, the ceremony taking place in the Highland Park Presbyterian Church with Rev. Arthur Lee Odell, D.D., officiating, assisted by Rev. Daniel S. Fox, pastor of the bridegroom. The church was beautifully decorated in Yuletide motif, the chancel banked with spruce and fir trees, garlands of ferns and sprays of cotoneaster, rose larkspur, sweet peas, while red gladioli in the center of the platform was the only touch of color, and tall white tapers in brass candelabra were lighted just before the entrance of the bridal party.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Marian Welton Daniels sang and Mrs. Charles E. McDowell presided at the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of heavy white satin embroidered in pearls, her veil of tulle, which by the way was one worn by her mother, was caught with orange blossoms and pearls and she carried white roses, sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Miss Frances Elizabeth Moore, sister of the bride, was maid of honor in pink satin, and tulle shading from pink to rose tones, and carried sweet peas and pale pink roses. MARRIAGE EVENT OF LAST YEAR

[Sergis Alberts Hoover studios]

Mrs. Hugh W. Alberts

The marriage of Miss Ruth Watson, daughter of the late Rev. Samuel J. Watson and Mrs. Watson of 5353 Abbott Place, to Dr. Hugh W. Alberts was a charmingly appointed event of December 16, the ceremony taking place in Highland Park Methodist Church with Rev. W. Y. L. Davis officiating, a reception at the church following. Dr. and Mrs. Alberts have gone to Alaska and will delay their honeymoon until the more clement weather of the spring, when they are playying to travel through Europe and also tour the United States.

Dr. Alberts, the government director of the experimental station in Sitka, is an alumnus of University of Wisconsin, and holds membership in Sigma Psi, Phi Sigma, Gamma Sigma Delta and Alpha Zeta honorary fraternities, while his bride was unusually popular at the University of Southern California, where she was elected a member of Phi Kappa Phi honorary sorority, and a member of Delta Gamma sorority, Torch and Tassel, and also served as president of the Trojan Y.W.C.A., in addition to being active in the El Rodeo staff and student executive committee. She was graduated with highest honors, having attained the distinction of magna cum laude with her degree.

Mrs. Wellesley Mogan of Covina and Mrs. Robert Harkness sang preceding the ceremony and the Lohengrin bridal chorus was sung by a male quartet (Drs. Hamer and Beem and Messrs. Berns and Steinel,) while Mrs. Oliver Thompson of Riverside presided at the organ, and Miss Nella Winslow played 'cello numbers during congratulations in the church vestibule.

Mrs. Lyman Cavanaugh of Lake Arrowhead was matron of honor and Dr. Alfred Kosky, best man; little Bonnie Ray Barnes, 4-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roger Barnes, flower girl, and Dr. Sidney Brownsberger and Dr. Elmer Nelson, ushers.

The bridal gown was of ivory velvet, while the matron of honor was in apricot silk and the flower girl in yellow taffeta.

A reception and wedding supper at the home of the bride's parents for fifty relatives and bridal party followed the ceremony, while the musicians were entertained at dinner at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Dr. and Mrs. Steele have taken a house at 136 Carson Road, Beverly Hills.

Home Again

Hawaiian players will stroll about the tables during the evening, singing native songs, the entire decorations carrying out the Cocoanut Grove motif. The cigarette girls will also be in Hawaiian costumes and they are all members of the league and debutantes of society in the Southland.

Mrs. Howard Hawley Wells (Margaret Johnson) is chairman of the evening, and one of the objectives is to obtain funds to purchase the adjoining lot to the day nursery, which may be used for a play yard for the kiddies.

Wedding at Roosevelt

The first wedding to take place at the Hotel Roosevelt in Hollywood occurred recently when Miss Sara L. Tomansky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tomansky of Los Angeles, became the bride of Samuel Brown, son of Mrs. Katherine Brown of Newcastle, Pa., with Rabbi Lissauer of Temple Immanuel officiating.

An altar of flowers in the pastel shades was formed at one end of the Spanish Room, and here the service was read at 6:30 p.m. The bride, given in marriage by her father, reached the altar through an aisle of flower baskets topped with tall white candles. She wore a gown of pink satin, bouffant in style and trimmed with iridescent pearls, with an imported headdress of pearls and Chantilly lace, and carried a shower bouquet of pink tea roses and lilies of the valley. Her maid of honor, Miss Tobia Rappaport, wore green satin and tulle and carried pink roses.

Fred Wilkie served Mr. Brown as best man, while Alfred Hirschman assisted as groomsman, and Stanley Fox and Philip Gordon ushered.

Following the ceremony dinner was served at a large horseshoe-shaped table decorated with baskets of roses, and centered by a wedding cake five feet high. Covers were laid for 125 guests, and a reception for 200 followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown will leave the 15th inst. for Chicago and other eastern cities, returning to make their home in Los Angeles.

Her sister, Miss Estelle Jamison, as maid of honor, wore a frock of apple-green georgette and carried pink and lavender sweet peas.

Harold Jamison, brother of the bride, served Mr. Overbay as best man, while preceding the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus, Miss Betty Donnelly and Miss Rose Donnelly played as 'cello and violin duets, "All For You" and "My Happy Day."

Society in Washington

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Society in the capital is having its gayest fling of the twelve month, with luncheons, eggnog parties or teas, dinner parties, dances and supper parties, while for Sunday and Monday morning there were several bona-fide ham and egg breakfasts following the late all-night dances. Thus the twenty-four hours were consumed without rest.

Of course the older members of society are going a little milder pace, stopping short of the ham and egg breakfasts. Last week the younger members of the social world were so far well in the lead, and soon will return to school or give way to their elders, who will resume the official routine of entertainment.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Kellogg extended invitations to their diplomatic breakfast in the Pan-American Union Building to the smartest element of society from this and other cities, and it was indeed a bounteous feast that was spread on long tables.

Foreigners are hearty eaters and they linger long over the American viands. There was no wine or other liquor, the punch being simply a lemonade with fruits in it. Stately poinsettia in tall silver and crystal vases stood sentinel the full length of the table and, with palms, forming a background before which the Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg received.

Speaker of the House and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth are quite conspicuous figures around the New Year. They attended the reception which the President and Mrs. Coolidge give recently at the White House, proceeded from there to the Pan-American Union for the diplomatic breakfast, and made several of the Cabinet calls and then reached home in time to keep open house until 7 p.m.

Paulina Longworth was the belle of the Christmas party given at the Congressional Club for the children under 12 years of age of Senators and Representatives.

Mrs. James Y. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor, was there with Jane, Jeanne, Joan and Jewel, her four daughters, wearing their fluffy ruffles frocks of blue taffeta. Mrs. Morris Sheppard of Texas took her dainty little girl, Betty and Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King of Utah, who this winter is living at the Highlands, took her large group of small children. Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of Senator Edge of Ventnor, N. J., took her young children and in fact it was unusual to find so many little ones in the families of such an august body as the Senate. From the House, the children were legion and in all there were about 250 who romped through the afternoon.

Christmas and New Year parties in the Diplomatic Corps each had a showing and American women often assisted the foreign hostesses.

Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah of Idaho, and Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister of Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard of Texas, and others of official life assisted Frau Carl von Lewinski, wife of the German Consul-General in New York, Monday afternoon when she and Dr. Von Lewinski, who came from New York, received much of the social world of the capital.

Frau von Lewinski is an American woman, the daughter of "Brick" Pomeroy of western political fame, (Colorado) and it was she who smoothed the way for amicable social relations after the World War, Dr. Von Lewinski was counsellor of the Embassy and Frau von Lewinski was the strong appeal for friendship.

Mrs. Borah who wears graceful and quite effective toilets, has a string of large amber beads, wonderfully cut and polished, and fully two yards in length, to which an interesting story attaches. So lustrous and variable are they in shade that she wears them with almost any costume. They were the gift of a westerner and his wife, who chanced to sit near Mrs. Borah in the Senate gallery while Senator Borah was speaking. An acquaintance sprang up and some time after the visitors left the capital, Mrs. Borah was surprised to receive the gift from them.

MARRIAGE EVENT OF DECEMBER

Honeymooners Will Sail for Europe

[Murillo for Western Press Service]

Mrs. John Duyan

SACRED HEART CHURCH made a beautiful setting in its all-white decorations for the wedding Sunday, December 18, at high noon, when Miss Mildred Rancadore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rancadore, became the bride of John Duyan, son of Mrs. Anne Duyan of Hollywood. Rev. Father Joseph Bauer performed the ceremony in the presence of a large group of relatives and friends. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of ivory satin with ruffles of tulle and her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an arm shower of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Lena Sancheri served as maid of honor, wearing a peach taffeta gown, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaids were Misses Frances and Irene Fontana, their gowns were orchid chiffon with tulle ruffles, and they carried pastel sweet peas. John Knezvich was the best man. A wedding breakfast followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Duyan left for a brief honeymoon and will leave early this month for a tour of Europe. On their return they will make their home in Hollywood. The bride was graduated from Lincoln High School while Mr. Duyan is a graduate of Los Angeles High School.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY

Among the most interesting affairs of the Navy social calendar during the holidays was the informal dancing party given by Miss Hester Laning, daughter of Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Harris Laning; Miss Ethel Bloch, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Claude C. Bloch, and Miss Elizabeth Porter, a civilian set debutante, who entertained Tuesday night for Miss Polly Larimer, a student at Wellesley College, who is passing several weeks in Long Beach as house guest of Miss Laning. Miss Larimer arrived Monday with her mother, Mrs. Edgar Larimer, who will make her home at Hotel Virginia while Capt. Larimer is in command of the U.S.S. New Mexico. The affair was given in the attractive ballroom of the Commodore Apartments in Ocean Boulevard, where the Lanings make their home, and a profusion of Christmas greens, berries and holly wreaths were used to carry out a gay setting. Among the younger set members and their escorts who were bidden for the evening were Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Lord Campbell, Lieut. and Mrs. L. B. Cresswell, U.S.M.C.; Ensign and Mrs. Donald G. Campbell, Ensign and Mrs. Franklin X. Carmody, Ensign and Mrs. Thomas Toiseth, Misses Ruth and Anita Tarrant, Miss Dorothy Campbell, Miss Martha Rawlins, Miss Daniel Bolin, Miss Margaret Canaga, Miss Betty Chase, Miss Martha Cluverius, Miss Earleene Edwards, Miss Polly Larimer, Miss Ethel Butler, daughter of Brig.-Gen. and Mrs. Smedley D. Butler, U.S.M.C., who came up from San Diego to attend the party; Lieut. Carmine, U.S.S. California; Lieut. Edward Rawlins and Lieut. Clark Thorington, U.S.S. Tennessee, and Ensigns William Cooper, Clarke, Jack Griffin, George Permont, U.S.S. Pennsylvania; Royce, Flippin, Stanton, Dunlap, Norman Beakner, James Byrnes, G. R. Donaho, Spencer, John Roper, Bailey, U.S.S. California; Paul Drouilhet, Paul Ramsey, U.S.S. Tennessee, and Anderson and Ragsdale, U.S.S. New Mexico.

Entertaining in honor of Admiral and Mrs. Louis R. de Steiguer, Commander, and Mrs. A. J. Chantry, Jr., U.S.S. California, were hosts at last Wednesday night's dinner-dance at the Pacific Coast Club. A Christmas color scheme was suggested in the ebony bowl filled with crimson poinsettias and the silver candelabra appointing the table, where covers were marked for Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Harris Laning, Capt. and Mrs. Pettingill, Commander and Mrs. W. A. Glassford, Commander and Mrs. L. A. McNair, Commander and Mrs. H. O. Roesch, Commander and Mrs. L. Wild, Commander and Mrs. G. D. Murray, Commander and Mrs. Robert Theobald, Commander Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Murray of Pasadena, Admiral and Mrs. de Steiguer and the host and hostess.

Commander and Mrs. W. R. Glassford, U.S.S. California, motored to Phoenix, Ariz., recently for the holidays as the house guests of the former's parents, Col. and Mrs. W. A. Glassford, U.S.A.

St. Cecilia chapel, Mission Inn, Riverside, was the setting for a wedding recently when Miss Natalie Kibler, a popular San Diego society girl, became the bride of Lieut. James V. Carney, U.S.N. The ceremony was performed by Father O'Mahoney and was witnessed by only the immediate families. Mrs. Virginia Davis of Los Angeles was the matron of honor, while Lieut. Robert F. Hickey, U.S.N., was best man.

A wedding luncheon was served at the inn after the ceremony, and following a brief honeymoon the couple will make their home in San Diego, where Lieut. Carney is a naval aviator attached to the air station.

Miss Katharine Barbee Summers of Abindon, Va., and Ensign Preston Grant Locke of Sheridan, Wyo., were married at an interesting military ceremony last Saturday night at the First Presbyterian Church in Long Beach, with Dr. George M. Rourke officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Lewis Summers, wore a lovely gown of white Duchesse satin beaded with pearls and a Juliet cap of pearls with orange blossoms, and carried a shower of orchids and gardenias. Miss Kathleen Penn of Los Angeles, maid of honor, wore a frock of pink and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and delphinium. Little Charline Jessup and Carolita Weisgerber were flower girls. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Constancia Weisgerber sang "Beloved, It Is Morn" and "At Dawning," with Mrs. Harrill Dyer at the organ. Ensign Clarence E. Gregerson of the U.S. destroyer Shirk was the best man, and the ushers, who later formed the arch of swords for the bridal party to pass beneath on their way from the altar, were Ensigns R. H. Phillips, S. H. Taecker, R. R. Sands and L. G. Johnson. A Skidmore presided over a brief business session, after which the party gathered round the cheery fireplace for the entertainment numbers. Earle Clemens, accompanied by Harold A. Cole at the piano, sang "Holy Night." "Resolved, That There is a Santa Claus," provided considerable merriment as a debate, resulting in a tie. W. P. Bartlett, Jap Elledge and H. A. Cole took the affirmative, while L. J. Skidmore, R. Lance Blatt and J. A. Milligan appeared on the negative. J. A. Milligan gave a talk on "The Meaning of Christmas." She it was who directed the Children's Theater of Los Angeles, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Federation. She is also associated with the extension division of the University of California.

Maestro de Lara Returns to City, Resumes Class

Manuel Sanchez de Lara, teacher of singing and conductor of grand opera, after two years of traveling, resting and concertising in Mexico and the Eastern States, has returned to Los Angeles and will resume his professional work here. He has opened a musical school, to be known as the De Lara School of Music.

Maestro de Lara will be the director of the school and will have personal charge of the voice and opera departments, also he contemplates having a distinguished faculty of well-known artist-teachers for other departments.

Before his departure two years ago Maestro de Lara had a permanent studio in Los Angeles for ten years and established an enviable reputation for himself as a teacher of singing and as a coach, conductor and producer of grand opera. He was the first and only Los Angeles teacher who produced complete grand operas, entirely with his own pupils, and this he did for about five years.

The building selected by the maestro for his new school of music is a stately mansion in the Wilshire district opposite the Bryson Apartments and overlooking Lafayette Park. Spacious drawing-rooms will be ideal for the many recitals and other musical events which are already being planned for the coming year.

TERPSICHORE

The Breon & Darrow studios have now moved to their new building at Sunset Boulevard and Vine street. This location has increased transportation facilities, also private parking space.

The studio was especially designed with a view to the health, comfort and convenience of the students. The growth of the Breon & Darrow school has necessitated the larger quarters.

New classes are being formed at the Earle Wallace studio of dancing.

Elisa Ryan announces that all beginners' classes for the new year will be held on Monday at her studio on Wilshire Boulevard.

The first class will be held at 2 p.m. for children of the age of 4. Beginners' classes in all forms of dancing will be held on that afternoon. Collegiate class at 4:30 and children of the age of 15 at 5:15.

A most treasured gift is a silver slipper presented to Mrs. Theodore Kosloff by the pupils. It is an exact replica of the ballet slipper worn by Maria Talioni, famous French ballet dancer of 100 years ago. The original slipper belongs to Kosloff's art collection. The pupils obtained the slipper and had it reproduced in silver and beautifully engraved.

The Ernest E. Ryan School of Dancing, 1500 South Figueroa street, will start the new year with an elaborate program of classes. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ryan established their school in one of Los Angeles' oldest landmarks on Figueroa street, eight years ago.

New classes in all departments of dancing at the Marshall Hall studio on Sunset Boulevard are now being organized and will start shortly. These include the special classes in rhythmic dancing for health, poise and grace, as well as Hall's story dancing class for children which meets every Saturday morning. In the latter named, Mr. Hall, formerly pantomimist for the Metropolitan Opera Company, makes an imaginative appeal to the children through nursery tales and other stories which he askes them to work out in their dances.

New classes in step dancing will be started at the Ernest Belcher school of dancing during the coming week. Wednesday evening there will be inaugurated a new class for adults and on Tuesday afternoon a new class for children.

These classes will be the last started before late in the spring. Work includes tap, buck and wing, waltz, clog, sand and all other branches of this art. Instruction in this work is under the direction of Arthur Prince, former well-known tap dancer of Broadway, New York.

Great interest is being manifested in the professional children's department to be opened the 15th inst. by the Nature Music School. This course will be under the personal supervision of Marie-Howey Hazelton.

The dancing periods will be divided, one-third given to technique, one-third to dances and one-third to individual attention. Stage dramatics will be given, also voice placing, stage setting. The classes will meet after school from 3:30 to 5 o'clock, three times a week at both the Los Angeles and Hollywoods school.

Helen Carson and Marion Flohre came all the way from Oklahoma to Los Angeles to study the art of dancing under the famous ballet masters, Serge Oukrainsky and Andreas Pavley. Their enthusiasm has been rewarded. After a few months of intensive training in their studio they have been engaged for the present tour of the Pavley-Oukrainsky Ballet, which gave its opening performance in Toronto on December 26, and will make an extended tour throughout Canada.

NEW OPERATIC TENOR TO BE HEARD HERE

William Clare Hall will be heard in voice recital Tuesday in the Bovard Auditorium. Mr. Hall, a tenor, has placed through his teaching such artists as Attillio Baggiore with the Constanzi Opera Company, Rome, Italy; James H. Goddard, Vienna Opera; Dris Morelle, Milan Opera; Mary McCormac, Paris and Chicago Civic Opera; Bernice Bonheur, Constanzi Opera Company, Rome, as well as being himself a product of such masters as Lambardi, De Reszke, Seagle, La Pierre, and Alexander Nelchow.

Mr. Hall is under the exclusive management of the Professional Arts Guild.

MUSIC NOTES

Guido Caselotti, voice teacher and opera coach, who came to Los Angeles two years ago after twenty years spent in teaching in New York City, is now beginning his thirtieth year of voice teaching. Since his advent to California it has been necessary for him to form a voice class in Long Beach.

To him credit can also be given for the success of both his wife, Maria Caselotti, soprano, and his young daughter, Louise, mezzo soprano. They have both been engaged by the Havana Opera Company for important roles in their repertoire of operas to be given for twelve weeks in both Havana and Florida, and will leave the latter part of this month to fill engagements with that company.

Mr. Caselotti is now holding opera classes where pupils are instructed in the traditions and the dramatic art so necessary for a successful operatic career. He hopes later to take many of them abroad for possible debuts in the roles in which they have qualified.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR JANUARY 15, 1928

WHAT REALLY IS THE MATTER WITH THIS OLD WORLD TODAY!

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

The International Sunday-School lesson for January 15 is, "Jesus and Sinners"—Mark ii, 1-17.

If John Mark had worked on a newspaper which gave bonuses for the week's best story, he would surely have got a prize for his report of how the home of the Healer was mobbed by a multitude, and then broken into by desperate friends of one sick man. In the best sense, the narrative is "sensational," while at the same time a marvel of close-packed, pictoral writing. Two other authors record the same event, but entirely without Mark's little touches of local color which make the scenes to live again.

Fame had followed the healings by Jesus, especially His cure of the leper. So densely did the crowds dog His footsteps that He left the city for a sojourn in the desert. Days later He returned home to Capernaum, where He dwelt with His mother and brethern. The news quickly got around, and the house was literally mobbed by a multitude of sick folk, curiosity seekers and other persons interested from a variety of motives. The jam was so great that there simply was no getting into the house by the door.

LOYAL AND LUSTY FRIENDS

Among those crowded out of the house was a paralytic, borne on his pallet by four friends. Apparently the man's plight was a consequence of his own sins; nevertheless, he must have been an attractive personality, for he held the loyalty of four faithful and resourceful friends. Few of us who are in full health can muster four such thick-and-thin comrades. When the crowds about the Healer proved an insurmountable barrier, this dauntless quartet made their way to the roof, and with an audacious sense of relative values, tore up the tiles, and let their friend down into the presence of Jesus and of the amazed company. Anybody who wants anything as badly as these four wanted healing for their friend is pretty sure to get it.

Most of us want little boons lightly. Our desires are trivial and transitory. Lack of tremendous purpose and passion seems to mark these dilletante days. An infusion of first-rate ambition into youth would cure half the cheap little sins that afflict them.

WHERE TO TAKE TROUBLES

Civilization is groping for a Court of Last Resort. Nations refuse to disarm; masses war against classes; strikers strive against employers; socially minded thinkers devise weird philosophies; families rush to divorce courts; private murder grows apace; unhappiness spreads like weeds—all because men have not discovered a Supreme Jurisdiction, animated by justice and possessed of power. Ah, if men but knew to Whom to carry their woes and weaknesses and wrongs!

All the while, that Capernaum crowd shows the answer. The four friends and the paralytic knew. There is One who has the master word for every need. Jesus Christ does hold the remedy for all that is wrong with this world, both as a collection of nations and of individuals. The great truth that Mark is seeking to convey is that Jesus has come with every sort of help needed by humankind. There would be no work for divorce courts if unhappy husbands and wives would resort to Jesus. Hate would not rule between classes if both accepted the Saviour's sway of love. Nations which walk in obedience to the royal law of Christ do not war with one another. Thinking is not muddied and muddled when brought into the white light of the presence of the Son of God. All the discordancies and inharmonies and maladjustments of life are healed by the Great Physician.

WHAT EVERY PHYSICIAN KNOWS

A first-class commotion was created by Christ's saying to the man sick of the palsy, who had been laid at his feet through a hole in the roof, "Son, thy sins are forgiven." In my home is a senior medical student, and I get many a peep into clinics and wards and classrooms; and it is clear that, while not all suffering is caused by sin, a deal more of it is than Mme. Grundy is willing to admit. Every physician can give names and dates for the Bible's proposition that "The wages of sin are death." It would be easy for a medical man to suggest the probable form of sin that had caused this particular man's palsy. So Jesus, striking at the root of the evil said, "Thy sins are forgiven," thereby healing the victim.

Censorious scribes were stirred by these words. The cure of the paralytic interested them less than this apparent impiety and hetereodoxy on the part of Jesus. There are plenty of scribes still in the world. They listen to sermons primarily to search for errors. Their principal ability is skill in fault-finding. A host of heresy hunters have abdicated the practice of vital Christianity for this pursuit. Their one test of religion is ability to detect defects in other Christians. Every generation has its own scribes.

Brave, as always, the Healer did not evade the challenge of the critics. Fully aware of the staggering implications of His avowal, He openly declared that the Son of Man had authority to forgive sins, as well as to heal.

He bade the man with the palsy take up his bed-roll, or pallet, and walk, which he did, to the amazement of the multitude, whose attention had been centered upon this particular case by the drastic methods of the four friends. A greater boon than health is forgiveness: Christ's supreme cure is of man's basic ill, which is sin. That word "sin" is going out of fashion nowadays; but the thing itself was never more in vogue. Our desires are many; our need is one—salvation from sin.

A REFORMED OFFICIAL'S BANQUET

Two episodes make up this lesson. The second is the call of Matthew, the tax-collector, to enter the discipleship of Jesus. This choice would have been called a social error and a political blunder by the scribes and the pharisees. For Matthew was a renegade Jew, in that he held a post under the Romans as a publican, the most odious of callings. Worse yet, this tax-collector remained loyal to his old friends and associates; and when he gave a great banquet to his new Master, he invited publicans, or his fellow-tax-collectors, and others outside the pale, to be guests also.

Holy hands of horror were lifted by the "unco guid," the scribes and pharisees, as they complained that this new teacher was losing all chance of being "taken up by the right people," because He dined with those who were "socially impossible."

Without hesitation or apology, Jesus flung back into the teeth of His critics a definition of His Mission that is the hope of the helpless, and a glimpse into the father-heart of God:—"They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick; I came not to call the righteous, but sinners."

"Red Finder" Attached to Film Camera

The "red finder" is the newest attachment to the motion-picture camera.

Necessity again proved the mother of invention during the filming of a scene in "Circus Rookies," the new George K. Arthur-Karl Dane co-starring vehicle, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Louise Lorraine, who plays the leading feminine role, does the part of an acrobat and is hoisted to the top of the tent to work with a professional acrobat in one of the scenes.

The camera was placed at an advantageous point among the extras who were the spectators at the circus. But the professional acrobat turned the actress so many times that she lost her sense of perspective and when the director called to her to "look this way," she could not find the camera among the sea of faces. As a result the scene had to be taken again and a small red light, which always attracts the eye, yet is not glaring enough to interfere with the shooting, was rigged up and placed just above the camera, so that no matter how many stunts were done Miss Lorraine could find "her audience," the camera.

Dorothy Dwan Has to Learn Typesetting

Most actresses who play the featured feminine leads of western film productions expect to have to learn to ride horses, shoot guns and do other stunts which are usually identified with out-of-doors pictures, but Dorothy Dwan has to learn to set type.

Miss Dwan, who is playing opposite Tim McCoy in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Riders of the Dark," has the role of a newspaper publisher on the frontier in the lawless days of the early '80's.

Following the death of her father a part of Dorothy's duties is to set type and print the paper which denounces the lawless element of the town.

Never having had any experience in typesetting Miss Dwan was taken to the studio printing office where she worked three days learning to set type rapidly enough for screen purposes.

"Learning to set type wasn't half as hard as learning to read type upside down after it was set and before galley proofs were taken of the daily copy," says Dorothy.

Although an expert horsewoman the actress will not be required to display her skill along those lines in "Riders of the Dark." There are several wild rides but Dorothy participates in them as a saddle passenger of McCoy,. or in a buckboard to which is attached a runaway team.

The picture is now being directed by Nick Grinde, former assistant director who has just been elevated to a full directorship. The cast includes: Rex Lease, Roy D'Arcy, Frank Currier, Bert Roach and others.

German-Born Actor Signed for Picture

Fritz Feld, German-born actor, has been signed by Pathe-De Mille to play the supporting role to Rudolph Schildkraut and Louise Dresser in William K. Howard's production, "His Country," which is under way at the studios.

Mr. Feld created a sensation as the piper in "The Miracle" last winter, and since that time has been playing a number of important roles in various screen productions, among them Norma Talmadge's "The Dove," Emil Jannings's "The Way to Glory" and De Mille's "The Leopard Lady."

In "His Country," Mr. Feld plays a Russian Bolshevik who seeks to plot against a humble immigrant who casts his lot in America. In this role Feld will be seen in another of his sinister characterizations which have made him a leader among stage and screen players. Before coming to America, Feld was for twelve years closely associated with Max Reinhardt in Europe, and directed the stage for him at the famous Deutches Theater, Berlin.

The cast of this new picture includes, in addition to the featured players, Milton Holmes and Linda Landi, juvenile leads; Robert Edeson, Louis Natheaux and Lucien Littlefield. It is a screen adaptation by Sonya Levien of an original by Julien Josephson.

Actress Marks First Year of Screen Career

Today Sue Carol is spending her first New Year's Day as a member of the motion-picture industry. With only nine months of her career thus spent, Sue has played leading roles in five pictures. Her first was in "Slaves of Beauty." Then followed the lead opposite Douglas MacLean in "Soft Cushions." Next she enacted the ingenue lead in "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris." After this she played in "Pigskins" for Fox. She has just completed the featured feminine role opposite William Boyd in "Skyscraper" for De Mille-Pathe.

"I have only one New Year's resolution with respect to my motion-picture work," said Miss Carol a few days ago. "That is:

"Resolved, that I shall continue to do as I have been doing—letting things take their natural course."

Miss Carol is under contract to the Douglas MacLean Productions and is being loaned by that company to other organizations. She is regarded as one of the most popular of the younger generation of coming stars.

OH KIDS! FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, LET'S CUT THIS OUT!

Young Stage and Picture Star in New Play

"Saturday's Children" to Open Tonight

Maxwell Anderson Drama is About "Peepul"

"Saturday's child shall work for a living."

From this line in the familiar verse of childhood days, "Saturday's Children," which opens at the Belasco Theater tonight, gains its name.

All the young people in Maxwell Anderson's new play are Saturday's children—they work for their livings. Their little problems are those that confront most people in the everyday walks of life. The big question is how to pay the butcher and the grocer.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the leading man in the play. Doug, Jr., hurried back from San Francisco, where he was playing in "Young Woodley," to appear in the new Belasco production.

This fall young Doug seems well equipped to be a Saturday's child. He shouldn't have to do much worrying, at least as far as the grocer and butcher are concerned. When he isn't acting on the stage there is the screen. If these two allied arts

BALIEFF TROUPE COMING

Russian "Chauve-Souris" to Open at Belasco in Two Weeks

Having triumphed in Paris, London, Berlin and New York, as well as in his native Moscow, Nikita Balieff, founder and director of the Bat Theater, is at last bringing his "Chauve-Souris" company direct to the Belasco Theater in Los Angeles the 23rd inst.

An off-shoot of the Moscow Art Theater, the performance of Balieff's "Chauve-Souris," held equal rank in Russia with those of the Art Theater and the highest price—10 rubles—then worth about $5, was charged as the price of admission.

With the revolution Balieff and his family of Bats flew to Paris. Here they were strangers in a strange land. Yet acting in a strange tongue at the Theater Femina, Nikita Balieff became the sensation of the hour, Paris, London, Berlin and then New York.

Never anything quite like the "Chauve-Souris" had been seen. It is not a play; it is not vaudeville; it is not revue. Instead it is a little of everything—singing, satire, dancing and burlesque, full-voiced choruses, exotic gypsy tunes and hearty parodies.

The outstanding triumph is the genius of Balieff himself. He comes before the curtain to announce and interpret the various offerings. Nightly he murders the English language to the great delight of the audience.

SALTY MUSICAL COMEDY OPENS

"Hit the Deck" Arrives at Majestic

Merry Show Flavored With Delicate Romance

Theater Redecorated by Miss Albertson

Carrying the flavor of the sea, with the robust, rowdy fun of a jolly gang of sailors, and yet endowed with a delicate breath of romance, "Hit the Deck," Vincent Youmans's musical comedy, arrives at the Majestic Theater tomorrow night.

This merry musical show which has been variously termed a "smash" and a "sensation" is no weak sister, according to reports of its success in other cities. It has played to packed houses at the Lurie Theater in San Francisco for eight weeks. Other companies are playing with equally good fortune in New York, London and Chicago.

Its "Hallelujah" chorus, a big, booming, thumping song which thunders out from the throats of the forty-eight singing boys and girls of the ensemble, is the best known number of the show. It is a catchy tune which is not unknown already in this city, but it has yet to be heard in all its rousing chant from the stage. Other

NEW OPERA AT SHRINE TOMORROW

"Wildflower" Opens as Third Attraction of Light Opera Season

Nina Benedetto is a slip of an Italian peasant lass with a flashing, lashing temper and a bashful farmer sweet heart.

Her very, very rich and aristocratic uncle dies and leaves to her his immense fortune and estate upon the condition that she must not lose control of this wild and fury-ridden temper for six whole months.

This, in short is the plot of "Wildflower," Oscar Hammerstein's operetta of New York success a few seasons ago, which is to be presented, beginning tomorrow night, as the third offering of the Shrine Light Opera Association.

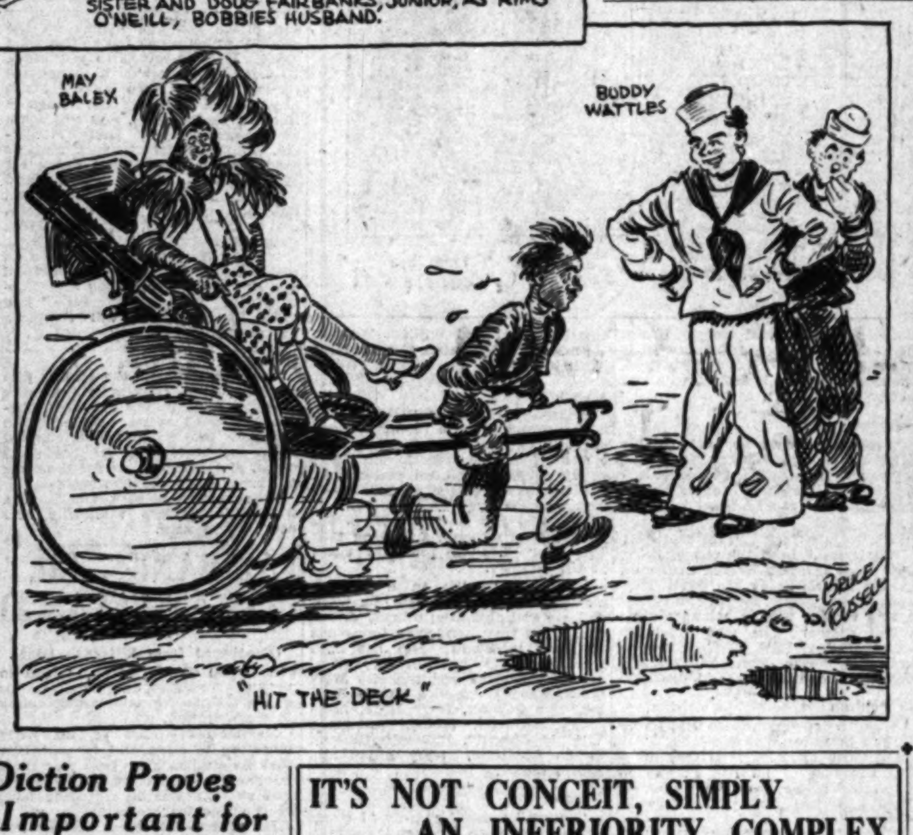
It is a merry, colorful thing, this "Wildflower," the book and lyrics by Otto Harbach in conjunction with Oscar Hammerstein II, and the music by Herbert Stothart and Vincent Youmans. There is a lovely Italian garden in the springtime when the apple trees are in blossom for one setting, the grounds of the luxurious villa of the rich uncle for another, and again the farmyard garden, this time in the fall with red apples on the tree boughs.

Among the songs of the operetta are "Bambalina," sung by Nina and ensemble, "Wildflower," "Apple Blossoms" and "You Can't Blame a Girl for Dreaming." And then there are others bearing such titles as "I love You, I Love You." "Some Like to Hunt," "The Best Dance I've Had Tonight," "Casimo," "Good-by Little Rosebud," "The World's Worst Woman," and "You Can Always Find Another Partner."

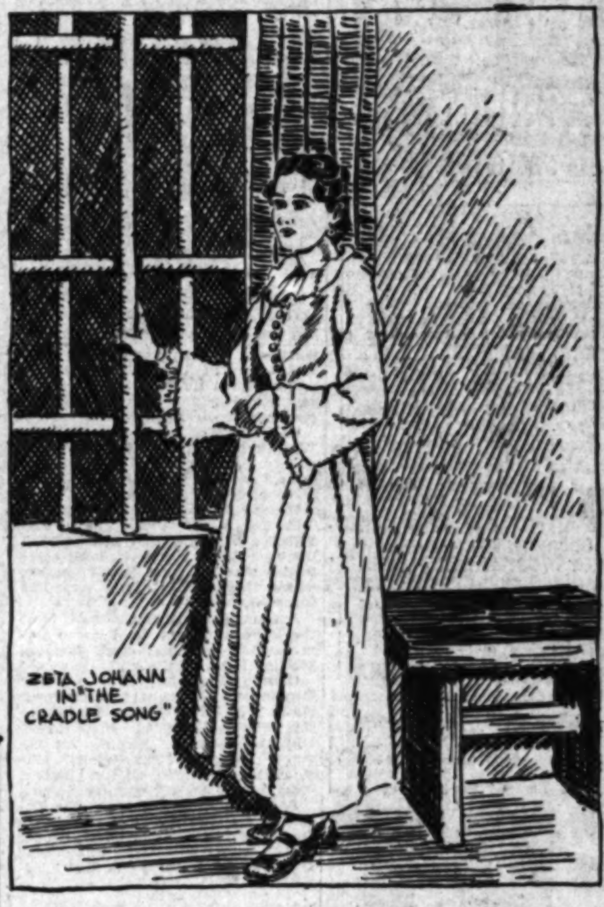
Eva Olivotti sings the role of Nina, with Ralph Errolle to be heard as Guido. Others in the cast are George Kimkel, Richard Powell, John Cherry, Cora Bird, Roland Woodruff and Charlot Woodruff. Frank M. Rainger is staging the production, with Frank N. Darling, conductor, and Hans S. Linne, associate.

"Wildflower" was first staged by Hammerstein in New York at the Casino Theater about four years ago. It is therefore one of the newer of the offerings forming the repertoire of the Shrine Light Opera Association, which launched its season with "The Merry Widow."

Following the Harbach-Hammerstein vehicle will come stagings of "Boccacio," "Naughty Marietta," "Prince of Pilsen," "Firefly" "Mlle. Modiste," "Irene" and other musical gems from the works of Victor Herbert, Leo Fall, Reginald De Koven, Rudolf Friml, Otto Harbach and Gilbert and Sullivan.



"HIT THE DECK"



ZETA JOHANN IN "THE CRADLE SONG"

Busy Time for First Nighters

Among the new attractions which come to Los Angeles this week are "Saturday's Children, which opens at the Belasco tonight, "Hit the Deck," a bright musical comedy, comes to the newly decorated Majestic tomorrow night. On the same night the distinguished play, "The Cradle Song," will have its Southern California premiere at the Mason. Scenes from the three attractions have been sketched by Staff Artist Bruce Russell.

Diction Proves Important for Stage Success

The diction of Montague Shaw, who plays the country doctor in "Undertow" at the Egan Theater, is commented upon by audiences at every performance. In a round, beautifully modulated voice every syllable comes to them in the most distinct manner. Years of training, from early childhood, are responsible for this fine diction, but, according to Mr. Shaw, who was at one time a teacher of dramatic art in the Toronto University, a certain degree of proficiency can be attained by anyone who will seriously attempt to acquire it.

"Slovenly habits are responsible for most of the errors in speech," he declares. "The nose, the teeth and the tongue are all misused. The English cockney slights the nose and gets a peculiar snarl; the Yankee twang is too well known to need any comment or explanation. These defects are really more noticeable in English and American speakers than in the continentals of Europe."

IT'S NOT CONCEIT, SIMPLY AN INFERIORITY COMPLEX

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

Some of the Orpheum fans may have been thinking of John Steel as a slightly conceited young man, what with his very sophisticated stage airs and his general attitude of easy superiority. In fact some of the more daring ones have so expressed themselves. They are all wrong.

It's an inferiority complex turned around. He told me all about it the other day and this is the story.

When young, oh very, very young, John Steel, joined the Ziegfeld Follies and was given a stellar part right at the beginning of his career. He was terribly nervous and scared to death. He knew he had the voice, several years of work with La Forge and Clement had convinced him of that and his mirror told him he had the fatal Irish gift of telling fairy tales in songs and being most handsome while he was doing it, but the inferiority complex would not behave.

One day, a red-letter day for John Steel, he consulted a psychoanalyst on the subject and turned page after page of childish history for him. The doctor discovered the trouble and he immediately lost all the nervousness and the stagefright vanished, never to return.

Now the grateful singer is helping his sister to raise her children so they won't have any inferiority complexes, for he has turned to the study of psychology for himself and is pursuing it with diligence.

He admits he "psyches" his audiences too, and knows a lot about them at the end of a program.

It is two years since John Steel was in Los Angeles. The interim has been spent abroad, where he has been studying with his eye on La Scala, having a good time at Nice and singing in "Castles in the Air" at a smart London theater. "Castles in the Air," he says, was the most interesting thing he did over there—because he had a speaking and singing part and some critic told him he was a second Henry Irving.

After a few months on the Or-

WRITING SONGS HARD WORK, FUN, SAYS RECORD ARTIST

Writing a song is great fun, thinks Gene Austin, "crooning tenor" of Victor records, who will sing new and old favorite song numbers for patrons of the Hillstreet Theater this week.

"First, there is the urge to write," he says. "Then there is the actual writing. And, no matter what I may be doing, I start immediately on the writing when the mood comes to me. Finally, comes the smoothing-over of the rough edges, with a word or two added or omitted or a note or two changed here and there."

"My wife is the best judge of my songs and I always go by her opinion. She represents the public to me. If she says 'thumbs down' on a line, it will never get into a song of mine."

Among the song successes composed by Austin are "Charleston", "How

What's Doing in NEW YORK

"The Royal Family" Harris Scores Anew Informal Stage Life

BY ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—When word went abroad that George Kaufman, and Edna Ferber were writing a comedy about a theatrical family en deshabille—some such magnificent and faintly fabulous tribe as the Kembles, let us say, or the Barrymores—we might, I think, have foreseen that it would be not only as richly comic as "The Show Shop" but as fond and heart-warming as "Trelawney of the Wells." So indeed it proved to be. It seems to me that the company which Jed Harris has assembled (by use of posses, bloodhounds, decoy ducks and writs of mandamus) are able to realize a good deal less than all the treasures of laughter that lie in the Kaufman-Ferber script. Yet "The Royal Family" even as it was played at the Selwyn on the Wednesday of Christmas week, gave me the most thoroughly enjoyable first night I had experienced in many and many a week. Certainly since "Porgy."

"The Royal Family" is a brief, crowded violent chapter in the annals of the house of Cavendish. It observes the various Cavendishes in the process of quitting the stage forever, all except old Fanny Cavendish, who is ordering the scenery of "Mrs. Castlemaine" dusted off for another trek across the continent, even when it is written large in the lines of her face and the sag of her shoulders that she will not live to be in the train.

BACK AGAIN

Tony Cavendish may half believe himself when he talks of studying the violin in Munich and eating rice in India and filling out his days just looking at Chartres Cathedral. But Lord, he has been retiring from the stage every season since he wore the velvet pants and lace collar of Fauntleroy. And you know he will be back again in no time with a new play in his trunk.

Little Gwen may go so far, in one of her wild attempts to be a person instead of just a Cavendish, as to marry into the Scarsdale set and withdraw from the public view long enough to present the world with Aubrey Cavendish Stuart. But a few weeks later she is talking business with Terry Helburn of the Theater Guild (nothing so gross as salary mentioned, of course,) and even this pardonable interlude probably struck her grandmother as rather effeminate. Gwen's mother, Julie Cavendish, had known her business better, having been an instinctive enough trouper to arrange to be born in Holy Week when the folks would be laying off, anyway.

Even Julie is visited at intervals (every nineteen years or so) by a sudden passion to walk out of the stage door forever and know, for once in her life, the comfort of being taken care of by some one else. "Go on and relax," says her manager gloomily, "go on and be a bazaar patroness."

NO MORE NONSENSE

But the warning treble of the call boy—"Last call, Miss Cavendish"—will halt her, even in the midst of a declaration that she will never, never, never—"last call, Miss Cavendish"—then no more of that nonsense till next time.

Julie Cavendish is the first lady of the American stage. Whatever picture of gracious, flower-bestrewn ease you may conceive as the probable home life of such a one, the authors of "The Royal Family" take pleasure in erasing. A rococco household, furnished by the accumulated mementos of past triumphs, telephone bells, messengers, boxing lessons, debts, telephone bells, messages, fittings, photographers, reporters, relatives, telephone bells, rehearsals, readings of manuscripts, hasty snatches at romance, telephone bells, duns, infuriating audiences, hangers-on, leeches, a benefit for the Newark newsboys at the Century on December 3—"Mother, don't let me forget bronchitis on December 3"—telephone bells, etc., etc., etc.

FLOWER BESTREWN

Flower bestrewn? Yes. But even when a swan in South America leaves an order for two dozen American beauties to be delivered every morning there is Della, the maid, to express the hope that they won't come much longer. And there is Fanny, her mother, to observe tartly that there is no romance in flowers that you know will come as regularly as the milk, and that she, personally, is tired of wading through rose petals on her way to breakfast.

You see Julie Cavendish's life as a long succession of years in which she had never been able to stay at one dinner party long enough to get any salad. And for what? For what? Well, her name in electric lights.

"But some night the fuse blows out," says the young man from Scarsdale, "and then where are you?"

It is really the life and death of Fanny Cavendish that answers that question. If I had both leave and room to print a scene from "The Royal Family" by which you might savor its quality, I should be tempted to transcribe that moment when Fanny Cavendish has to listen while her brother Dean (who has bought a toupee and gone over to the two-a-day) describes the rather neat little sketch—amusing, human—with which he plans to help the vaudeville people lift the level of their programs. He has pictured himself in this sketch as a rich, youngish bachelor (and woman hater) and got as far as the arrival of the little waif (pigeon-toed and carrying a dog) to perch on the arm of the old woman-hater's chair, when Fanny just gets up and walks out.

"But," says Dean, "I have not finished."

"Oh, yes," says Fanny, "you had."

Actress Given Real Watch Dog

Dorothy Sebastian made it known that she wanted a watchdog. Several days later a friend of hers presented her with a Chihuahua so tiny that it can almost stand on a watch.

It is not the hairless variety of Chihuahua and looks like a miniature police dog. The pet, which is as yet untitled, weighs exactly a pound and a half, is six inches long and three inches tall. Dorothy says that it is the living example of a bark being worse than a bite.

Hollywood Playhouse Star Cites Climate, People and Real Estate

Henry Stockridge, who has recently been added to the cast of Oliver Morosco's musical comedy, "The Morning After," at the Hollywood Playhouse, loves Southern California—its climate, its people and its real estate.

"The climate makes one healthy; the people make life worth living out here; and real estate provides one with a good income, providing one knows where and how to invest," declared the comedian.

In "The Morning After" Stockridge is again under the direction of Oliver Morosco, the man that made him a star. Morosco produced such successes as "Temperance Town," "When Knights Are Bold" and "The Man Who Owns Broadway" with Henry Stockridge as the leading man.

Since that time Stockridge has appeared in many New York successes. His last stage appearance was in New York in "East is West." While on the road he last appeared here in Avery Hopwood's "Fair and Warmer," which played at the Mason Theater.

He takes the role of John Ashley in "The Morning After." Ashley is the father, who has never argued for twenty-five years, having known his wife for exactly twenty-five years.

NOT CONCEIT, BUT COMPLEX

pheum, Mr. Steel is to renew his contact with the light-opera world through a new Irish musical comedy which opens in Boston late this season.

When twitted upon his perennially youthful appearance, Mr. Steel replied that he had begun to sing very early in life and never had to struggle. His first appearance was a success and the rest has been quite simple. We know that this is true because Mr. Steel dismisses the idea of any difficulties in his life with an expressive shrug and talks gaily of his love for California, especially Beverly Hills, and says he longs to get back even when he is on the Riviera.

More Originals Asserted Need

Robert N. Lee, who has studied the screen from every angle for years and knows its problems and its needs, tersely names "more originals!" as the "shortest way 'round" in the search for screen material.

"More originals and the same consideration for originals as is given to plays, short stories, novels and the like. Most originals need few changes and they are easy to make, while many plays and novels are purchased merely for the title, or a story for a locale, and are new creations when the scenarist prepares them for the screen," Lee points out.

In the Footlight Realm

Five new plays will open in Los Angeles this week.

First comes "Saturday's Children," 1927 prize drama from the pen of Maxwell Anderson. With Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the leading role, this opens at the Belasco Theater tonight for a limited two weeks' engagement, making way on the 23rd inst. for "Chauve-Souris."

"Hit the Deck" at the Majestic, "The Cradle Song" at the Mason and a new light opera offering, "Wildflower" at the Shrine Auditorium, all make bows tomorrow night.

Vincent Youman's musical comedy, "Hit the Deck," and "The Cradle Song," a charming play dealing with life in a Spanish cloister, both come to Los Angeles from San Francisco, where they have enjoyed very fine successes.

Another opening of the week is at the Belmont, where "It Pays to Advertise," a perennial stock favorite, goes in for a week's run.

Other offerings include "The Cocoanuts," Biltmore; "Undertow," Egan; "Pigs," El Capitan; "The Morning After," Hollywood Play House; "Sunny," Mayan; "Grounds for Divorce," Morosco; "The Vortex," Music Box; "Kongo," Orange Grove; "The Desert Song," Windsor Square.

At the vaudeville houses the Orpheum features a double header including Nance O'Neil and John Steele; the Hillstreet tops Gene Austin and the Pantages features the film, "Seventh Heaven."

Biltmore

"The Cocoanuts," New York musical comedy success featuring the Marx Brothers, is in the last week of its engagement at the Biltmore Theater. The production has scored a decided hit but must close to give room to the Paramount feature motion picture, "Wings," which will open at the theater next Sunday night.

Belasco

"Saturday's Children," listed as the best play of 1927, opens tonight at the Belasco Theater with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the leading role. The production, which was written by Maxwell Anderson of "What Price Glory" fame, was first produced by the New York Theater Guild and had a run of more than a year before its Chicago showing.

"Saturday's Children" is being staged under the direction of Fred J. Butler and the cast includes Mary Doran, Isabel Withers, Allen Vincent, Howard Hickman, Virginia Sale, Ruth Douglas Lansing and Robert Morse. Because of the opening of the "Chauve-Souris" on the 23rd inst. the Anderson play is limited to a two weeks' engagement.

Belmont

"It Pays to Advertise," a laughable farce first produced some seasons ago, returns to the Belmont Theater tonight with members of Murphy's Comedians in the featured roles.

Egan

"Undertow," from the pen of Zelda Sears and Garnett Wilson, continues as the attraction at the Egan Theater. Henry Kolker staged and carries a role in this play, a strongly emotional drama. The cast includes Henry Kolker, Elise Bartlett Schildkraut, Theador Von Eltz, Zelda Sears, Montague Shaw and others.

El Capitan

With the current report that Henry Duffy's production of the John Golden comedy hit, "Pigs," is now nearing the end of its run at the El Capitan Theater, capacity houses have been inorder at the Hollywood theater.

"Pigs" is now entering its ninth week with a cast headed by Gay Seabrook, Alice Buchanan, Emerson Treacy, Florence Roberts, May Buckley and John Stokes.

Hollywood Playhouse

"The Morning After," produced by Oliver Morosco, is now in the third week of its showing at the Hollywood Playhouse. The play concerns a minister who is subject to aphasia spells, which lead him into many an absurd and laughable situation. Herbert Corthell has the star comedy role. There is a large cast and chorus.

Majestic

With "Hit the Deck," Vincent Youman's nautical musical comedy, the Majestic Theater, painted, redecorated and generally renovated, will reopen tomorrow night. "Hit the Deck" is a merry musical success of the East and is being staged in Los Angeles by Lillian Albertson.

The cast includes ten principals and a chorus of forty-eight singing and dancing boys and girls.

In leading roles are Kathryn Crawford, May Boley, Buddy Wattles, Jack Durant, Frank Mitchell, Regis Toomey, Kathleen Kidd, Evelyn Nair, Gardiner Hart and William Wagner.

Among the popular song hits is "Hallelujia."

Mason

Beginning tomorrow night at the Mason Theater for a fortnight's engagement will be "The Cradle Song," comedy drama by Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra, Spanish playwrights. The play is a production of the Civic Repertory Theater of New York of which Miss Eva Le Gallienne is the founder and director, and is on tour this year through principal cities of the country.

Dealing with life in a Spanish cloister, the play is said to be a delicate and charming comedy drama which has been performed thousands of times in Spain and has been translated into the German, Italian and French. The cast includes Mary Shaw, Harry Davenport, Phyllis Rankin, Zita Johann, Mary Hone, Alexander Kirkland, Fanny Davenport, Virginia Gregorio, Elizabeth Chester, Paulla Robinson, Mary Arden and Albert Moore.

Mayan

"Sunny," musical comedy of circus life, continues as the popular attraction at the Mayan Theater. It is now in its eighth week and has been proving an exceptional offering. The cast is a prominent one, including Helen Patterson, Harry S. Miller, William Valentine, Peggy Hope, Ernest Wood, Fred C. Holmes, Jimmy Mosley and others.

Morosco

"Grounds for Divorce," by Guy Bolton, from the Hungarian version by Ernest Vadja, is the current attraction at the Morosco Theater. It recently played for several months at the Empire Theater, New York.

The cast is headed by Kay Hammond and John Litel, with the usual Morosco favorites in support.

Music Box

"The Vortex," Noel Coward's play, is now playing a limited engagement at the Music Box Theater, Hollywood. Barton Hepburn appears in the leading role with Mary Forbes, Ivis Goulding, and others in support.

Orange Grove

"Kongo," companion piece to "White Cargo," is at the Orange Grove Theater. Shannon Day and Charles B. Middleton are featured in the cast.

Shrine Auditorium

"Wildflower," will be presented as the third offering of the Shrine Light Opera Association tomorrow night at the Shrine Auditorium. The first two operas have been well received and further enthusiasm is expected as the season progresses.

Windsor Square

"The Desert Song," a highly colorful musical comedy, is at the new Windsor Square Theater. The production was staged by Lillian Albertson and heading the cast is Perry Askam.

Hillstreet

Gene Austin, Victor recording artist, will share honors at the Hillstreet this week with Ethel Clayton and Ian Keith in a comedy playlet "Clipped."

Joe Browning will offer a "Timely Sermon." The Marimba Maids, ten comely young ladies, present a musical novelty while Edith Evans and Ray Mayer offer a new act of song and melodies. The Aurora Trio have a cycle act.

Franklin Pangborn will head the screen in his initial starring picture entitled "My Friend From India" and E. Mason Hopper production with Elinor Fair. Pathe Newsreel, comedy and Fables conclude.

Orpheum

Nance O'Neil, the dramatic stage star, and John Steel, American tenor, will divide headline honors on the new bill which comes to the Orpheum today. For her return to vaudeville, Miss O'Neil selected a condensed version of her stage success, "The Lily." Steel will offer new songs in this, his second week, and will again be accompanied by Eddie Fitzgerald. Another offering which remains for a second week is the dance act of Bill Robinson, Al Trahan and Vesta E. Wallace in "The Curtain Speech," by Frank Fay, bring comedy to the new bill, with the "Ballet Caprice," featuring Day and Aileen, and with W. Wania, is intended to please dance lovers. Jack Redmond and company. George and Jack Dormonde in "Scientific Nonsense," and "The Shadowgraph" will complete the new bill.

Pantages

"Seventh Heaven," the feature film starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, comes to the Pantages Theater this week in its first downtown showing. The production is adapted from the stage play of the same name, and has been heralded as one of the year's finest photoplays.

In conjunction with the film, a series of Pantages vaudeville acts will be presented.

FAIRBANKS, JR., IS AT BELASCO

should pall on him he could turn to writing or sketching—almost too many talents for one young fellow to carry around.

He received most of his early schooling in Paris and it was there that he studied art. Last year Doug published a book of verse and he has two short poems in a recent issue of the Theater Magazine.

He prefers the screen for a vocation, however. The others will just classify as avocations.

"You see, the screen is always advancing," he said. "The stage has stood still for years. Why, the other evening we saw 'The Mark of Zorro,' made a few years ago. So rapidly had improvements been made in filming that it seemed out of date."

NEVER MARRY

The young hero of "Saturday's Children," a $40-a-week clerk, gets married and proceeds to quarrel lustily with his wife. Doug says he himself will never get married.

"Actors should never marry," he explains. "Only rarely do they make a success of marriage."

Let's see, now. Doug, Jr., is 20 or 21. At that age young men have been known to change their viewpoints.

Perhaps it is taking an unfair advantage, it may be one of those things that an interviewer should consider strictly entre nous, but Doug really couldn't settle down to talking comfortably until he had sent a telegram to a titian-haired young star at present out of the city on location. And the photographic likeness of the same girl looks out from his cigarette case.

HIS AMBITION

It is Doug's greatest ambition to play the role of the young Napoleon in "L'Aiglon." For four years he has studied the play, and read musty histories in German and French relating to the Emperor, his son, and events of the period. He can relate some choice tidbits about Napoleon that the school texts have overlooked entirely.

While he is working in "Saturday's Children" he may do a picture as well. He will shortly be seen in Los Angeles in "The Texas Steer," with Will Rogers and Louise Fazenda, and filmed partly in Washington, D. C.

Botelers Plant Christmas Tree

Wade Boteler, actor-writer, subscribes heartily to the new "plant your own Christmas tree" movement.

"The fir tree, adopted as it is to almost every climte could grow in every garden," says Boteler. "With a slight revision of our ideas on Christmas decoration, the trees need never be cut at all. Especially in California could they be decorated and lighted where they grow, for the enjoyment of all passers. My lads are planting Christmas trees for their future pleasure and, who knows, perhaps the pleasure of their children?"

Wade Boteler, who has many screen scripts to his credit, is now completing a characterization in Lasky's "The Traveling Salesman."

song hits of the show are declared to be "Sometimes I'm Happy," "Lulu," "Lucky Bird" and "Join the Navy."

The production which comes to Los Angeles is a Lillian Albertson show, organized and rehearsed in this city with the dances staged by George Cunningham. It is the second big musical show to be produced here within a few weeks by Miss Albertson, her production of "The Desert Song" now being shown at the new Windsor Square Theater.

The Majestic Theater, which is to be the setting of "Hit the Deck," has, in honor of the occasion, been thoroughly renovated, painted, decorated and refurbished to such an extent that it is practically a new playhouse. All of the old-time theater seats have been removed and replaced with new, cushioned orchestra chairs. Gold lace curtains and new drapes have been hung and the stage rebuilt.

The cast numbers May Boley as Lavinia, the negro cook, a jovial, beaming-faced character; Kathryn Carver, listed as "another find" of Miss Albertson's; Buddy Wattles, and others. Miss Carver sang in the chorus for the producer two years ago and did such good work that Miss Albertson cast a canny eye her way, declaring that the time would come when that young chorus girl could carry a principal role.

Then there are Jack Durant, Frank Mitchell, Regis Toomey, Kathleen Kidd, Evelyn Nair, Gardiner Hart and William Wagner, ten principals in all, and a mixed chorus of forty-eight, who tap out terpsichorean calisthenics designed by George Cunningham.

The story of "Hit the Deck" (and there is a story,) is about the efforts of Looloo, the coffee shop maid, to win Bilge Smith, a sailor. There are six scenes in the two acts, one of them set in a Chinese seaport town.

TRAGEDY IS TABOO WITH PANGBORN

De Mille Actor Deserts Heavy Drama After His Life in Trenches

Believe it or not, but there's a [illegible] comedian who does not long to play tragedy.

For, you see, Franklin Pangborn saw plenty of the more serious side of life in France during the war. Besides, he rather reversed the order of things when he began his stage career in an amateur production of [illegible] in Newark, N. J., his home town. Later he played Messala in [illegible] and appeared with Nazimova in "War Brides" and "Ma[illegible]."

It was during his six months' period of confinement in the American hospital center, Mars-sur-Allier, where he was sent after being shellshocked in the Argonne, that Pangborn made the decision which changed his entire career. He determined that when he returned to America he would devote himself to cheering up audiences instead of steeping them in gloom. And he began carrying out this idea while still under the doctor's care when he helped build a theater at the hospital center and staged shows for the wounded boys.

Unfortunately, he had overestimated his cure and the dread shell-shock once more asserted itself. He was sent back to a New York hospital and there Jessie Bonstelle, famous stock-company figure of Detroit with whom he had formerly appeared, called on him and persuaded him that the California climate would make him well.

Since he has been in California Pangborn has become a local stage favorite, his most memorable portrayals being in "The Rear Car" and "Weak Sisters." It was while he was appearing with Trixie Friganza in the latter comedy success that studio officials saw him and signed him for an important comedy role in "Exit Smiling," with Beatrice Lillie.

That was the beginning of his screen career, which has gradually elevated him in popularity through outstanding comedy characterizations in "Getting Gertie's Garter," "Cradle Snatchers," "The Night Bride" and "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" until now in "My Friend From India," which is the screen feature at the Hillstreet Theater this week, he reaches starring heights.

No, Franklin Pangborn has no desire to do tragedy. His overwhelming ambition right now is to bring P. G. Wodehouse's "The Indiscretions of Archie" to the screen, and it is not unlikely that movie audiences may see Pangborn in the guise of Archie during the coming season.

DIRECTORS OFTEN FOOLED BY SOUND, SO HE COVERS EARS

Aver at the Tiffany-Stahl lot during the shooting of "The Tragedy of Youth" it was noticed that George Archainbaud very frequently muffed his ears with his hands during the taking of certain dramatic scenes. Some one, thinknig George had an earache, offered a remedy, but he explained that very often his ears interfered with his eyes in directing, and for that reason he sometimes found it necessary to cover them.

"Sometimes," said George, "a director is misled by sound, and sound, of course, doesn't photograph. So I place myself in the position of the audience, which sees everything but hears nothing. It is so frequently the case that an intelligently delivered title, together with good music, will convince a director that he's put over a big scene until he looks at his rushes.

"If the emotion that the scene should have called forth appears in the actor's eye and in the expression of the face, the scene was put over and the director gets the same reaction as the audience will later—but there is always the danger of being misled by elocution and a beautiful speaking voice, so I run no chances of allowing my ears to blind my eyes. It's the emotion in the face and change of expression to fit the occasion that counts—not the liquid notes of a fine singer, or beautiful speaking tones of the player.

"In muffing my ears I see everything that the audience sees. If I should allow sound to interfere, a lot of blah material would have to be cut out when it reaches the editorial rooms. Many a player's best efforts have remained in the cutting-room because a director has believed in the voice instead of the facial expression and the emotion in the eye."

"WINGS" TO SHOW AT BILTMORE

Opening Date of Paramount Production Set for Sunday Evening

"Wings," the Paramount film of wartime aviation, which is one of the reigning successes among current motion pictures, opens for a limited engagement at the Biltmore Theater the 15th inst. and will be shown twice each day following the opening for the balance of the local engagement.

The film will be presented here with the same exceptional use of the magnascope (triple-sized screen,) airplane and gunfire effect embellishment which has already caused so much talk in New York, where the picture has been current for more than twenty weeks.

What is said to be a strikingly beautiful musical score has been written for this work and the accompaniment here will be by an augmented orchestra of symphony musicians with Luigi F. de Francesco coming here from the Criterion Theater in New York, especially to conduct.

The most spectacular phase of modern warfare—fighting in the air—is brought vividly to the screen in "Wings," it is said. The film depicts in realistic and gripping scenes the heroism of American aviators in the World War. The filming was accomplished with the active co-operation of the United States War Department.

Mary Brian's Cafe Complex Explained Now

Friends of Mary Brian, who may be worrying because they fear she has developed an insatiable appetite may now rest easy. The secret is out. It was not food that the popular Paramount leading woman was seeking recently while spending most of her free hours in cafes, but atmosphere.

Miss Brian has the part of a cafe cigarette girl in "Partners in Crime," the new Wallace Beery-Raymont Hatton melodramatic comedy, and she decided that the best way to learn about cigarette girls was to watch them in action. Consequently she spent every evening for a week before the picture started in production in the cafes on Hollywood Boulevard. Incidentally, the cigarette bills of her friends mounted skyward.

Tower Offers Screen Version of Evans Novel

John Gilbert is seen in the characterization of the dynamic St. Elmo Thornton, Augusta Evans's hero of the romance, "St. Elmo," which has been reissued for screen purposes and is now showing at the Tower Theater.

The work of Gilbert is said by critics to be excellent in this story. His portrayal of the romantic St. Elmo is contrasted by that of Bessie Love, feminine lead. The remainder of the cast selected features Warner Baxter in the heavy role, Nigel De Brulier, Lydia Knott and others.

In addition to this screen production, the management is showing Fox Movietone News and a Vitaphone accompaniment comprising two acts, one entitled, "In a Monastery Cell," and Sally Fields, for many years an outstanding star of the stage, who appears in a sketch entitled "The Hostess."

Actress Bears Most Criticism, She Declares

Feminine motion-picture fans may fix the greater part of their attention on the hero of the silent drama, but nevertheless the heroine must stand the brunt of their critical judgment, in the opinion of Mary Philbin, who is the charming Portia in "The Man Who Laughs," which Universal is filming.

Women are very quick to find fault with their own sex, but they are not alone in this. This is likewise true of men, opines Miss Philbin, who gleans her unbiased information from no less reliable a source than by overhearing the conversations of motion-picture fans themselves.

This leads Miss Philbin to believe that although women are probably more interested in the hero, yet any action on the part of the heroine that is not convincing does not escape their attention.

MAXIMS OF DARKNESS EXPLAINED

Coauthor of "Kongo," Here, Relates Uncanny Doctrine of Voodoo

"Fear is darkness and darkness death."

This strange maxim of the Belgian Congo was brought out of the dark interior of Africa by Chester de Vonde, one of the co-authors of "Kongo," when he broke away from the strange fascination which had led him to enter the deadly "inner circle" of the rubber lands to study the strange voodoo and its practices for an authoritative background in writing his melodramatic play.

This saying, handed down from generation to generation, is indicative of the uncanny influence of voodooism, which, according to authorities on the Congo, depends largely upon darkness and the seemingly supernatural for its power. Having spent several months among the voodoo worshiping tribes, going so far as to join their ranks, de Vonde left the jungles and collaborated with Kilbourn Gordon in the writing of "Kongo." The impression "darkness" and the maxim of the natives had on the playwright is revealed throughout this weird play.

"De Vonde became so enmeshed in the study of voodooism that he was completely 'gone' on the subject for months after his exploring trip," says Charles B. Middleton, who plays the feature role of "Kongo," now at the Orange Grove Theater. "Dead Legs" flint, pivot character of this eerie drama, was written especially to fit the abilities of Middleton.

"He had countless fetishes and images when he came back," continued Middleton. "They had been given to him by the medicine-men of Lake Tanganyika whose number he joined for the purpose of learning first-hand the practices of voodoo worshipers."

Middleton, like de Vonde, possesses countless "dawa" or magic symbols and confesses staunch belief in their uncanny power.

"During our production in the East de Vonde and I spent many interesting nights together swapping yarns on the mysterious voodoo," Middleton related recently whilst putting on his make-up. "I am convinced that de Vonde came strongly under the influence of this African religion when he jointed the Freemasonry of voodoo priests. He brought back with him many wooden images, some of which were beautifully carved, representing human beings; some were hideous in appearance to be used on occasions to strike terror into the hearts of those over whom the voodoo priests desire to exert some influence."

Public Welfare Film at Tally's

The second public welfare picture, "Unwed Mothers," dealing with the expose of companionate marriage, is the current screen attraction today at Tally's Broadway Theater.

Based on the book of Ivan Abramson's "Enlighten Thy Daughter," the screen version depicts the evils of a false moral code and is a strong indictment against sponsors of "free love thoughts."

Frank Sheridan, James Morrison, Rubye De Remer, Zena Keefe, Arthur Donaldson, Marie Shotwell and others are seen in stellar roles. The local showing is the initial California presentation and follows engagements in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Audiences of both sexes will be admitted at all performances, children under 14 years of age excepted.

Jack Mulhall Performing as Magician Now

"Ladies and gentlemen! With your kind permission I will now endeavor to entertain you with a few feats of legerdemain."

Prof. Mulhall speaking. He rolls up his shirt cuffs and coat sleeves.

"You will note that I have nothing concealed in either hand, and nothing up my sleeve except my arm. If you will watch closely, ladies and gentlemen!

"Abracadabra!" With this magic word, lo and behold, a bunny appears in Prof. Mulhall's hand.

"Here you see a gentle little white rabbit, ladies and gentlemen, nestling in the palm of my left hand. Watch closely!"

Presto!

The professor waves his magic wand, and lo, there is nothing there. He smiles and hurls the wand high into the air—abracadabra—two bunnies appear, one in each hand.

All of which reveals the professor as the debonair Jack Mulhall, who is playing the lead in "Lady Be Good," the First National production. Jack is taking lessons in magic from Prof. Alberto, a master of legerdemain. His friends may well take warning as Jack is quite capable of extracting a bunny from a lady's purse, or, an egg from a gent's whiskers.

Jannings to Enact Another Dashing Role

Emil Jannings has turned back the hand of the clock more than 100 years.

Emerging from the ruined uniform of a Russian general whom modern revolutionary Russia had driven from her borders in his last picture, "The Last Command," Jannings is now arrayed in the brilliant costume of the Czar Paul I, as he was when he ruled that mighty empire in 1800.

As Czar Paul he will appear in his next starring vehicle, "The Patriot," which Ernst Lubitsch will direct for Paramount in the Hollywood studio.

Heading the supporting cast are Lewis Stone as Count Phalen, a powerful figure of the time; Vera Veronina and Tullio Carminati. Costumes, sets and production are planned upon a scale of unusual elaborateness, according to a statement by B. P. Schulberg, Paramount associate producer.

WRITING SONGS IS MUCH FUN

Come You Do Me Like You Do?" and "When My Sugar Walks Down the Street."

"Audiences," says Austin, "are about evenly divided as to a choice between 'blues' numbers and ballads. Their applause as a rule rings even, though I have found that often at the matinees the sentimental ballads go better.

"I always liked to sing ballads and 'blues,' and it wasn't long after I started singing them in public that I discovered they held a real appeal for folks. So even when I was doing orchestral work, I still specialized in ballad and 'blues' singing."

A peculiar fact in connection with Austin's activities for the Victor company is that music stores report the demand for his records is just as heavy from men as from women.

DEBUT IN OPERA

Myrtle Stedman, who plays an important role in Richard Dix's new Paramount picture, "Sporting Goods," made her theatrical debut in a Chicago light-opera company.

TRAVELING TROUPE PRESENTS ONLY DRAMA OF INTELLECTUALS

Mention the brain products of such distinguished intellectuals as George Bernard Shaw, A. A. Milne, St. John Ervine, Eugene O'Neill, Henrik Ibsen, even good old William Shakespeare, to the hardened metropolitan play producer and he will shrug his shoulders with the reply:

"Yes, certainly, good plays, but who will come and see them? We must have laughs, thrills, something relaxing and amusing, not the sort of thing which requires thinking. We cannot afford to do Shaw and his kind."

And will forthright go ahead with plans for the presentation of another "thriller" or "what is claimed to be" the most sensational dramatic production of the century—"you can't miss it!"

All of which has meant, very often, that the so-called art theaters manned by sincere, but usually untrained and amateur directors and actors, have taken unto themselves the burden of producing the "intellectuals" with, at times, lamentable results, from the standpoint of quality of production.

But now comes an organization of skilled actors and actresses, the Moroni Olsen Players, comprising men and women who learned their trade in Broadway shows, who have for several years made not only a living, but a good profit out of presenting the works of Messrs. Shaw, Ibsen, Galsworthy and others of like ilk.

They have done these so-called "highbrow" plays in the little tank towns of the Northwest, in Utah, Montana, Idaho, they have played long and successful engagements in Seattle, Portland, Spokane and the larger cities of the north, appearing only in the best theaters and charging top prices.

A representative of the organization visited Los Angeles this past week with the view of securing a theater for a spring engagement here. If negotiations, now well under way, are completed, the players will come to this city in May to do "The Lilies of the Field," English version by John Hastings Turner; "The Detour" by Owen Davis, "Anna Christie" by Eugene O'Neill, and Shaw's "Candida."

This will be their first visit to Los Angeles, although they have been in existence a little more than four years, and of their work, it has been written in a national theater magazine, "What the Theater Guild is accomplishing in New York, this sturdy, resourceful group is accomplishing in the Northwest."

Moroni Olsen, former leading man for Margaret Anglin, together with Janet Young, also a New York actress, and a player in Anglin and Theater Guild productions, conceived the idea of the itinerant organization which would play for the Northwest only "intelligent" plays in an intelligent and able manner.

They both left New York and went to Ogden, Utah, where, in a loft over a grocery store in that city of the Rocky Mountains, they launched their experiment.

Besides Miss Young, the company numbers Byron Kay Foniger, character man, who hails from New York; Dorothy Adams, a Vancouver society girl who had made a name for herself in stock in the Northwest; Gordon R. Nelson, a musical comedy player of New York; Joe H. Williams, and Leora Thatcher, both of whom come from New York; Harry R. Allen, Jr., a Salt Lake lad; Marion Clayton, a recent graduate of the University of Washington, and Lila Eccles, wife of a professor at the University of Utah. They all have something to do for the company besides act. Olsen is director, Miss Young business manager, Foniger, treasurer; Williams, stage carpenter; Allen, scenic artist, and so on.

CAST WITH RAMON NOVARRO CITED AS HIGHLY TALENTED

Few motion-picture companies can boast the musical, dancing and stage talent of the cast with Ramon Novarro in the making of his new film starring production, "China Bound," which William Nigh is directing.

Practically every member of the cast has spent years on the speaking, singing or dancing stage, and each has achieved success in some other line before entering motion pictures.

Ramon Novarro was a pantomimist of repute, a pianist and a singer. In fact, he is planning a world tour on the concert stage as soon as he has finished with picture work and completed his vocal training under Louis Graveur.

Joan Crawford, featured feminine player, was a solo dancer with various Broadway hits before being signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a film player.

Ernest Torrence, who plays the older half-brother of the M.-G.-M. star, was internationally known as a pianist on the concert stage for many years, was an operatic baritone for years, and spent years as a singer in American musical comedy. Torrence received his musical education at Edinburgh Academy, the Conservatorium at Stuttgart, Germany, and the Royal Academy of Music at London, where he won the gold medal for singing and the Westmorland scholarship.

Frank Currier has given fifty years of his life toward entertaining the American public on stage and screen, and played principal roles on the stage with John McCullough, John Barrett, Mary Anderson, Alice Neilsen Edwin Booth and other stage stars of a generation ago. He also coached and brought out the famous Julia Marlowe.

Edward Connelly's stage and screen careers very nearly parallel that of Currier, while Dan Wolheim and Duke Martin have spent years on the American stage. The latter is also a gifted pianist.

"China Bound" is based on the famous Ben Ames Williams story of the seas.

ONE SCENE COST SET AT $120,000

Single Sequence for Town in "My Best Girl" Calls for Large Expenditure

Forty thousand dollars a minute isn't the long-distance telephone rate from here to Mars—its the cost of just one sequence in "My Best Girl," Mary Pickford's new comedy-romance which opened the new United Artists Theater.

The sequence is enacted in a huge set representing a section of a down town business district. The set occupies two city blocks and it kept between 200 and 400 workmen busy for a month in erecting the four and five-story buildings and laying the street-car tracks and the paving.

Although the cost of the set itself, the salaries of the cast and of the 1200 electricians and extra people used, totaled about $120,000, the scenes take only a few minutes on the screen, which makes it probably the most expensive sequence per minute ever made.

While the set is a faithful copy of a business section, complete from street-cars to traffic signals, the realism of the scenes was enhanced by several unscheduled traffic jams during the filming, which, as Miss Pickford said, "made everything look just natural."

"My Best Girl," is a story of the five and ten-cent stores, with the star in one of her famous "gingham roles" as a little stock girl.

Miss Pickford is supported by a cast which includes Charles Rogers, Sunshine Hart, Lucien Littlefield, Carmelita Geraghty, Hobart Bosworth, Evelyn Hall, Avonne Taylor and Mack Swain.

Directed by Sam Taylor who wielded the megaphone in the making of many Harold Lloyd films, "My Best Girl," is a Kathleen Norris story.

Mission Play Opens Soon at San Gabriel

The Mission Play, John McGroarty's pageant drama of early California history, will open the 16th inst., and the occasion will be gala in every respect.

This decision was reached by a committee which met in the Italian Roof Garden on the Hollingsworth Building on Tuesday afternoon, appointing Mrs. Leafy Sloan-Orcutt, chairman. Mrs. Sloan-Orcutt will appoint committees and patronesses.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Hollingsworth will give a reception in honor of John McGroarty and R. D. MacLean, author and "Father Junipero" of the play, respectively, the 15th inst. Dinner parties will precede the opening and there will be dancing at the theater itself after the show.

Special events will supplement the interest in the Mission Play throughout the season, including barbecues, special nights, and various other attractions. These will lend a festive allurement to the season.

"Vortex" About Selfish Mother

"The Vortex," playing at the Hollywood Music Box, is credited with presenting something out of the ordinary.

The play revolves about the life led by a selfish, emotional and extremely vain woman who crushes everyone in her path in her relentless march to keep abreast with the younger generation—and eternal youth. Her son is a high-strung neurotic, whose romance becomes entangled with the never-ceasing affairs of his mother.

This play, by the brilliant English author, Noel Coward, has a British society setting and is of the ultra-sophisticated type. One single scene stands out as the acme of daring emotionalism. It comes when the son discovers his mother's infatuation for a man barely half her age—a social parasite.

The cast stars Barton Hepburn, who is supported by Ivis Goulding, Helene Sullivan, Mary Forbes, Barrie O'Daniels, F. Finch Smiles, Eve Nansen, Irving Kennedy and Fergus Reddie. The play was staged by Frank Reicher.

Movie Stars Are Fans Too

Are motion-picture stars ever movie fans?

Betty Bronson admits she is one of the stanchest screen fans in the world.

Before entering motion pictures three years ago she was a motion-picture enthusiast, and after becoming a screen player she retained her interest in pictures and picture players. Even now she is a devout movie fan and, of course, has her own particular favorites, whom she sees on the screen as often as possible.

"I believe all motion-picture stars are fans," says Miss Bronson.

"Of course not to the degree of writing fan letters and asking for autographed photographs, but interested to a fervent degree in the pictures they make," she concludes.

Comedy Heads Palace Program

The Universal production, "Silk Stockings," featuring Laura La Plante, is now playing at the Broadway Palace Theater and will run for one week only. This comedy was taken from the story by Cyril Harcourt.

John Harron plays opposite the star, and the cast includes Otis Harlan, William Austin, Marcela Daly, Burr McIntosh and others. The production was directed by Wesley Ruggles.

"WICKEDNESS PREFERRED"

Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle's last Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer co-starring vehicle, which was filmed under the working title of "Mixed Marriages," is to be released under the title of "Wickedness Preferred," according to announcement yesterday of Irving G. Thalberg, studio executive. The picture was directed by Hobart Henley from an original story and continuity by F. Hugh Herbert, British novelist and scenarist. The picture cast includes Bert Roach, George K. Arthur, Mary McAllister and others.

NAGEL WANTS TO KNOW HOW ISLANDERS GET ABOUT

What is the means of transportation in the South Sea islands?

This is the question Conrad Nagel is asking of friends who have visited this "land of the lotus eater."

Conrad has just finished his role of Chuck, a member of a crook gang in Dolores Costello's starring vehicle, "Tenderloin," and has returned to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. This player has just been loaned by M.-G.-M. to Warner Brothers for a series of five pictures, of which "Tenderloin" is the last.

Now that he is back again in the home fold, Conrad's first assignment is not yet definitely decided upon. But the powers that be seem to think that he is just the right fellow to play the only white man in Robert Flaherty's new South Sea island picture. Flaherty will do another "Moana," using all native actors with the exception of two or three white people, one of which will undoubtedly be Conrad.

The headquarters of the company will be in Pappeete, on the island of Tahiti.

When Nagel inquired about clothes to take, should this be his next assignment, the information was immediately forthcoming. But when he sprung transportation on his friends, they were at loss.

He solved the problem himself. "I'll take a bicycle," he said.

And as all good actors do everything they can to prepare themselves for their next role, the young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player is endeavoring to recapture his previous skill as a rider of a two-wheeled vehicle.

MUSICAL HERETIC TO BE HEARD

Bela Bartok, Hungarian Modernist, Advances Upon Los Angeles to Convince Scoffers With Lecture and Performances of His Works for Pro-Musica

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

The advent of Bela Bartok in Los Angeles because of the invitation of Pro-Musica, is one of the most important occurrences in the musical year. He will both talk and play at the Beaux Arts Auditorium Wednesday night under the auspices of the Los Angeles chapter of which Artie Mason Carter is president.

Bartok's music has been played here only occasionally. It is better known in the East, where Fritz Reiner has established himself as an interpreter for Bartok and has given premier American performances of three of his orchestral works. After his first concerts just given in New York the interesting newspaper comments were long and expressive. Until his performance here on Wednesday our knowledge must be secondhand, but a few facts gleaned from eastern reviews will prepare the listeners who are fortunate enough to hear this famous modernist.

Bela Bartok

He is said to be a strange combination of personal gentleness and musical ferocity. His compositions are described as startling, savage, at times ugly with barbaric abandon and terrifying strength. Now you know the worst. His power among the modernist group is unquestioned and his music is considered to have more organization and less chaos than the work of most others who write atonally. It has decisive rhythmic patterns and sensitive hearers derive definite emotional reactions from his music.

Bartok is the leading Hungarian composer. He was a musical prodigy, appearing in public very soon after his first studies at the age of 6. Dohnanyi was his friend and adviser and much of his music had its first acceptance in Vienna.

In addition to his contributions to the serious modernist movement, Bartok, in company with Kodaly, his countryman, has made an exhaustive study of folk music, not only of his own country, but that of Rumania, the Slovak states and of an Arabian tribe resident near Biskra in Algiers.

This genuine, traditional folk music of the Hungarians, upon which much of Kodaly's and Bartok's music is based, is not the gypsy music of Liszt and others less gifted. These melodies were derived from ancient ecclesiastical modes with "surprising affiliations with, and the certain rhythmic peculiarities of Handel and Bach."

His Los Angeles program will give ample opportunity to judge of the truth of these words, for it includes a ten-minute address by the composer, the Bartok Suite Op. 14 of four movements, composed in 1926, a Rumanian Christmas song group; two numbers, an epitaph and allegro molto Op. 3, by Kodaly; a Bartok Sonata written in 1926, containing three movements, and a Bartok burlesque, consisting of a dirge, a bear dance, an evening in the country and the llegro barban.

ELIJAH T OBE GIVEN FINE PRESENTATION

ORATORIO SOCIETY TO GIVE MENDELSSOHN WORK IN FEBRUARY

The forthcoming presentation of "Elijah" at the Shrine civic auditorium on February 5, by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society will mark the first time in several years that the full score of the popular Mendelssohn oratorio has been heard locally although excerpts have been heard from time to time.

In contrast with a massed chorus of some 300 voices, a chorus of 650 voices will be heard this time under the direction of John Smallman, conductor. A. Cell Marshall will be assistant conductor, Lorna Gregg, accompanist, and Dr. Ray Hastings, organist. The accompaniment will be rendered by fifty selected members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Julius Bierlich, concert master.

BOWL LEADERS MUST BE NEW

Bowl Committee Decides Outside Conductors Should Have Preference

Music in the Hollywood Bowl this summer is to be directed entirely by "new conductors from the outside world" because the Bowl music committee feels that they "have a greater box-office value," according to a letter sent out from the Bowl office this past week.

This policy of the Bowl committee is scarcely in keeping with the ideal of community interest upon which the institution was founded.

The articles of incorporation read as follows: "To acquire land for a community park and art center and kindred projects of a civic nature, and not for personal individual or corporate gain or profit." Further, "to encourage and develop, through a community spirit and civic patriotism, the finest forms of the arts and individual talents. To afford opportunities for the study and presentation of all the arts, and provide opportunities for all classes of people to find congenial channels for the expression of their higher and best qualities."

The Hollywood Bowl belongs to the county of Los Angeles, is dedicated to the people and the County Board of Supervisors has appropriated at least $100,000 for beautifying the Bowl. There is no doubt about its being a public enterprise. On what just grounds are resident conductors to be excluded from professional participation? On their box-office value?

Persinger to Lead Quartet in Pasadena

The Persinger Quartet of Santa Barbara has returned from a very successful eastern tour and will play today at the Pasadena Playhouse in the Coleman Chamber Music series.

While on tour Mr. Persinger had the happiness of being present at the New York debut of his now famous pupil, Yehudi Menuhin, the 11-year-old wunderkind who startled staid New York with his great gifts in a sold-out Carnegie Hall concert. His triumph is musical history of importance.

The quartet plays the following program this afternoon:

Quartet in G Minor, Op. 10 .... Debussy
Interludium in modo antico .... Glazounow
Quartet movement in C Minor .... Schubert
Scherzo .... Kreisler
Piano Quintet, Op. 34, with Alice Coleman Bat .... Brahms

NEW BASSO IN ELIJAH

Mendelssohn Works To Be Given With Enormous Chorus

Rehearsals for the forthcoming presentation of "Elijah" by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society to be presented at the Shrine Civic Auditorium, February 5, have been increased to twice weekly. A massed chorus of 650 voices will be heard on this occasion. This is twice as large a chorus as has ever sung the Mendelssohn oratorio in this city.

A new soloist to Los Angeles audiences will make his initial bow in "Elijah." He is Herbert Gould, recognized as the outstanding bass soloist in the United States in the "Elijah," having sung this role in many cities of the East, where he won wide recognition for his work.

Alice Gentle, noted prima donna and well known to Los Angeles music lovers, will handle the difficult soprano. Other soloists will be Maude Darling Weaver, contralto, and Harold Proctor, tenor.

Fifty selected members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Julius Bierlich, concert master, will render the musical accompaniment.

Assisting choral societies include the Oratorio Society of the Glendale Choir Association, Pomona College Chir, Santa Paula Choral Society and Junior Oratorio Society. Tickets are now on sale at Birkel's music store.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY TO BE CELEBRATED

Margaret Goetz, whose devotion to the songs of Schubert throughout a long and useful musical life has been outstanding, is giving a "Schubert Gratitude Program" at the Biltmore on the afternoon of the 21st inst.

It is peculiarly fitting that Miss Goetz should give the first Schubert program in commemmoration of the 100th anniversary of the great composer's death, as her own life has been so closely identified with the songs of Schubert for twenty-five years both in Europe and America. It was in a Schubert program that Miss Goetz was introduced to Los Angeles at the Friday Morning Club twenty years ago.

Miss Goetz will review the composer's life and illustrate her talk with unusual Viennese pictures. Assisting artists will be Mme. Anna Ruzena Sprotte, mezzo-contralto; Melba French Barr, soprano; Frederick Herrmann, baritone, and the May Hope Trio, consisting of May MacDonald Hope, pianist; Xavier Cugat, violinist, and Micha Gegna, violoncellist.

RUDHYAR LECTURES AT UNIVERSITY

Dane Rudhyar, well-known composer and authority on various branches of music, has consented to repeat his popular course in old and new music for the University of California, extension division. Mr. Rudhyar, who was recently appointed a member of the Hollywood Bowl general committee, will give his course at the Y.M.C.A. Building starting the 19th inst.

Other music courses of the university extension are solfeggio, elementary harmony and secondary music education to be given at Sentous School.

AMERICAN OPERA THEME SUCCEEDS

Cadman Work Receives Country-Wide Recognition

Entrance of New England historical events into American opera attends the inclusion of Charles Wakefield Cadman's "A Witch of Salem" in the repertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, to be presented in Boston and other important musical centers this season. The Boston presentation of Mr. Cadman's work will occur on February 2, and the Los Angeles composer's opera will be one of the first of sixteen performances scheduled for the Boston Operahouse.

With the sole exceptio nof Victor Herbert's "Natoma," in which Mary Garden starred several years ago, "A Witch of Salem" is the first American opera to be taken on tour by either the Metropolitan or the Chicago Opera companies. In the premiere at the Chicago Auditorium it was accorded recognition by music lovers that immediately marked it as a success. The opera brings forth a portrayal of witchcraft scenes of 1692, when, histories tell, old Salem village reeked with delusion, hysteria, credulity and fear mixed with pretense. Both Mr. Cadman and Nelle Richmond Eberhart, the librettist, are of New England ancestry.

"A Witch of Salem" is the first American opera based on a New England subject to be given in a New England city by a leading opera company. It is the second American opera which had its inception in New England history, the first being that of "The Scarlet Letter," by Walter Damrosch. Mr. Cadman has visited the scenes portrayed in his work, and devoted much time in research to obtain official and useful data for the composition. While visiting there he climbed Gallows Hill, upon which stood the scaffold where twenty-three victims of the witchcraft mania met death in the period extending from April to September, 1692. The scenes of the opera are laid in the living-room of a palatial Salem mansion, and on a forest-bordered road leading to the place of execution.

In the Los Angeles presentation of Mr. Cadman's work, Edith Mason, lyric soprano, and Charles Hackett, tenor, will have the foremost roles, the cast being identical with that which produced the opera at the Chicago Auditorium.

Talented Young Violinist is to be Soloist

Lois zu Putlitz, violinist, a young artist in which Los Angeles is greatly interested, will be the soloist at the sixth popular concert next Sunday afternoon at the Philharmonic Auditorium, Georg Schneevoigt conductor.

Miss Putlitz began her studies of the violin at the age of seven in Los Angeles with Harold Webster; then studied with Christiaan Timmner and Calmon Luboviski. Later at the suggestion of the late Henry Rothwell she went to the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia to study under Carl Flesch, where she has been for some time. She also had three summers of training under Mr. Flesch in Germany. Miss Putlitz has appeared with orchestra under Hertz, Stokowski and Rodzinski. For her appearance here Miss Putlitz will play the Dohnanyi Concerto for Violin in D minor, op. 27.

Two numbers to be given first hearing at these concerts are Mozart—"Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Serenade for String Orchestra, and Strauss—Dance of the Seven Veils from "Salome." Other numbers programmed are Tschaikowsky—Overture-Fantasia, 'Romeo and Juliet;' Glazounow—Valse de Concert, op. 47; program closing with Sibelius—Tone Poem "Finlandia," op. 26, No. 7.

Borrisoff to Remain in California

Josef Borrisoff, the Russian-American violinist whose announcement of classes and scheduled concerts came as a surprise upon his return from an oriental tour a few weeks ago, is planning to remain in this city indefinitely and will establish a school of violin-playing founded upon the methods of Leopold Auer and certain developments of his own.

Borissoff has published his findings on the art of violin-playing and the book entitled, "Foundation for Violin-technic," has been issued by Carl Fischer.

He gave a series of appreciated lectures on the subject to the teachers and students of the Manila Conservatory in the Philippine University during his recent sojourn in the islands.

Mr. Borissoff and his charming Russian wife have taken a studio-home on Harvard Boulevard.

TEACHES MUSIC FOR QUARTER CENTURY

Twenty-five years of teaching violin, guitar and banjo have made Mr. Fred C. Martin an authority on these instruments.

Until three years ago Mr. Martin taught in Boston, where his graded system of instruction has won him many pupils.

He is using an individual method based on European and American theories.

ELMA BARTLETT MAKES DEBUT

Leona Neblett, well-known violinist and teacher, presented her talented 13-year-old pupil, Elma Bartlett, recently in recital with Joel Harvey, pianist and pupil of Leoline Walton. The program was given at Beaux Arts West Hall.

SPANISH SINGER DELIGHTS MANY

Luisa Espinel

Music lovers of the Beverly Hills Women's Club will have an opportunity on the 24th inst. of listening to a program of vivid folk song characterizations of Spain, featuring the various types and localities of that romantic country, by Luisa Espinel, soprano. Her original manner of singing her songs recently won admiration when she presented a program in a recital at the Beaux Arts Auditorium. Miss Shibley Bayes assists her at the piano.

Senorita Espinel seeks to give programs which are different and in her characterizations she portrays the real Spain and their peasant types in their natural habitat, not the music hall and cabaret type so often brought to America. She also gives her own translations before each song, explaining the background and meaning of the composition, and is costumed to suit the characterization.

YOUNG PIANIST ADVANCES IN ART

Keith Corelli, pianist, will be heard in concert under the auspices of the Glendale Musical Association next Thursday evening at the Broadway High School auditorium. Other January engagements of Mr. Corelli include a solo appearance with the Ontario Symphony Orchestra, and a piano recital for the San Gabriel Women's Club.

Mr. Corelli has recently studied with some of the greatest contemporary pianists. He was the only pupil of Benno Moiseivitch during the latter's visit to Los Angeles, and was also the only pupil of Lester Donahue during the summer of 1927. He is now studying piano with Sigrid Schneevoigt (Mrs. Georg Scheneevoigt,) and composition with Dane Rudhyar.

Schipa's Career Meteoric in Sudden Rise

This will be the fifth concert season of the famous Tito Schipa, who will be heard at the Philharmonic Auditorium the 22nd inst. under L. E. Behymer's management.

Audiences love him not only as the greatest living lyric tenor, but as a man whose heart sings in his songs. Schipa is young; his career has been meteoric. Already before he came to us the beauty of his voice had captivated audiences in the great operahouses of Italy, Spain, Portugal, South America and Central America. As a tiny child he sang; at the age of 10 he made his first appearance in the boy's chorus in "Carmen;" as a youth he composed a mass, sung at the cathedral in Lecce, Italy, his birthplace.

America has contributed a glorious share to Schipa's career. Here his enthusiasts have kept him singing since he first reached this country. Everywhere his reception is the same. Schipa's voice thrills, and leaves a memory that is unforgettable. Splendid though his powers were always, the beauty of his voice today is greater than ever.

Lectures to be Given With New Soloist

Miss Nelle Lawson Shaw has been selected as the assisting artist for the next Saturday morning concert-lecture on the music of the Philharmonic concerts, by Dr. Bruce Gordon Kingsley at Bullock's, Seventh and Broadway on the 14th inst. Being a pupil of Louis Graveure, the famous baritone, her poetic song renditions speak for themselves.

Miss Shaw will sing a varied group of "lieder" on the Kingsley program, including Schubert's "Omnipotence" and "Hark, Hark, the Lark," as well as Hugo Wolf's "Weyla's Song" and "Verborgenheit." A short selection from one of the earliest operas in the history of the woird—a musical curiosity—will likewise be rendered. Also features on theis program are Weber's overture to "Oberon" and the Tschaikowsky Symphony in F Minor, No. 4. These concerts are arranged by Frances Laying Spence.

CIMINI RECEIVES INTERESTING OFFER

Maestro Pietro Cimini, internationallly known conductor and vocal teacher, and now resident in Los Angeles, has just received an interesting proposal from Manager Cramer of Chicago to be musical director of a six weeks' tour with the opera "Aida." But Maestro Cimini will not accept the engagement because he does not wish to leave his pupils in Los Angeles.

DAVIS MUSICAL COLLEGE

An interesting recital was given by the pupils of Marion Walter, violinist of the Davis Musical College, at which the following participated: Raymond Anderson, Doris Bickel, Mollis Gray, Josephine Casanova, Zella Smith, Mildred Woods, Marguerite Reid, Betty Graves and La Verne Moran. Miss Vera MacLean, pianist, assisted as accompanist for the evening.

FRENCH-CANADIAN SINGER IS POPULAR INNOVATOR

Eva Gauthier, the unique soprano, who will appear in recital next Tuesday evening, at the Philharmonic Auditorium under L. E. Behymer's management, is a modern of the moderns, an innovator, a liedersaengerin of the moment and the future.

Her work with the difficult compositions of Debussy, Stravinsky and Ravel is very well known, as is her habit of going to the environs of civilization for her material. It is only in keeping that she should have made this earth-circling pilgrimage in the wake of the song unique. It is, perhaps, just as in keeping that she should have explored so many strange lands, that she should have gone first, of all places, to Java.

From there she went to China, where surely, she thought, in this land where music seems to many a welter of contemptible dissonances, she would discover her strange melody—her song supernal. So she toured from Hongkong to Peking ing concerts here and there. in Canton she thought caught a gust of the right but again it was a She tried Northern China, turning to Java, leaving there for the Malay States, the Philippines, India, Hawaii, New Zealand She encountered rhythms and added much to her but that which she sought could not find. It is the beyond.

NEW TRIO TO CONCERTIZE

Of outstanding interest among the musical announcements of the year is the formation of a new chamber music group called "The Trio," and combining three of Los Angeles' distinguished artists, Olga Steeb, pianist; David Crocov, violinist, and Ilya Bronson, cellist.

The combination of these notable musicians who are already highly esteemed as versatile chamber-music artists, is an event of importance. Olga Steeb has been identified with the Griffes Group for several seasons, and after having played with practically every one of the great orchestras, she has won the reputation with conductors of being one of the most satisfactory orchestra soloists of the

ROAD SHOWS WILL BE SCARCE

Jesse Lasky Predicts Their Diminishing Place in the Cinema Sees Interest in Bread-and-Butter Entertainment; Paramount Perfecting Sound Device

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

"WE ARE interested today in the motion pictures that show from week to week; the big spectacular production, the so-called road show, is on the wane." This statement was made to me by Jesse L. Lasky, executive vice-president of Paramount-Famous-Lasky a few days ago. It had reference to that company in particular, but summed up, it would seem, the present outlook on film production rather generally. It is decidedly not a year of superfeatures—or as they are sometimes called, superspecials—in the making, although there are [illegible] from 1927 still to show.

The road show as a road show is definitely going out, according to Mr. Lasky. The policy of sending out special companies with big attractions to present them in various cities as has been done with "Ben Hur," "The King of Kings" and with "Wings" is destined for decline, he continued.

"The development of the theaters suitable to long-run productions will take care of these big pictures. They will not be made in such numbers in the [illegible] year or so. The peak of this competition is past. There will be concentrated effort devoted to the bread-and-butter type of entertainment adapted to theaters with a weekly change policy, and to so-called specials, of pictures suitable for runs of regular or less length, which do not pile up excessive costs, but which have some marked attraction justifying their appeal during an extended engagement. On our own program these films include 'Abie's Irish Rose,' 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' and 'The Last Command,' with Emil Jannings, to name some of them."

Outside of "Wings," Paramount-Famous-Lasky will probably have no road-show pictures during this season, unless it so happens that "The Wedding March" is to be brought into this classification. This picture is to be presented in a little over a month in New York.

"MUCH thought will be given to exhibition this year," Mr. Lasky continued. "The staging of the picture is becoming an all-important consideration from every angle. The program in the weekly-change theater will continue to have presentations, though this word is really a misnomer. You may call it vaudeville if you wish, but presentation is something more closely related to the picture itself.

"To offer the so-called special to the public with a stage show of the art would be ridiculous. It will seldom be done in the future. This type of picture should hold sufficient interest of itself.

"Technical sound-producing devices are going to exert a very great influence on the exhibition of pictures. They are, in fact, an outstanding influence."

Mr. Lasky stated that Paramount is at present working on a sound device, but that it will not be introduced to the public until it has reached a high degree of perfection.

"We are going to go very slowly, testing this new ground thoroughly, until we are satisfied the most adequate results possible will be obtained with the mechanical reproduction of sound," he said. "The installing of apparatus in the theaters must also be given much attention, as the exhibitor must be assured of a sufficient program before he would be justified in such installations."

"CHANG" is an index, artistic triumphs over the real. This picture is not rated as one of the great box-office winners of the year. The summing up seems to be that it is fair. Yet it is by all odds one of the most notable bits of screen entertainment.

I imagine that the Jack Gilbert-Greta Garbo picture "Love" will far outdo it as an attraction, though it is just one of many films that will probably elicit more attention.

As much dispute may be raised about the question as one wishes, titles go a long ways to sell a film at the box office. There is no question about the allurement of "Love," particularly with the Gilbert-Garbo combination, even though that doesn't improve its quality as a production.

"Chang" was a puzzle title. Other titles are hits and misses.

ALL surveyed, titles of pictures run a pretty superficial gamut. The only ones that don't, and that [illegible] much, are those linked with some very widely known book or play. C. B. De Mille titles over a period of years have had an amazing "clicking" value. They have undoubtedly been the boon of the small-town exhibitor, for these De Mille has frequently been rated the biggest winner among directors.

"Why Change Your Wife?" "Don't Change Your Husband," "Saturday Night," "Manslaughter," "The Ten Commandments," or to speak right of the present "The Godless Girl," are all sure of appeal to the one-syllable (incidentally one-cylinder) mind."

Picture Stars to Establish Beach Colony

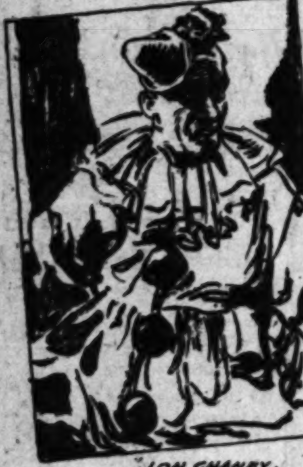
Members of the smart set of Hollywood's motion-picture colony will enjoy their summer recreation together in the future if plans now under way for a beach colony to be peopled exclusively by cinema celebrities, materialize. Manhattan Beach, within twenty miles of Los Angeles, has made a definite bid for the patronage of the movie folk and already a number have purchased sites in that district for summer homes.

Among those who have signified their intention of making their summer residence at the ocean city are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edeson, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Breese, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Goodstadt and others. Plans for artistic homes for these film folk have already been drawn and construction is to start shortly, it is declared.

It is expected that more than two score of the elite of moviedom will have homes at the beach resort before next June and that this number will be augmented by 100 before the end of summer.

Black Titles to Be Used for Initial Time

For the first time in the history of the screen black titles will be seen on a feature photoplay. Edwin Carewe, producer-director, who, in connection with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., has just completed the making of "Ramona," starring Dolores Del Rio, is responsible for this novelty.



LON CHANEY, "LAUGH CLOWN, LAUGH"

"It should not be a novelty," says Carewe. "I do not know why we have never used black titles before. They are natural but have never, to my knowledge, been used. The daily paper is printed in black letters on white news stock; the musicians play from black notes on the staff; the books contain black letters—and why not the titles on the screen?"

Carewe also adds that black titles on a white background are easier on the eyes than white titles. White titles, the director points out, are glaring. The dark words will be more restful, he adds.

"Ramona" will be the first motion picture to carry this new idea in titles. Carewe plans to use black titles in all of his film plays. It will be released by United Artists early in January.

In support of Miss Del Rio will be seen Warner Baxter as the romantic Indian lover, Alessandro. Roland Drew, the young newspaper reporter, whom Carewe gave his big film opportunity, will be seen as Felipe. Vera Lewis is in the role of Senora Moreno, and many more well known to filmdom are on the cast sheet. The picture was directed by Carewe from the adaptation by Finis Fox.

GRETA LACKS TEMPERAMENT

And She Does Not Want to Be Obvious; Would Play Interesting Women Rather Than Vampires

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

On the screen, Greta Garbo represents, to the majority of her admirers, the new-type siren, a fascinating, alluring woman of the world, a [illegible] her, she gives the impression of a slip of a girl—shy, charmingly, somewhat frightened at the thought of talking to a stranger.

She would not attract attention if she walked into a hotel and were unrecognized. There is no thought of the siren and the striking, rather the impression of a lovely and unspoiled young woman with clear blue eyes and a sweet, almost wistful smile.

Arriving somewhat late and breathless from hurrying for a luncheon engagement, she wore a simple, tailored suit of blue, a felt hat of blue, and no make-up, not even the trace of lipstick to accentuate the fairness of her skin.

OLD-FASHIONED HOTEL

She lives alone in an old-fashioned family hotel in Santa Monica. With the exception of her first few days in Los Angeles, when she came here from Sweden, two and one-half years ago, she has made her home in this hotel, the family whose residents seem for the most part, composed of gray-haired retired business men and garrulous, bridge-playing elderly women. She does not find any particular friendship there.

"No—no, I do not know them," she explained, "I just go to my room and

OLAND IS ORIENTAL WHITE MAN

He Has Played Many Far-East Types; Prefers Cantor Role in "Jazz Singer"

The oriental white man—that's Warner Oland, who has played Chinese and Japanese characters for so long in pictures that every casting director thinks of him first when one is required. And, strangely enough, in fifteen years on the stage Oland never once portrayed a member of the slant-eyed races.

In those same early years of his struggle for recognition, Oland associated himself with many of the greatest actors of the theater. He preferred roles little above that of the traditional spear-carrier, at a paltry $18 a week, with some one from whom he could learn how to act, to important parts in fly-by-night road companies.

It was while he was appearing in Strindberg's "The Father" that a man came to him with the proposition that he go into motion pictures. This, as Oland recalls it, was in 1911. The picture was a depiction of the life of John Bunyan and "Pilgrim's Prog-

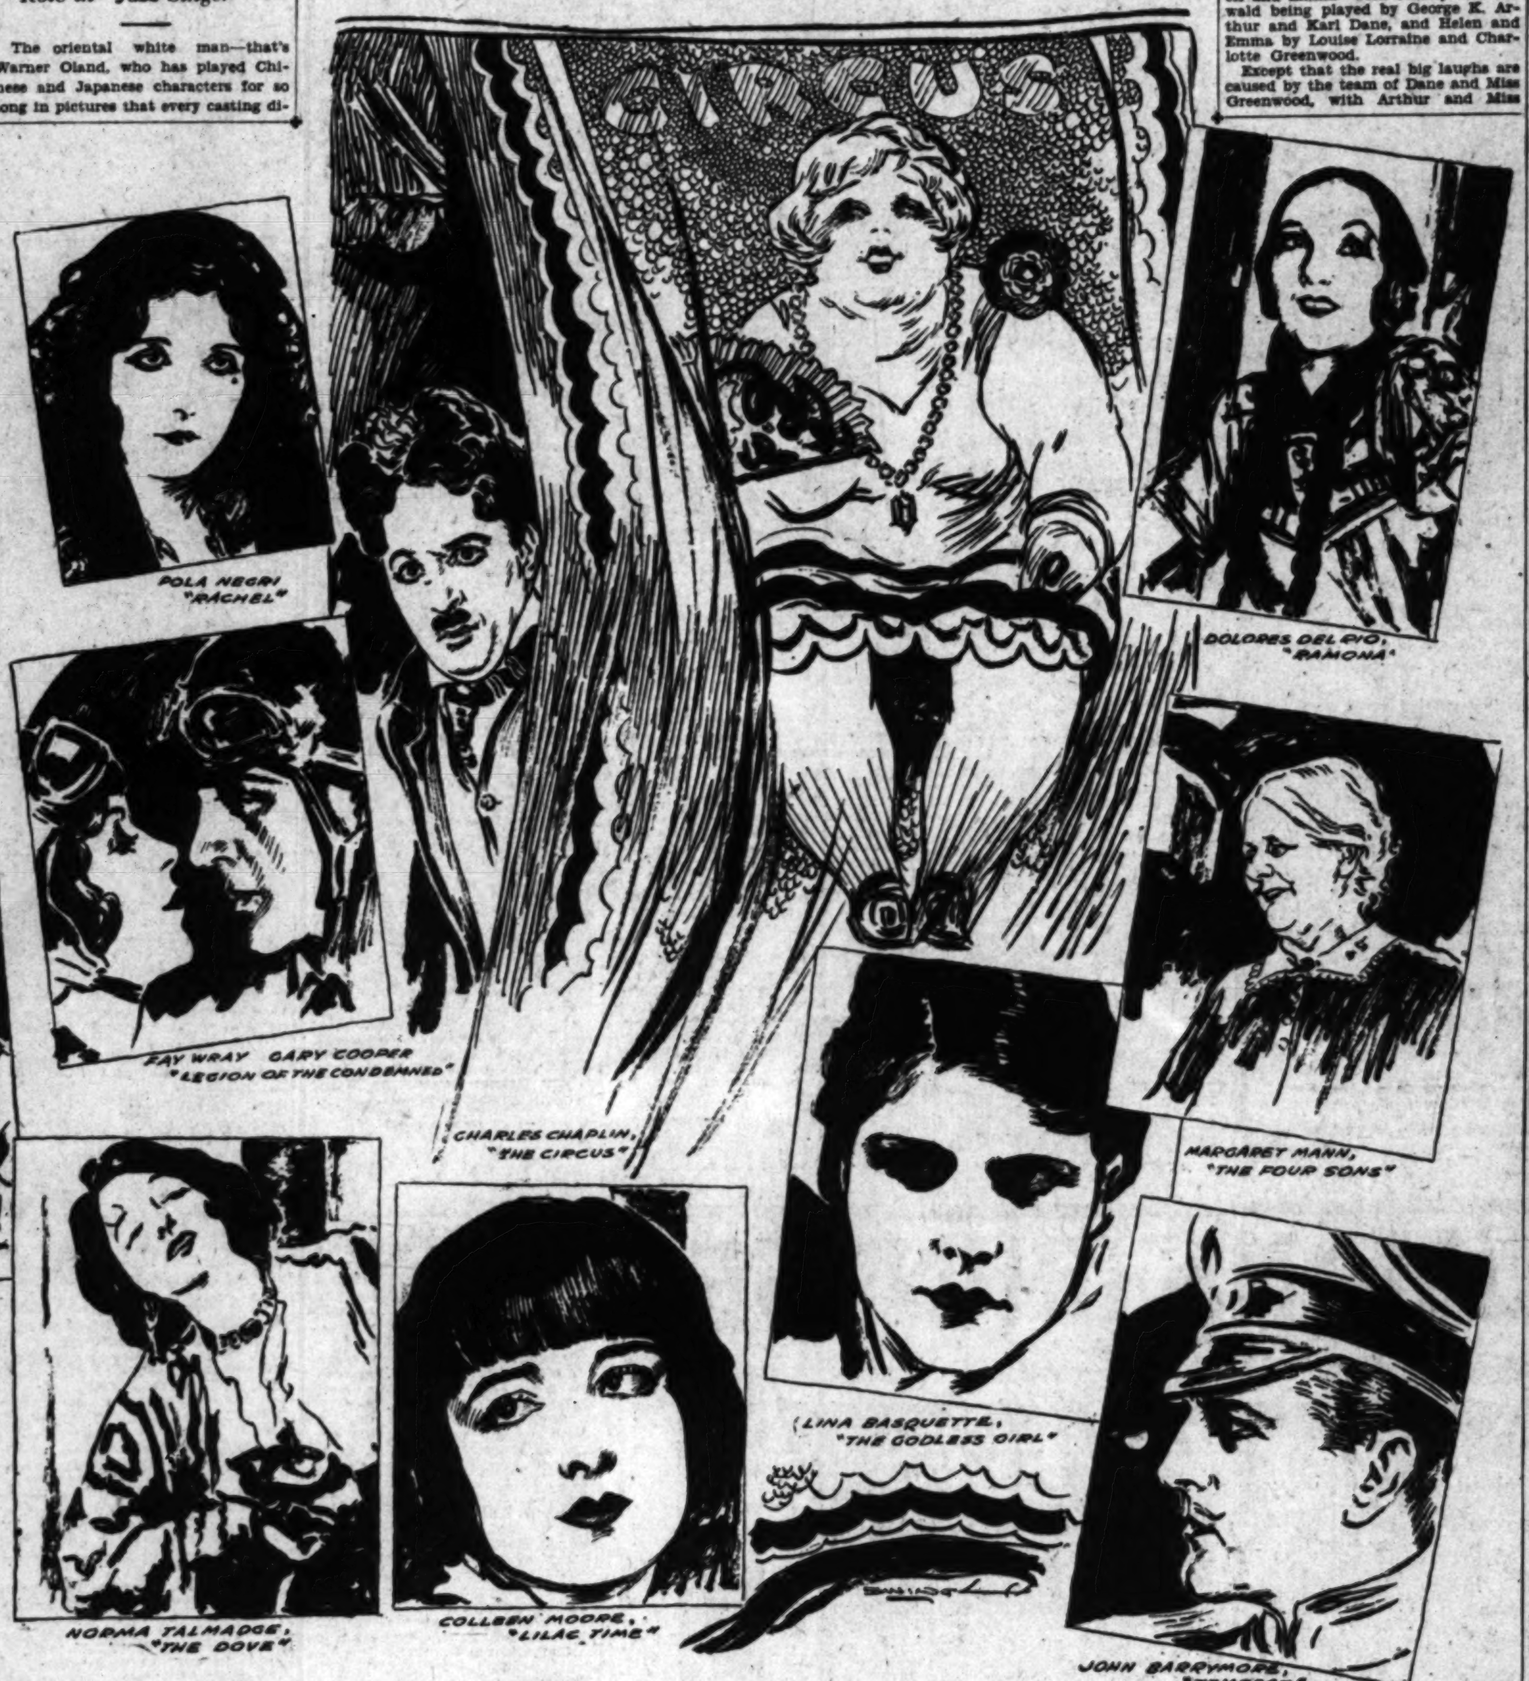
DISTINGUISHED ENTERTAINMENT PROMISED FOR 1928

There is a long and varied list of films to burst on the horizon this coming year, according to productions completed, in the making, or planned by the studios for 1928. Many of these are notable productions of the past year yet to be released, among them Charles Chaplin's "The Circus," Eric Von Stroheim's "The Wedding March," Dolores Del Rio in "Ramona," John Barrymore in "The Tempest," Clarence Brown's "Trail of '98" and others. Which of these will shine out as "hits" and which will be among the less significant? Many predictions have been made but undoubtedly not a few of these will "miss" while surprises, of course, will occur. Below are sketches made by Staff Artist A. L. Ewing of principals in a few of the much-awaited releases.



POLA NEGRI, "RACHEL"

FAY WRAY GARY COOPER "LEGION OF THE CONDEMNED"

CHARLES CHAPLIN, "THE CIRCUS"

DOLORES DEL RIO, "RAMONA"

MARGARET MANN, "THE FOUR SONS"

LINA BASQUETTE, "THE GODLESS GIRL"

NORMA TALMADGE, "THE DOVE"

COLLEEN MOORE, "LILAC TIME"

JOHN BARRYMORE, "TEMPEST"

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

What will be the important pictures of 1928? Will there be a new crop of stars during the coming year? Who will get the "plum" roles in forthcoming pictures? Coming events ofttime cast shadows before them and in the groups of pictures scheduled by the different studios for the year 1928 certain few features are almost sure to attain more than a measure of success. But in the long lists of pictures there are those now unheard of that will undoubtedly be surprise "hits," like, say, "Underworld," during 1927.

At least 1928 will not lack for distinguished motion-picture entertainment. There is a long varied list of films to burst on the horizon.

A few pictures, made during the past year but not yet released, have been long awaited. This is particularly true of Charlies Chaplin's "The Circus," which is due to open at the new United Artists Theater this month or next and Eric Von Stroheim's production, "The Wedding March." Other pictures of importance due for early showings are "The Trail of '98," "Ramona," with Dolores Del Rio; "The Crimson Flower," D. W. Griffith's latest picture, which will probably be shown at Grauman's Chinese; "The Four Sons," next at the Carthay Circle; "The Crowd," and many others.

United Artists have a string of pictures waiting release dates. There are "Sadie Thompson," Gloria Swanson's somewhat purified version of "Rain;" John Barrymore in "Tempest," Norma Talmadge in "The Dove," which will follow "My Best Girl," at the United Artists Theater, "The Garden of Eden," and "Sorrell and Son." Neither Douglas Fairbanks or Mary Pickford has definite plans for productions during 1928. Norma Talmadge is now making "A Woman on Trial," the only company actively at work on the United Artists' lot. John Barrymore may do next "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," with the male lead in the play built up to stellar proportions.

From the United Artists studio come reports that D. W. Griffith, after several pictures of only moderate success, has made a really great one in "The Crimson Flower." Mary Philbin, borrowed from Universal, and Don Alvarado have the leading roles.

Out at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the ranking picture would seem to be "The Trail of '98," made by Clarence Brown, with Dolores Del Rio and

Comedy Star Likes Being "Big Swede"

Something unusual in comedies may be seen in "Baby Mine," current at Loew's State, a double team. There's Jimmy and Oswald and Helen and Emma—with Jimmy and Oswald being played by George K. Arthur and Karl Dane, and Helen and Emma by Louise Lorraine and Charlotte Greenwood.

Except that the real big laughs are caused by the team of Dane and Miss Greenwood, with Arthur and Miss Lorraine appearing more or less "straight."

Dane doesn't approve of the idea much—"for many reasons," he adds—and stops there. Previously his

"THE DOVE" IS ABOVE USUAL

However, It Lacks Warmth of Stage Play

Norma Talmadge is Wraith-like as Dolores

"West Point" Regarded as Best Academy Film

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—"The Dove," which opened Saturday at the Rialto for a run of continuous showings is vastly better than the usual program picture, but remains in that category nevertheless. A rich production, its modern direction and competent acting, did not, however, relieve its stretches of dullness, even though the picture follows the plot of the stage original.

It is in the interpretation of the plot and the characters that the screen version fails to convey the vitality and warmth of the play.

The character of Dolores was originally one of the girls in a Mexican cantina, shrewd, hard-boiled and rather blatant, but as Norma Talmadge plays her she is nothing less than a high-priced prima donna in an operatic Spanish costume given to the delicate languors of a lady of high degree. Miss Talmadge's performance, therefore, becomes a studied exhibition of pretty refinements, in which careful photography plays so prominent a part that her appearance takes on the quality of a wraith in a roll that fairly blazed on the stage. Noah Beery, therefore, easily dominates the picture, giving his best performance since his memorable Le Jaune in "Beau Geste."

ROLAND MISCAST

Gilbert Roland is unfortunately miscast, for his appearance does not even suggest the typical American, the owner of a name like Johnny Powell is supposed to be, and his acting is too consciously picturesque to fit the role. It is pointed out with some amusement that the only American character in the picture is played by a Spaniard, while the Latins are played by Americans—that is, if Eddie Borden is excepted. He contrives to make a small part stand out, while Harry Myers in a remarkable make-up forgets comedy for the moment to play a semiheavy with sinister skill.

"West Point" at the Capital has proved to be the best picture ever made with the United States Military Academy for a background. It has the quality of liveliness which similar pictures have lacked, and it covers more details of the West Point routine.

HAINES INIMITABLE

The story is not notable for depth or originality, but it is sufficient to convey the sincerity of those concerned in it, and it certainly affords William Haines broad canvas for another of his inimitably engaging impersonations which, pointed off by resourceful titles, has kept the theater packed all week and caused gales of laughter to sweep the audience at a midweek matinee. William Bakewell is well cast, and while Joan Crawford had never looked more beautifully distinguished, she has rarely if ever had so little to do. "West Point" is rated an excellent box-office picture, which will do more than its bit toward increasing the popularity of the star.

"The Chinese Parrot" at the Colony has been faithfully inspected by those who anticipated another example of Paul Leni's conspicuous talents, but it has not made an impression as favorable as "The Cat and the Canary," though it is not entirely devoid of the eerie mystery that made the earlier picture notable.

The chief defect in "The Chinese Parrot" is that the audience is made more or less aware of the mysteries that baffle the characters, therefore, the picture is deficient in suspense and is also exceedingly complicated. Hence it qualifies as only fair. The reviewers deplore the scant opportunities given Anna May Wong, whose brief appearances in pretentious pictures keep interest in her at high pitch and inevitably cause comparisons with those who play leads in

LIGHT STORIES ARE BEST

Big Plots Cumbersome, Says Menjou; More Films Should be Made Abroad, He Declares

BY ALMA WHITAKER

It is just four years since Adolphe Menjou rose to stardom in "The Woman of Paris," and created a new type in motion pictures. But it took twelve years before that for him to attain that eminence, Eve Unsell, the scenario writer, having given him his first job in New York.

In his latest picture, "Serenade," at the Metropolitan, directed by Harry D'Arrast, also a pupil of Charlie Chaplin's, the New York critics are loud in their acclamations. In this also, we see Kathryn Carver, whom Menjou will marry on May 4 and take for a honeymoon tour of five months to Europe. Menjou changed the venue a bit in that he made Kathryn a leading lady first "In Service for Ladies," and is marrying her afterward.

The only fly in the ointment of the approving criticism is a hint here and there that Menjou always plays the same type.

MICHELANGELO DID

"Of course I do," snorts Adolphe spiritedly. "Michelangelo always painted the same kind of pictures, Christopher Wrenn always built the same type of churches. And it is a good type. Only a short time ago a man high in pictures assured me I was a 'freak type,' that a man could not wear evening dress clothes and a mustache in pictures for long. Now Lew Cody, Ray Griffith, Ronald Colman all favor that once taboo mustache.

"But Lasky's have sold me and my pictures are a success, and they don't cost much either," he laughed. "Charlie Chaplin taught us that it doesn't

'The Gaucho' and Grauman Prologue Held Theater's Best Year-End Show

Today will mark the beginning of the final three weeks of the combination of Sid Grauman's prologue and Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho," the biggest year-end holiday attraction in the history of Graumanesque showmanship, according to an announcement just made by the theater magnate.

Inasmuch as the announcement of the final weeks of each big production always is greeted by a big rush for seats, the impresario urges that those wishing to attend the few remaining performances make reservations in advance.

Grauman reiterates the statement that after the concluding performance at the Chinese, "The Gaucho" never again will be shown in Los Angeles with the colorful prologue presentation "Argentine Nights," which introduces seventy-five people in an expansive and attractive setting.

Numerous Latin American artists appear in the prologue in a variety of divertissements from whirlwind interpretations of the Tango Argentine to novel renditions of inspiring music by the "Gaucho Marimba Band," while Borrah Minevitch and his "Argentine Rascals," an unique harmonica band, provide new glories for the humble mouth organ.

The many admirers of Douglas Fairbanks believe that "The Gaucho" represents the supreme attainment of the athletic star of the films in that the Argentine picture presents him for the first time in a real dramatic role.

THREE MONTHS' VISIT

Arthur Stone, First National featured comedian, is enjoying a three months' visit from his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Poole of Chicago. This being her first visit to her son in two years, she met for the first time her new daughter-in-law, whom Stone married only last August. Mrs. Poole also finds her son in a new home on North Bedford Drive, in the heart of the film colony of Beverly Hills. Stone is now working in the current Milton Sills picture for First National, "Burning Daylight," directed by Charles Brabin.

Three new screen attractions—"Baby Mine," at Loew's State; Adolphe Menjou in "Serenade," at the Metropolitan, and May McAvoy in "A Reno Divorce," at the Boulevard—are billed for premieres this week at motion-picture houses.

Other film offerings include "Silk Stockings," Broadway Palace; "Sunrise," Carthay Circle; "The Gaucho," Chinese; "The Jazz Singer," Criterion; "Love," Million Dollar; "Get Your Man," Rialto; "Unwed Mothers," Tally's; "St. Elmo," Tower; "My Best Girl," United Artists.

Boulevard

"A Reno Divorce," featuring May McAvoy, is the current attraction at the Boulevard Theater. The production is a comedy-drama of the romance of a reckless society deb and a young artist. Ralph Graves appears opposite the star.

On the stage Gene Morgan leads the usual round of festivities.

Broadway Palace

A light story of young married life is "Silk Stockings," the Universal picture starring Laura La Plante, the attraction at the Broadway Palace Theater.

John Harron plays opposite the star, while the supporting cast includes Otis Harlin, William Austin, Temple Pigot, Marcella Daly, Ruth Cherrington and others.

Carthay Circle

"Sunrise," F. W. Murnau's superproduction for Fox, starring Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell and Margaret Livingstone, is attracting much attention at the Carthay Circle Theater. The picture is said to be one of the most artistic and unusual to come from the Fox studios this year.

Chinese

The Douglas Fairbanks film, "The Gaucho," is nearing the end of its engagement at the Grauman Chinese Theater, Hollywood. The picture has a South American locale with Fairbanks impersonating a colorful figure of the plains. There is a Sid Grauman prologue.

Criterion

"The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, is now in the second week of its showing at the Criterion Theater. The production is novel not only because it marks Jolson's initial screen appearance, but also because it is accompanied by what is hailed as an unusual and effective Vitaphone score. May McAvoy appears opposite Jolson.

Loew's State

Charlotte Greenwood, vaudeville and musical-comedy star, heroine of "So Long Letty" and other shows, makes her debut as a screen actress in "Baby Mine," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of the stage play, now being shown at Loew's State Theater. The lanky Miss Greenwood plays the sweetheart of the elongated Karl Dane, who, with George K. Arthur, is co-starred in the picture, the second featuring the comedy team of "Rookies."

This week is "Laugh Week" at Loew's State with "Baby Mine" heading the program and added attractions being Our Gang in "Dog Heaven" and a laugh-a-minute stage show featuring the vaudeville comedian, Bennie Rubin.

Metropolitan

"Serenade," Adolphe Menjou's latest starring vehicle, is the current attraction at the Metropolitan Theater. The production is said to be an unusually fine one, with Kathryn Carver and Lina Basquette appearing in the supporting cast.

On the stage is a new Fanchon and Marco novelty featuring a group of prominent Victor artists.

Million Dollar

"Love," starring Greta Garbo and John Gilbert, is now playing at the Million Dollar Theater. Directed by Edward Goulding, the film play has been adapted from the novel, "Anna Karenina," and from all reports should prove immensely popular. In the cast are George Fawcett, Brandon Hurst, Philippe de Lacy and Emily Fitzroy.

Rialto

Clara Bow in "Get Your Man" is the current attraction at the Rialto Theater. The production is a breezy comedy of a French nobleman and an American flapper. Charles Rogers appears opposite Miss Bow in the cast.

Tally's

The second of a series of hygiene and educational films showing for mixed audiences is now at Tally's Theater. The film is titled "Unwed Mothers" and is said to be an expose of the companionate marriage theories.

The production comes direct from showings in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Tower

"St. Elmo," film version of the novel of that name, is at the Tower Theater, with John Gilbert as star. The film is accompanied by a Movietone score, with additional Vitaphone and Movietone novelties offered.

United Artists

"My Best Girl," starring Mary Pickford, continues its run at the United Artists' Theater. The production is hailed as one of Miss Pickford's best in some time. Charles Rogers, a comparative newcomer to the screen, is leading man for the star. The story was written especially for Miss Pickford by Kathleen Norris, and deals with the life and romance of a stock girl in a 5 and 10-cent store.

GRETA LACKS TEMPERAMENT

many times I eat there or some place outside, but not in the hotel diningroom. I do not know many people not in Hollywood, either."

She does find in this hotel by the ocean a certain quiet and a sense of unobtrusiveness, a feeling of being away from the stares of the crowd and merry-making of the picture people. She confesses to no love for swimming in the ocean which is so near. She does not care for sports particularly, only—on cloudy days, when the air is cool and misty, she likes to go for a walk alone by the side of the water.

PROBABLY VERY LONELY

Greta is probably a very lonely individual, still frightened, after two and one-half years in this country, where has poured down upon her, as an avalanche of snow in Sweden, the adulation of hundreds of thousands of fans who know her only as one of the screen's most alluring and sophisticated of charmers.

She does not think she speaks English at all well, nor is she sure she understands what is being said. She really speaks good English, and she probably understands much more than she will admit, even to herself.

She is, rather, it would seem, constantly on her guard against expressing herself wrongly, against revelation of any personal facts of her life. This may, in part, account for her not caring to mingle with people. She does not see why any one should be interested in whether she eats oatmeal for breakfast, or whether she is going to marry this person or that.

"Why do they ask me so many questions?" she inquired. "That is for me—it belongs to me, and I do not want to say things about it. In Sweden, they would not want to know, only here."

There have been times when she has been accused of "temperament," and Greta, maintaining always that reserve which would seem to be founded on her sense of strangeness and inability to cope with the ways of the aggressive, fast-moving picture world, has made no answer. She has simply kept silent.

IS NOT TEMPERAMENTAL

"But when you say temperament, you mean that I am very angry and I show it by doing awful things," she said. "Like in a picture in which I was in and a woman threw a telephone. That is terrible. I am not temperamental, I could not do that."

She hates the word "vampire." To her, it means a woman who is obvious in her use of arts and wiles by which to "get a man." Greta does not want to do vampires.

"I want always to play charming, interesting women, who are natural, who are themselves. They do not show all they feel nor desire. They are carried on by what happens to them."

Always, so far, she has played roles in which she appears as ten years or so older than her actual 23. "Maybe, when I am 30 or 35, I can play flappers," she smiled. "But, no, I do not want to be flapperish, nor just sweet and pretty. I want to be interesting and not obvious."

Is she "happy" with her work now at Metro-Goldyn-Mayer?

"Happy, that word, I hear so much of here. In my country, it means, oh, so much."

SHE FEELS PROGRESS

Is she satisfied? No, she is not satisfied, she thinks, but she feels that she is working toward what she wants most. She searched for words to express herself. It is rather, she explained, the finest and best she can do.

She has not yet seen "Love," the current showing at the Million Dollar in which she is co-starred with John Gilbert. Not even a preview "I do not like to see what I have done," she said. "Is that funny? I do not go and I do not, but I am going to the Million Dollar this week, yes, this week, some afternoon and see it. So, I can not tell you what I think about it yet. I liked the woman, though, I liked to play her."

Actors Leave for Vacations

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios will be minus just two blond actors after the last of the week.

Lars Hanson left a week or so ago to visit his home in Sweden. He plans to be away for several months, returning to Hollywood only when his picture work calls him back. Tim McCoy leaves the last of this week for a much-needed vacation. The western star has been appearing in once picture right after another, with but a few days' rest between. He plans to be gone from Hollywood for at least two months.

selves, did nothing that was not entirely essential to his theme. And it is notable that some of the most beautiful are the least "finished."

One of the loveliest of all is a Japanese sketch of Lake Tahoe, loosely accented trees seen against the expanse of blue water and the farther mountains. Of exquisite quality is "San Juan, New Mexico," the yellow moldering buildings of a quiet pueblo that still remains one of the least disturbed Indian communities of the Southwest.

Here is a dream-like backwater of the Green River, Wyoming, recorded in that magic envelope of atmosphere this artist understood so well, and in the sketch for a picture that we saw some time ago at the Biltmore, the pillared buttes of the Green River are fantastically aflame with sunset above the ashen-gray hills where tiny riders thread their way in shadow.

"The Ruby Range, Nevada" is flooded with incredible desert light, brilliant yet austere in color, and shows a swift masterly grasp of the essentials of mountain forms. Pike's Peak lifts its white head above great mountain shoulders. The Needles of the Colorado River and the cliffs above the Green River are simply and swiftly recorded. "Donner Lake" comes in for a more elaborate treatment, lying white under the blue of a Sierra sky and seen through the massive gray rocks of Emigrant Gap.

In Mexico and New Mexico the adobe houses and the old churches and cathedrals caught the artist's eye. The yellow walls of Orizaba, Maravatio, Jaral and other towns appear here in delicate sketches pencilled lightly with notations of his intended color schemes.

For further variety there are sketches of the sea receding to great distance and with real knowledge of its moving surfaces, and two early works, "Conway Castle" and a scene in North Wales. These latter lack the draughtsmanship and knowledge of the later sketches.

In none of these works is there any attempt at water color technique, for they were not made as pictures but as notes for the artist's later guidance and records of his journeyings, but in one finished moonlight, a very fine work indeed, we see Moran's powers in the medium.

STOJANA'S WORK

I well remember a day in San Francisco, I think it was in 1920, when a dark-skinned man, tanned to the color of a South Sea Islander, laid one by one upon the floor of an art gallery a succession of riotous paintings in which figures richly suggestive of the tropics emerged from and were again hidden by exotic foliage and fruits. Barbaric, heated, incoherent, they disturbed me greatly.

Last year an exhibition of Stojana's paintings toured the museums of the country and attracted considerable interest. But by that time the artist had lost interest in them. A new medium had engaged his mind and hand, and if one may judge from his exhibition this month at the Los Angeles Museum, that new medium, wood-carving and wood sculpture, is aiding him to more complete and logical expression.

Stojana's art has seen its main evolution since he first came to California and radical changes have marked its course. Years ago he studied with Arthur Matthews, dean of California mural painters, and the instinct for large decoration that doubtless led to this admiration, still remains. He worked later with Gottardo Piazzoni and there was a "Whistler" period at one time, traces of which might still be discovered in the somewhat precious quality of the small brush drawings done on fragile oriental papers in the South Sea Islands and the Island of Bali.

In the present exhibition the pieces are dated from 1919 to 1927, and they record principally his growth as an artist in wood. Given a simple architectural setting by the use of burlap partitions, the works are isolated for individual view.

Since the large, rich, tropical figure canvas done in 1919, in which the fecundity of the tropics is expressed in deep, strong color and a profusion of beautiful forms, he seems to me to show little of importance before the dark wood carvings of 1926 and 1927. That most facile of all drawing tools—the Chinese brush—worked sure magic in the hands of orientals who had served a gruelling caligraphic and academic apprenticeship with it as their only tool, but Stojana got little with it but charming fragments, a hit or miss art reminiscent of the Whistler pastels.

Neither do the later paintings offer much, except in so far as they foreshadow that merging of natural and abstract decorative forms that is so delightful in the best of his wood sculpture. Perhaps a harder, less facile material was needed to develop the craftsman, for when he ceases to toy with color and digs into the wood, the plasticity, felt indeed in the large painting of 1919, supplants the decorative trend of most of his paintings here. When he ceases entirely to color his wood carvings he rises to such exceedingly fine works as No. 30, a dark almost square panel of carved wood inset with tiny strips of mirror in its border, and the large vertical dark panel of figures and abstract forms.

In these—doubtless puzzling to the onlooker who seeks representational forms only—man and his environment blend in a rich harmony. The forms move freely both on the surface and into the wood, though the reliefs are not overly deep. The dark color lends gravity. Here we have a complete and individual art executed with fine craftsmanship.

There is also a whimsical child in Stojana, who, like a Digger Indian, carves crudely and unceasingly into the burnt trunk of a tree and colors it with childish spots of red and green. Doubtless there are "parlor-modernists" who regard this tree as a masterpiece. In fact, there are several pieces that would have been better grouped under the title Stojana's "Play than Stojana's "Work."

The craftsman and the decorator triumph together in the gorgeous colored wood carving, No. 27. Strong colors are here used to enhance a multitude of shapes and symbols into a sharply carved panel that would give glory to any wall.

To sum up, the exhibition is intensely interesting, entirely out of the common run, and should be missed by no one who is interested in the growth of an individual and gifted artist. And if I have passed by the majority of works shown, without much enthusiasm, it is because the few later works noted here seem to me the true and lasting art of the man.

ROMANTIC WEST

Frank Tenney Johnson's West, fully displayed in the notable showing at the Stendahl Galleries this month, is the product of long and continually renewed study. Every year Mr. Johnson returns to those deserts and mountain fastnesses that figure in his pictures, that he may not lose contact with the verity he seeks to portray, and a number of studies and sketches done on these pack-trips will be found among the larger, finished compositions of the studio.

This artist is hard to define, and perhaps it is because he paints sincerely and well something that finds an immediate response in the public heart. Following a simple and direct path, there are no vagaries or doubts discernible from his work. In the mountains and the great deserts is a picturesque and colorful life, horses and men touched to flame by the sun's rays, made cool and mysterious by the brilliant moonlight. All this delights him, and, with his unflagging craftsmanship, he makes it delight us too.

Here is a veritable panorama of western scenes, and always that West that is vast, dry, and in its forms and barrenness, forbidding. But the painter knows how the miraculous light transforms the wilderness into a haunting paradise, a cruel heaven on earth that hides all its sterility under a glowing mantle of color, that offers a freedom and health little known elsewhere.

This exhileration of the West is in all these canvases. The cowboy, the hunter, the prospector, the lone Indian or those picturesque families of Indians who trek over the desert in their incredible buckboards, these move in this West as the great sinking sun burnishes red rocks and spreads cool, vast shadows over erstwhile burning lava beds and desert sands.

"The Covered Wagon." Late afternoon. The greenish sky holds clouds that march onward with dramatic grandeur. Tired cows resting from their enforced labors in the deepening shadow of the wagon. A glow of gold and pink over landscape, wagon and cows. An episode in the epic of the West.

For a solid composition Mr. Johnson has done nothing better than "Rocky Mountain Goat." Poised on his rock amid wild crags and drifting snow, the great white goat seems to epitomize this forbidding land in the sky amid the cold winds.

Mexicans and Indians against adobe walls, quiet in the moonlight. Few painters have studied moonlight like this one and many of his happiest effects are gained with his night palette. Altogether the character of his work is well known. Here Los Angeles has its first opportunity to see this work in its entirety.

Born at Big Grove, Iowa, in 1874, Frank Tenney Johnson studied at the Art Students' League. Among the honors that have come to him are the Shaw Purchase prize at the National Academy of Design, 1923, and permanent representation in the National Gallery at Washington, D. C. He has a studio in Alhambra and one in New York.

OLD MASTERS

Dr. Lilienfeld, president of the Van Diemen Galleries, will divide his time between the pictures which he is exhibiting at the Los Angeles Museum and the Grace Nicholson Galleries in Pasadena. Many of the larger canvases from his collection will be at the museum, while nine smaller but very choice works will be shown in Pasadena. It is of this latter group I will write today, leaving until next Sunday the pictures at the museum.

Museums in this country and abroad have purchased many fine pictures from the Van Diemen Galleries. Especially important among recent transactions was the acquisition for the Detroit Institute of Arts of Titian's "Man With a Flute," regarded throughout the world as one of the outstanding masterpieces of Titian's last and best period; and the purchase by the same museum of "The Annunciation," by Gerard David, one of the very few works by this Flemish master in American collections. The Art News reported last month the sale of Tiepolo's "Triumph of Amphitrite" to the State Gallery of Dreseden

"The Madonna and Child" reproduced here was painted by L'Ingegno, known also as Andrea of Assisi, who is known to have worked in that place in 1484. The artist was under the influence of Perugino, and this picture was attributed to that master until proven by Dr. Georg Gronau the work of L'Ingegno. Dr. Gronau has made the catalogue raissonne of this artist's work. There is in the National Gallery London, a madonna by the same painter, done from the same models but with a change in the details of costume and in the background. In both the pictures the Virgin is of a singuar sweetness and modesty. The picture is well preserved, the colors mellow, but clear.

Especially important is the bust portrait of a youth by Joos Van Cleve, known so long as the Master of the Death of the Virgin, until identified by Dr. Friedlander of Berlin. This is a fine clear portrait, the green of the background and the red of the dress very fresh. There is exquisite modeling in the face, framed by dark tones of cap and hair.

A fine water scene by Van Goyen of Leyden seems to sum up the efforts of those Dutch painters, who in the second quarter of the seventeenth century interpreted light and distance with the most slender range of gray tints. Dutch fishing boats form a foreground for an expause of water and a distant town.

By the "Master of the Female Half Lengths," a Fleming, painted according to Friedlander about 1540, is another charming Madonna and Child. It shows the characteristic Italian influence of the time, and in an effort to get movement, is painted in a curiously interesting perspective.

A sterling interior showing a musician drawing on his boots, is by Quirijn Brekelenkam, signed and dated 1655. The color is very warm, clear brown tones rising to strong red. Ten years earlier is an interior by Gerard Terborgh, showing a young woman writing a letter. The color is a rich harmony of red, blue and green.

Other works of interest and quality are a Bacchante by Greuze, two views of Rome by Hubert Robert, eighteenth century French painter, and an English portrait of a young girl by W. Etty, the principal claims of this last resting on its color charm.

ALICE BLAIR THOMAS

The paintings by Alice Blair Thomas, one of several exhibitions this month at the Grace Nicholson Galleries, cover a wide range of subjects—the beeches of old England, where, by the way, Miss Thomas has exhibited at the Royal Academy; a few from Windermere the lake country of Wordsworth and De Quincy; the mountains of Northern Washington and the California Sierras, and closer home, decorative eucalyptus and sycamores of Los Angeles county. An occasional picture from some old Dutch town, even a scene from India, and a number of pictures in which sheep furnish the interest, are here also. The treatment varies with the subject, sometimes broadly painted in large taches, sometimes, as with the sheep or beeches, aided with strong outline. In the quieter atmospheric effects she makes her greater successes.

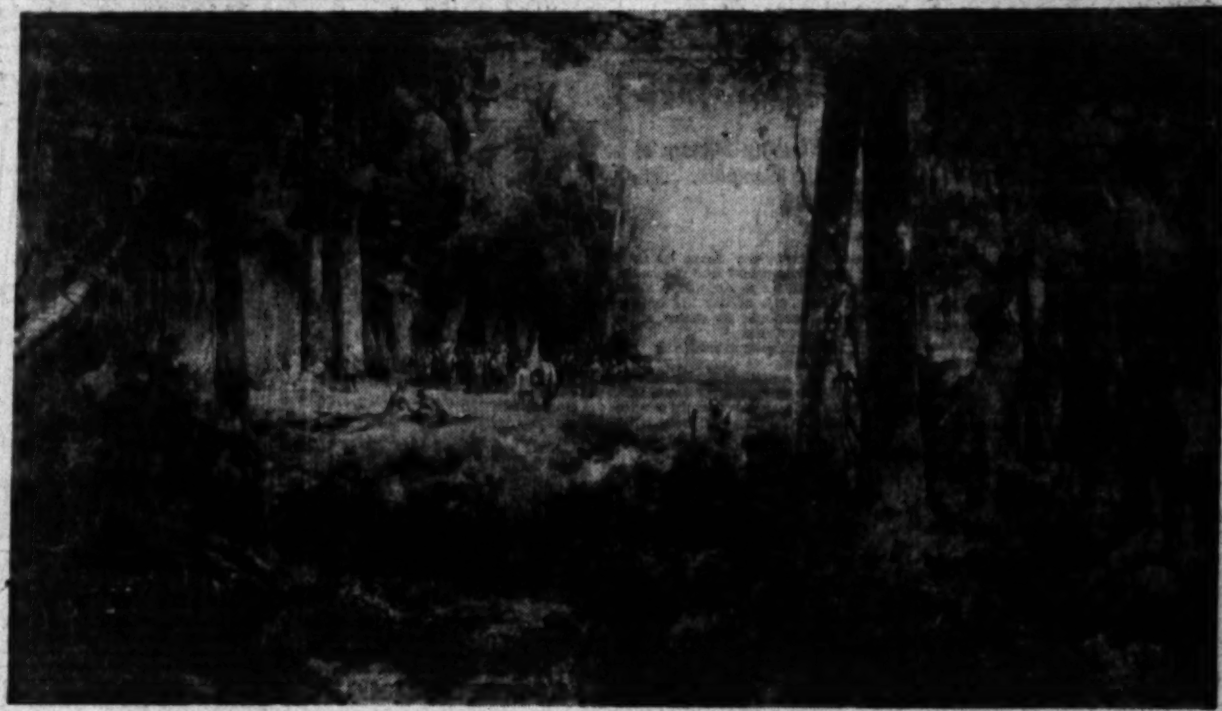
DEALER TELLS NEW POLICY

Newhouse Galleries to Handle Only Important Works of High Quality

Dalzell Hatfield, manager of the Los Angeles establishment of the Newhouse Galleries, the fifty-year-old firm which also has galleries in New York, Chicago and St. Louis, announced today that his firm is henceforth to deal only in paintings of the first importance. High quality rather than quantity will be the future aim of this firm.

As an earnest of this policy he is now showing one of the finest Wyants in America, "Eventide;" and George De Forrest Brush's extremely fine portrait of his daughter Polly, as beautiful an example of this artist's painting as can be found anywhere, and one of his most renowned works. The galleries will shortly show an important collection of English and other portraits.



"Ponce De Leon Treating With the Indians" by Thomas Moran N. A. 1837-1926.

This important and beautiful historical painting, originally sold by the artist in the '70's to a publishing firm who reproduced it extensively, has just been acquired by a collector from the Biltmore Salon. It will remain on exhibition for a limited time in the Galleria Real of the Biltmore.

PIONEER WOMAN MONUMENT

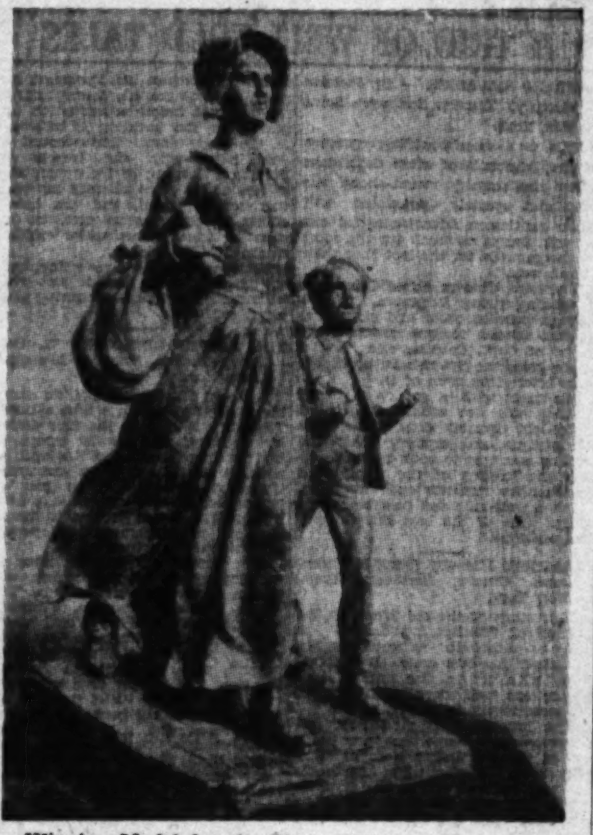
Public in Fifteen Cities Chose Bryant Baker's Idealistic Sculpture for Ponca City

Two years ago Mr. E. W. Marland of Ponca City, Okla., commissioned twelve sculptors to enter models for a pioneer woman, the one chosen to be erected in Ponca City and presented to the nation to commemorate woman's heroic part in the great western trek.

After being shown in New York, the twelve models were shown in fifteen cities and visitors were furnished ballots to record their choice. Seven hundred and fifty thousand people saw the exhibit and a preponderant vote went to Mr. Baker's model, which is to be used with a few changes in costume.

While the final decision lay with Mr. Marland himself, he did not feel sufficiently swayed toward any one model to disregard such an overwhelming vote. The reviews of the exhibition by various art critics throughout the country were so divergent that he did not find any help from them.

Some of the other figures were more realistic, some more monumental. It is easy to understand the popular vote because this is almost the only figure conceived on an idealistic basis. This is the young hopeful pioneer looking forward to the adventure rather than the toughened, experienced woman of the plains. The competition received wide publicity in the press and the models were reproduced in The Times rotogravure section.



Winning Model for the Pioneer Woman Monument

Gift to the nation of a monument and a park at Ponca City, Okla., by E. W. Marland, the winning model, by Bryant Baker, reproduced here was selected from figures submitted by twelve leading sculptors. The donor's choice coincides with the popular vote in eleven cities.

HIGH LIGHTS OF NEW YORK LIFE

Mary Borden in "Flamingo" Gives a Flashing Picture of the Turmoil and the Contrasts of the Complex, Swift-Moving Life of Today

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

FLAMINGO. A novel. By Mary Borden. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

Mary Borden tells a story in her own way, stopping frequently for reflections, philosophical and otherwise, but never creating the effect of having strayed from the main line of the story. This is partly due to the fact that Miss Borden has consciously and capably shaped her material so well that it all leads to one conclusion—that this mad world is no place for idealists in general, and most especially for the particular idealist, Peter Campbell, around whom the events whirl.

Looked at from another angle "Flamingo" is only incidentally the story of the demon-haunted idealist, Peter, the real center of the book being New York of the present day, which Miss Borden paints in vivid and passionate strokes.

At any rate it is an unforgettable picture that "Flamingo" gives of New York, with all its turmoil and its contrasts, its skyscrapers and its dens, its mad young people and its powerful and relentless social and financial leaders.

By the introduction of a member of the British Cabinet, Victor Joyce, and his wife and his secretary, Miss Borden brings into the story the challenging contrast between England and American character and standards.

As a child Peter Campbell had played in Cornwall with Frederika Joyce, but had caught only fleeting glimpses of her since. Then in the meantime he had married the spoiled and peevish daughter of one of America's richest men, and it had become her principal pastime to flay him alive, always observing all the rules of polite society. Peter patiently bore with her, guiltily aware that he had never loved her and should never have married her. In his boy's heart he carried the memory of Frederika, who had become his romance and his inner light. This sounds sentimental because it is sentimental, but there is no sentimentality here. For the test is, of course, can Miss Borden bring it off, can she make it seem right and natural? I think most readers of the 400 pages of "Flamingo" will feel that she can and has. For she writes in a white heat of passion that carries her readers along pell mell and stills criticism.

While the story is tense in dramatic incident, it is in the characters and in the criticism of the life of the day that its strength lies. Miss Borden hurls herself at the very heart of life and uses all her powers to fathom its mystery and its tragedy. To say that in doing this she gives her readers abundant food for thought is putting it mildly; for here is an author that cerebrates while she sleeps.

Although "Flamingo" is high-powered and high-keyed it is not a book to appeal to the lover of light fiction. It is too sincere, too impassioned and too full of purpose to be merely entertaining.

Mary Borden is an American whose history is inseparable from that of Chicago and the making of the middle border. Although she is married to an Englishman, Gen. Spears, she is a daughter of William Borden of Chicago and spent all of her youth in the Middle West. Her childhood in the stately old house on the lake shore and holidays at the family homestead in Indiana left deep impressions upon which she was to draw in several of her books. The ample old farmhouse in Indiana was the scene of many a jolly Thanksgiving. It belonged to the grandfather, John Borden, a Rhode Islander who in his adventures settled down in Ohio in search of silver mines. He found no silver, but very good farm land, so he settled on the borders of Kentucky and Indiana and built the friendly old homestead which his grandchildren made a place of delightful memories. William Borden, the son, however, did discover silver. Sent west by his father and Marshall Field, the founder of the family, he was one of the builders of Leadville.

Miss Borden uses her American background to contrast with foreign modes of thought in many of her stories. Her best-known novel is "Jane, Our Stranger."

FLOWERING QUINCE. By Dorothy Van Doren. George H. Doran Company, New York.

In direct contrast to "Flamingo" is "Flowering Quince," the second novel of Dorothy Van Doren, wife of Mark. Here is careful restraint, quiet detachment. The result is a rather bare and hard-surfaced novel, without any of the allurements that mark best sellers. And yet the story holds one and stays by after fluffier tales are forgotten.

"Flowering Quince" is the story of Emily Ann. She is one of those unfortunates who are ruined by the mistakes of well-meaning parents. Emily Ann's father, Rev. Jonathan Tanner, was old and worn out before Emily Ann came to her parents, late in life, to disturb her father with her infantile cries and to sap her mother of the little vitality a cramped existence had left her.

So when Emily Ann was 8 she began helping her mother with the dinner and the dishes, moving about the hushed and joyless house like a little old woman. Unfortunately, half-truths about sex came to her during her adolescence and these so affected her that she definitely shut certain things out of her life before she was old enough to make such far-reaching decisions.

Of Emily Ann's repressed life in college and later as secretary to a banker, of her settling rigidly into a mold, and of other things Mrs. Van Doren tells in a novel that is a wise and penetrating character study, as well as a commentary on the world of today and tomorrow.

DEPARTING WINGS. By Faith Baldwin. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

This is a story of the difficulties and adjustments that marriage even at is best entails. When Sylvia and David met at an aviation station in Florida shortly after the close of the war they promptly and irrevocably fell in love. A hasty marriage opened new raptures to them. Then came a temporary separation while David was sent west on a special mission and Sylvia took and furnished an apartment in New York. Reunited, they found that first rapture eluding them. It continued to elude them, though something else came in its place with the birth of the first baby. But it took time before the two found each other in the fullest sense, and it was only by a forgiving and a new understanding that the necessary adjustments and tragic compromises were made.

Faith Baldwin is the author of "Three Women," a book that showed ability of a high order. "Departing Wings" is a good novel of its kind.

A DISTINGUISHED GERMAN

Dr. Emil Ludwig, the distinguished German historian and biographer, whose latest book, "Bismarck: The Story of a Fighter," is now a nonfiction best seller, is the most recent celebrated European author to plan an American lecture tour. Dr. Ludwig is due to arrive in New York this month. After his initial appearance in that city he will visit the principal cities of the United States, under the management of Lee Keedick, lecturing on the subject, "Bismarck and the German Republic." He proposes to speak in English or German, as his audiences may prefer or the occasion justify.

Dr. Ludwig was born in Breslau, in the north of Germany, in 1881. Beginning as a dramatist, between the ages of 20 and 30 years he wrote twelve plays, six of which were produced. Meanwhile he had taken up the study of social welfare and obtained the degree of doctor of jurisprudence. Seeking a more extended contact with the world of affairs, he did some journalistic work in England before the war and during the war in the political centers of Germany. He says: "The son and the pupil of democratic intellectuals, I never wrote in favor of monarchs before the war, nor, during it, against any nation; and since it came to an end, I have devoted my pen to the service of the German republic."

ANTS BY THE MILLION

A. W. Cardinall, in his new book, "In Ashanti and Beyond" (Lippincott,) gives an interesting account of the driver ants that inhabit certain parts of Africa and so called because they drive all before them. Describing these ants on the march Mr. Cardinall writes: "I have seen a line continuing across a road for over forty-eight hours—but I have seen neither its commencement nor its end. The rate of march is, according to several tests I have made, just over a yard a minute. Averaging four abreast, there must have passed in forty-eight hours, any given point, at least 1,658,880 ants, each a quarter of an inch in length, and in addition the double hedge must be reckoned in. This would give close on 4,000,000 ants in the formic army; and every one bites, some of them very severely."

THE AMERICAN ADVENTURE

"The American Adventure," by the distinguished historian, David Saville Muzzey, professor of history at Columbia University, has been published in two volumes by Harpers. Prof. Muzzey gave a hint of his approach to American history in these books in a recent address before the International Club: "Modern history books are attacked as unpatriotic because they have shifted the emphasis from political events themselves to the social and economic causes of political events."

NOVEL BY STEELE

"Meat," a new novel by Wilbur Daniel Steele, began in the November Harper's Magazine. Few of Wilbur Daniel Steele's readers are aware that he was an artist before he turned to writing. Mr. Steele came east to study at the Boston Art Museum after graduating from the University of Denver in 1907. He continued his studies in Paris and New York and devoted altogether several years to art. When he began to write it was at once apparent that he carried over into his new medium the artist's keen eye for the pictorial quality of a scene and the artist's sense of structure and emphasis. A new volume of Mr. Steele's short stories, "The Man Who Saw Through Heaven," has just been published by Harper & Bros.

RECOGNITION OF NEW PHASES

Asserting that American literature is passing beyond the "hokum-exposers" and the cynical spirit of scoffing at the obvious faults of American civilization, and that the time has come for a more complete view, Scribner's Magazine in its January, 1928, number, opens its forty-second year with the announcement of a new editorial policy and in an entirely new typographical dress.

"We believe that a new conception of American life is coming into being," states the announcement. "There are many signs of progress which are not apparent to the superficial critics. There are phases of our civilization which will not be changed, no matter how much is written about them. In this era of industrial prosperity thoughtful people are pausing to take stock, to see what the development of this country means in terms not only of physical resources but of things of the mind and spirit, to discover what the great process of science and invention means to the individual man and woman, to ask whether the standardization of the mechanical details of existence may not have its advantages as well as its disadvantages. Many aspects of our life need to be considered in a new spirit, a spirit which is one neither of complacency nor of cynicism. The new Scribner's Magazine will express that spirit."

The physical changes in the magazine include a new cover design replacing the one originally designed in 1887 by Stanford White. This new cover has been arranged by Gordon Aymar, with a series of decorative motives by Rockwell Kent. A new type face, Granjon, is used, designed by George William Jones at Sign of the Dolphin, London, from one used by Jeon Poupy of Paris, in 1582. The original face was designed by the famous French type artist, Claude Garamond.

The first number of the magazine under its new policy and dress contains an article on Andrew W. Mellon, by Silas Bent, Roy L. Garis writes "National Origins and Deportations" a new study of an important phase of the immigration problem. The fiction events of the new Scribner's are the first installment of a new mystery story—"The Greene Murder Case" by S. S. Van Dine, author of "The 'Canary' Murder Case," and a new short story of the Forsytes by John Galsworthy.

RECENT BOOKS

DOUG AND MARY AND OTHERS. Allene Talmey. Macy-Macius, New York.

It is a lively account that Allene Talmey gives of various cinema stars, with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford given the spotlight.

In publicity English of highest voltage we read of Gloria Swanson, of the Talmadges, of Adolph Zukor, of Lillian Gish and Samuel Goldwyn, and others, so that each falls into his place and becomes as familiar as your small town next door neighbor.

The woodcut portraits by Bertrand Zadig are in themselves worth the price of the book.

ONE WONDERFUL WEEK. By C. S. Forester. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

Mr. Forester, whose earlier novel "Love Lies Dreaming" had a mellow quality, turns in "A Wonderful Week" to restrained farce. To a well-regulated English bank clerk, who had learned that frugality, modesty and conformity to the demands of others were safe standards for a young man, the author suddenly brings a series of untoward events that prove most upsetting.

It all begins with Harold going on an errand to the home of an acquaintance named Marjory. There he finds her in a hand-to-hand combat with her respected male parent, who is in the throes of delirium tremens. Thrown off his guard, Harold soon found himself on intimate terms with Marjory. It was this that led to Harold's crossing a lonely common at midnight, where he became involved in a hold-up and got back to his boarding house in a disreputable state. Thus he lost his good standing with his landlady and let himself in for suspicion of more than one crime and misdemeanor, with other exciting events.

At the close of his "wonderful" week we find Harold advanced several steps in his life's career, ready, however, to settle down as a respected citizen—but not a bachelor.

The book is mildly amusing and reasonably entertaining.

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE. By Louis Tracy. Edward J. Clode, Inc., New York.

When Alicia, Lady Dene, was seen at the Victoria station by Mr. Claude Bruce, barrister and friend of her husband, she told him that she was going to Richmond to see her sister. Bruce saw her into her train—and then she disappeared.

Two weeks later a body was found in the Thames and was partly identified as that of Lady Dene. It was Bruce's task as well as that of Scotland Yard to find out the truth, to unravel the mystery.

To do this it was necessary to find out where and when Lady Dene had left the train for Richmond, to discover where she went and whom she met; to probe into her past and discover, if possible, the name of anyone who might have lured her away and done her in. In trying to do these things Bruce was led to Monte Carlo and to other haunts of those who find foreign air more healthful than that of home. How in the end he unraveled the knots and found that one who was above suspicion was involved, is told by Louis Tracy in a novel that will keep the average reader guessing for an evening.

THE PLEASANT WAYS OF ST. MEDARD. By Grace King. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This reissue of one of Grace King's novels of Louisiana is, perhaps, an indication of a new interest in the historical romance with quaint and attractive setting. "The Pleasant Ways of St. Medard" is the story of the Civil War as it affected a family in New Orleans, who had a bitter struggle with poverty and readjustment to new conditions.

AN OCEAN BOYHOOD. By Arthur Mason. J. H. Sears Company, New York.

The story of his early adventures on shipboard and in port, told by a man who understands the sea's moods and knows ships of every type and kind.

The Fiji Islands and other far places figure in the story, which is one that all lovers of sea adventures will find to their liking.

TAO TALES. By Henry Milner Rideout. Duffield & Co., New York.

China, with her superstition, her loyalties, her incomprehensibilities, is a fertile field for folk stories and other unusual tales. In this volume Mr. Rideout tells seven stories, most of which he has drawn from his Chinese servant, who is likewise a friend of forty years' standing.

The first story is of a poor Chinese fisherman and his wife, who just managed to live in their little bare hut, "almost empty, on the outskirts of Kow Kong, the village of Nine Streams, where fishermen dwell." When the catch was poor and luck was generally bad, Chan marveled at his lovely girl wife's ability in stretching out the meager supply of rice so that there was always a heaping bowlful for him. In time he learned, after having been tortured with the worst suspicions. Of the loss that came to him, followed by the good luck that had formerly eluded him, and of the strange event that restored to him the girl he had loved so faithfully, we are told in a story that is sufficiently oriental to be unusual. The other tales are all quietly satisfying.

THE PRIZE RING OF YESTERDAY

TEN-AND-OUT! The complete story of the Prize Ring in America. By Alexander Johnston. Ives Washburn, New York.

Those fight fans who are prone to consider that the golden age of the prize ring has passed and the sport as practiced today is in a bad way are destined to get the shock of their lives in what they will find in this book. The so-called "golden age" was in no respect entitled to any such encomium. In the old days prize fighters and their followers were likely to be recruited from the very dregs of society. Many of the men who claimed the championship crown were actual criminals and the fights, even up to the early nineties, were little less than bloody brawls, held in open defiance of the law and controlled by crooks of the lowest order.

The author here recounts how the seventy-five-round argument between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain, fought at Richbourg, Miss., July 8, 1889, which was to have been fought at New Orleans on July 4, terminated in a victory for John L. on points. He also gives some idea of how the men fought, for instance in the forty-fifth round Sullivan knocked Kilrain down and stamped on him. How would the fans look on such conduct today? It is also told that just before the referee ended the fight that Kilrain's chief second, Charlie Mitchell, the English champion, sent word to Sullivan's corner that if he would let Kilrain take the $2000 purse, Kilrain would give in and allow Sullivan to retain the championship, and that Sullivan, who was dog tired, agreed to the proposition, but fortunately before the matter could be announced, the referee declared Sullivan the winner on points. Such was the code of ethics practiced in the prize ring in those olden, "golden days."

It seems, according to the author's researches that one Jack Pigg, who lived in London, was the first professional bruiser of which there is a definite record. He issued a card in 1716, a card engraved by no less personage than the great Hogarth, announcing that he "teached fencing, single stick and boxing." He also modestly challenged all and sundry persons to try conclusions with him in the fistic art for a purse to be mutually agreed upon. Later on Jack Broughton appeared on the scene, sponsored by a scion of royalty in the person of the Duke of Cumberland, but upon his being soundly thrashed by one Jack Slack, and as the Duke lost heavily on the bout, the royal patron became soured on the ring and used his influence to have the sport outlawed.

The first recognized American champion seems to have been a colored gentleman by the name of Tom Molyneaux, who was known to fame as "Molyneaux the Moor," though his complexion was of the purest ebony. The name being that of his master, a very prominent Virginia planter who it is thought gave Molyneaux his freedom because he thrashed some champion on a neighboring plantation.

The list of champions, near champions and those who merely claimed the championship, and they were legion, is too long to go into. Suffice to mention such old favorites as Tom Heyer, John C. Heenan, John Morrisey, Paddy Ryan, Jake Kilrain, John L. Sullivan and the later champions, who represented a different school, such as Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Peter Jackson, Jess Willard, Jim Jeffries, Jack Dempsey and the latest to wear the crown, Gene Tunney.

The middleweights, lightweights, featherweights, bantams and flyweights are all traced and the boys who gained fame and fortune, the latter being the lot of those of recent years only, are all covered. It is a book that the fight fan interested in the history of the sport will find interesting. It will also help the game as at present conducted, for if the facts here set forth are the facts, the prize ring has improved beyond measure, and the comparison of the finely trained, skillful athletes that today enter the ring and spar for points as it were, with only an occasional knockdown and drag-out affair, with the great untrained brutes of yesteryear, fighting with bare knuckles, wrestling and clawing, is all to the advantage of the game as played today.

NEW ANGLE ON WASHINGTON

No other great American has proved of so much interest to historians and biographers as George Washington. "The Estate of George Washington, Deceased," by Eugene E. Prussing, published by Little, Brown & Co., offers a new revelation of Washington's personality. Mr. Prussing is a prominent Chicago and Los Angeles lawyer, and he has made a detailed analysis of Washington's will, pointing out the evidence it contains of Washington's probity, good judgment, far-seeing executive ability, solicitude for his dependents, broad vision as a business man and selfish patriotism. Previous biographers have entirely neglected the significance of the will; but Mr. Prussing's original and skillful digest has proved it to be a veritable mine of information about Washington, the man of affairs.

AMERICAN ANTIQUES

The history of antiques is written in its geography, and it is from this angle that Lurelle Van Arsdale Guild, the artist and collector, has written his beautifully planned and illustrated text-book of our ancestors' furnishings, "The Geography of American Antiques" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) Massachusetts's Pilgrim furniture, Maryland's Sheraton, Chippendale and Hepplewhite, New York's Duncan Phyfe, North Carolina's hooked rugs, Mrs. Guild describes and illustrates them all.

From the Bible box to the highboy, from the tripod to the pier table, from the wag-on-the-wall to the banjo clock, one will find exact information and detailed sktetches that make the book invaluable to those who love antiques.

AIR MAIL FOR 60,000,000

A trading area having a population of more than 60,000,000 persons will be served by the twenty-five air-mail routes using seventy-nine station stops within a short time, the Department of Commerce estimates. Fifteen routes now in operation cover 7997 miles, but with the expansion the daily airplane mileage will be greater, even with only one plane a day each way, than the circumferences of the globe.

A TRIO OF WELL-TOLD TALES

CAPTAIN CAVALIER — By Jackson Gregory. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is a swashbuckling romance of the California of other days, days when the country round-about was wild and sparsely populated and when gentlemen adventurers set out on wild forays as much for the sport of the game as for the loot that their efforts won.

The hero, Charles Alfred Calvert, is a dashing young Virginian, who though poor in purse and struggling against adverse fortune, assumes the name of Capt. Cavalier and for a space gives the Spanish authorities a very interesting time of it.

We meet with a galaxy of heavy villains and the usual number of noble old Spanish dons. The mess of intrigue and mystery that the author manages to cook up will satisfy the longing of the most avid searcher for romance and adventure.

It's a well-knit and pleasingly told story. One of the best Mr. Gregory has yet done.

FLAMBEAU JIM—By Frank H. Spearman. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This story of the old West, by the author of "Whispering Smith," is fully as interesting as anything Mr. Spearman has ever done. It is a tale filled with action, the mystery elements are well developed and the suspense is sustained throughout.

The love story is secondary, but nevertheless it is one that most readers of this particular class of story will enjoy. Flambeau Jim and Pickie are well realized, and in the presenting of Jim as an itinerant fiddler Mr. Spearman has done an especially good job.

The action of the story has to do with a murder and robbery. Flambeau Jim, who is a construction engineer by profession, is detailed by his boss to attempt to get the men guilty of the crime. In the working out of the details of the plot Mr. Spearman has given us some graphic descriptions of the task set before construction engineers in the building of railroads in the early days. The account of Jim's battle with the torrent in Flambeau Canyon; of the dynamiting of one of his piers whereby his work was nearly ruined, and the heroic efforts of the men to save the results of their labors make exciting reading.

Mr. Spearman has done a fine, honest piece of work that is just what he intended it to be—a rousing good story, well told.

THE SILENT QUEEN—By W. Seymour Leslie. Boni & Liveright, New York.

A book that reads like an autobiography but develops into a novel. The story is told in the first person by Geoffrey, who recalls scraps of his childhood scenes in England, in which a strait-laced nurse and much illness stands out. As he grew up better health came and so, at a family conclave, it was decided to humor his love of machinery and permit him to study engineering.

Just before the war he came to America to get an insight into our system of mass production, etc. The scenes laid at Niskayuna, a manufacturing city of New York, where the great Elihu Hercules has that plant which turns out "the silent queen" are penetrating, ironical, amusing. Hercules is a character that only America could produce; he is a master of big business who has learned restraint, a power at home and abroad, a powerful and complex personality. The author's restrained irony in the development of this character is wholly admirable. With Mrs. Hercules he is not able to deal so fairly; she requires the broad strokes in order to bring her to life.

The book flashes scenes in England, in Spain, in America, with various characters to help round out the story of a rather confused young man's contacts with business and with love in an age that is half-mad.

LITERARY GOSSIP

"Washington Speaks for Himself," by Lucretia Perry Osborn, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, will present a collection of actual letters and documents so arranged and connected that a complete story of the life of George Washington is told in his own words, breathing his own hopes and perplexities. Mrs. Osborn is the wife of Henry Fairfield Osborn.

Outstanding among the new publications of the Oxford University Press American Branch is the "Oxford History of the United States" by Samuel Eliot Morison, professor of history in Harvard University, and author of the "Maritime History of Massachusetts." To quote from Prof. Morison's preface: "This book was written during my tenure of the chair of American history at Oxford, and in the hope of introducing British readers to the history of the United States. English historians, such as Charmwood, Henderson and Trevelyn, have alrealy illuminated certain high peaks of American history. I am proposing to guide their countrymen, as it were, through the valleys into the plains; to tell a story of intrinsic interest which may also serve to explain the United States of today . . . I have incorporated descriptions of the country and the people at different periods. I have devoted considerable space to the outstanding personalities from Washington to Wilson, to social and economic development, to Anglo-American and Canadian-American relations, to the Civil War and to the forty years preceding America's entry into the Great War."

"I have read 'Stuffed Peacocks' with interest and admiration," writes Ellen Glasgow of Emily Clark's book of southern sketches, and she adds: "The book confirms my opinion that Emily Clark is one of the most gifted of the younger southern writers. She writes with delicious irony and sympathetic insight of a civilization which is so far from moribund that she herself is a part of it. With a few sharp, clear strokes she is able to reveal more of human character than many a sentimental novelist can compress in a volume."

A startling fact, known to few people, is revealed in the volume of "King Edward VII," by Sir Sidney Lee, published by Macmillan. Not once, but several times it appears King Edward, in fits of dejection, spoke of abdicating. He is remembered most vividly for his bonhomie and humor and zest for adventure, but this story of his nine years' reign presents an impressive picture of the responsibilities he carried and his deep concern for the welfare of the State. He was unique, as the Spectator says, in his power of combining a love of fun with "the unassailable dignity of a king."

The part that chemistry plays in the kitchen is graphically shown in "Chemistry in the Home," by Harrison E. Howe and Francis M. Turner, Jr., recently published by Charles Scribner's Sons. "Every one of the materials used in our modern kitchen equipment is the product, to a great extent, of chemical research," say the authors in telling about the use of aluminum utensils, rustless steel and enameled ware. The chemistry of the laundry, the part that science plays in the equipment of the writing desk, and the chemical side of house painting, are among the many other matters explained so that the average owner may understand and profit.

"An Artist in the Tropics" by the well-known Dutch painter, Jan Poortenaar, published by J. B. Lippincott Company, will be issued in a deluxe edition. It will be printed on hand-made paper, and will be autographed by the artist-author. There will be ten copies for sale in the United States at $20 a copy. The regular edition sells for $7.50. There is a foreword by Frank Bragwyn, eight full page color plates, and forty-eight other illustrations. These greatly enhance Mr. Poortenaar's delightful description of his visit to Java, Celebes, Borneo, Sumatra, and other places in the East Indies.

Olive Higgins Prouty, whose new novel, "Conflict" is published by Houghton Mifflin Company, is a New England woman, born in Worcester, Massachusetts, and educated at Smith College. She now lives in Brookline with her husband and two children, in an attractive old house, half hidden among pines, aging hemlocks, sturdy euonymous, and clumps of lilac.

The claim made by Little, Brown & Co., that their fall list is their finest in ninety years of publishing seems to be justified judging from popular approval. They announce new large printings of four of their important books: "Up the Years from Bloomsbury," by George Arliss; "The Father of Little Women," by Honore Willsie Morrow; "The Story of Everest," by Capt. John Noel and "Bismarck: The Story of a Fighter," by Emil Ludwig.

John Galsworthy's play, "Escape," being produced this season in New York under Winthrop Ames, is published by Charles Scribner's Sons. The play concerns an escaped convict, one who is guilty of manslaughter. In his flight he falls temporarily under the power of various people and much of the interests of the play lies in the effect that the guilty man has on his innocent hosts.

EUROPE AND THE DAWES PL

George P. Auld, Formerly Accountant of the Reparations Commission, Gives Us a Clear Exp of How the Plan is Working Out

BY THOMAS F. FORD

THE DAWES PLAN AND THE NEW ECONOMICS. By George P. Auld. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

While there will always be two opinions on any plan that is proposed for the achieving of so great an end as that which the men who are responsible for the so-called "Dawes Plan," had in mind, there is one great factor that will silence criticism and that is, how well does the plan carry out the ends for which it was made? The answer in the case of the Dawes Plan is that so far it has worked like a charm, and it is no mere play on words to say in this connection, that when the idea of this plan was proposed, Europe's condition was so grave that it seemed that only a miracle would save the entire continent from chaos.

The purpose of this book is twofold, the first purpose being to refute the predictions freely indulged in by J. M. Keynes, the British economist, that the Dawes Plan was wrong in principle and that it is destined to break down early in 1928, when the maximum payments under the agreed schedule are to be provided for. Keynes and his school are urging the cancellation of reparations in favor of Germany and as a logical next step the cancellation of all World War debts. While there are many able economists who agree with this idea and many laymen who are also of a like opinion, whether cancellation is the right or the wrong thing to do is a question aside from whether the Dawes Plan is workable. The important thing is that it has worked, is working and unless some unlooked for upheaval, such as another European war, intervenes, there is no sane reason why it should not continue to work until the entire German reparations problem is disposed of in a manner satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. Auld, who was formerly accountant-general of the Reparations Commission, is particularly well qualified to discuss this question and any other question that may arise that is pertinent to the matter of reparations and Germany's ability to carry on economically.

One of the most important problems that the author here discusses is whether or not it is wise on our part and advantageous to Germany for the United States to continue to loan enormous amounts of money to Germany to enable her to again resume her former position in the family of nations as a solvent, progressive industrial unit, competing in the markets of the world with her European neighbors and with ourselves.

In the first place he insists that Germany is fully capable of paying a reasonable amount of reparations, just how much he does not say, but he intimates that even were the original sum of some $33,000,000,000 insisted upon, Germany could and would be able to meet this obligation if given the proper support by the United States and ample time to accumulate the wealth necessary to hand over to the Allies.

For the American investor, considerable interest attaches to Mr. Auld's recommendation that American loans to Germany continue to be made without interference. Widespread agitation has been caused by the statements of President Schacht of the Reichsbank, that American loans to Germany are unproductive of reparation transfers. The whole transfer problem Mr. Auld refers to as a "bugaboo." "The mechanics of transfer is being cared for today through foreign exchange provided by foreign loans to Germany, chiefly by American investors. American loans to Germany not only relieve this problem in a technical sense, but also, by replacing destroyed capital and stimulating productivity, they help to relieve the exhaustion which is the fundamental cause of the problem."

He conceives of Germany (and his concepion is equally applicable to any of the European powers,) as in about the same position as the United States in our early days. We were forced to borrow huge amounts of money from Europe for the development of our transportation, industrial and other forms of enterprise. In fact it was Europe's generous lending that made our rapid development possible. We can, in Mr. Auld's opinion, afford to be generous now and it is both good business and good ethics to do so. It may be added that it is not bad politics either, for the day is rapidly dawning when the great mass of the American population is becoming conscious of the fact that "isolation" is a figment of the small-town politician's brain and that our duty as well as our profit and pleasure demand that we abandon the miasmic swamp of isolation and go up into the sunlit hills of co-operation, thus adding to our own prestige, increasing our wealth and satisfying our conscience in the doing of a wise and generous deed.

THE ECONOMICS OF INSTALLMENT SELLING. A study in Consumers' Credit with Special Reference to the Automobile. By Edwin R. A. Seligman. Harper & Brothers, New York.

In these two formidable volumes containing some 900 odd pages, Prof. Seligman presents an exhaustive analysis of the arguments for and against installment selling. In the conduct of this investigation, which was undertaken for the General Motors Corporation, Prof. Seligman was assisted by a corps of twenty economists for a period of fifteen months. It may, therefore, be assumed that the data gathered, classified and analyzed represent not a series of rough guesses, but an authoritative and scientific study of this much-discussed problem.

There has been a great deal of guessing as to just what percentage of automobiles were sold on the installment plan. Some, in fact most of these guesses placed the number thus sold at about 80 per cent of the total sales. This figure Prof. Seligman completely refutes and his data are, by reason of their completeness, entitled to respect. He places the figure at a shade under 60 per cent and refuses to take other than an optimistic view of the situation.

In replying to the claim that installment selling is an unsound economic practice the author says in substance that it is in fact "a potent force in American industrial progress and one of the leading progressive manifestations in the last century of business." He contends that installment credit has done for the consumer what general commercial credit

VAUDEVILLE ARTISTS' SON UNDER CONTRACT

Charles Morton, youthful scion of the Mortons of vaudeville fame, is now in pictures under contract of Fox Films. Morton is to play a featured role in "The Four Devils," a forthcoming production directed by F. W. Murnau, director of "Sunrise." Inasmuch as "The Four Devils" is a circus picture and young Morton plays the role of an acrobat who performs on a trapeze, coupled with which is the known fact that Murnau disdains the use of "doubles," Morton has been practicing for three weeks now, with Sundays off. He has paid eighteen visits, one a day, to the studio hospital to have blistered hands fixed up.

American Films Near Finish of British Control

American film productions will no longer dominate the British exhibition field now that the new quota bill has been passed by the English government, according to John S. Robertson, director, who has just returned from abroad.

"While England will find it difficult at first to replace American pictures with productions made under her own flag and under the new ruling, she will be able to meet the situation when several new studios now planned are completed," he said.

"But 25 per cent of the money expended on salaries of motion pictures made in Great Britain may be paid out to foreign labor or talent, under the terms of the new law."

The director believes that British producers and exhibitors will feel the effect of the new departure very severely for a time, but following the readjustment period will carry on as in the past.

VARIETY IS KEYNOTE OF HIS CAREER

Ralph Graves Acts, Writes and Directs, But He Wants to be a Producer

He's a director, a writer and an actor . . . but he wants to be a producer!

This ambitious young man is Ralph Graves, whose story, "A Reno Divorce," is now showing as the current attraction at the Boulevard Theater. Not only did Graves write the story and direct it, but he is seen in the leading male role as well.

It's the producer, however, who has the greatest job in the world, according to Graves.

"A producer has all the fun of thinking up the ideas, planning the gags, deciding just how he wants them carried out and having them neatly typed on paper . . . and he escapes all of the worry of seeing the thing fall flat when it appears on the screen.

"Actually doing things that have been theoretically planned on paper is the hardest job in pictures," Graves said one day last week. "A thing may look great in print, it may seem like a world beater, but making it look the same way while the cameras are cranking is another story."

"But how about writing and directing your own picture, doesn't that simplify things?" Graves was asked.

"Not a bit," he said with one of his famous grins spreading over his face, "the fact is it makes everything much worse. You see," and his voice sank to a confidential tone, "when a person does both, and the picture turns out to be a flop, there is no one on whom to shift the blame."

Graves, who comes from a family of journalists and college professors, started out in life with one ambition, and that was to set the world on fire with his literary works. While in New York, however, the glamour of the footlights proved too much for him, and he forgot his pen to become an actor.

After the stage came pictures, and it was not long before the young actor found that directing was not altogether out of his line, consequently he became a director.

The result is that today he doesn't know what line of endeavor he wants to follow. When actors aren't needed, he turns director, when all directorial jobs are filled he sits at his typewriter and pounds off a scenario or two, and with it all Ralph has decided that versatility is a bad thing.

At the present moment he has turned toward literature, and is working on a story that he believes will depart from the usual line of motion-picture hokum.

LIGHT STORIES ARE THE BEST

take money to make pictures, nor even new stories. It is brains, ideas, new treatments, and clever people.

"Besides, I have been in many pictures that have introduced totally new ideas into picture-making, and incidentally have been responsible for giving several bright directors their first opportunity, Mal St. Clair, Monta Bell, Luther Reed, Dick Rosson, Harry D'Arrast.

"I got him for his 'Serenade,' in which his direction is being so highly praised."

NO INFERIORITY COMPLEX

Menjou is easy to interview, so decisive and comfortably conversational in his informative remarks. He suffers from no fear complex, nor inferiority complex. He says he is allowed great freedom in the selection of his pictures, directors and cast and that therefore if pictures are poor it is all his fault.

"But I have only made two pictures that I considered inferior," he says, "and five that I regard as good as they could be made. These five are 'The Woman of Paris,' 'The Marriage Circle,' 'Forbidden Paradise,' 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter,' and 'Service for Ladies.' I think I can add 'Serenade' to the list now. It was my idea, although Ernest Vajda wrote the original story for me. But it was my idea to be an orchestra conductor, making love to a girl on the stage, with my wife in the box behind me.

Menjou is going to study the European situation while he is abroad. He says he is convinced that 25 per cent of the pictures will be made in Europe in the near future (an opinion, by the way, which Dick Barthelmess also holds.) Menjou says several of his recent pictures would have been infinitely better if made in the real locale which they were supposed to represent. He has one more year on his contract with Lasky's, and hitherto these contracts have always been renewed before they expired.

TWO A YEAR

"Lasky's have made me, sold me, upheld me, so I am not considering making any change," says Menjou, "but I shall have all the money I want, and shall wish to make pictures on a slightly different footing. For instance, two a year instead of four. We are expected to make four successes a year, with almost no rehearsing—where a stage actor is fortunate if he makes one success in four years, with six weeks of rehearsing and being able to improve his role every day."

Menjou also confidently expects to see a revision of picture-censorship ideas, so that any play can be produced on the screen.

"It is all a matter of treatment. A play can be risque without being obscene or vulgar. Just as one man will tell a risque story in a delicate inoffensive way, while another will make it abominable. There need be nothing censorable, for instance, in a play like 'Anna Christie.'"

Menjou's next play will be Sardou's "Capt. Ferreol" which Vajda will scenarize.

"And we shall play it just as Sardou wrote it, with almost no love story . . ." says Menjou.

"THE DOVE" IS ABOVE USUAL

the same pictures. The comparison is always to the credit of the Chinese actress, whose talents are thought to be wasted in the brief roles given her. Sojin likewise is always welcomed on Broadway, though no one can complain that he is not given enough to do in "The Chinese Parrot." He does it supremely well, too.

"The Silver Slave" at the Roxy, is classed as an unimportant story about unimportant people, which is enriched by the appearance of Irene Rich in the role of a mother who pretends to steal her headstrong daughter's sweetheart from her. Excellent performances are contributed by Holmes Herbert, Carroll Nye and John Miljan, and Audrey Ferris assuredly has enough vitality to make effective use of it eventually.

OLAND LIKES ROLE OF CANTOR

ress," and it marked the actor's screen debut.

A few years later the Fox company was casting "Jewels of the Madonna." Oland had a chance to be in it, but the Bunyan film had not been any too successful and he was doubtful of a second attempt.

"Man alive!" exhorted a friend. "You don't know what you're missing. Here's an opportunity for you to appear with that new French star, Theda Bara!"

So, willy-nilly, Oland accepted a role with "that new French star, Theda Bara."

Other roles followed, and so in time the actor came to "Patria," a serial made by the Wharton Brothers with Mrs. Vernon Castle and Milton Sills. An oriental type was needed.

The producers were considering a little Russian for the part; but he was too little.

Somebody had an idea.

"Could you do it?" Oland was appealed to: "Could you make up as an oriental?"

"I can do this—" replied the actor, narrowing his eyes and twirling his mustache.

He got the job.

Serials were in vogue in those days, and Oland acted in many of them—always as an oriental, and almost always as a villainous one. He came west several times, deciding to remain here after he finished a chapter-play at Glendale for Louis Gasnier.

His favorite parts, he says, are those of the Archduke Paul in "Don Q," the Fairbanks film, and the cantor in "The Jazz Singer," Al Jolson's Vitaphone special now occupying the Criterion screen.

He immersed himself thoroughly in the Talmud and kindred Jewish writings in order to properly play the cantor. He tells of the old, bearded orthodox Jews who came by the hundreds to lend "atmosphere" to the photoplay, stern-visaged and serious.

There was never any smoking on the set where a synagogue had been built. Once, an ancient patriarch brought his daughter with him onto the set. The girl knew that her father liked his pipe.

"Why don't you smoke, papa?" she asked him.

The old man raised his hands in horror.

"What!" he cried. "In a synagogue?"

STAR KNOWN AS "BIG SWEDE"

comedy partner has been Arthur—notably in "Rookies" and "Circus Rookies," recently retitled "Monkey Business." The two are together again in a mystery melodrama to be made soon—so perhaps Dane will be happy again.

The actor is called, by almost everyone on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, "the big Swede"—possibly because, like his name, he is a Dane. The average American differentiates little between the Scandinavian races: Norwegian, Dane and Swede emerge in the vernacular as "Swedes." Hence the title.

Karl Dane says that, no matter what role he is cast for, he will always interpret it according to this preconceived notion of the big Swede. It is his graceful bow to the demand—real or suppositious—of "his public." The demand was created, he explains, when he acted Slim in "The Big Parade."

For this same "public," he continues, he allowed himself to be "socked" 300 times in the course of "Baby Mine's" birth. His table of vital statistics shows a staggering total for one day in particular—to-wit:

Socks—fifty-two.
Groggy—forty-nine.
Knocked cold—three.
(Weapon—one sledge hammer.)

The sledge hammer was hard rubber. Every time each separate "shot" was finished, Dane would reel outside for air, while the unfeeling George K. Arthur rolled around in hysterics, and Director Robert Leonard called, "we'll take it again."

The tall actor has been associated with things theatrical since he was a baby in Copenhagen—circuses, vaudeville, drama and pictures—and served in every capacity from call and curtain boy to star.

Scenarist Cited as Historian of Silver Screen

Benjamin S. Kutler, original screen story writer whose "by-line" has also appeared over many magazine fiction stories, deserves the right to be consulted as a historian if anyone ever compiles a complete record of the motion-picture industry from its inception, it is said.

Kutler recalls the time when erstwhile "big features" were turned out for the sum of approximately $15,000. In fact he was with the Popular Plays and Players organization, which later became the original Metro company, when "Michael Strogoff," starring Jacob Adler, was produced. Kutler wrote the adaptation and continuity and then wielded the megaphone. The film was made at the old Lubin plant in Philadelphia.

The forthcoming year seems to be the harbinger of Kutler's greatest strides in pictures. Just recently he wrote "The Braggart," which is to provide a starring vehicle for Jean Hersholt at Universal. Moreover, there are consistent rumors that he may be called upon to wield the megaphone on the opus, of which he is now writing the screen version.

Actress Plans Role Variation

Virginia Valli, who is starring in "The Escape" for Fox studios, intends giving an entirely new interpretation to her role than was originally intended by the writer of the stage play on which the screen version is founded.

"Underworld productions have gained quite a vogue within the past few months," declares Miss Valli. "When Blanche Sweet starred in 'The Escape' public sentiment was altogether with the persecuted heroine. Through such pictures as 'Underworld' the public has learned to extend a part of their sympathy to the good-hearted crook as well as the hero. Instead of expected hisses, screen villains sometimes gain a round of applause through some kindly action that appeals to an audience.

"While 'The Escape' is not recognized as a dyed-in-the-wool 'crook' production, it sometimes borders closely on illegitimate practices, so that a more modern version of the different parts may be given without offending the attending audiences."

Largest Outdoor Set, Sahara, Is Used in Film

The largest outdoor set in the world—the Sahara Desert—was used in the filming of "The Garden of Allah," Rex Ingram's picture, which is showing at the Uptown Theater this week.

The picture was filmed entirely abroad, in the settings which were described in the original novel, and features Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich in the leading roles.

The story is adapted from Robert Hichens's novel of the same name, and the completion of the picture adds one more production to the list of Ingram-directed films which retain the original ending and title of the author.

The desert romance of the monk who broke his vows for love was adapted for the screen by Will Goldbeck. Filmed with the great Sahara as a background, the picture features such striking effects as camel caravans, miles long, 2000 Arabs at prayer, and a spectacular desert sandstorm.

In connection with the first suburban showing of the novel picturization at the Uptown Theater, the Yacht Club Boys offer novelty songs via Vitaphone. Other acts are George Givot, Joe Wong, the Chinese jazz boy, and the Loomis twins.

DISTINGUISHED FILMS COMING

Ralph Forbes. It has been nearly a year in the making. King Vidor's picture, "The Crowd," with Eleanor Boardman and James Murray, is sure to attract attention. In addition Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has embarked on a varied and interesting program.

Among the pictures which will come from this studio during the year are "Rose Marie," a version of the musical success with Joan Crawford, and Greta Garbo in "The Divine Woman," an adaptation of "Starlight." Norma Shearer has been fortunate in getting the much desired role of Rose Trelawney in "Trelawney of the Wells," which has been renamed "The Actress." Lon Chaney, too, will make a well-known stage play, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Ramon Novarro is making another sea picture, "China Bound." John Gilbert will make an original story of Creole days along the Mississippi River just prior to the Civil War. Gilbert's "The Cossacks" is regarded at the studio as in the special classification.

Metro-Goldwyn will also film during 1928, "Her Cardboard Lover," Jeanne Eagels play, and "Ballyhoo."

AT PARAMOUNT

Leading the list at Paramount, of course, comes "The Wedding March," Eric Von Stroheim's production which has been in the making for two years, "Beau Sabreur," "The Legion of the Condemned," in which Gary Cooper and Fay Wray become stars, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Abie's Irish Rose." "The Last Command," Emil Jannings's picture to follow "The Way of All Flesh," will probably be released early in the year.

Pictures for later release at Paramount among others are "The Patriot," in which Ernst Lubitsch is directing Jannings, Florence Vidor, Lewis Stone and Tullio Carminati, and "Glorifying the American Girl." Other films to appear on this program are "Speedy," Harold Lloyd's new comedy, and "Tillie's Punctured Romance," made by the Christie studio.

Paramount will also release late in the year, "Rachel," the romance of the famous French actress, with Pola Negri in the title role, one she has long wished to play.

Fox studios will place four pictures in the Carthay Circle during the coming year. First will be "The Four Sons," renamed from "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters." It is described as a picture of tremendous heart appeal. Margaret Mann was taken from the extra ranks for the role of Grandma Bernle.

MURNAU MAKES RECORD

Murnau's second picture for Fox bears the title of "The Four Devils." Janet Gaynor, Nancy Drexel, Charles Morton, Mary Duncan, who appeared on the stage in "The Shanghai Gesture, and Barry Norton have already been cast. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, one of the outstanding stellar pairs of 1927 are together again under Frank Borzage's direction in "The Street Angels." Raoul Walsh will shortly embark on a sequel to "What Price Glory?" now being written by Laurence Stallings.

"The Red Dancer of Moscow," "Hangman's House," and "Blossom Time" are also on the Fox program.

First National's pictures for 1928 have rather a musical comedy air. There are "Lady Be Good," with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill, "No, No, Nanette," and "The Heart of a Follies Girl." Richard Barthelmess lends a serious note in "The Noose." Colleen Moore in "Lilac Time," in which Jane Cowl appeared on the stage, one of the few dramas Colleen has ever made, is an important item on the First National program.

ROLE IS COVETED

"Show Boat," Edna Ferber's widely read novel, is the ace card in the Universal pack. Preparations are being made for the filming now. Harry Pollard will direct but the desirable role of Magnolia has not yet been cast. Both Mary Philbin and Margarita Fischer are possibilities. "The Man Who Laughs" with Conrad Veidt is another big release from the big U studio.

From the De Mille studio will come "The Goddess Girl," now filming with Lina Basquette, and directed by Cecil B. De Mille himself, and "The Red Mark," a James Cruze picture. "Chicago," released during December, 1927, really classifies as a 1928 production.

Samuel Goldwyn will shortly issue through United Artists his latest Vilma Banky-Ronald Colman romance. This time it is called "The Passionate Adventure."

One of the most interesting releases on the Warner Brothers program will be "The Lion and the Mouse." There will be thirty-five minutes of conversation by Vitaphone in this picture. Vitaphone will also play a part in "Glorious Betsy."

JOINS PARADE

Mack Sennett, too, joins the parade of feature producers, with his "The Good-by Kiss," a story of the war, in which Sally Eilers and Matty Kemp will appear.

Some of the newer players who, it is predicted, may attain stellar ranking in 1928 and 1929 are Nancy Carroll, who is the Rosie of "Abie's Irish Rose," Ruth Taylor of "Gentlemen Prefer Blonds," Camilla Horn, who plays with Barrymore in "Tempest," Nils Asther, who has important roles in "Sorrell and Son," "Rachel" and "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Charles Morton gets his big opportunity in the Murnau picture, Fay Wray should reach the top in "The Wedding March." Sally Eilers, whom Mack Sennett believes the greatest actress he has ever developed, James Murray, who is virtually a star without a single picture released, will be seen in "The Crowd," and in "Rose Marie," and Lupe Velez, last seen in "The Gaucho," and who will be starred in D. W. Griffith's next picture, "The Battle of the Sexes."

COMMENCING TOMORROW --- MONDAY, JANUARY 9!

Society of Cinemaland

by Myra Nye

Los Angeles is lucky! Cinemaland has been favored again, and the seventh annual Wampas ball, outstanding social event of the year, will be given here February 25, at the Ambassador. Announcement Wednesday evening, at the conclusion of a meeting of the general executive committee, was made by President Coffin to the effect that the exodus to San Francisco would not be made this year, and that consequently a greater number of cinemalites would be enabled to attend the affair.

The number of patrons admitted to the ball, however, will be greatly limited, an innovation designed to aid materially in the handling of crowds which have in past years so filled the ballroom that enjoyment of dancing has been depreciated. Headquarters will be opened at the Ambassador early in the week, and preparations will be under way toward making the affair the most brilliant and entertaining Wamjpas ball in history. Following past custom, the main feature of the evening will be the presentation of thirteen Wampas baby stars, now being selected by members of the publicity men's organization as the best prospective screen material for the current season.

Mark Larkin, press agent for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, was chosen at the Wednesday evening meeting as chairman of the executive committee for the ball, and his supervisory group, to which he will assign specific duties, will be composed of John Le Roy Johnston, Joseph Steele, Joseph Sherman, Ray Davidson, Harold Hurley and Sam Cohn. Davidson has been selected as business administrator, Johnson will direct the entertainment, Hurley is financial supervisor and Cohn will be publicity director.

Since the ball is little more than a month away, all cinemaland will soon be agog with plans as to escorts and parties, and more especially, costumes. "What are you going to wear?" "Oh, I'm not telling."

Weddings of the Week

Bertha Mann and Raymond Griffith plan to be married today. As the culmination of a romance which began nine years ago, they filed their applications for a marriage license Tuesday. Neither would tell about plans, and it is still a secret from even the closest of friends as to where the wedding will take place—or when or anything except that Judge Hanby will officiate.

Tuesday, Las Vegas, Nev., saw the marriage of Iris Stuart, 1927 Wampas baby star, to Bert A. Mackinnon. Attendants at the wedding were the bride's brother, Tim McCann, and Miss Jessie Johnston. They motored to Las Vegas. Mr. and Mrs. Mackinnon are now domiciled at the Ambassador.

Blanche Mehaffey, a Wampas baby star of 1924, became the bride Wednesday of George Joseph Hausen, well-known big-game hunter, the ceremony being solemnized at the Jonathan Club. Following a wedding breakfast attended by a few intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Hausen left for San Francisco, sailing later for Cuba, where they will pass several weeks. It is possible that they may go from there to India.

Mayfair Dance

Prominent among the many groups of Cinemalites attending the dinner-dance of Saturday evening, December 30, at the Mayfair, was a party of fourteen which included Mr. and Mrs. Don Alvarado, Mr. and Mrs. Finis Fox, Alice White, Claire Windsor, Alice Day and Marceline Day and Richard Dix.

Anniversary Dinner

In celebration of their twelfth wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Duke Orbach entertained recently with a dinner at the Biltmore, afterward taking their guests to witness the performance of "The Cocoanuts," with the Marx brothers, at the Biltmore Theater. Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Orbach included Mr. and Mrs. Billy Leyser, Gertrude Astor, Martha Mattox and Miss Cloyde Dalzell and Lee H. Fox of Pasadena. One of the interesting features of the dinner was the appearance at dessert time of an enormous wedding cake bearing twelve lighted candles, which was cut by Mrs. Orbach.

At the Montmartre

Perhaps because Christmas is over and one has time to breathe again—perhaps because the holiday spirit of festivity is still with us—perhaps because it was a nice day and everyone felt in a mood to go places and do things—anyway, the Hollywood Montmartre was unusually crowded Wednesday. So much so, in fact, that tables encroached upon the dance floor and there was hardly any room for dancing, even to such an orchestra as the Vince Rose, Jackie Taylor combination.

The largest party was a merry one with Alice Day as hostess, and Mrs. Al Rogell (Marion Douglas.) Mrs. Day, Mrs. Ona Wilson Brown, Mrs. Finis Fox, Louella O. Parsons, Dorothy Meyberg, Hariette Parsons, Dorothy Weinberg, Berenice Weinberg, Mabel McCane and Ysobel Johnstone.

Claire Windsor, looking lovely in a close-fitting beige costume of silk moire, with deep fur cuffs to match and a small beige hat, lunched with Mrs. Don Alvarado and Isobel O'Neil.

Grace Wilcox was hostess to Anna May Wong and Isabel Percival, and at the table next to them was Mrs. Albert Parker, entertaining Miss Avonne Taylor.

Lunching tete-a-tete in a corner by the window were Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes.

Gloria Gordon had as her guests June Harding, Margaret LeMaire and Mrs. Ona Wallace.

Dorothy Revier lunched with Gladys Hall and Yola D'Avril with Doris Reeve.

June Collier honored Mrs. Jack Ford, who took advantange of the spring day to wear an entirely white costume, and a large party of guests, including Lois Wilson.

Guests of Mrs. Frederick Hubbert were Mrs. Edmund Breese, Mrs. Robert Edeson and Mrs. Blessing Mertons.

In compliment to Mrs. Irving Well, Mrs. Benjamin Glazer entertained at luncheon Mrs. I. H. Levy, Mrs. S. Charles Lee, Mrs. D. Schwab and Mrs. James Kirkwood.

Patsy Ruth Miller was hostess to Sidney Hellman Ehrman and Henry Buckley, Jr.

Mary Stuart lunched with Frances Early.

Others entertaining and being entertained Wednesday were Bessie Love, Ivan Kahn, Charles Maigne, Teddy Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mix Skeets Gallagher, Lila Lee, Edmund Goulding, Billy Joy, Edwin Carewe and Marco Hellman.

New York Hit Here

Of unusual interest to Cinemalites is the cast of "The Cradle Song," produced in New York by Eva Le Gallienne, and to be presented here at Erlanger's Mason Theater by her Civic Repertory Theater Company, for the first time tomorrow evening.

Mary Shaw, star and director, has been a distinguished star for thirty years. Supporting her is Harry Davenport, son of E. L. Davenport and brother of the late Fanny Davenport, and also in the cast is his wife, Phyllis Rankin, a daughter of McKee Rankin. Alexander Kirkland, another prominent member, is the grandson of Admiral Kirkland and a cousin of Hardee Kirkland and Mrs. R. D. Shepherd, a well known Los Angeles society woman who is active in musical circles. Mary Hone, who plays one of the leading roles, is a descendant of Philip Hone, first Mayor of New York, and is the daughter of Alice Castleman of Louisville.

Many of the members of the cast are already well acquainted in Cinemaland, and many delightful affairs are being planned in their honor during their stay in Los Angeles.

Hear Symphony Orchestra

Taking advantage of the quiet atmosphere and exquisite music Sunday evening at the Montmartre, many cinemalites entertained with small and intimate dinner parties during the symphony concert by Gino Verdi's Hungarian orchestra. Included among the hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Finis Fox, Mr. and Mrs. James Starr, Mr. and Mrs. King Charney, Evelyn Brent, Bennie Fineman, Percy Marmont, James Young, and Paul Schofield.

"Wasps" Meet Monday

Members of the Women's Association of Screen Publicists, better known as "the Wasps," will meet tomorrow evening the 9th inst., for dinner and a business meeting in the Roosevelt Hotel. Anna May Wong will be the guest of honor, and a program follows the dinner. The hostess for the evening will be Helene Unity Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. Cruze Entertain

Entertaining with a delightful New Year's party in their home in Flintridge, Mr. and Mrs. James Cruze (Betty Compson) were hosts Saturday evening to more than seventy-five close friends. The home was beautifully decorated in the holiday motif and dainty refreshments were served.

Included among the guests were Kathleen Clifford, M. Illitch, Mrs. Wallace Reid, Walter Lang and Edward Everett Horton. Miss Nora Bayes, a guest of honor, sang several blues songs in her inimitable manner and Anna May Wong sang first in English and then repeated her numbers in Chinese. Walter Pidgeon, baritone, also contributed to the evening's entertainment.

Delightful Affair

One of the most delightful and unusual parties of the week was that with which Mrs. George Fitzmaurice (Diana Kane) entertained Monday evening at her home in Beverly Hills. Tennis was played until midnight, when a buffet supper was served, after which dancing was enjoyed. Included among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Billy Sunday, Jr., Marquis and Marquise De la Falaise De la Coudray (Gloria Swanson,) Anna Q. Nilsson, Claire Windsor and many others.

BY THE WAY

BY EVA G. TAYLOR

The "brain pantheon" at Moscow, founded by Prof. Vladimar Bechteroff, Russian psychologist, is supposed to be for the purpose of discovering the origin of genius and talent.

These Russian scientists believe that the convolutions of gray matter in the human brain hold the secret of special ability which we call talent, or the fire of the spirit which we call genius.

Yet we do not go to the mechanical workshop for the secret of constructive utilities.

We know that the secret lies in the mind of the inventor, the designer and molder—not in his tools.

The human brain is a wonderful instrument, but only an instrument in the carrying out of life's purposes.

The genius which expresses in any line of art or mechanics, has its source outside and beyond the human brain. It helps to mold and strengthen its instrument of convoluted cells.

According to the response and measure of use the gray matter is subjected to, will the brain improve or deteriorate. It may become a more and more efficient tool or instrument, or it may degenerate and atrophy.

But the secret of power lies not in cerebral tissue. It is manifested through it, but there is something else to be studied if we would know the meaning of genius.

It is conceded that we must have a good working instrument in order to do effective work. No one can do as well with poor tools.

The genius cannot express through an undeveloped brain.

Our brains are commensurate with our talents, but they are not the talent.

The views of the Russian scientists in this regard are quite in keeping with the soviet materialistic philosophy. It is quite to be expected that the Moscow psychologist should seek to discover the source of genius in the glandular secretions and brain cell formation.

Genius is often spoken of and regarded as a gift conferred upon the fortunate possessor.

It seems more in harmony with the law of justice, more logical and reasonable to regard it as the fruit of past effort. It is a greater incentive to present striving to hold this view. Also a stimulus to increase the mental power and perfect the brain instrument.

It is not reasonable to suppose that defectives are created such by a God of infinite love and justice.

It is more in keeping with the good law to believe that they have become such through long past misuse of opportunity, or failure to surmount obstacles in the path. By weakly yielding where strength should be developed, by drifting idly with the current instead of developing muscle by rowing against it, by misusing power given—all these and many other causes contribute to mental and moral delinquency.

Superior baility seems to be the result of long past training and improvement of every opportunity.

Heredity does not explain it.

According to the law of consanguinity we expect a certain resemblance in mental and physical traits between members of a family. But we are as often surprised at its absence.

When we find a duplication of mental characteristics between parents and children, brothers and sisters, it is quite logical to regard it as the result of past harmonious adjustment and a present need supplied. When its absence is noted the same law is operative—the law of cause and effect.

A certain type of nervous organism, of delicate responsiveness in brain and body is needed for the genius to express through. So the proper conditions are furnished by heredity. Or they are absent when there is need for greater effort. Or a lesson to be learned through failure, disappointment and suffering.

Recognizing all as the working of a great divine law, or failure to comply with it, explains many otherwise unsolvable problems.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science urges the study of natural laws to be applied to the human race. It especially urges that defectives should be prevented from reproducing.

Dr. Little says: "The possibility of developing strains and races immune to ailments which afflict less carefully bred members of the same species is capable of much more interesting analysis than has yet been given it."

It would be a wonderful advance in civilization if these strains of carefully bred humans could be developed and increased.

But defectives so-called are not the only menace to the social order. Extremely bright mentalities are found among the most dangerous criminals.

We once thought that crime was caused by ignorance and that education would banish it. A fallacy, as certain horrible crimes of the past few years have proven.

Yet, if we analyze, we shall find that much which passes for education is in reality ignorance. Ignorance of life's purpose, of its higher laws, of its profound meaning. Ignorance of the immortal spirit which should find expression in and through us.

Specializing in knowledge of various kinds, learning certain classroom formulas for the gathering of facts and applying them, training in logic and mathematics, is all valuable and important as equipment.

When used rightly it leads to greater heights, to profound realizations. When abused, as it is by the criminally minded, it is far worse than simple ignorance.

Speaking of the recent discoveries of X-radiations as influencing germ-cells and the hint of the scientists that we are on the eve of still greater discoveries, involving the process of life itself—we wonder just how far present-day man can go in research work.

Is the race fit, as yet, for the revealment of greater mysteries?

Has it made the best possible use of what it has learned?

The discovery of creation's laws regarding the origin of life and its processes can only be safely entrusted to the spiritually evolved.

Dynamite in the hands of children or fools, is a dangerous thing.

The masses of mankind are still in the kindergarten class in intelligence and understanding. They have a long way yet to go in ethical culture and altruism before they can safely know the mysteries of life and being.

Science may have led to the gateway, but the temple door is barred.

It will open only to the scientist who comes with spiritual understanding and unselfish purpose, and then only when mankind is ready to work with the divine law.

It is interesting to speculate on the possibilities the newly discovered rays open up. They will doubtless prove of value in the treatment of diseases—as the X-ray has in certain types.

To destroy bacteria within the cell without affecting the cell itself is a great achievement in medical science.

FILM COLONY FORESEES TITLE WRITERS' PASSING

Will the synchronizing of Movietone to the pictured story on the screen sound the death knell of the lucrative business of title writing?

A goodly portion of the Hollywood film colony believes it will mark the passing, especially of the free-lance title writer, while the negative side has its many adherents.

That Movietone will prove an outstanding mark of progress in films during the coming year is something that all agree on.

Movietone has reached, after much experimentation, a degree of perfection sufficient for the Fox organization to complete contracts within the past few days with the Westinghouse organization whereby thirty-five can be installed daily, with the net result that Movietone will be in actual operation shortly after the new year in theaters from coast to coast and in Europe.

Obviously the spoken title, as now, will be eliminated. In other words, Movietone will reproduce what the actor's voice says, thus eliminating the flashing on the screen of a repetition of the words, hence the argument that the "talking film" will automatically eliminate the title writer.

On the negative side comes Malcom Stuart Boylan who has titled fifty pictures for the Fox organization within the current year.

Boylan argues for the defense in this way: Movietone will affect the more seriously what are known as free-lance title writers, or men who take a picture in an unfinished state, have it run off times innumerably and "spot" titles.

Inasmuch as in a Movietone production titles are made as the picture is constructed the free-lance title writer will have much less work.

But the title writer who is under contract to the studio will eventually spend more time with the production, probably on the set, to suggest titles before they are actually spoken, or rather, lines, and in this way will function somewhat on the order of the comedy constructors of the moment, who devise comedy situations from the set sidelines.

This procedure will also hasten production, for when the picture is completed the so-called titles will also be completed, thus saving many days usually spent by title writers to add their contributions before the picture can actually be called completed.

Temperament in Actors Passing

Temperament is fast disappearing among motion-picture actors, declares Lilyan Tashman, who has just completed a feature role in "French Dressing," a First National production.

"When I first entered pictures," says Miss Tashman, "many usages were in force that might well cause the loss of one's temper. Rehearsals were long and tedious. Cameramen had not perfected their art and were continually posing and reposing their subjects. Directors were impatient of mistakes and actors, themselves, were continually at outs with one another.

"Now all is changed," according to the actress. "Rehearsals have been cut to a minimum. Cameras have reached a state of perfection so that a single pose answers for a dozen. Directors are patient with their casts and actors have learned their lesson of co-operative influences."

DURANT CITES ERA OPTIMISM

Friday Morning Club Hears Philosopher in Talk

Speaker Tells of Confidence in World Progress

Younger Generation Lauded as History's Finest

BY ROSALIND SHEPARD

Optimism for the future of the ..., a confident belief in progress, and above all, hope—those were the ... of a lecture given to members of the Friday Morning Club, ... Friday at 10:30 a.m. in the ... of the Playhouse on Fig... street, by Dr. Will C. Durant, in his last appearance before the ... clubs of this city. Practically the same lecture was given Wednesday at the Woman's Club of Hollywood.

"We have been waiting for him for a long time," said Mrs. Charles Flavel ..., president, as she introduced the philosopher to the largest audience seen at the club in many months. "We feel that we always have the programs here, but, like the cream in a milk bottle, Dr. Durant is at the very top."

In his lecture of Monday afternoon at the Ebell Club, Dr. Durant began by commenting upon the beauty of the club building. "I think all of you people who live in ... here should be compelled to go to hell for a while, in order to realize the beauty around you," he said. "I'm afraid you're going to be disappointed in Heaven, after this." Then getting down to the subject of the day, he said, "It seems silly, in a place like this, to discuss things like 'Is Progress Real, or Is It a Delusion?'"

"I don't know how it is in this city of Los Angeles," he continued, "but in my city (New York) the attitude is one of cynicism and despair. To be in the swim you have to be a pessimist, and to be unpopular you have only to say you believe in the progress of mankind. Now you must listen to the ... against progress, because unless you know that you have no right to believe in its reality."

ANCIENT IDEA ZERO

The idea of progress, according to Dr. Durant, was not found among the ancient philosophers. Aristotle said that some go forward and some go back, the total being an algebraic zero. Lucretius thought that all things are always the same. "Of course women may use different methods in killing their husbands in a different century," commented the lecturer, "and sashweights may be the fashion in Brooklyn in ..., but the ancient and time-honored custom remains the same. Virgil thought history just a circle and all repeats itself in detail—by that theory I'll have to come to Los Angeles centuries hence and give this lecture all over again. Of course, you'll have to listen to it. That alone is enough to refute the theory.

"Anyway, they did not believe in ... progress, and while the idea started in the Renaissance, it did not really take root until D'Orsay, ... by the guillotine during the French Revolution, wrote his "Sketch of Progress in Human Spirit," the most optimistic book ever written. He goes so far as to predict the emancipation of woman from man. But he stops there. Never in the wildest flights of his imagination did he dream of man's emancipation from woman. I'll bet all the men in this audience were dragged here by their wives and friends. Oh, what would we men do without women?"

CLUB NOTES

Cosmos Club

In no club is there a happier feeling of comradeship between the members and the newspaper women than the Cosmos Club. The press luncheon given each year is one happily anticipated by the busy professionals and perhaps the no-less busy nonprofessionals in club circles. Tuesday the club editors of the city are guests of honor with Mrs. Esther J. Hughes, hostess in chief. The time is 12.30 p.m. and the place is the old Ebell clubhouse, 1719 South Figueroa street.

There follow the dates and places for reciprocity gathering in the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs:

April 19, Pasadena Study Club.
April 20, Bell Women's Club.
April 27, Sepulveda Women's Club.
January 31, Highland Park Ebell.
February 10, San Gabriel Women's Club.

Pomona Ebell

It is significant of the alertness of women's clubs in artistic affairs that while the Theater Guild in New York is producing Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," the same play may be seen—not in Los Angeles as might be expected but—in the upper San Gabriel Valley and sponsored by a women's club, Pomona Ebell. The Philharmonic committee, sponsoring courses of the highest artistic merit for the last four years, desires, it is announced, to bring to the audience that which the world's sincere critics deem finest in music and drama. "The Doctor's Dilemma," played by the Pasadena Community Players, under the direction of Gilmor Brown, will be presented as the third in the season's course the 23rd inst.

Three Arts Club

"Fashion in American Drama" is the subject of a talk to be given this afternoon at 4 p.m. before members of the Three Arts Club by Dr. Margaret Carhart. Miss Jean Hill, hostess of the day, has announced that following the program, tea will be served, and that members and their friends are cordially invited. The affair will be given in the club headquarters at 987 Magnolia street.

Cosmo Club

Club editors of the Los Angeles newspapers will be the honored guests Tuesday at noon when the Cosmo Club conducts its annual press and radio luncheon at the district headquarters on South Hobart street. Included on the guest list are Jean Loughborough, Carolyn Walker, Ruth McClintock, Gertrude Price and Myra Nye.

A program following the luncheon will feature L. A. Weiss as the speaker, while music will be furnished by a trio composed of Irmalee Campbell, soprano; Charles King, tenor; Ralph Gill, baritone, with Margaret Wilson at the piano.

Mrs. Mary Hokom, radio chairman, and Esther J. Hughes, press chairman of the club, are in charge of the luncheon.

Dietetic Association Meets

California State Dietetic Association, Southern Section, will meet tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Paulais, 741 South Broadway, with Dr. Clifford A. Wright, eminent endocrinologist, the speaker of the evening.

Club Women Back "Ramona"

The National Federated Women's Clubs of America, with 3,000,000 women workers, have recently announced their decision to sponsor "Ramona," the famous novel by Helen Hunt Jackson, now being made into a motion picture starring Dolores Del Rio.

"Ramona," directed by Edwin Carewe, is the type of motion picture that these club workers want to see on the screens of the world. The federated clubs have created a film division in their vast organization, and that it is the duty of the members to further the ideals set by the officers in this film department, is the opinion expressed before a recent meeting of the Los Angeles Wa-Wan Club by Mrs. E. H. Jacobs, chairman of the southern district committee.

When Carewe made "Resurrection," the film was given the support of the clubs throughout the country. This year, however, the women workers are in an even better position to make a national campaign in behalf of the films they sponsor.

California Cliff Dwellers

Complimentary to the California Cliff Dwellers' Club, Mrs. A. M. Johnson will be hostess Tuesday at a buffet luncheon to be followed by a program of music, in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth Bradford, while Mrs. T. P. Rigney will present a brief program on the subject "Recent Excavations of the Mesa Verde."

Assisting Mrs. Johnson will be Mrs P. D. Wilson, Mrs. R. P. Donohoo, Mrs. C. E. Denton and Mrs. Elizabeth Bradford. The Cliff Dwellers' Club maintains the collection of Indian relics in the Southwest Museum.

Women's City Club

"Why Fascism Came to Italy—What of the Outcome?" a lecture by Paul Harvey, will be given tomorrow at 12:45 p.m. in the Morosco Theater by members of the Women's City Club. Mr. Harvey will discuss conditions in which Fascism grew, political corruption which led to chaos in the years 1919-1922, and the future of Italy, and will cover the same topic again Thursday evening before the Business Women's Section, meeting at 7:30 p.m. on the ninth floor of the Chamber of Commerce.

The luncheon program, to be given at the City Club, 833 South Spring street, is in the charge of Mrs. Cora Deal Lewis, director and chairman of municipal citizenship. Former Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe will be the speaker and Ralph Van Wyck Nye, baritone soloist, will sing several numbers.

Business Women's Club

The dinner meeting of the Business Women's Club of Los Angeles will be conducted at the Women's Athletic Club, 835 South Flower street, tomorrow at 6 p.m. Mrs. Una E. Fowler will be the speaker. She has toured Europe several times and will describe many points of interest.

Monday, the 23rd inst., at 8 p.m. Mrs. H. C. Scott will entertain with a card party for the club, in her home at 412 South Grandview avenue.

Catholic Women's Club

For the purpose of renewing old acquaintances and making interesting and worth-while new ones, the Catholic Women's Club will give a bridge tea at 2 p.m. Thursday. The affair is sponsored by the membership committee, composed of Mmes. Eugene Murphy, S. V. Adams, C. F. Dalber, Benedict Fix, John H. Fritz, Julia Kearney, Mary Schaeffer, Katherine White, Flora MacLachlan and W. P. O'Meara.

Glendale Tuesday Club

Mrs. Charles K. Richmond, past president of the Hollywood Women's Club, will speak on "International Relations and the Outlook for World Friendship," at the luncheon of the Glendale Tuesday Afternoon Club, to be given Tuesday at 12:15 p.m.

The program of the afternoon will be presented by the Optimist Male Quartet, comprising Howard Johnson, Stanley Vermilyea, Franc Hoffman and Frank Geiger.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Lillian K. Floyd, 1187 New Hampshire avenue, Hollywood, before the evening of the previous Saturday.

RECIPROCITY PROGRAM

An interesting program is promised for the Reciprocity Club meeting Wednesday at 12 noon in the Fine Arts Building, 811 West Seventh street. Mrs. Charles Wylie, junior past president of the Wilshire Woman's Club, will tell of her recent travels up the Nile in Egypt and Sol Cohen will present the musical part of the program.

Mrs. E. C. Pyle

Mrs. William K. Schofield

DISTRICT FEDERATION NOTES

With the new year comes the fifth president's council under the regime of Mrs. William Waller Slayden Thursday at the Pasadena Shakespeare clubhouse. Mrs. Joseph H. Miss Martha Anna Clark, chairman of the department of education, announces that this month's conference will be postponed until the 21st inst., when the speakers will be Dr. Sven Lokrantz, Dr. Laura Bennett and Dr. Harold E. Morrison.

DECLINES CONTRACT

Josephine Borio has declined an important offer of a long-term contract, firm in her belief that her career will be better furthered by a little longer schooling in the free lance field. Miss Borio has just completed "The Valley of Superstition" for F.B.O. and is soon to appear with John Gilbert in "The Cossacks."

MURNAU'S ARTISTRY TRIUMPHS

Foreign Director Proves Plot to be Minor Detail in Film Production

A little over fourteen months ago, as part of the foreign legion of talent, F. W. Murnau came to Hollywood to make a picture for Fox.

Many highly touted foreigners had already failed to make good and as a result movie-wise folks hinted that the engagement of Murnau was a huge mistake. They said he would either make a fine artistic picture, costing a huge sum which would never be regained, or else he would turn out the old Hollywood formula. It is not necessary to import a personage to accomplish the latter. There is enough talent in Hollywood itself for that.

Fox is a good showman. He not only knows his films but his public. He emphatically stated that he never made money on a picture that he produced for the box office, but that the picture which always made money was the one which was artistically good. At a dinner tendered Murnau when he arrived here, Mr. Fox in a speech of welcome at the Ritz Carlton, said:

"Mr. Murnau, I charge you with the responsibility of making only the best and finest—the idealistic and beautiful—of making for us a motion picture which will win the approval of all classes, everywhere, and bring new friends to the motion picture."

Then Murnau came out to Hollywood. Here all the resources of the industry were at his command. He was allowed to select his own story and choose his own cast. He was feted and honored by the men of the Fox lot. He supervised everything, and his word was final. No other director was ever given the power and courtesy accorded to him.

Murnau selected as his story, "Sunrise," a simple tale described as "a song of two humans." There isn't anything new in the plot. Murnau took it for that very reason. He didn't want the threads of a story to get in the way of his camera. He chose Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien for his cast. He took them because they were young.

It was Murnau's intention to make "Sunrise" without a subtitle. He later realized he couldn't and there are twenty-four in the film, a remarkably low figure. But even the physical manipulation of the printed title is novel.

A little over a month ago "Sunrise" had its premiere here at the Carthay Circle Theater. The verdict of those who sit in cinema judgment was that it was marvelous and it is significant that before the picture was released William Fox awarded Murnau a five-year contract.

Rogers to Lead Theater Music

Charles "Buddy" Rogers, leading man for Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl," now playing at the United Artists' Theater, has consented to make a personal appearance at the United Artists' Theater in the near future and is now engaged in rehearsing the orchestra, which he will lead at several performances.

Rogers, who has scored a success as a juvenile with Miss Pickford, is now at the Paramount studios, where he is playing the lead in "Abie's Irish Rose."

He will act as director of the United Artists' Theater Orchestra at two performances. Later he will act as host on the mezzanine floor of the theater, meeting the general public as well as his studio friends.

Aided by Dion Romandi and Carli Elinor, Rogers is now rehearsing for his orchestral appearance, when he will conduct Friml's "Firefly" overture.

PROGRAM OF EBELL CLUB ANNOUNCED

Tien Lai Huang, Chinese Scholar, Will be Speaker Tomorrow Afternoon

Tien Lai Huang, who is to lecture at the regular Monday meeting of Ebell tomorrow afternoon, is the second internationally known speaker to appear before the club members this month. And on the three succeeding Mondays three others are to appear.

Mr. Huang is one of China's most noted scholars and is known throughout the world as an authority on his country's problems. He is a member of one of the oldest families in China, a family that traces its descent back to the first Chinese Emperor. His father and grandfather were prominent Chinese mandarins and scholars.

He is an alumnus of Peking University, Syracuse University and Columbia University. Tien Lai Huang is one of the most noted representatives of modern China and a leader of the younger generation there, which is rebuilding his nation. His subject at Ebell will be "Philosophy and Religion of China."

Special attention is called to the fact that this meeting will be called one-half hour earlier than usual, at 1:30 p.m. This is being ordered because it is the semiannual business meeting of Ebell.

Tomorrow morning Dr. Albert Sidney Raubenheimer will address the psychology department, Mrs. Edgar Stanley, curator, on the subject of "The Psychology of Learning." On Wednesday morning the public affairs department, of which Mrs. Leiland Atherton Irish is curator, will hear Mrs. Armitage S. C. Forbes on current events: Miss Eleanor Miller on women of today, and Everett Mattoon on county government. A guest luncheon will follow.

BIRDS TO BE SUBJECT OF SOCIETY ADDRESS

"Bird Superlatives" will be the subject of Roland Case Ross, vice-president of the California Audubon Society and assistant supervisor of nature work in the public schools of this city at the regular meeting of the Audubon Society in the lecture room of the public library, the 12th inst. By superlative Mr. Ross means the largest birds, the redest, the most colorful and the swiftest in their flight. Toward the close of the evening he will lead in an open forum discussion on "Choosing a State Bird for California." Since the choice of a bird is to be emphasized in a campaign throughout the State in the public schools the subject is timely. Mrs. F. T. Bicknell, who originated the idea, and is chairman of the committee, declares enthusiasm has been shown by the ornithologists. Dr. Joseph Grinnell is chairman in the northern part of the State.

ARTISTS NAMED ON MacDOWELL PROGRAM

Under the leadership of Leota Woy, chairman of the art section of the MacDowell Club of Allied Arts, the following artists will appear Tuesday at 8 p.m.: Carrie Stone Freeman, well-known composer and former vice-president, will play selections from MacDowell; Marie Crow, who has just returned from a year's study in Europe, will speak on "An Art Student's Experience Painting in the Hill Towns of the Alpes Maritime of Southern France;" Power O'Malley will speak on "American Art;" Francis William Vreeland, a member of the Architectural League, and Clifford McBride, the cartoonist, will also be honor guests of the evening.

The MacDowell Club is giving its members and friends unusual and splendid programs in its new rooms in the Beaux Arts Building. Mrs. Albert Beck Wenzell, president will preside.

VERSE WRITERS SET SESSION TOMORROW

The Verse Writers' Club of Southern California will hold its next regular meeting in the fiction seminar room of the public library tomorrow evening. Poems by members will be read and discussed as usual, and Miss Estelle Williamson will talk on Charles Blanden, a San Diego poet.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS

By Myra Nye, Mother

CHILDREN OF LIGHT

I am writing of children of light, those who must be of the light because the world of sound and music is closed to them forever, and because there came to me this past week a woman of culture and attainment who is helping to make happier those who are deaf by teaching them the art of lip reading.

Miss Kathryn Newman, who is now staying in Los Angeles at 1747 Cahuenga avenue, at the beginning of the World War was an expert exponent of lip reading and taught it to many disabled soldiers and those made deaf overseas. Her story reminded me of a California girl who knew lip reading because she had a brother who was deaf.

She was stranded in London one winter before the war when all the world was desirous of knowing what Kaiser Wilhelm had said to King George when they were together in England.

Marjorie was very homesick for California. The fog of London mocked her. Its feeble sunshine tortured her. Her longing for home was uppermost in her consciousness. But somewhere in the recesses of her mind she knew that the world was waiting to learn that exchange of sentences between two great rulers.

To assuage in measure her homesickness she wandered to a cinema palace, caring not at all for any picture or plot or story, for beauty of heroine or chivalry of her, but sure of one thing—if she stayed long enough she would surely see the canyons, the boulevards, the shining strips of shore, the mountains of Southern California.

All afternoon she stayed in the darkened theater. She was happy at last. Not only had the out-of-door love stories had California for a background, but in the oriental scenes, in the Sahara Desert, she recognized her own Southland, her own beloved sandy shore which answered for desert in one of the pictures.

She was about to go when a news reel caught her attention. King George and Kaiser Wilhelm were separating from their retinue on deck of a boat in Liverpool and were coming down the gangplank side by side. No newspaper man, no servant, no official was near them for just an instant or two. King George leaned slowly and carefully toward the German ruler. His lips formed a sentence. The Kaiser answered him.

Suddenly California Marjorie, who had learned lip reading in her childhood when it was little known as a study, seized her hat. In another moment she was out of the theater hurrying toward Bond street. There she told the repetition of those two sentences, one from the English monarch and the answer from the German Kaiser, for the tidy sum of $5000. In a week she was on her way back home to see at first hand her beloved California.

Miss Newman is qualified to teach all the well-known methods for the hard of hearing as taught in New York, Boston. From much experience in teaching she had deduced her own method which she has used with such marvelous success that pupils after a few lessons are happy to hear their friends say, "How your hearing has improved!" For this is the effect that lip reading has. Often the hearing is actually improved because the strain is taken off the nerves.

The United States government accepted the services of Miss Newman during the World War and at the same time she was teaching soldiers Miss Newman organized classes in the New York public schools for adult hard of hearing. Now many of her former pupils, some of them totally deaf, have charge of the class she taught there.

Outdoor Work of Association to be Subject

The program of West Ebell Club for Tuesday at 2 p.m. is being presented through the courtesy of Mrs. Walter M. Chase, chairman of child welfare of Los Angeles district. Dr. Harry Cohn will speak on "Outdoor Activities of the Children of the Los Angeles Tubercular Association." Mrs. J. B. Morey will give "Interpretation of Child Songs" by Johnson, playing her own accompaniment.

The departments of music, parliamentary law and business law will meet in the morning. Mrs. O. B. Manchester, instructor in world affairs, will conduct her class on a world tour.

CANADIAN SOCIETIES

The Canadian Tourist' Society has changed the date of its fifteenth annual midwinter reunion and picnic from February 4 to February 11, to be held at Exposition Park.

President Hooper states that the change in date was necessary, owing to the colleges and universities having the first Saturday in February as "registering day," preventing many students attending the tourists' doings. Also, Father Ricard sent word that the first week in February promises to be cold, wet weather.

Acting upon the same "hunch," the American-Canadian Tourists' Association also changed the date of its proposed sports carnival and field day to Saturday, February 11, to be held at the Coliseum, adjoining the Exposition picnic grounds. Col. D. Metcalf states that the program this year will be an elaborate one. Dean Cromwell, University of Southern California coach, has been asked to take charge of the athletic events.

Chairman R. Bowden of the Dominion Old Boys' and Girls' Association is arranging a Canadian church parade for Sunday, February 12, if an auditorium large enough can be obtained.

The Canadian Club, with J. Purvis as chairman, and Mrs. Holgate as mistress of ceremonies, is completing arrangements for a program for the fifth annual tourists' ball, which has been set for the evening of February 13, at the former States' Societies Hall, 1137 South Hope street.

On the tourists' general committee in charge of the 1928 Canadian annual, will be Hon. J. H. Bell, ex-Premier; Rev. John MacPhie, noted Nova Scotian divine; Hon. R. G. Brett, former Governor of Alberta; Hon. N. P. Bissonette, representing the French-Canadians; H. A. Mullins, ex-member of the Dominion Parliament, and many other notables. President Hooper will be director-general.

The Canadian Ladies' Reunion Association is arranging a tableau, in which the two recently elected "queens," Miss Canada and Miss Los Angeles, will take a prominent part at the annual Canadian reunion, Saturday, February 11. Mrs. Jessie Purvis is the Governor in charge.

STATE SOCIETIES

Thousands of Illinoisans have chosen Southern California for their western home and their monthly indoor and quarterly outdoor reunions are a source of joy to multitudes. Their January indoor rally will be tomorrow evening at the Veterans' Hall. President H. J. Brubaker will preside and will lead community singing. Readings and musical numbers, roll call, prizes and dancing will fill the hours. Plans for the annual picnic, the 21st inst., will be announced. It is to be at Sycamore Grove.

The first State picnic for 1928 will be given by the Utah and Idaho contingent on the 14th inst., Sycamore Grove. It will call the Utah and Idaho people from hundreds of miles around and there will be a fine program including the Utah double quartet. Picnickers will carry basket dinners, but coffee will be supplied. The program will follow the dinner hour.

President W. O. Owen is planning a program for the New Year reunion of the Wyoming people next Wednesday evening at the Veterans' Hall. Miss Jessie Smiley will entertain with Scotch dances. Community singing, refreshments and dancing will be other attractions.

Buckeyes are all included in the call to the reunion next Tuesday evening at the Fay Rose Hall. A popular program and dancing will be included in the entertainment.

Pennsylvanians are invited to the reunion next Tuesday evening at the Moose Hall. Dancing will follow the program.

The call of the Kansas rally reaches hundreds of Jayhawkers and the response is enthusiastic. The January reunion will be Thursday evening at the Veterans' Hall, and plans will be announced for the picnic the 28th inst., at Long Beach.

Texans, under the leadership of their new president, Lyston S. Black, will meet next Friday evening at the Fay Rose Hall, 1137 South Hope street. All Texans are invited to enjoy the program and to take part in the dancing.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

A brilliant event in Independent Foresters circles was the public installation of new officers of Companion Courts Morris Vineyard, E.S. and Emily, and Subordinate Court E.G., last Tuesday evening. High Chief Ranger Dr. C. B. Dickson, assisted by E. E. Wilson, S. G. Dungerley, Charles L. Wilde, M. A. Gould and George Pritchard of the High Standing Committee, installed the offices with the guard team of Companion Court E.S. doing the floor work. Beautiful gifts were presented to Companion Cora Nale, manager of the guard team, Past Chief Ranger Ernestine Schallmo of Companion Court Emily, Past Chief Ranger Alma Solom of Companion Court Morris Vineyard, Past Chief Ranger Teresa Pearson of Companion Court F.S., Charles L. Wilde, retiring financial secretary of Court E.G., and to William R. Topham, chief ranger of Court E.G. An unusual event in the order was the installation of Mrs. Pearson and Mr. Topham, who had both been elected to a second term.

Court F. G. No. 33 will entertain members and invited guests with a complimentary dance next Tuesday evening.

Companion Court Morris Vineyard has issued its quarterly calendar, showing activities of the court for the period. The Thimble Club conducted a meeting last Wednesday, beginning with a luncheon. Companion Elva Decker was hostess. Companion Ball-Davis will be hostess at the first business meeting of the year.

IN THE SPRING OF 1876, THREE COLUMNS OF UNITED STATES TROOPS WERE SENT TO ROUND UP THE WARRING TRIBES OF THE SIOUX NATION. GEN. CROOK WAS TO MARCH NORTHWARD FROM FORT FETTERMAN, WYOMING, GEN. TERRY TO ADVANCE WESTWARD FROM NORTH DAKOTA, AND GEN. GIBBON TO MOVE SOUTHWARD FROM THE YELLOWSTONE.

THE FIRST SETBACK WAS RECEIVED WHEN CROOK'S ADVANCE WAS CHECKED IN A BATTLE WITH THE SIOUX LED BY CRAZY HORSE ON THE ROSEBUD, JUNE 17TH. MEANWHILE, TERRY HAD ENTERED THE INDIAN COUNTRY WITH A STRONG FORCE THAT INCLUDED GEN. GEORGE A. CUSTER AND HIS SEVENTH CAVALRY.

TERRY SET OUT FROM FORT ABRAHAM LINCOLN, NEAR BISMARCK, ON MAY 17TH. ALL REALIZED THE SERIOUSNESS OF THE SITUATION AND, THOUGH GEN. TERRY PARADED THE COLUMN BEFORE ITS DEPARTURE, TO DISPLAY ITS STRENGTH, THE WOMEN WHO WERE LEFT BEHIND WATCHED THEIR LOVED ONES MARCH AWAY WITH HEAVY HEARTS.

THE JOURNEY TO THE BANK OF THE POWDER RIVER WAS MADE PEACEFULLY ENOUGH, AND HERE TERRY WAS JOINED BY GEN. GIBBON, WHO CAME TO REPORT THAT HIS COLUMN HAD HALTED ON THE YELLOWSTONE NEAR THE MOUTH OF THE BIG HORN, AND THAT EVERYTHING WAS IN READINESS FOR THE COMMAND TO MARCH TO THE SOUTH.

SPECIALIST IN GARDENS TO LECTURE

Group of Five Talks to be Given Local Hostesses Beginning 16th Inst.

BY OLIVE GRAY

Mrs. Charles W. Hubbard (Louise Stone Hubbard,) prominent landscape architect, former director of the Garden Club, plant material editor of the Garden Bulletin and authority on horticultural interests of America and Honolulu, has been obtained by Bullock's for the benefit of Los Angeles women.

Mrs. Hubbard and Mrs. Walter Brewster of Lake Forest, the latter a hostess of international fame, several seasons ago, presided over an exhibit of the Garden Club, at the Grand Central Palace in New York City. This exhibit, designed by Mrs. Hubbard, consisted of miniature gardens and dinner and luncheon tables, presenting original ideas. The exhibit created such wide interest that Marshall Fields arranged to have it brought to Chicago and resulted in an annual event of similar character at Field's. Such social leaders as Mrs. Potter Palmer, Princess Canticurene, Mrs. Parmelee McFadden and Mrs. Walter Brewster here acted as hostesses. Having closed her Chicago season after presiding over the Wedgewood Room, at Field's, Mrs. Hubbard leaves for Los Angeles, to meet the hostesses of Los Angeles, Bullock's having arranged to entertain her as the guest of the store, during her stay here.

The group of five talks, which will take place in Bullock's tea room, during the week starting the 16th inst., will comprise such subjects as table decoration for formal and informal occasions, tables for special events, smart tables with and without flowers, and tables one remembers. These, in addition to talks on gardens of various countries, will lend absorbing interest to Mrs. Hubbard's stay on the Pacific Coast.

Following talks for the Horticultural Society of New York, last season, Mrs. Hubbard was commissioned to do the gardens for the Northwestern University, and recently has been commissioned to do the landscaping for the University of Peking. The celebrated gardens of Cyrus McCormick, Lake Forest, those of Melvin Strauss, Glencoe, Ill., Walter Dillingham, Honolulu; Ah Fong, Honolulu, and George Cook of Honolulu, are some of the world famous gardens, the creations of Mrs. Hubbard.

The talks sponsored by Bullock's are to be similar to the affairs held during the present month, in prominent eastern stores.

While on the Coast, Mrs. Hubbard will in addition to her appearances at Bullock's, lecture before several garden clubs, her subjects being American, European and Chinese gardens. Mrs. Hubbard's talks in Bullock's tea room, are an offering by this establishment to Los Angeles hostesses and there will be no fee.

GUY EMPEY, WAR AUTHOR, CAME, SAW, AND---STILL IN HOLLYWOOD

BY ALMA WHITAKER

It was last July that a fond mamma, daughter of a covered-wagon Forty-niner, lured her famous son, Guy Empey, to Hollywood. A man of quick decision, he came, saw—and—ahem—seems to have conquered.

He took a house, bought a car, hired a press agent, secretary, cook, and investigated cemetery lots on the very first day. The next day he was writing his next novel, "The Handwriting on the Sky," as though he had been ensconsed for years.

Guy Empey, as everybody knows, was the author of the first exciting war novel, "Over the Top." "A Helluva War," published a few months back, was his fifth book, and bids fair to equal "Over the Top's" phenomonal sale, especially if United Artists make it into a picture for Louis Wolheim, for which negotiations are now proceeding.

In the meantime it took but a few weeks for Guy to have written a couple of original scenarios for Hoot Gibson at Universal. By which you will note there is nothing stagnant about this Guy Empey.

Like so many of our bright, energetic men, Guy is little, but is well set up, with a military chest, dapper, well-dressed, and with a nice taste in ties. He talks like a streak of lightning, and it's all worth listening to. Every now and then he makes a heroic effort to seem modest, but generally tapers off into a bouyant self-confident brag.

But he indulges in no heroics about himself as a soldier, is pleasantly devoid of blah, and makes no pretense at a superior education. But he can't help knowing he has lived the sort of adventurous life that all men yearn to live—all the way from running away to sea at 17, shipping before the mast, and by "jumping ships" in interesting ports, seeing a vast proportion of the world. At 20 there was a period of circus traveling, where he learned his fancy trick riding. A very athletic little chap, wonderful swimmer.

So he was the very type to enlist in the war with the British in 1915, after having received an honorable discharge from the United States Regulars. Went through the Somme, came back wounded, with a useless arm, made Red Cross and Liberty Loan speeches, Coue'd the arm back to life, and re-enlisted with the United States Army. He adores Tommies and Doughboys and wants to fight anyone who says they are not a mighty decent, plucky, loyal bunch. He also says that although war is deplorable it is never going to be replaced by polite conversation.

Guy Empey is a bachelor of 40 years of age, now, whose sweetheart is his mother, and whose son is his orphaned nephew of 17, showing marked signs of following in uncle's literary footsteps.

This Guy Empey is wise in the ways of publishers and how to be rich though literary. There was even a period, too, in which he did some independent picture producing until his backers became involved in a financial debacle brought on strictly through producing someone else's stories, as Guy hastily explains!

In the meantime Guy is fascinated with the rampant politeness that obtains here, especially as illustrated by the gentlemanly young men who run service stations. Marvelous! Nothing like 'em anywhere else. Why, they actually clean his windshield, supply him with water and air, assure him he needs neither oil nor gas and decline a tip with gracious charm! California is all right. It is likely to be the most permanent home Guy ever had. And he is such a good talker—club program chairmen regarding him as a precious addition to the population accordingly.

PICTURE ALMOST FINISHED AFTER TEN WEEKS OF WORK

Ten weeks of intense production have brought "Tillie's Punctured Romance" close to the final fade-out. This is Al Christie's modern version of the fourteen-year-old favorite which Paramount will release as his first big feature for them under the new contract by which Paramount releases this in addition to the thirty-six Christie short features. In a few days the twelve cameras that have been turning on the battle episodes and under the big top of the huge circus which enters into the story will gave way to the shears of of the cutting and titling department.

It has been a long time since such a cast was assembled as W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda, supported by Mack Swain, Doris Hill, Grant Withers, Tom Kennedy, Babe London and Kalla Pasha, in "Tillie's Punctured Romance." Eddie Sutherland, directing from a script by Monte Brice, will turn out an entirely different tale from the old Tillie. Old-time moviegoers will recall the lusty kicks which Mack Swain gives Tillie in the old picture—and they will again see this diverting bit of action in the opening sequence of the new production. From there on, however, a modern story has been developed on a big scale, with the battle front invaded by a complete circus—lions, calliopes, tents, tigers, acrobats and gilded wagons—right in the thickest part of the figting. In fact, the panoply of the fighting. In fact, the panoply the new Tillie, with the big circus and the people and the animals in it all thrown bodily into the conflict.

With Fields playing the part of the ringmaster, Conklin that of the circus owner and Miss Fazenda the role of the circus-struck farm girl, and with all three and their circus mixed up in the World War, the modern "Tillie's Punctured Romance" has the making of Mr. Christie's biggest production, with the cast, the war, the circus and the story in general handled in a big way throughout.

ETIQUETTE OF UNDERWORLD DISCLOSED BY LON CHANEY

Just as every nation and every people has its own code of ethics, so, too, have the "unseen cities" of America—the gangsters and underworld with their own secret bonds and their own secret customs that set them aside, in a measure, from every-day people.

An interesting light on this is cast in the production of "The Big City," Lon Chaney's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle, in which much of the etiquette of the underworld, as gleaned in research for the picture from police reports is shown.

"The old saying regarding honor among thieves," says Chaney, "has rather a startling application in actuality in the underworld. In fact, among gangsters, there are just two commandments instead of our ten to be observed. One is—'don't steal'—and of course, this means don't steal from another crook. The rest of society is considered legitimate prey, made for the express purpose of furnishing the underworld a living. The second one is—'don't squeal.'

"No matter what happens, a gangster is supposed never to tell on anyone else who, like himself, is outside the pale. To squeal, even on a personal enemy, is considered the gravest of crimes, and makes the man who does it an outcast even among his own kind. Hence to call a man a 'squealer' is the deadliest of insults.

"Among themselves, gangsters may war—even kill. But when one is picked up, he never tells who his enemies are; he may be dying, but will not disclose the person who shot him. That is one of the adamant laws of the unseen city.

"Behind it is, of course, the spirit of self-preservation. Of course, if rival gangs began to 'squeal' on each other, soon all gangs would be wiped out—and the unseen city disintegrated. Hence the common good compels the law.

"The police get their information from 'stool pigeons,' as they are called, or secret informers who betray the others. Every now and then one of these is detected by the underworld—and usually a body is mysteriously found somewhere not long afterward. And the underworld remains silent as before."

WEDDINGS OF 400 YEARS AGO SHOW GREAT CONTRAST

With controversies raging over "companionate marriage," "five-year contracts," etc., matrimonial affairs today present a decided contrast to those of 400 years ago.

For a new Samuel Goldwyn motion picture has disclosed facts which should provide arguments galore for those who oppose or favor changes in the time-honored wedding procedure.

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, married in the as yet untitled adaptation of "Leatherface," by Baroness Orczy, found even getting engaged in 1540 a long and tedious procedure.

Then one faced the "sword" and the "crown" long before the "ring" was permitted to come into the scene. The young couple to be married appeared before the count or duke of the district. First they swore to unsheath the sword for their overlord against all their enemies. Next they swore to obey any and all commands of their king. Lastly, they were permitted to pledge each other that eventually they would marry.

"Eventually" is the right word, for days, sometimes even months, had to elapse before all of the inbetween ceremonies were completed and a bride finally met her groom at the altar.

Undoubtedly both sides of the marriage argument will find meat in these research facts dug out for Samuel Goldwyn and Fred Niblo. And, likewise, the fact that divorce was impossible in those days will come in for comment. But, likewise, the advocates of unchanged sternness in wedding laws will probably bring forth the fact that William of Orange, Richard the Lion-Hearted, Savonarola, Francis de Assisi and other "greats" of history were born and reared under this rule!

FIVE LEADING PLAYERS

Five outstanding film players have parts in "Partners in Crime," a new type of melodramatic comedy now in production at the Paramount studio in Hollywood. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton have the starring roles. Mary Brian and Jack Luden provide the romantic interest and William Powell has a villain's role.

Studio Makes Elephant for Camera Debut

At last something "bigger and better" has been done in motion pictures. A studio make-up man has made up an elephant for its camera debut.

It happened at the winter quarters of the Al G. Barnes Circus at Baldwin Park. The entire circus was being used as atmosphere for "Do It Again," a screen play of circus life Marshall Neilan is directing for First National Pictures.

During the filming of parade and menagerie and performance scenes, in which the whole force of animals with the circus was used, no make-up for elephants—or hippos or rhinos—was needed. The burning white lights used for these scenes substituted for make-up even with human beings in the scenes.

In close-ups of action including the featured players, Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, soft incandescent lighting was used. Under this light the elephant used in some of the scenes would have photographed a glossy black, and kiddies who saw the picture would have been disappointed.

Make-up, applied to the tusker by three make-up men armed with step-ladders and whitewash brushes, solved the problem.

DISCUSSING LUCKY BREAKS

That opportunity bobs up in strange places was described the other day by Dale Fuller when various ones on the set of "The Cossacks" discussed "lucky breaks." Miss Fuller started out for fame via the chorus route and considered herself lucky when she was given an end position in a musical comedy company. For she did some impromptu clowning with the comedian which attracted notice. Later she developed her comedy at Mack Sennett's and the Keystone company. In her present engagement she is playing a peasant woman which gives her a fine opportunity for makeup and characterization.

Older Screen Actors Welcome Newer Talent

Contrary to general belief, experienced motion-picture actors welcome newcomers to the screen, declares Bryant Washburn, featuring in "Honeymoon Flats" for Universal. He has seen many embryo stars come and go during his long career before the camera.

"There should be no petty jealousy between the two," says Washburn. "Success depends on mutual co-operation. Theater patrons demand new faces, not because they have lost their admiration for old favorites, but because it is inherent in all Americans to be continually in search of new thrills. Older actors have become accustomed to this vacillation and do not worry when a new star flashes across the screen firmament, knowing it creates interest in the films in which they themselves appear."

processes make us 'behave like human beings.' We are a nation hungry to know, and we will inherit the earth. Not a lot of dirt, but the culture of the past. There is just one possible slip. We might become either a 'Rome or a Greece. Remember—wealth and power are only a manure—a means to better ends!"

During the luncheon meeting Dr. Cass Arthur Reed, carrying out the idea that progress is a real thing, argued from experience as head of an international university in the Near East that "Progress in India is no delusion."

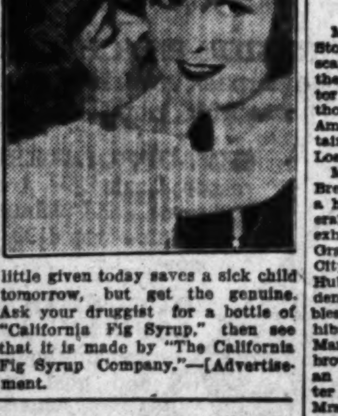
Mother!

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated



Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."—[Advertisement.

HERE'S A MAN

A fellow who made less than $2000 in 1926 has earned more than $30,000 in 1927. That's the result of careful training and intensive effort. Now that man is showing others how it is done.

We teach the selling business to any young man who is free from bookworm and who is not muscle-bound above the ears. We can multiply the income of any man who has the stick-to-it-iveness to attend eight evening classes. There is a job for him on our forces at the end of that period or he is free to go to work for others. There is no charge for the schooling we give you.

Last year we ran a similar series of sessions, got thirty men and paid out nearly a quarter of a million dollars to that crowd in twelve months. We hope to pay out more this year.

Every evening at 7:30, except Thursday and Saturday evenings. Apply Superintendent.

HELEN MUST FIND HOMES FOR 450 BABIES

HELEN TALKS: You must not think this is an orphanage when I talk about 450 babies, but I really have 450 sweet-voiced, dear, darling babies, baby grands, that will please the ear and eye of any woman. This big 10-story storage warehouse is packed with fine high-grade, tone-lasting, guaranteed grand pianos. Grands for the modest bungalow, grands that will grace any California mansion. Prices start at $277, $297, $317, $347, $377 up to $1777. You can save from $300 to $1000 on your grand piano purchase. I have regular "Kathleen Mavourneen" terms—"It may be for years and it may be forever." If a grand is too rich for your blood, I have little practice pianos ranging in price from $17 up. Player pianos from $147 up. Usual low terms, as low as $5 down and $5 per month. Come see me and hear my babies sing. Just ask for Helen. Lincoln Piano Storage Company, 860 N. Spring st. at Alpine. FILM FROLIC AND DANCE AID TO CITY

Annual Wampas Affair Brings Exploitation Far and Near by Press Agents

From a civic viewpoint the annual Wampas frolic and ball to be given next month is said to be a valuable medium of international exploitation. For in every story concerning the affair that goes out from the organization's press headquarters to other States and foreign countries the glories of Los Angeles are told and facts concerning the local motion-picture industry are elaborated on.

This year the frolic will be given at the Ambassador Auditorium on Saturday evening, February 25. According to Ray Coffin, president, the forthcoming entertainment will outshine all previous efforts.

The announcement of this year's selection of twelve baby stars is news, and millions of motion-picture fans everywhere anxiously await the announcement. Sometime within the next ten days this news will be released and it will be published simultaneously in hundreds of papers and magazines

WHY HE HESITATED

The late John S. Sargent used relate how one afternoon he saw an old English countryman he thought would make a good model and sent his maid out to bring the man in.

"The master wants to paint you," said the girl.

The old fellow hesitated.

"Will he pay me well?"

"Oh, yes, he'll probably give you a pound."

Still the old man hesitated. He took off his shabby hat and scratched his head in perplexity.

"It's an easy way to earn a pound," the maid prompted.

"Oh, ay I know that," came the reply. "I was only wondering how I'd get the paint off afterward."—[Exchange.

Teams of four officers in each cavalry division will compete for titles, trophies and ribbons in military jumping classes.

A squad in machine-gun competition also has been entered in each cavalry division. This exhibition calls for a gun squad moving forward over a given space and putting a gun into action. The time required counts 50 per cent, execution, 25 per cent, completeness of equipment, 15 per cent and condition of equipment, 10 per cent. Military jumping calls for a modified Olympic course of eight jumps.

W. W. Mines, president of the association sponsoring the show this year, declared yesterday it will be the greatest in the history of the West with equine aristocrats of international fame to be exhibited.

TRAINLOAD OF HORSES

Besides the defenders and challengers of the tanbark arena on the Pacific Coast there will be exhibits of others from various parts of the United States and Canada to be shipped here from the Denver show on the 22nd inst. in a special train of sixteen cars over the Union Pacific. This carge of blue bloods will be valued at more than $1,000,000.

Work will be speeded this week on the stalls being erected for the thoroughbreds near the Eighth-street entrance to the Ambassador Auditorium to utilize a space of more than 100,000 square feet under cover. Sixty men are employed to complete this work under the supervision of Mat S. Cohen, secretary of the Los Angeles Horse Show Association.

WAR RECORDS USED IN DIVORCE HEARING

CARL W. ANDERSON, WHO GETS DECREE, DENIES TRYING TO HYPNOTIZE WIFE

Documents from the United States War Department were brought into the case of Carl W. Anderson in his efforts to get a divorce from Mrs. Laura K. Anderson, in Superior Judge Finney's court yesterday. The court granted him a decree on grounds of cruelty, denying the plea of the wife, who charged him with attempting to hypnotize her and their adopted daughter, Marie, by making "passes" at them which frightened them.

The War Department records, which were not needed in the case, were to prove that Mrs. Anderson had obtained a default divorce from William B. Lambert in Ohio on representations that he had deserted her, when in fact he was in France with the A.E.F. The testimony was, however that a second marriage ceremony had been performed between the Andersons to make the ceremony more binding.

Anderson charged his wife with calling him a "yellow dog" and cursing him in front of women friends, also with tearing the shirt off his back before the same people. He admitted being a student of psychology, but denied attempting to hypnotize his wife or their adopted daughter.

A police operative purchased two pints of red liquor from Watson at his residence Thursday night, the money later being recovered on his person by Sergt. Hackett and Policeman Sale, it is reported. FACT AND COMMENT

Computation showing the annual commerce of the port of Los Angeles to be within at least a few years of $1,000,000,000 should focus more attention on its importance as a shipping point.

The business done by the port is another expression of the progress in this part of the country resulting from effectually instituted, maintained and correlated efforts for promoting general welfare. Thus back of the port's great commerce not only is a productivity that is a leading factor in Southern California's upbuilding and prosperity, but of the entire southwestern area of the United States.

Supplementing that support is the growing national and international disposition to make constantly increasing use of the port.

Los Angeles is in position to stress the fact that it is not an end of the line city, but a metropolis directly on a great pathway of world-encircling commerce.

REALTY AIMS EMPHASIZED

Hal G. Hotchkiss Exhorts Association to New Program Upon Becoming President

Asserting that the major aims of the California Real Estate Association can be accomplished only through increased strength, Hal G. Hotchkiss, inducted into office yesterday as president of the organization, laid plans to effect a larger membership of the member boards of the association before the board of directors' meeting in their first quarterly session of 1928 at the U. S. Grant Hotel in San Diego.

Aims of the association, Mr. Hotchkiss declared in his address before the directors, who represented boards from every section of the State, are to further the desirability of real estate as an investment, to raise the ethical standard of the business throughout the State, safeguarding both buyer and seller and to aid in effecting a readjustment or reduction of taxes on real estate, which are declared to be by far higher than on any other commodity.

Strong and resourceful membership committees have been appointed in the local boards and many boards have formed competitive teams to raise the enthusiasm to the highest degree possible.

The State membership committee, which will direct the campaign, is composed of W. H. Daum, Los Angeles, chairman, southern division; J. Bradley Clayton, San Jose, chairman, northern division; E. P. Huston, Sacramento; Col. E. N. Jones, State treasurer, San Diego; Vice-Presidents Ralph A. Knapp, Oakland; Frank C. Nye, Riverside, and Louis J. Pfau, Jr., San Francisco.

Final work on the membership campaign will be completed February 20 to 29, and the report of the work accomplished between the present date and then will be given at the March meeting of the board of directors, which will be held in San Jose during the Blossom Festival.

Architect John M. Cooper has completed plans and has the contract for the erecting of a store building in the Goodyear Park tract.

Digestive Process Noted in Building and Realty

(A record year in transaction of business has just been experienced by Los Angeles, according to J. R. Douglas, assistant vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, who has prepared, exclusively for The Times, the following article dealing with bank clearings, construction, realty filings and industry, during 1927.)

BY J. R. DOUGLAS

The year 1927 witnessed the transaction of the greatest volume of business in the history of Los Angeles. At the same time it should be said that throughout the year, and particularly during the last six months, there continued the economic adjustment which began during the last quarter of 1926, with the result that local business in some lines has been relatively quiet.

The last year has given additional proof of the value to Los Angeles and Southern California of the advantages enjoyed from the diversification of the sources of income of this area. The prosperity of Southern California does not depend upon agriculture alone, but springs from industry, foreign commerce, petroleum, and investments throughout the United States.

The keen competition which has characterized national business during the last year was present to a limited extent in Los Angeles and resulted in an increase in the number of business failures, which, however, by removing business from weaker hands, has tended to stabilize the situation. Even though there has been a considerable list of failures, however, the fundamental soundness of Los Angeles is amply demonstrated by the entrance into this field of concerns of nation-wide recognition, such as Sears, Roebuck & Co., the Goodrich Rubber Company, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, the Ford Motor Company and many others. These concerns will add materially to the pay rolls of the metropolitan area and at the same time will still further diversify local activity in a way that tends to stabilize prosperity.

During 1927, bank clearings, an important index of business activity, exceeded those of 1926 by 5.2 per cent. While this may perhaps be regarded as somewhat less than normal growth, it indicates an increase in the aggregate business transacted and is on the whole satisfactory.

BUILDING ACTIVITY

Building construction, an important activity in a rapidly growing city such as Los Angeles, was approximately the same as last year. During the first six months of 1927 permit valuations ran somewhat below 1926 figures and for a time it appeared that the year's total would show a loss, but during the third and fourth quarters activity increased and the 1927 total amounted to $123,027,239, an increase of $21,024 over 1926. Building has been at a high level in Los Angeles for over five years and construction equaling last year, though below the totals for 1923, 1924 and 1925, may be regarded as very satisfactory.

As is usual dwelling construction was the largest item in the building program, amounting to $39,211,681 as compared to $45,007,959 during 1926. Apartment construction, the next in importance, amounted to $22,866,436, as compared to $19,126,251 during 1926. Apartment construction in 1927 provided space for 9967 families as compared with space for 7459 families in 1926. Dwelling construction provided for 10,833 families in 1927, as compared with 12,558 in 1926. Following are the monthly figures of building-permit valuations in 1927 and 1926:

January	$ 8,129,749	$ 6,373,232

AVENUE OPENING ORDERED

Amaranth Project Launched as Last Link in Normandie Route to Port

Steps to open and widen the remaining link in the proposed extension of Normandie avenue, from Los Angeles to the harbor, have been taken by the City Council in ordering the opening and widening of Amaranth avenue from Weston street to Anaheim Road.

Amaranth avenue is the practical extension of Normandie avenue, and with it widened to 100 feet, there will be a wide traffic lane to the heart of San Pedro. This project, included in the Major Traffic Street Plan, has the support of the Traffic Commission, the Greater Harbor Committee of 200, and other organizations.

Between Los Feliz Boulevard and Exposition Boulevard, the new width has been tentatively set at eighty feet. South of Exposition Boulevard, to Ninety-fifth street, the width has been set at 100 feet.

South of Ninety-fifth street the county has started proceedings for the widening to 100 feet, and the installation of a forty-foot paved roadway.

At Anaheim Road, enough land will be acquired to permit the installation of a grade separation at some future date. South of Anaheim, the road will follow along Lomita Road, which 's to have a wider pavement. At Channel street, the Gaffey-street project starts, carrying the street into San Pedro. The Gaffey-street section is already under way, the ordinance of intention having been passed a number of weeks ago.

It is also planned to extend Vermont avenue into Lomita Road, so that a greater access to the harbor district will be created.

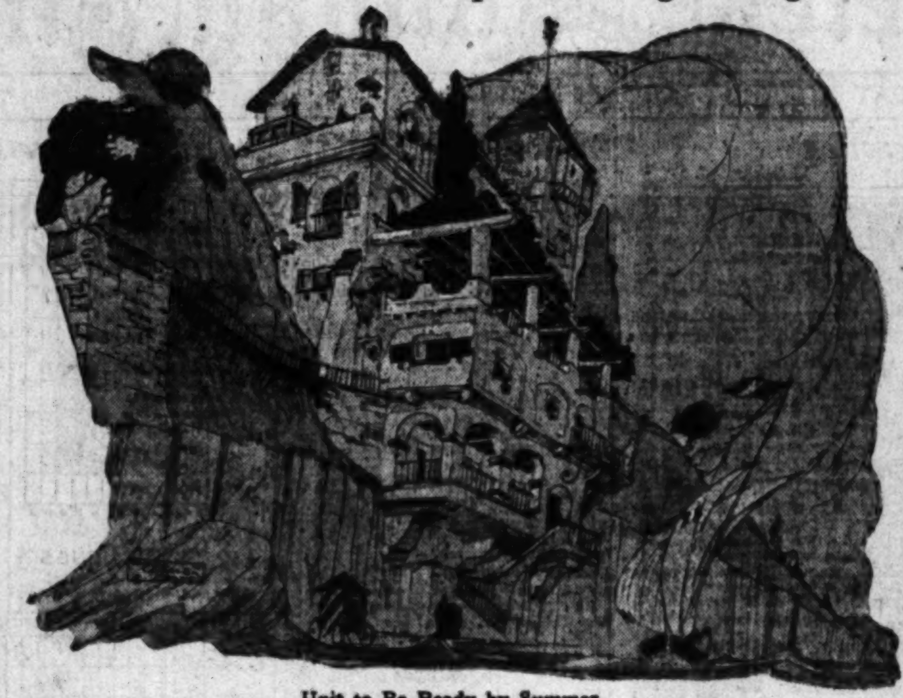
SEASIDE HOME TO BE BUILT ON CLIFF

House for Fairbanks to Represent Engineering Feat



Unit to Be Ready by Summer

PLANS are being rushed to have ready for occupancy by next summer the cliff house to be erected at Solano Beach by Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, United Artists film stars.

A short distance from the property at Rancho Santa Fe, which Doug is now developing, this sidehill house will serve as an adjunct to the main hacienda estate. It will be of cantilever construction, supporting itself on the sheer face of a cliff through the leverage of its own weight. Its designer, William Cameron Menzies, declares it will be one of the most unique engineering feats ever undertaken.

"This house," said Menzies, "will be of the Mediterranean style of architecture, taking its cue from homes that rim the Swiss and Italian lakes and the Mediterranean Sea. It will hang on the side of the cliff like a swallow's nest, and at high tide the ocean will pound at its base. Motor boats and yachts will discharge passengers at the foot of the stairs, and at low tide an ideal bathing beach will be available.

Increase in Home Ownership and Construction Shown in Building and Loan Report

Reflecting in terms of home-ownership and new construction one of the most prosperous years in the history of Los Angeles, and auguring another busy twelve months of home building for 1928, is the semi-annual financial statement and report of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, showing the status of that organization as of December 31, last.

The fact that a majority of the loans effected by the association were to make possible the financing of homes for residents, thrifty, but of moderate means, is in keeping with the promotion of home-ownership ideals followed by all building-and-loan bodies, declared Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary-manager of the organization.

The total amount placed in investment certificates was $4,558,593.49, representing an increase of more than $1,000,000 over the sum on December 31, 1926. The most recent statement shows $3,500,785 in outstanding loans on real estate, with an additional $489,531 in loans on shares and collateral. Assets of the association also included a total of $335,437 in cash on hand, as against $361,964 a year ago. An even larger increase was made in the bonds owned by the firm, the present holdings amounting to $255,796, or $169,000 more than it possessed at the close of the previous year.

Another emblem of the organization's prosperous condition, stated Beesemyer, is contained in the present figure of surplus and undivided profits, amounting to $60,961, almost double the $34,700 figure at the close of 1926, indicating that Guaranty stockholders also benefited by the association's success.

TWO LEASES REPORTED IN $480,000 SUM

Total of $400,000 Paid by Keller's, Inc., for West Seventh Street

Two leases calling for rental totaling $480,000 for space in buildings on West Seventh street and South Broadway were announced yesterday by the W. Ross Campbell Company, business-property brokers, who handled the two deals.

Involving a total rental of $400,000, the twenty-foot store, together with the second and third floors of the building at 516-518 West Seventh street, yesterday was leased to Keller's, Inc., for ten years by Mandel's, Inc., which firm leased the entire building last spring for thirty-five years.

Following the installation of a new store front and fixtures, the total cost of which is reported at $25,000, Keller's, Inc., will occupy the new store with a complete line of ladies' ready-to-wear goods. Negotiations between Mandel's, Inc., and Keller's, Inc., were completed by H. R. Bergh of the W. Ross Campbell Company. The new firm, headed by A. K. Keller, who for twelve years was manager for the Broadway Department Store, and Louis Borsons, will establish this store as the first of a chain which will eventually extend over the entire Pacific Coast.

A second lease covered the two stores at 324-326 South Broadway, which were leased to the Kline Clothing Company, credit clothiers, for six years. The total rental was reported at approximately $80,000. Michael F. Shannon, lessor, and the Kline Clothing Company, lessees, were represented by Albert E. Lee of the Campbell organization, who handled the transaction. The lessee, it it is said, will redecorate the exterior and interior of the stores at a cost of $20,000. The Kline company will occupy the premises March 1, 1928.

REPORTS DETAIL CITY'S PROGRESS

building construction, real estate activity during the year was slightly less than in 1926. Filings with the County Recorder of the principal real-estate instruments, such as deeds, mortgages, trust deeds, releases and reconveyances, totaled 405,623 in 1927, as compared to 411,337 in 1926, or a decline of 1.4 per cent, but somewhat above the figure for 1925. Following are the detailed monthly comparisons:

	1927	1926
January	32,493	33,004
February	31,380	31,449
March	39,341	38,344

October	31,806	34,216
November	31,479	32,702
December	31,210	32,613
Total	405,623	411,337

Analysis of the detailed figures of real estate filings indicates that activity has been quiet and that the process of payment on installment contracts entered into in 1923 is being continued as a digestive process of the boom of five years ago. Such activity as has taken place in 1927 has been of a selective nature, rather than general throughout the city.

PETROLEUM PRODUCTION

Petroleum production of Los Angeles basin fields during 1927 amounted to approximately 150,000,000 barrels, which is an increase of 4.9 per cent over last year and only slightly less than in 1925. The detailed monthly comparison for 1927 and 1926 is as follows:

	1927 (Barrels)	1926 (Barrels)

MONEY AND BANKING

Money and banking conditions were sound throughout 1927. Preliminary reports indicate that total deposits of Los Angeles banks will be $1,213,586,714, as of December 31, 1927. Money remained ample for legitimate needs throughout the year.

Bank clearings for the year amounted to $9,281,948,451, an increase of 5.2 per cent over 1926. During the third quarter declining tendencies developed, but since that time there has been some recovery. The detailed monthly comparison is shown below:

	1927	1926
January	$ 821,883,484	$ 737,906,814

RETAIL TRADE

Retail trade in Los Angeles, as measured by the volume of department store sales reported to the Federal Reserve Bank, will total about 5 per cent more than last year. Sales during two months, July and October, fell below last year, but increases in other months offset this and, although sales figures for December are not yet available, a net increase approximating 5 per cent appears probable for 1927. The percentage of increase or decrease in sales of six department stores in Los Angeles, compared to the same months of 1926 is shown below:

January	9.1
February	8.4
March	1.5
April	14.8
May	4.8
June	2.2
July	—3.3
August	10.7
September	7.6
October	—0.7
November	5.6

POSTAL RECEIPTS

Postal receipts, another index of business activity, amounted to $9,781,071 in 1927, compared to $9,089,918 in 1926, or an increase of 7.6 per cent. A portion of the increase of postal receipts for this year may have been caused by the inauguration of a mail order business in Los Angeles which was not in operation last year. Following is a comparison of the monthly figures for 1927 and 1926:

	1927	1926
January	$ 765,412	$ 697,248
February	737,527	649,848

FACT AND COMMENT

first-hand ideas of the magnitude of the city's harbor, and to be aware of its shipping importance. But summaries of port commerce have an informative interest apart from their statistical value.

Foreign commerce comprises exports to and imports from foreign lands. Domestic shipping is made up of commerce known as Hawaiian, intercoastal (trade with the Atlantic seaboard of this country,) and coastwise (trade with other Pacific Coast points of the United States.) Segregated records show the condition of each branch.

Aside from the satisfaction of knowing something of the enterprises furthering the welfare of the place in which one lives, such knowledge is conducive to increased interest in those endeavors and desire to aid them.

Homes and Prosperity

Last year went into the records as also an important home acquiring period in Los Angeles. Home building and buying here are barometrical of favorable conditions.

Increase of home owning has two sources from which to draw—increase of population and better realization that home possession is a good plan for many reasons. And those sources derive their effectiveness from community well-being.

A city of homes advances and safeguards essential factors of development.

It is to a city's advantage to be mindful of the fact that home owning and community prosperity confer reciprocal benefits.

Trade Opportunities

That admirable opportunities for increasing trade with Latin-American countries are presenting themselves was the recent statement of James H. Smiley, district manager of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, United States Department of Commerce.

Mr. Smiley, who is located here, specifically mentioned the port of Los Angeles as an especially advantageous shipping point in that regard. The importance of European, Far East and other international export and import business via Los Angeles Harbor was not overlooked. But as a factor meriting attention in extending the port's business he dwelt on opportunities afforded and desired by Latin-American countries for handling American merchandise.

It is a phase of commerce believed to be well worth looking into by manufacturers finding it to their benefit to use the port of Los Angeles in expanding their foreign business. Valuable statistical information regarding it is readily available.

With Australia

It is opportune to recall that in an interview recently given to The Times a visiting Australian journalist, well informed on the trade and finances of his country, told interesting details of the commerce between the United States and Australia, and advocated direct joint passenger and freight service between Los Angeles and great Australian ports.

His remarks on the subject were impressvie. Australian trade with this country is valued at about $175,000,000 a year, he pointed out.

Exports to Australia through the port of Los Angeles in 1926 had a valuation of $4,400,000, according to the latest available annual report from the Federal Commerce Bureau here.

Talking Points

"Low cost of raw material, excellent supply and efficiency of labor, unexcelled year-round working and living climate, resulting in low labor turnover, great and growing local markets, with distribution outlets by rail and ocean, which make tributary to this harbor all markets, inland, coastal, intercoastal and foreign."

These are an unusual combination of advantages stressed by Robert D. Cangster, manager of the industrial department, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, as reasons for extensive industrial development in the Los Angeles area. Mr. Sangster stated that these are the points that "sold" the Los Angeles area to the largest industries that have come to the Pacific Coast.

They are good talking points—the kind that can be counted on to interest manufacturers and other business men.

Optimistic hope becomes fact when based on such conditions.

Though she is past 105 years of age, Mrs. Lucy S. Chaffee, of West Berkshire, Vt., is still able to do light work around her farm.

APPRAISALS HIT HIGH MARK

Estimates Made by Members of Committee During Past Year Total More Than $7,500,000

Property valued at more than $7,500,000 has been appraised during the past year by members of the appraisal committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board, it was revealed by figures contained in a report of the Board's activities covering 1927.

Recognition by property owners of the importance of accurate appraisals of property is becoming more general, according to Richard C. Willis, chairman of the appraisal committee, in commenting on the amount of property being submitted to the board for valuation. "Establishment of the value of property by men qualified by study and experience to express an opinion is the means very often of an owner receiving a fair price for his holdings, where otherwise he might have been tempted by an offer much below their real worth, or of a prospective buyer paying more for property than sound investment practice would justify," Mr. Willis said.

Residence, business and industrial property, as well as agricultural lands, have been included in the list of properties on which values have been given by the board's appraisers during the year, Mr. Willis said.

HOSPITAL UNIT STEEL CLIMBING

Building Costing $8,000,000 Beginning to Take Shape

Structure Able to House 1768 Acute Ailment Sufferers

Osteopathic Department to be Ready for Use Soon

With about 55 per cent of the steel framework up, the $8,000,000 unit for acute cases being constructed at the Los Angeles County General Hospital, is taking form. Construction was started last March and it is expected that it will be completed in about two years.

The immensity of the building, designated the largest of its type west of Chicago, is shown by the following details regarding it:

Area of site, 405 feet by 670; forecourt to be 500 feet by 300, thirteen stories and two basements, will contain sixty-eight wards and almost 6000 rooms and be able to accommodate 1768 patients, thirty-one acres of floor space, 16,000,000 cubic feet of contents.

The great framework rising weblike back of the main buildings of the hospital, will require 12,000 tons of structural steel, almost as much as the combined amount of steel used in the new City Hall and the Hall of Justice. There are 817 structural columns with footings.

EXCELLENT EQUIPMENT

In addition to its complete hospital facilities, the unit will have excellent educational equipment for internes and nurses. There also will be an auditorium and nurses' classrooms.

The kitchen department will be able to supply 4000 persons at each meal.

The structure was designed by the Allied Architects' Association of Los Angeles. The excavating contract was awarded to Willard Warren, the foundation construction to the North Pacific Construction Company, and the steel construction to the Llewellyn Iron Works. The contract for the general work and one for the mechanical work still remain to be awarded.

OSTEOPATHIC UNIT

The completion of a few details will make the $500,000 osteopathic unit at the General Hospital ready for use in the near future. The structure, begun in the latter part of 1926, occupies a site 67 feet by 155, and is six stories high. It is connected with the main hospital unit by a bridge.

The osteopathic unit is of about 200 beds capacity and will be thoroughly equipped for osteopathic treatment.

The building was designed by William Davidson, chief mechanical engineer for Los Angeles county, with some subsequent revisions by County Architect Karl W. Muck. The general contract was awarded to I. Carroll, with several subcontracts let.

OTHER WORK

Architect Muck is preparing plans and specifications for $100,000 worth of alterations to the psychopathic section of the General Hospital.

A garbage disposal plant also is included in the hospital's building program.

CHURCH BEING PLANNED

Plans for a church building at Forty-second and Flower streets for the Sixth Church of Christ, Scientist, are being completed by Architect Charles H. Kyson. It will be of English-type architecture.

New Apartments for Hollywood During Year 97

During the year 1927, building permits were granted in Hollywood for seventy-nine apartment-houses costing $6,248,670, according to permit figures compiled by the Hollywood branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board.

While these seventy-nine apartment-houses are scattered over the entire Hollywood area, thirteen of the largest, costing nearly $2,000,000, are centrally located and north of Hollywood Boulevard; east of Western avenue and on or adjacent to Hollywood oBulevard, thirteen other apartment-houses cost approximately $1,500,000; south of Sunset in Central Hollywood, twenty-seven apartments, represent about $1,000,000 in value, while the vicinity of Western avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard gained eight apartments and one hotel valued at $955,000.

West Hollywood within the city limits has seventeen new apartment-houses costing $865,670. That part of West Hollywood in the county has eleven new apartment-houses and two large courts representing values from $25,000 to $400,000 each.

Sales in Tract Exceed 1926 by Third Increase

In reviewing the year's sales activity, Bert Farrar, developer of Chevy Chase, stated that Chevy Chase sales for the year had exceeded 1926 by 30 per cent.

It is Mr. Farrar's opinion that 1928 will far exceed in sales the year 1927, pointing out that Chevy Chase has now become established as one of the outstanding, beautiful communities in the Southland and that, together with the home-building activity which has been greatly stimulated in the last months and the many plans before their board of supervising architects, presages a very unusual building campaign in the spring.

COST SET AT $265,000

HUNTINGTON PARK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Figures given out at the office of City Engineer Alton Bean show that the total cost of the Pacific Boulevard improvements will be approximately $265,000. This includes the ornamental lighting system, installation of paving and other improvements. The contract for the paving awarded the Los Angeles Paving Company was $122,940, which is the largest of the contracts awarded.

PLANS PREPARED

Plans and specifications for two three-story apartment buildings, one to be located at the northeast corner of Hoover street and Melrose avenue, and the other at the northwest corner of Lucille avenue and Melrose, have been prepared by Architect William L. Campbell. The buildings, which are to be of Spanish type of architecture, are to cost approximately $65,000 each.

AUTO BUILDING TO RISE

A two-story automobile sales and service building is to be constructed at Colorado and Fifth streets, Santa Monica, for Goodrum & Vincent. The structure will represent a total investment of $150,000, it was stated, and the building itself $75,000. Vernon George, Beverly Hills, prepared the plans and specifications. The construction contract has been awarded to H. M. Roth Construction Company.

APARTMENT PLANS MADE

Plans have been prepared by C. Waldo Powers for a three-story apartment building at 447 Hartford avenue for H. Haldorson.

BUILDING BRACED AS YEAR OPENS

Surpassing the figures recorded for the same number of days in the comparatively weak building month of December, 1927, city building permit valuations for the first four days of 1928 reached a total of $1,364,122, according to the city building department. December, same number of days, registered $1,152,809.

The outstanding permits were for a $150,000 apartment-house at 432 South New Hampshire street, and a $100,000 apartment at 5870 Franklin avenue. The current year did not get off to as good a start as 1927, as is shown by the following figures:

	Permits	Valuation
January, 1928...	473	$1,364,122
January, 1927...	512	1,904,998
December, 1927..	511	1,152,809

APARTMENT-HOUSE GOING UP

Joseph Kozinsky will build a two-story apartment building at 111 South St. Louis street from plans by Louis Weiner.

PLANS BEING PREPARED

Architect H. Percy Sharpe and Henry Campbell, associate, are preparing preliminary plans for a four-story apartment building to be erected on Third street near Beaudry, for L. E. Campbell and associates. The building is to cost approximately $150,000. It is to be located on a site 87 by 110 feet and will contain sixty-nine apartments, lobby, etc.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

ZONING ASSURES MODEL PROJECT

City Planning Being Applied to North Hollywood

Chamber Branch Organized to Meet Development

Officials Hold Valley Has 1,500,000 Capacity

Planning and zoning of the San Fernando Valley is being carried out by the City Planning Commission and County Regional Zoning Commission on the basis that there is room in the valley for a population of 1,500,000.

Announcement has been made that the Studio City area in North Hollywood, around which the activities center, is the only territory of that magnitude, confronted with rapid development, where the planning and zoning commissions have been enabled to get on the ground first and plan the boulevards and streets, and do the zoning ahead of the growth. As a result when fully developed North Hollywood will be a model city, Harry E. Jones said yesterday.

Already 403.90 miles of paving have been completed, in process of building or ready for contract, and 1150 miles of streets have been dedicated in the valley.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Recognizing that rapid growth must follow the movement of the Sennett, Christie, Famous Players-Lasky, Universal, First National and other major motion-picture production plants into the valley, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce yesterday announced that it had opened a San Fernando Valley branch, with F. P. O'Brien in charge. A thorough industrial survey of the valley under the direction of Mr. O'Brien will be made at once. It is the intention of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce to work hand in hand with the valley in obtaining suitable industrial enterprises for the North Hollywood area.

Application has been made for a branch postoffice, to be located at Studio City, the center of the $20,000,000 motion-picture production development. With the completion of the Mack Sennett studio and the building of other major plants, it is estimated that 3000 persons will be employed in Studio City area alone. Sixteen of the eighteen buildings comprising the Sennett layout are now well under way, with a completion date set for March 1. Improvement of the Christie Film Company's site at Studio City will begin this month.

NEW TELEPHONE EXCHANGE

To provide adequate facilities for the increased population which will follow the $20,000,000 Studio City development, the Pacific Telegraph and Telephone Company announced yesterday that it would build a $165,000 central exchange in the North Hollywood district and have it in operation by July 1. M. M. Parrett, valley manager for the telephone company, stated yesterday that in 1923 there were only 200 telephones in the North Hollywood district. In 1927 there were 1700 phones in operation, 800 of which were added during the last year. Installation of the majority of these phones followed the Studio City announcement.

Indicating rapid growth since the movement of the studios out Ventura Boulevard started, W. G. H. Russell, manager of the Southern California Gas Company in the San Fernando Valley, stated yesterday that seventy miles of new street connections and thirty miles of service connections were laid in 1927. Mr. Russell added that 1700 meters were installed in new homes during the last year.

That the Studio City activity has increased traffic in the valley is indicated by a report from the San Fernando Valley police division, which shows that 6610 arrests were made in 1927, as compared with 1760 for 1926. Police officials declared that 80 per cent of the arrests were for traffic violations, and that the increase of more than 300 per cent was caused by new traffic created by the Sennett, Christie, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Famous Players-Lasky activities in the new film community.

PORT TRADE SETS MARK FOR MONTH

Commerce Totals $75,000,000, According to Figures by Federal Department

According to preliminary figures compiled by the department of foreign commerce and shipping of the Chamber of Commerce, the last month of 1927 gave a good account of itself in water commerce through the port of Los Angeles, breaking all records for value of exports to foreign countries and showing a large increase over the corresponding month of last year.

The total commerce of the port for the month amounted to 2,026,000 tons with a valuation of $75,500,000, compared with 1,944,000 tons for December a year ago, valued at $72,000,000.

Practically all of this increase was accounted for in exports to other countries. In the month just closed exports totaled nearly 606,000 tons, valued at $12,115,000. This was an increase of nearly 200,000 tons over December of last year and an increase of $3,150,000 in value.

Shipments to Hawaii, while a little less in volume, were more than double in value of those of a year ago, amounting to $1,125,000 for the month. Imports from foreign countries in domestic commerce varied little from those of December, 1926.

Considering the decrease in the price of oil this year as compared with last the showing of greater foreign markets is very gratifying, the increase being nearly 50 per cent in volume and approximately 35 per cent in value.

Two Districts Ask Annexation to South Gate

SOUTH GATE, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) With both Home Gardens and Magnolia Park voting favorably on annexation to this city during last December, the population, the area and the assessed property valuations of this city will be doubled during the next few weeks, when the two annexations are officially adopted.

South Gate already has a population of between 9000 and 10,000, it is estimated, and several hundred new families will probably be added this year, principally due to Firestone Tire and Rubber Company's Pacific Coast plant, which will be put in operation during the summer.

Record Avocado Crop Predicted for La Habra

LA HABRA, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Picking and shipping of the La Habra avocado crop began this week and the growers are looking forward to their most successful season. The growers have organized and the marketing of the fruit is to be handled in a systematic manner. More than 200 cars of vegetables were shipped from La Habra packing plants in 1927. Tomatoes and rhubarb were the principal vegetables sent to market from here.

Much progress in persimmon growing is expected this year. Considerable new acreage has been planted to the fruit and marketing conditions are said to have improved.

Improvements in the year just closed included the installation of four-inch water pipes, at a cost of $20,000. Since the incorporation of La Habra three years ago, building permits have totaled $140,000. Connection of all La Habra homes with a $55,000 sewer system is now being completed.

AVIATION HELD REALTY BOON

Airplanes Predicted to Have as Great Effect as Did Steam Railroads

"Draw a great circle 150 miles in diameter around any of the larger cities of the United States and you have inclosed a vast area in which a general advance in realty values may be predicted," says P. G. Johnson, president of the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., in speaking of the effect of aviation on realty values.

"The nation as a whole will feel the stimulus of advancing realty values. Even the desert sections will profit. All because time and distance have been shortened by the advent of the airplane and the ratio of accessibility has been increased," said Mr. Johnson.

"The airplane makes all the nation just one great neighborhood. It will affect the value of real estate in its turn just as did the steam railroad, the street railway and the automobile."

Garage Rising on Corner Site

With the pouring of concrete started last week for the roof of the new $450,000 garage being erected at the northwest corner of Eighth street and Normandie avenue, the structure will be ready for the opening on March 1, next, according to officials of the Rozel Garage Company, who will own and operate the institution.

The garage, to be known as the Rozel, will be of Class A concrete construction, six stories high and of Gothic architecture. It is situated in the heart of the Wilshire district and is being built primarily to meet the demands of motorists who reside in the many apartment houses, apartment hotels, hotels and private homes of that vicinity. At present it is said that private and public garages in many instances are from three to ten blocks away from the homes of the autoists.

Industry Group Outlook Bright

A survey of the real estate condition in the United States reveals a generally stabilized condition, according to W. H. Daum, chairman of the industrial division of the California Real Estate Association.

The number of real estate transfers as recorded for the country as a whole has been substantially equal to those in 1926, Daum states, and the west coast, particularly California, shows a decided improvement With the market steady last year, Daum stated he saw no reason why it should not improve with the new year.

BROKERS OF REDDING SEEK PLANNING BODY

Members of the real estate fraternity in Redding are planning to ask members of the City Council to appoint a city planning committee to assist them in planning for future growth of the city, according to Grover E. Oaks, northern regional vice-president of the California Real Estate Association.

Greater Value in Permits for 1928 Predicted

HUNTINGTON PARK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—With Huntington Park building valuations for 1927 surpassing those of 1926 or 1925, indications are that the values for the new year will be even greater than those of the past three years, as several large buildings are already contemplated for the early part of 1926. The values last year reached a total of $1,583,984; those of 1926 were $1,429,713, and of 1925, $1,263,410.

Noticeable among the permits of last year, were those issued for residential construction. More than 300 permits were granted at the building inspector's office for new residences, duplexes, courts and apartment-houses, the total valuation of these being more than $900,000, or more than half of the total valuations for the past year.

Permits for new homes averaged more than one for each working day of the year.

San Clemente Looks Toward Incorporation

SAN CLEMENTE, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The new year should see even greater strides in the development of San Clemente, the Spanish village near the southern boundary of Orange county, than were taken by the city in 1927, in the opinion of Ole Hanson, founder and builder of the village.

San Clemente is little more than two years old, and incorporation already is being seriously considered.

The $5,000,000 mark in sales has been passed, it was revealed today, and this amount does not include resales, which would swell the total considerably. Of the $5,000,000 more than $2,500,000 is represented in purchases of property made in the year just closed, Hanson said.

William Ayers, chief engineer for Hanson, said that more than twelve miles of streets were completed, fifteen miles of water mains installed, and 125,000 square feet of tile sidewalk laid in 1927.

COUNTRY CLUB PLANS LARGE IMPROVEMENTS

CAHUENGA PARK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Improvements to total more than $200,000, including a tennis court, swimming pool, golf course and riding stables, are part of a program of the Whitley Park Country Club, it is announced here this week by officials of the organization. More than $50,000 already has been spent in the building of villa sites and other improvements. The new clubhouse is now being laid out by surveyors and engineers. The property is in the Ventura Boulevard section near here, under the shadows of the northern slopes of the Santa Monica Mountains.

CAMPUS UNITS RISING FAST

Westwood Hills Building Ahead of Schedule; Survey of Needed Housing Under Way

Practical assurance that the new University of California campus at Westwood Hills will be opened at the time announced by university officials is shown in the report this week that construction is now considerably ahead of schedule.

To assure a proper appreciation of the number of structures which will be required to house properly the students and families which will be brought to the area at the time the university opens, the Janss Investment Company is now completing a survey of the probable number of structures needed.

According to Edwin Janss, there are fewer new homes for sale in the Westwood Hills area than ever before, although new construction is increasing at a rate several times greater than the general average for Los Angeles city.

"At the close of 1927," Mr. Janss said, "the condition of the home market in Westwood Hills is such that a shortage even to care for natural demand, is in sight, due to increased buying, showing an average increase during the past six months of 33 per cent. In addition to caring for this natural demand during 1928, it will be necessary to take into consideration the additional population which will be influenced by the university.

"Information in our office, based on completed value, indicates that approximately $815,000 worth of homes will be started in the area of Westwood Hills between Beverly and Wilshire boulevards during the next ninety days. This does not include any structures in the districts between Wilshire and Santa Monica boulevards, and between Santa Monica and Pico boulevards."

Rapid Progress Made on Building Program

SALES HIT THREE MILLION

Year Records Large Amount as Granada Develops in San Fernando Valley

During the year of 1927 $3,000,000 worth of property was sold in the transition of the famous Sunshine ranch into the new city of Granada, according to Otto G. Wildey, secretary of the Edwards & Wildey Company, developers of this community in the San Fernando Valley.

"Building operations at Granada were started less than a year ago," declares Mr. Wildey. "The first house was commenced on March 6, 1927, and since that date, approximately 100 homes have been sold. A few of these are yet in the process of construction, but most of them have been finished and occupied.

"The desirability of these income homes, together with the restrictions with which the enterprise is safeguarded, has attracted an unusually fine type of residents. The company pavilion is already the center of much social activity. The women of Granada have organized a women's club, which is working efficiently and harmoniously toward the erection of an up-to-date clubhouse in the near future.

"The recent acquisition of a new school site in Granada by the Los Angeles Board of Education is another progressive step which augurs well for the future educational needs of this growing community. Plans are now under way to develop this school center. The first unit of a proposed group of buildings will be an auditorium, work on which is to begin at once. When completed, this building will be a valuable aid to the development of the social, religious and educational life of Granada."

Sale of Homes and Tract Sites Hits $1,500,000

In Viewpark, residential project of the Los Angeles Investment Company, more than $1,500,000 worth of homes and home sites has been sold during the last few months, according to C. E. Culberson, sales manager.

"This continuous demand for the homesites and homes of Viewpark," he said, "is largely responsible for making 1927 one of the biggest years in the history of the company.

Viewpark is on the eastern slopes of the hills just west of the intersection of Angeles Mesa Drive and West Vernon avenue. It is improved with ornamental electroliers and underground conduits and is carefully restricted to preserve the view from each hime site.

That portion around which the rest of Viewpark focuses is now on sale and known as University unit. It contains the community playground, Monteith Park and the community shopping center restricted to five building sites.

Comstock, incoming vice-president. Hal G. Hotchkiss, president of the California Real Estate Association, was notified that the new board was formed as a Christmas gift to the new administration.

Brokers of Ukiah, Willits and Fort Bragg will be invited to enter the new board. L. L. Hopkins, broker of Ukiah, was instrumental in arranging for the charter meeting.

Suggestions have been made by President Edward Morris of the Redwood Empire Association that a plan be formulated whereby that organization would be made the co-ordinating unit for real estate organizations in Marin, Sonoma, Napa, Lake, Mendocino, Humboldt and Del Norte counties as a district organization for California realtors.

New Buildings in Prospect at Newport Beach

NEWPORT BEACH, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Building development in Newport Beach during the last year, that brought the total for permits over the $1,000,000 mark for the first time in history, has gained sufficient momentum to start a program of community improvement during the coming year that will result in the construction of a number of new business structures.

Plans that have been reported to be under contemplation include the construction of a new building by Mrs. M. MacCollough of London, Eng., on her property at the corner of Main street and Central avenue, where the Green Dragon Cafe is situated. She is said to have refused to renew the lease on the property. A new marine hardware store may rise on the northwest corner of Main street and Central avenue, according to plans contemplated by Fred Story, owner of the Balboa marine hardware store on the bay front.

The prospects that a new hotel may be secured for the beach sufficient to accommodate people who come here for the water sports and on business ventures are held to be improved. Through the Chamber of Commerce efforts are being made to induce financial interests to erect a hotel here.

COUNTY REALTY FILINGS 553,051

Year Shows Favorably With Record Set in 1926

Well-Sustained Activity Cited in Tabulation

Recordings Reach 1825 Per Day During Period

Although it was expected that 1927 would prove to be the largest year in the history of Los Angeles county in volume of instruments recorded, the year just closed fell below 1926 by just thirty-two filings, and the latter year continues to hold rank as the record year, according to figures compiled and released by Louis B. Stribling, superintendent of the plant department of the Security Title Insurance and Guarantee Company.

During 1926, 553,083 instruments were filed with the County Recorder, while in 1927 the total was 553,051. The decline in filings for the last year amounts to less than three recordings per month and the total for the year is regarded by officials of the title company as being extremely satisfactory, and as reflecting well-sustained realty activity throughout the county.

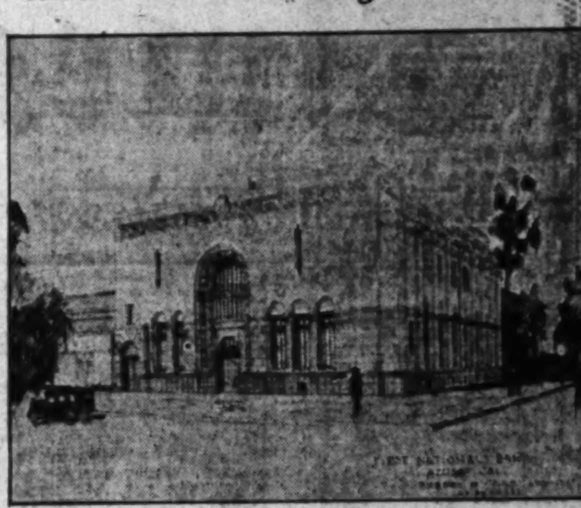
With 303 working days last year, filings have averaged 1825 per day. At the end of November, the record for the first eleven months of the year very closely approximated that of the same period of 1926, but owing to a slight decline in the December filings, which closed with a total of 44,882 recordings, 1927 fell slightly short of the high record established during the preceding year.

Over a five-year period, beginning with 1922, recordings have shown sustained gains, the only loss of any importance occurring in 1924, which showed a drop of a little over 11,000 recordings from the previous year.

The following tabulation gives the yearly totals of filings from 1922 to 1927, inclusive:

1922, 388,787; 1923, 486,468; 1924, 475,236; 1925, 535,230; 1926, 553,083; 1927, 553,051.

Azusa Bank Building Announced



Unit to Rise Soon

of about 65 per cent bringing the half-year to $102,677 as against $93,275 for 1926. The total for 1927 stands around $170,894 as against $150,714 for 1926. Other important building items during the year just closed were a $35,000 packing-house for the Porterville Citrus Association, $17,000 garage, $16,000 new postoffice building, for which equipment represented an outlay of $6000, and a receiving shed at $2500 for the Sun-Maid Raisin Company. The tax rate was fixed at the lowest point in the community's history, being set at $1.20 for old Porterville and $1.08 for new Porterville.

The Leffingwell Laboratories, with home offices in Whittier, established a branch in Porterville. Cattlemen experienced the best season since the World War with prospects especially promising.

AT EXETER

As in 1926, new building in Exeter for 1927 was chiefly outside the city limits, for which no permits were issued, and consisted chiefly of improvements to packing-houses. About $75,000 was spent in this way, while within the city proper around $40,000 was devoted to construction, making a total of $115,000 for the district. Two new packing-houses were constructed outside the city. The largest single item within the city was an $8000 parsonage for the Baptist Church.

A pleasing gift to the city by the American Legion was an ornamental redwood archway at the southern entrance, calling attention to Exeter's geographical position in relation to Sequoia National Park. The city trustees took action to lease the site of the Exeter Golf Club which will be used as a municipal airport.

The tax rate was set at $1.41, one cent less than last year.

The Blue Ridge, or Yokohl Valley road, an important link in the trans-Sierra highway, was completed and dedicated. This will connect the San Joaquin Valley with Balch Park, one of California's newest redwood playgrounds, and it is expected that eventually the road will tie in with one across the Sierras and the Lincoln Highway.

Considerable activity was reported in real estate.

CONSTRUCTION AT LINDSAY

Considerable construction activity marked 1927 in Lindsay and the surrounding district. Within the city proper, construction permits totaled around $30,000. The Lincoln grammar school was remodeled at a cost of $10,000, while $15,000 was spent in remodeling the Hotel Lindsay.

Packing-house row includes thirteen citrus houses, two grape and two olive. The district also has an olive oil plant. The Lindsay Farm Bureau, American Fruit Growers' Association and Lindsay Co-operative all enlarged storage capacity. W. A. Bohland erected a $25,000 country place. Development was started on a new city park of twenty acres outside the city. Landscaping plans were prepared by an artist, a well was drilled and a 200,000 gallon tank added to augment the city water supply and furnish water for park development. Considerable new citrus acreage was planted, mostly by local growers. The tax rate was set at $1.35, the lowest since incorporation of the city sixteen years ago.

The Southern California Edison Company spent $202,000 in Lindsay district during the year. As part of the new 220,000 volt line from Big Creek to Los Angeles, what is said to be the longest span in the world was strung over Lewis Creek, the distance from hill top to hill top being more than a mile.

Owing to the constantly increasing volume of business being handled by the Frank Meline Company at Long Beach, announcement was made that a new office to represent the company's interests was opened there this week at the intersection of First street and American avenue.

A force of more than 150 persons will be employed to take care of the various Meline interests. H. B. Eahelman has been appointed general manager. The new Long Beach offices will conduct a general brokerage business and also represent all of Meline subdivisions, including Castellammare, California Riviera and Brentwood. Separte headquarters will be established for the sale of Capistrano Beach, the development which the company will open the 22nd inst.

SEVEN CARS EGGS SENT OUT WEEKLY

Fontana Asserts Record as Southland Chicken Center; Poultry Plants Total 700

FONTANA, Jan. 7.—Shipping more than 1,000,000 eggs—seven and one-half carloads—to market every week, this community has broken all records and established itself as the leading poultry center of Southern California, according to figures released today by the poultry department of the Fontana Farms Company.

As there are 700 poultry plants here, with almost 500,000 laying hens, producing in excess of 150,000 eggs a day, this community has established an enviable record for itself in the past eight years, since 1919, when there were only six families and 3000 chickens.

The farms company poultry department lists a 20 per cent increase for 1927, with more than 100 new poultry plants being added, and an even greater increase is predicted for this year from the huge number of baby chicks that will be hatched. At the hatchery of the farms company, the incubators will turn out 500,000 baby chicks to add to the poultry population, and other Fontana hatcheries will add at least 250,000 to that number. All chicks are of the famous Fontana strain of White Leghorns and virtually all will be used by local poultry plants.

Approximately $1,000,000 was received by local ranchers for eggs produced in 1927, and it is estimated that at least $500,000 will be added to that amount this year. Virtually every rancher here is making big flock increases and many are more than doubling the size of their flocks.

Class Prospects Declared Bright

Based on the success of classes held last term the University of California extension division looks for a bright 1928 in its real-estate classes, it was announced yesterday at headquarters of the division in the Hill-street Building.

Appraisals, given by John P. Kennedy, appraisal engineer, drew large representations from leading real-estate firms, the legal department of the city of Los Angeles, the Baker Iron Works, mortgage companies and building and loan associations. This course will be repeated Tuesday, the 17th inst., at 855 North Vermont avenue.

Other courses of interest to real-estate men are law relating to real estate, salesmanship, real-estate principles and practice.

Norco Swimming Pools Finished

The holidays interfered only briefly with work on the Norconian resort project, according to Rex B. Clark, president of the North Corona Land Company, who is developing this resort two hours east of Los Angeles.

The fifty-eight-acre lake is being filled, though with the present pumping schedule it wil take about sixty days to bring the water to its proper level. More than a mile of specially constructed twelve-inch wood pipe has been laid to connect the mineral hot springs with the Norconian bath houses. Both swimming pools are completed.

The cement for these two pools was poured at one operation, the work continuing without interruption for thirty hours.

MORE CABLE FOR ALHAMBRA

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company is to begin work on the laying of hollow-tile conduits and the placing of telephone cable in the southeast section of the Alhambra exchange area along Garvey avenue, about February. More than $26,430 will be expended on the laying of 2300 feet of conduit and the placing of 2400 feet of telephone cable underground.

DIGNITY MARKED IN SMALL HOME

Picturesqueness Possible in Wayside Type

Roof Lines, Second Floor and Windows Featured

Dwelling Could Be Erected at $5000 Cost

BY THEODORE A. KOETZLI

The effort for the picturesque does not always result happily, as the bizarre and grotesque are just around the corner and in the work of unskilled hands are quite apt to creep in instead.

There are circumstances and purposes for which the latter qualities are justified, say possibly for a shop or temporary sales office, to which it is necessary to call the public attention by heroic methods. But in planning a home, permanence, dignity and responsibility are necessary notes. Without those elements, the design soon becomes tiresome and irritating.

Nothing of these undesirable elements is evident in the sketch of the little English wayside home illustrated today.

To quote the architect's comment: "It is a picturesque solution of the small two-story house. These so often turn out to be boxes, like a house of blocks, one cube above another, but here the broken roof lines, the overhung second floor and the large bay windows all help to break up the forced symmetry and give quaintness and charm to what in unskilled hands would be tiresome sameness. The plan, too, is full of good features, but the large windows are particularly engaging, for they look well both inside and out, which cannot always be said of the cavernous openings glorified by the trade name of studio windows, so often perpetrated in the houses of today."

The design has the further advantage of providing a maximum of space, light and air, on a very small lot, as the ground occupied will be only about 32x24 feet. There are about 1500 square feet of floor area and the building cost can probably be kept within $5000. The design is one prepared for the Allied Architects' Association.

Hotel Addition Steel Going Up

Much progress is being made on the erection of steel for the framework of the $3,600,000 addition to the Biltmore Hotel and the work is to be completed February 1, according to the Scofield-Engineering Construction Company which is erecting the structure.

It was explained by the contractors that Gladding, McBean & Co., will make first deliveries on terra cotta, face brick, roof and hollow tile, on the 15th inst. Although the material will not be used immediately on delivery, it was pointed out that it was desired to have the material on hand ahead of schedule, to speed up work in hope of having the structure completed before September 30, next, the date set.

Exchanges Hit $300,000 Total

T. J. Dillon, exchange specialist with the Frank Meline Company, Beverly Hills office, reports having closed over $300,000 in exchanges and has several large deals now pending which he expects to close in the near future.

Late deals include the sale of a $100,000 Hollywood court, the sale of $50,000 in building lots, a motion-picture theater and business block valued at $75,000 on Wilshire Boulevard in West Los Angeles, a $35,000 Beverly Hills residence, a $35,000 Beverly Hills duplex, and $14,000 residential lot. Mr. Dillon says that all indications point to a very active realty market during the present year.

NEW HOMES FOR TRACT During Year 79

Total of $750,000 Spent on New Dwellings During 1921 in Moreno Highlands

Seventy-six homes with a total valuation exceeding $750,000 were built or started at Moreno Highlands during 1927, it was revealed today by W. E. Dimmick of Strong Dickinson, developers of Moreno Highlands.

Ground also will be broken for nine homes within the next three weeks, Mr. Dimmick disclosed, which will come very near setting a record for building activity in the Silver Lake district of Moreno Highlands.

"The new building figures bring the total value of homes built at Moreno Highlands above $2,000,000," said Mr. Dimmick. "With a total of 121 homes, it means the average residence in Moreno Highlands cost around $12,500, not including the value of the land.

"At least 35 per cent of the homes now under construction here, we learned from the building permits, are being erected for professional men. After talking with several doctors I learned why there seemed to be a definite move on the part of the medical fraternity to live in this district. Recently all the major hospitals have moved in this direction."

WAREHOUSE CHANGED INTO BANQUET HALL

With one of their large mill warehouses converted almost overnight into a spacious banquet and ballroom, hung with holiday decorations and flooded with varicolored lights, officials of the Monolith Portland Cement and Monolith Portland Midwest companies, headed by Coy Burnett, president, entertained more than 400 members of the various branches of the organization at their first annual mill banquet at Monolith, last week. A corps of fifty waiters from Los Angeles served an elaborate turkey dinner, after which a number of the Monolith officials spoke briefly.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Question: What is the approximate cost of building a substantially constructed, four-story and full basement, Class C brick apartment building that will cover a site of 50x150 feet? The structure to contain many built-in features, electric refrigeration, steam heating, sound proof walls and other approved features?

Answer: Cubic foot content governs the approximate cost estimated. Apartment buildings vary from 30 to 50 cents per cubic foot. The structure in question should cost between $175,000 and $185,000, including a fair profit for the contractor. When planning such a project, it is advisable to first secure the services of a certified architect who specializes in apartment-house designing. After having plans prepared to your entire satisfaction, then select five or six reliable contractors to submit proposals to build it. The contractor you select should, more or less, be experienced in this type of construction, for many well-planned structures are often times "utterly ruined" by contractors of questionable skill and experience. Do not take bids from any contractor to whom you would not award the contract if he is the low bidder. This is not fair to him, for he spends several hundred dollars and considerable time in figuring the project and should be awarded the contract if he is the low bidder. When the contract is awarded request the contractor to furnish a faithful performance and completion bond, in addition to a labor and material bond, so if the contractor should falter and not complete the contract and pay all the bills against the project, you will be protected from any unexpected financial losses. Before proceeding further with this project, communicate with this department and we will be pleased to assist you.

Q.: What is the best width of sheathing to use in the construction of a wood frame and stucco residence?

A.: It is advisable to use sheathing that is not less than six inches in width and not more than eight inches in width, dress on one or both sides to a thickness of thirteen-sixteenths of an inch, and securely nailed with 8d nails.

Q.: What is the proper way to place sheathing for a wood frame and stucco exterior residence?

A.: Sheathing should be laid horizontally across the wall studs, and nailed at each stud with not less than two 8d nails. Sheathing should not be laid diagonally across the studs. Test panels erected by the Bureau of Standards demonstrated conclusively that diagonal sheathing tends to crack the overlaying stucco by setting up strains in the supporting frame. This condition is undoubtedly due to the shrinkage of the sheathing, or even perhaps the studs, and whatever benefit may be anticipated from the diagonally placed sheathing is offset by the shrinkage effect.. Diagonal sheathing is also less economical than horizontal sheathing, both in labor and material costs.

Q.: Is it permissible to make alterations and changes to an old apartment building, even though the California Housing Act can not be followed?

A.: Under certain conditions and circumstances it will be permissible to alter an existing structure even though it may not fully comply with the State law, provided, however, that the changes will improve the living conditions for the occupants.

FIFTH UNIT BOOKED TO OPEN TODAY

Last Part of Montebello Park to be Offered by Ransom Corporation

Following the greatest sales year in its history, the fifth and last unit of Montebello Park south of Whittier Boulevard will be placed on the market today, according to announcement made by C. M. Hamilton, sales manager for the J. B. Ransom Corporation properties.

Opening of Unit No. 5 comes at a time when Pacific-Goodrich workers and their families are beginning to arrive in Los Angeles from Akron, O., to settle here preparatory to the opening of the rubber plant, adjoining Montebello Park, on March 1. Many of these newcomers into the Los Angeles industrial field are already established in homes in Montebello Park, while the Ransom Corporation has been in receipt of inquiries as to housing facilities for other workers reaching the city daily, it was announced.

Owing to greatly increased business in Montebello Park two auditoriums will handle the visitors. The main auditorium is situated at Whittier Boulevard and Garfield avenue, while the Ninth-street auditorium will be opened in charge of O C. Lowe, former branch manager who has been appointed division manager. Walter Sheehan, industrial expert, will be the lecturer.

Real Estate and Building Law

[This department, which is conducted through the courtesy of the Legal Department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, is at the service of Times readers. Questions, however, should be addressed to the Publicity Department of the above-mentioned firm at its offices at 712 South Spring street and not to The Times.—Editor's note.]

Question: I exchanged farm for city lots. After deal was closed, I find that seller never had recorded title to lots which had no taxes paid on them since 1887. Seller later agreed to repurchase them. What can I do? I have nothing out of the transaction.

Answer: You may rescind the exchange and recover your property. If that has been sold, you may recover damages from the other party. We would advise seeing the real estate commissioner, if a broker was involved in the transaction.

Q.: There seems to be a lot of dispute about the proper method of adjusting taxes. Please give us the law on this.

A.: There is no law governing the adjustment of taxes between a seller and buyer. It is a matter of contract between the parties. Where the contract provides for pro-rating of taxes without fixing date, it is more equitable to adjust as of July 1, as that is the beginning of the fiscal year, although taxes are a lien on the first Monday of March previous.

Q.: If property is purchased as John Doe and Ina Doe, undivided half interest, can wife will her interest to her children by former marriage?

A.: Such a deed would place the grantees in the presumptive position of tenant in common, each owning an undivided one-half interest. Therefore the wife could make such disposition of the one-half as she deemed advisable.

Q.: I purchased lots on installment plan and was to get a deed and certificate of title. Payments are all made and seller has not given certificate. Finally wrote the State Real Estate Commissioner, and seller then advised that title company said title was defective. Seller wants me to exchange for other lots. What could I do?

A.: If the propesed exchange is not acceptable, you may rescind the contract and recover from the seller the amount you have paid.

THREE ROOF TYPES CITED

The roofs of American homes present many varied and interesting styles, but a study of them will reveal that they all fall within four general classifications. Even of these four, one has recently fallen more or less into disuse.

The four types appearing in the United States are the Mansard, the gable, the gambrel and the hip roofs, with numberless variations and combinations suited to particular styles of architecture.

The Mansard roof (named for Francois Mansard, a seventeenth century French architect) has fortunately lost its popular appeal because of its ungainly appearance. Its chief advantage was in its square shape which permitted the construction of square full-sized rooms under the roof.

The gabled roof is English in its style, though it has been widely adopted in this country. Too often in America we are wont to use many gables, thus producing a jumbled effect wholly undesirable. The beauty of this wall-hugging roof lies in its simplicity which should whenever and wherever possible be maintained.

The gambrel roof, which in its simplest form is often to be found on barns, can be adapted with admirable results to certain types of American architecture. The gambrel, like the gable roof, has steep slopes which shed the snow and rain, but because of the two slopes or angles it secures an advantage over the gable roof in increased attic space so useful in the American home.

The hip roof is experiencing an era of popularity due to the bungalow type of house that has become so prevalent in modern American communities. The hip roof has four sides—two of which extend laterally from the ridge beam while the other two sides extend from the ends of this beam. With this type of roof the thatched effect is easily obtainable.

TORRANCE TO HAVE NEW TELEPHONE UNIT

A new telephone central office and equipment has been projected in Torrance by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Work will be started soon with the construction of the building on the east side of Sartori street, north of El Prado. More than $46,500 is to be expended on the project, which will be ready for service by August.

HOME HELD CONCERN'S BEST

Declared to be one of the finest homes constructed by the Lincoln Mortgage Company, the new ten-room exhibition home on Walden Drive in Beverly Hills is nearing completion with only the final interior touches to be added by the decorators.

The home will be opened to the public, completely furnished, about February 1, according to Frank Frerichs, sales manager of the building concern.

Interior decoration under the direction of Arthur E. Clavell is progressing rapidly and is transforming the Spanish home into a home-like residence. Unusual color schemes are being incorporated in various rooms, which, although entirely in keeping with the true Spanish feeling, will give the home a very distinctive atmosphere.

Barker Brothers who will furnish the model home, have been working with the decorators constantly, and have already selected the furniture which will be placed in the house. From all indications, the home, when completely furnished, will be one of the most representative of the true Spanish-type homes built in Beverly Hills. The model house was designed by Wallace Neff of Pasadena.

Light Fixtures Perform Dual Home Function

Over the course of the last few years considerable attention has been accorded the subject of home lighting in its dual function of illuminating the home properly and of enhancing the decorative treatment. The importance of illumination of the proper strength and diffusion has been pointed out by eye specialists, and the importance of the decorative end of lighting fixtures is acknowledged by decorators everywhere.

Lighting fixtures are now designed by prominent artists and workers in metal, but large scale production has brought down the cost of these products of skilled workers to a point where even the best may be placed in the home of moderate price.

Wrought iron is a metal which is again finding favor after many years of disuse. When properly treated this metal has a hand-hammered effect which gives the antique appearance often sought after in room decoration. With the present trend toward Spanish, English and Italian homes the wrought iron strikes a sympathetic note.

Other homes built in the Colonial style require usually a different type of fixture, although certain types of wrought iron are altogether appropriate. Generally speaking, though, the old American craftsmen favored brass, bronze and copper in the old candle and oil lamps upon which the design of the modern fixtures for Colonial homes is based.

In planning proper illumination, the home owner should keep in mind all its different factors, and not neglect one for the other.

There is a growing return to the overhead style of fixture, which has been out of fashion for the last few years. Lighting engineers have disclosed that the overhead fixture is the most scientific form of room lighting.

George A. Sullivan has completed plans for a four-story and part basement $100,000 apartment building to be erected on Ninth street and Irola. D. Perrel is the owner of it.

GOODS MADE HERE GO TO MANY LANDS

Survey Reveals Products Sent by Weber to Europe, Orient, Every State

Los Angeles-made products eventually will lead the world and at present virtually every foreign country is using goods made in this city, according to Al C. Boessmiller, vice-president and advertising manager of Weber Showcase and Fixture Company, who has just completed a survey of the world-wide activities of his concern for the past year.

During the year, he pointed out, products made in the Weber factory here have been shipped to England, France, India, China and many other foreign countries. In the United States, said Mr. Boessmiller, Los Angeles products have gone to principal cities in almost every State. In the past month alone orders have been received for many carloads of materials. More than $50,000 worth of fixtures made in the local plant will go into the Sears, Roebuck & Co. store in Minneapolis, Minn., and a like amount will go to the Sears, Roebuck & Co. store in Milwaukee, Wis. The National Press Building in Washington, D. C., was equipped exclusively with local office fixtures, as was the huge new Hunter-Dulin Building in San Francisco. The Court-Montague Building in New York City is another large building to be finished with office fixtures from the local plant, Mr. Boessmiller explained, and many carloads of material have gone to Texas to equip large new office structures being erected there.

NORMAL YEAR IN BUILDING AHEAD

A compilation of opinion concerning home construction for the year 1928, gathered from statements issued by editors of publications devoted to the interest of builders and building supply dealers, lends further strong weight to the already preponderant view that construction during 1928 will be notable for its normal and favorable progress.

B. L. Johnson, editor of American Builder, published by the Radford organization at Chicago, says:

"The outlook for 1928 is bright for a continuation of the great building activity of the last several years. While there may be some recession in the larger cities, it is anticipated that this will be more than offset by the increasing activity in the smaller cities.

FACTORS UNALTERED

"The factors which create the demand for new buildings have not greatly altered during the year. In fact, most of them are permanent, inherent conditions. Population increase continues and amounts to the equivalent of about 360,000 new families each year. Buildings continue to wear out, to be destroyed by fire and flood and, most important of all, the progress of the American people continues with increasingly higher standards of living and consequent demand for new and better housing. This factor of obsolescence is, perhaps, the most important of all, resulting in new buildings, which represent the people's progress."

F. D. L. Squires, editor of Building Supply News, also published at Chicago, has this to say:

"The home-building prospects for 1928 include very little expectation of booms or drives, so far as the retail building supply and lumber dealers of the country see them, but there is a strengthened confidence evident throughout the country in a new and more sustained interest in home building and especially in home improving and remodeling, that is significant."

In an elaborately composed forecast for the new year, Building Age, a leading magazine published in New York, draws the following conclusions:

EQUALS REQUIREMENTS

"The most dramatic conclusion of all is that the population of the United States, its wealth, purchasing power and standards, have grown to the point where present-day construction about equals our normal requirements. We are not in the midst of a boom in building, we are not building abnormally now, and it will not be long before present-day figures of construction will be exceeded because normal requirements have advanced, normal not being a fixed, stationary figure.

"While the amount of building done in any year will depend to some extent on business conditions generally and will increase and decrease in harmony with those conditions, so that there may be an occasional valley in the curve of building, we are living in a growing country, the tendency is upward, and there is a gradual net gain, in spite of ups and downs, which over a term of years assumes very large proportions. For example, since 1890 the population of the United States has increased from 62,900,000 to about 119,000,000, a gain of over 87 per cent, with at least that much increase in business opportunity. The number of homes in that period has grown from less than 13,000,000 to over 26,000,000, and the volume of business generally has increased faster than the population. In fifteen years from today the population of the United States at its present rate of growth will be over 150,000,000 people and, obviously, normal construction for 150,000,000 people will be higher than today's normal of, roughly, $7,000,000,000 for 119,000,000 people."

Structural and Cast Iron Marts Most Active as Inventory Approaches

In commenting on the condition of the Pacific Coast iron and steel markets this week Iron Trade Review will say: "Movement was limited due to the Christmas holidays and the approach of the inventory-taking period. The structural shape and cast-iron pipe markets were the most active ones and some fair-sized tonnages were placed.

"The largest bar award was secured by a Los Angeles distributor and involved 1742 tons for the Puddingstone dam. Awards for the year 1927 aggregated 61,424 tons, as compared with 39,953 tons for the previous year. This is the largest total placed during the past six years and exceeds by 10,000 tons the 1925 figure, amounting to 51,879 tons.

"Increased demand for plates was the feature of this market during the last month of the year. Awards for the year totaled 63,086 tons, as compared with 74,510 tons for the preceding year. Bids were opened last week on 400 tons for a pipe line at Forest Grove, Or., but the city awarded it to the Federal Tank and Pipe Company on a wood-stave basis.

"Structural shapes continue in good demand and awards this week exceeded 1500 tons, bringing the aggregate for the year 1927 to 135,743 tons, as compared with 118,549 tons for 1926. This is the largest total awarded during the past six years, the former high mark being in 1925, when 133,018 tons were placed. The Baker Iron Works secured three projects in Los Angeles involving 1100 tons. Prices are firm at $2.35 c.i.f.

"Demand for cast-iron pipe is of fair proportions and lettings were in excess of 1600 tons. The Pacific States and the American Cast Iron Pipe companies each took 771 tons of six and eight-inch Class 250 pipe for Los Angeles. The total for the year aggregated 80,329 tons, as compared with 76,809 tons for the previous year. This total is under the former high mark of 1924 by 13,500 tons. Interest this week is centered in the 2800-ton inquiry of Portland, bids on which opened January 5. Grinnell Company took 625 tons of eight-inch seamless pipe for Los Angeles.

BOAT BUILT OF RUBBER

On the water about Akron, O., there is to be seen a small speed boat made of a material called "rubber lumber," which has the advantage over wood that it is lighter and does not require the care and attention that a wooden boat demands. As it does not absorb the moisture it may remain in the water or exposed to the elements without suffering any damage. The suggestion has been made to make use of the same material in the construction of airplanes.

METHOD OF CONDEMNING CITED

Values of Property Needed for Streets Determined by What a Purchaser Who Does Not Have to Buy Would Pay an Owner Who Does Not Have to Sell

While damages awarded when land and property is condemned for the opening and widening of streets included in the major traffic street plan are usually liberal, and adequately repay property owners for the loss suffered, the method by which damages are awarded are limited under the law, according to E. H. Delorey, deputy city attorney.

Delorey said he had received a number of inquiries regarding the widening of Eighth street, from Figueroa street to Windsor Boulevard, which is now before the referees for the settlement of damage claims.

"Damages are awarded," he said, "on the basis of the value at the time of the issuance of the summons in the condemnation suit. Values are established by what a purchaser who does not have to buy would pay to an owner who does not have to sell. In other words, a forced sale does not determine values."

Mr. Delorey said that damages are awarded on the basis of the land taken, the value of the buildings condemned, and the loss of value to the balance of the property, by reason of the severance.

If there is a leasehold interest, he said, the damages to the leasehold are deducted from the award to the owner. A leasehold interest is based on the market value of the lease No damages are allowed for loss of business due to the condemnation, or for personal property, such as signs and trade fixtures.

After complaints are served, a condemnation suit is set for trial, and referees are appointed by the court to determine the awards of damages. All persons who have answered the complaint are then permitted to appear before the referees, with or without witnesses or attorneys, and make such claims for damages as they see fit. After the property owners have been heard, appraisers for the city appear before the referees, and testify as to the damages sustained by each property owner.

The referees then decide on the damages, to be fair and equitable to both the property owners and the city. In addition to the damage awards, the property owner can expect to realize increased values through the completion of the improvement. These values are taken into consideration when the property owner pays his share of the cost of the proceeding.

DYAS UNIT ALMOST READY

Completion of the $1,000,000 B. H. Dyas Company's Hollywood store has been scheduled for the 20th inst. On that date, the contractors, the Scofield Engineering-Construction Company, will have finished all work on the building proper and will be ready for the installation of store fixtures and merchandise. Contract to manufacture and install the store fixtures has been awarded to the Vernon Fixture and Cabinet Company at about $100,000.

The walls and floors of the building were constructed of reinforced concrete in record time, and the exterior facing of brick and terra cotta is now in place. Erection of the building had to be accomplished in such a short time that the Scofield company departed from the customary methods of construction and completed the concrete work before the exterior facing was started, and proceeded with the interior plastering and carpenter work at a much earlier stage of construction than usual.

Rising ten stories in height with two basements, the mercantile structure covers a site 100 by 148 feet situated on the southwest corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine street, with the greater frontage along Vine street.

REALTY SECURITY FAVORED

Life insurance companies invest the bulk of their assets in loans based upon real estate collateral.

Approximately 44 per cent of the total assets of the principal insurance companies of the United States now is invested in mortgage loans, according to an examination of the reports of the companies. The examination was made by the Research department of Greenebaum Sons Investment Company. In no other single avenue have the insurance companies placed as large a proportion of their funds as in real estate investments.

About 20 per cent of the total of assets is invested in railroad securities. The next largest proportion, 12 per cent, is placed in loans on insurance policies. Government bonds represent 8 per cent of the total investment. The same proportion is found in the holdings of securities of public utility companies. The remaining 8 per cent is invested in a long list of miscellaneous securities.

WAREHOUSE STRUCTURE UNDER WAY

Ground Broken for Unit of Cosmosart Concern on Beverly Boulevard

Ground was broken last Tuesday for what is declared will be Los Angeles' largest warehouse. It is being built by Luther T. Mayo, contractor, for the Cosmosart Realty and Building Corporation, of which J. B. Bowen is president and general manager. It is located on Beverly Boulevard near its intersection with Westmoreland avenue.

This structure, which will be known as the American Storage Building, will be thirteen stories in height. It will have a frontage of 108 feet on Beverly Boulevard and a varied depth of from 130 to 170 feet. Its cost will be in excess of $600,000. It was designed by Arthur E. Harvey, architect. The building will be of fireproof construction, of Class A type and composed of steel and reinforced concrete. In addition to its regular thirteen stories, it will have a basement and will be surmounted by a specially designed roof tower. The building will contain a total of 150,000 feet of floor space.

ORE TAXES BUILDING MINNESOTA'S SCHOOLS

DULUTH, Jan. 7. (AP)—School superintendents earning $7000 a year in million dollar buildings are not uncommon in the small villages of the iron mining country of northern Minnesota.

Big incomes from taxable ore properties provide the funds for educational expansion in a village that ordinarily would have only meagre facilities.

Every town has a "melting pot" in the iron country and the funds go to help Americanize a preponderantly non-English-speaking population.

Hibbing, one of the largest villages in the world, has a $4,000,000 high-school building. There are thirty-nine different nationalities in the village.

Diversity of Roof Styles Pointed Out

Among the initiates and even among those more experienced in the fascinating game of home-owning there seems to be one subject foremost in discussions as to the relative merits of different types of construction. That subject is the roof.

Probably the reason for the extent and interest in discussions of roofs is their diversity in style, color, material, method of laying and appropriateness.

The major roofing materials are made in all styles and shapes. Concrete asbestos, for instance, is made in the straight tapered shingle, tapered thatch-effect shingle and octagonal types.

The colors range through soft browns and reds, grays and other tones that merge well with landscape and the walls of the home.

The material of the tapered asbestos shingle adapts it well to resist the wear of time and weather. This is a mixture of asbestos fiber and concrete, united under hydraulic pressure and so strong that it may be used in thicknesses as slight as one-eighth of an inch without fear of breaking. This makes their use economical, since roof beams and framing do not have to be of special strength to carry the weight of the finish material.

The tapered asbestos shingle may be laid either in the "American," the English thatch or the familiar continental style when the octagonal shingle is used. The American style uses slightly more material than the continental, but forms an extremely pleasing pattern with the shingles in random widths and thick butts, giving a heavy shadow line. The shingles are laid over insulating felt and have a high insulating value when laid in this method.

The point of appropriateness to varying styles is well met by the tapered asbestos shingle. They may easily be laid in any method to conform with the current modes in colonial, English, French and Norman designs, and when correctly laid are in harmony with any period or style.

ALBUQUERQUE (N. M.) Jan. 7. The school, which will accommodate perhaps twenty students will be open to students from other universities besides the New Mexico institution.

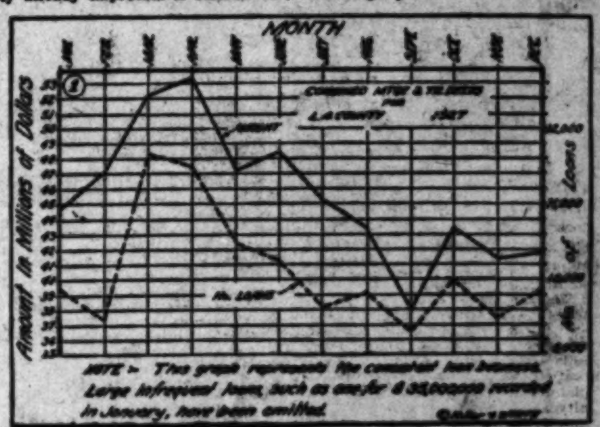
HALF-BILLION LOANED HERE

Ninety-nine Companies Release $567,697,131 for Realty During Last Year

Final Los Angeles county mortgage and trust deed figures for 1927, compiled by the firm of Miller & White, civil engineers and surveyors, show that during the twelve-month period just closed ninety-one local banks, mortgage loan companies, and individuals loaned the huge sum of $567,697,131, according to Eris M. Leaf, president of the Standard Mortgage Corporation, through which the completed survey is released.

These figures, taken each month from the official records of the County Recorder, show that an average of $47,308,000 was loaned each month to finance new building projects and to refinance loans on property already improved. A substantial portion of this money was also used for temporary building loans, Mr. Leaf pointed out, and upon completion of the building, permanent refinancing was carried out.



NOTE — This graph represents the consistent loan business. Large infrequent loans, such as one for $35,000,000 recorded in January, have been omitted.

An interesting feature of the survey is the fact that of the ninety-one companies and individuals listed only about twelve are engaged in loaning money drawn from eastern sources. This means that the major portion of the $500,000,000 total is drawn from local sources and indicates that a huge amount of money for investment in real estate improvements is available in Southern California.

The high point was reached in April, when loans totaling more than $58,000,000 were made. September was the smallest month of the year, with a volume of $38,000,000, while October showed a gain of slightly more than $48,000,000. In December, the final month of the year, 8636 trust deed and mortgage loans were made, involving a total of $41,768,650.

FLOOR AREA TOTALS GIVEN

New floor area totaling approximately 932,000,000 square feet was created by construction undertaken during 1927, according to an estimate made by the research department of Greenebaum Sons Investment Company on the basis of preliminary returns. This represents a drop of about 39,000,000 square fete from the area created in 1926.

The record for each of the last eight years is shown in the following table:

	Sq. ft. of floor area created by new construction	[illegible]
1927	932,000,000	[illegible]
1926	971,000,000	[illegible]

1922	[illegible]	[illegible]
1921	[illegible]	[illegible]
1920	[illegible]	[illegible]

Preliminary returns indicate that a larger number of construction projects were undertaken in 1927 than in 1926, although the amount expended for new buildings was nearly the same.

Want Americans in Yaqui Valley

EDINBURG (Tex.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Mexico is looking for Americans to settle the Yaqui Valley, it was stated here by E. H. Phraemer of Cajeme, Sonora, Mex., who is on a tour in this country in the interest of the government project there.

The Mexican government is planning a $22,000,000 improvement in the Yaqui Valley, he said. The government already has purchased 1,500,000 acres of land from Los Angeles Construction Company for $17,000,000, and will spend $5,000,000 in erecting a dam, and putting irrigation on the land.

Gen. Alvaro Obregon lives in that section, he said, and favors the project.

CAMERA'S SPEED RECORD

The speed record in the designing of moving-picture cameras has been captured by a Japanese scientist, Baron Shiba, who has built the machine especially for the purpose of studying and improving the action of airplanes in the air. It will make a record of the swirls and eddies in the air made by the passage of an airplane and by the motion of its propellers. It is claimed that this camera will make 20,000 exposures in a second and clearly displays disturbances in the air that have never before been observable. This speed is about double that of any other camera made so far.

Texas to Build More Rail Lines

AUSTIN (Tex.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Railroad extensions and new lines in Texas involving the construction of approximately 1500 miles of track are in prospect for the present year. Certificates of convenience and necessity for several of these projects have already been granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Applications for other permits will be made during the next few months. New railroad mileage in Texas last year amounted to approximately 300 miles, all of which were extensions of existing systems. Some of these extensions were completed during the year while others are lacking as much as 100 to 200 miles to bring them to a fulfillment of the expansion program.

DOG UNDERSTANDS WORDS

In the presence of a gathering of Columbia University teachers and officials recently, a German shepherd dog was put through an "intelligence test" which was a little short of marvelous and seemed to vindicate the statement of its owners that the animal understood the meaning of 300 words. He was given such instructions as "Go to the lady in the corner," "put your foot on the table," "your head on the table," "look out the window," and the animal went through the program without a failure.

Tourist Has Task Driving All Over City

Visiting motorists who expect to "drive all over Los Angeles" will have some job on their hands, according to the annual report of the City Engineering Department, just published. This shows that the city's 6100 streets extending 4448 miles are more extensive than any city in the United States, not barring New York.

To traverse every street, the motorist must travel a distance equal to that from Los Angeles to New York and back to Chicago. The latest improved type of streets include 2428 miles or more than the distance between Chicago and the Pacific Ocean.

During the past year the city expended more than $10,000,000 in street work and added 269 miles to its thoroughfares.

Reduction of Motor Truck Wrecks Sought

As the first step in a nation-wide campaign to reduce the number of motor-truck accidents, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has just issued its final report on a fact-finding survey of all truck accidents in Hartford, Ct., during the first half of 1927.

The survey in that city of 175,000 population reveals that motor trucks caused 56 per cent of the street accidents in which they figured.

It was found that of 409 accidents involving trucks during the first half of 1927 no fewer than 181 were the fault of pedestrians or of the drivers of other types of vehicles.

Accidents for which trucks were to blame were analyzed and remedies for them suggested by that study are being distributed to operators of truck fleets in all parts of the country.

NEW MODELS MAKE DEBUTS

Record-Breaking Year for Industry Expected

Lowered Prices and Better Cars Mark Competition

Auto Chamber Issues Figures on 1927 Output

BY AL PARMENTER

The automobile industry in the United States produced 3,530,000 cars and trucks having a wholesale value of $2,190,000,000 during 1927, according to preliminary figures issued by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The industry is now busy inaugurating the new year with many new models.

The Auto Club has made the estimate that of this number California absorbed 200,000 vehicles. Their value is estimated at $125,000,000.

NATION'S TOTAL

Aggregating all State registrations of motor vehicles for the year it is found that in this country there are 23,125,000 motor vehicles in operation.

The year previous there were more new cars produced than in 1927. This is accounted for almost entirely by the absence of Ford in the production field for about half of the year just closed. Most other producers at least kept up their former record. Some showed an increase, Chevrolet principally.

For 1928 there is a general prediction of a new record for the year. Ford is back and will add to the production total. Many buyers have held back and are now ready to spend their money for a new car.

PRICES DROPPED

In this low-price field there is already great competitive activity. John N. Willys and W. C. Durant have already issued challenges to Ford in direct price competition with the Whippet and Star, respectively. Chevrolet, with a year's record of over 1,000,000 cars produced in 1927, has introduced a new model with valuable improvements and a lowered price as the General Motors bid to maintain leadership as the largest single producer of automobiles in the world.

It is at this early date estimated that the number of automobiles built in Michigan alone during the twelve-month period just ahead will be close to, if not in excess of, 4,000,000 units, including trucks. This estimate is based upon the proportionate production of this State in past years and the prediction of automobile manufacturers that the year's total will be 5,000,000. These figures are not only possible but quite probable. Ford will not reach capacity production until the second half of the year, but expects to turn out more than 1,250,000 cars, while production of General Motors will be around the 2,000,000 mark.

The Hupmobile-Midland Steeldraulic Brakes—an exclusive engineering advance of the utmost value, found on no car but Hupmobile—deserve the closest study and a special demonstration. Here are some of the reasons why they truly solve the braking problem:

1. Combine the best features of both the hydraulic and mechanical principles, eliminating their drawbacks.
2. Add to positive, equalized action, quick release, due to 60-thousandths of clearance between drum and lining in place of usual 10-thousandths or less.
3. Preventing brake drag.
4. Resulting in 10 to 15 per cent more effective power.
5. Quicker acceleration.
6. Troublesome, noisy parts eliminated.
7. Trouble-free, due to simplicity and principle employed.
8. Perfect control.
9. Far greater safety.

PLENTY OF SNOW IN SIERRAS

Winter Sports Possible Now in Deep Blanket Found by Autoists

After several early weeks of mild weather, the past two weeks have brought a heavy blanket of snow to the Sierra, reaching down to the lower snow levels. This change from a light covering to sufficient quantity of snow to make winter sports highly enjoyable will be hailed with delight.

Sequoia National Park is becoming a rendezvous for snow parties, due to the arrangements made by the national park service. Some of the finest "slides" imaginable are to be found in Giant Forest and accommodations are splendid.

Greenhorn Mountain, in Kern county, has developed into another winter playground. It is easily reached from Bakersfield and Southern Valley points, and from Los Angeles and Southern California. A foot of new snow is reported at this playground.

Besides Big Creek, Huntington Lake, Shaver Lake and the Pine Ridge country, where great developments have been made in preparing for winter sports, the entire Sierra foothills from Calaveras county to the south boundary of Kern, including the Tehachapis, should be given proper publicity as one of the finest regions for winter diversions obtainable. It is self-evi-

One of the most profitable week-ends it is possible to spend will be on the road of the tourist who will give that much time to the territory between Del Monte and Big Sur, which includes Monterey and the Peninsula. There are to be found many historic points of interest—places hallowed by the association of romantic people who were moulders of California's destiny.

A trip to this part of California's coast line has just been completed by a party from The Times in a Packard Six sedan from Earle C. On reaching Del Monte the tourists poked their way into out-of-the-way nooks with the result that they found many interesting things that are usually overlooked by the casual motorist.

CHEVROLET SCHEDULE INCREASED

Demand for New Models Causes Stepping Up Output of Cars

DETROIT, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor Company, announced today that Chevrolet's present record production scheduled for January has been stepped up 20 per cent to meet sales requirements resulting from the spectacular reception accorded the new car. It is expected that schedules for February, March and April will be similarly affected.

The nation-wide enthusiasm that greeted the new car is reflected in the factory statement that more people saw the new Chevrolet at its 7500 dealer points in the first three days following its introduction than saw any previous new model in the history of the industry.

From coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the gulf, 7500 Chevrolet dealers displayed the new car immediately on its formal announcement. Deliveries to customers were started the following morning. Despite snow storms, blizzards and generally cold weather throughout the country every Chevrolet showroom has been crowded to the doors this week.

In New York visitors crowded the showroom at the rate of 1000 an hour; more than 150,000 inspected the cars in Chicago on the first day; 75,000 saw them in Detroit; 80,000 in Pittsburgh; 45,000 in Los Angeles, 25,000 in Dallas, 22,000 in Denver and so on.

BUMPER HEIGHT STANDARD SET

Club Gives Measurements to Follow Law

Universal Standard Aims to Protect Cars

Owners Asked to Check Up on Appliance

How are your bumpers?

Automobile owners are being advised by the government to check up on their bumpers to see whether they have been attached in accordance with the standards established for height. This is suggested as a measure to prevent interlocking where bumpers meet.

MEASUREMENTS GIVEN

To aid in standardizing bumpers in this section, the Automobile Club of Southern California submits the following standard for passenger car bumpers, small motor coaches and light delivery trucks in accordance with government suggestion:

The horizontal center line of bumper face, exclusive of fittings, shall be eighteen inches plus or minus three-eighths inch per inch of effective face above the ground for front bumpers and nineteen inches plus or minus three-eighths inch per inch effective face above ground for rear bumpers or fender-guards.

MINIMUM GIVEN

The minimum over-all length of front bumpers shall be sixty inches on passenger cars having the standard fifty-six-inch tread. The minimum dimension measured between the extreme ends of rear bumpers, or fender guards shall be sixty inches on passenger cars having the standard fifty-six-inch tread. The minimum vertical depth of bars for single-bar-type front and rear bumpers shall be two inches.

The bumper height shall be measured with the car supplied with the normal amount of water, oil and gasoline, but without passengers or other load. The vertical spread of contact face shall be the distance between the upper and lower edges of the outer-bumper elements, exclusive of any additional projecting parts.

ONLY WAY OUT

The only way to make these standards effective is through adherence on the part of car manufacturers and car owners. It is urged that car owners check up on their bumpers to see if they are attached in accordance with the above standards. Those having bumpers installed after purchasing a car would do well to have them set according to these measurements.

Used Cars in Special Sale to Clear Desks

With December closing as the largest month in the history of the Don Lee organization with the exception of one month in 1923, a monster clearance sale of used cars traded in on new Cadillacs and LaSalles during the Christmas season is being staged, with price reductions running from 10 to 50 per cent, according to announcement made by J. E. Brown, Southern California manager for Don Lee.

"While one sale—the annual year-end bargain special of the Don Lee organization—has just closed with huge results, it is necessary for us to offer the public even still greater values in used cars of many makes which have been traded in during an almost unprecedented wave of buying of the new Cadillacs and LaSalles in connection with the Christmas holiday season," Brown declared.

"Perhaps more Cadillacs were given as Christmas presents this year than ever before in Southern California, for we sold 186 Cadillacs during the month at retail, besides a high percentage of LaSalles, and consequently took in a very large number of used cars."

dent that this will be the logical outgrowth of the pioneering, such as is being done now by Messrs. King and Davidson at Trail's End Lodge, near Pine Ridge in Fresno county, who are now entertaining many parties.

Safety, Speed Feature Auto

Speed and safety are two features of the modern motor car that are in the greatest demand today from experienced drivers. They want automobiles that will roll along the open road at good speeds that can be kept up hour after hour with comfort and safety, declares Selig Cahn, vice-president of the White Auto Company, distributor of the Auburn line.

Even though most drivers never want to use all the speed built into a car, yet they like to know it is there if needed and they realize that this extra speed and power are a reserve force ready to be called upon in case of emergency, he pointed out.

"Both speed and safety are marked in the Auburn line," said Mr. Cahn. "These features have been demonstrated many times. Particularly were they shown when three Auburn Eight-Eighty-Eight models set thirty-four new records and broke thirty-seven old ones while making a 15,000-mile speed test on the Atlantic City speedway."

BROSSEAU NEW HEAD MOTOR TRUCK BODY

A. J. Brosseau, president Mack Trucks, Inc., has been appointed chairman of the motor-truck committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce by President Roy D. Chapin. Mr. Brosseau has also been elected vice-president of the commercial-car division of the automobile chamber.

Mr. Brosseau succeeds in both these offices Windsor T. White, formerly chairman of the board of the White company, who had held these offices since the organization of the chamber.

MONTEREY TOUR TOLD IN DETAIL

Route, making short stops at Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Salinas. From Del Monte the shore of Monterey Peninsula was traversed to Carmel. This picturesque neck of land stretching out into the turquoise Pacific between the tranquil waters of Monterey and Carmel Bays is almost entirely covered with profuse forest growth, and the road winds back and forth between the sea's edge and the quiet of the cypress fastness. From Carmel Hill a magnificent view may be had for fifty miles north and south.

South from the Peninsula a good road runs some thirty miles to the Big Sur, from which point a new road is under construction through virgin country to Salmon Creek. The new link is part of the new Roosevelt Highway which will open a continuous route along the edge of the Pacific from Canada to Mexico. The country as far as the Sur offers much opportunity for the camera enthusiast. The coast is most rocky and the road in many places is cut high in the palisades along the shore, presenting an aerial panorama of the mighty Pacific as it crashes and roars among the dark and forbidding boulders 300 yards below. The sportsman will find deer and trout in abundance because of the inaccessibility of the woods and streams heretofore.

HISTORIC SPOTS

Returning to the vicinity of Monterey the party found a wealth of historical and literary points of interest. Monterey is the cradle of California history, the Pacific Coast having been first discovered in 1542, just fifty years after Columbus touched foot on the Western Hemisphere, when Juan de Cabrillo landed in its vicinity. Sixty years later, in 1602, Sebastian Viscaino took possession of the southern coast and raised the rich flag of Spain. For 220 years Spain ruled the new country with an iron hand, until it became a Mexican province in 1822. The Mexican rule ended twenty-four years later when the ambitious young United States took the State into the union, just in time to save it from the intriguing grasp of Russia. Monterey was the center of all this political activity and was the first capital of California when it became part of the Union.

Here and there throughout the peninsula are crumbling remnants of adobe houses, constructed by the pioneers of three countries, some of them overgrown with flowers and vines and blending with the brilliant landscape, while others are still in use, with promise of service for years to come.

Robinson Jeffers, one of the most noted of the present-day authors, and writer of "Tamar," "Roan Stallion," "Californians," and other literary gems, has brought back to Monterey the attention in the world of letters that it enjoyed in the days when Robert Louis Stevenson and others wrote there. Probably everyone knows that Stevenson spent some years in Monterey, and the house where the gentle author lived and wrote is a mecca for all visitors. Near by is San Carlos Church, founded by Father Junipero Serra in 1770, and on the water front is the old custom house, over which the flags of Spain and Mexico waved until on July 7, 1846, Commodore John Drake Sloat raised the American flag and took possession of the country in the name of the United States.

All the landmarks are sign posted by the Automobile Club as are all roads leading to them. In rapid succession the party visited Colton Hall, first State capital building and now the City Hall of Monterey; the House of Four Winds, the first Hall of Records, the old Pacific Building, General Fremont's house, and the first theater in California in which Jenny Lind once sang.

Wheatly New Zone Head for Tire Company

Winston R. Wheatly has been appointed new Los Angeles factory branch manager of the India Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, O. He formerly held a similar position in San Francisco, from where he was transferred. He has been associated with the company for the last five years. His new territory gives him jurisdiction over Southern California and Arizona.

WINSTON WHEATLY

Wheatly is well qualified for his duties, his nine years in the tire industry having acquainted him with every phase of the business. For two consecutive years he was the leading figure in India sales in the entire United States; a signal honor that is, as yet, unequalled in the annals of the factory. Efficiency and knowledge, such as Wheatly brings south with him, are readily welcomed here, in that this is the largest distributing point for India tires in the entire world.

Fine Year for Auto Business, Says Franklin

That the entire automobile industry will enjoy a banner year during 1928 is the prediction made by H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile Company of Syracuse, N. Y. He expects his company to set new records this year and bases his optimism on the heavy demand experienced during the last four months of this year. He made these statements in a communication received here by Ralph Hamlin, president of Franklin Motors, Inc., distributor of the Franklin Airman air-cooled six.

"September, October and November represent our biggest fall months with one exception during the last twenty-five years of producing and selling automobiles," stated Mr. Franklin. "The first eleven months of 1927 saw more Franklin cars delivered than the entire year of 1926.

"Our 1927 September record showed a 49 per cent increase over September, 1926, and October showed 160 per cent increase over the same month of 1926. November deliveries were 24 per cent ahead of those during the same period of the previous year and when the December records are compiled they also will show a large increase.

"At the present rate of gain in business which we expect to maintain during 1928, this year should show an increase of 50 per cent over that of 1927."

plants to meet expected increases in demands during the year.

Never before were so many new lines announced with the opening of a new year as there were this year. Manufacturers realized that in order to keep in the normal running they must show something new with the improvements, or at least changes from existing models. In this line are found Studebaker, Essex, Hudson, Ford, Dodge, Overland, Pontiac, Chevrolet and La Salle. Studebaker is ready with its new President eight and Erskine six. The new Essex six with three body types—four-door sedan, coach and coupe—are in production. A four-wheel brake has been added to this line and several mechanical changes are included.

PONTIAC, CHEVROLET NEW

A new Pontiac appeared this week with additional motor power and four-wheel brakes, without change of base price.

The Chevrolet experienced a great change. The new cars embody extended wheel base, increased speed and power, four-wheel brakes, new Fisher bodies, new colors and thermostat engine cooling. There are seven body types, including five closed and two open models. The addition of four inches to the wheel base, making 107 inches in length, gives the new line a distinctly "big-car" appearance. The line will be known as the "bigger and better" Chevrolet, entirely foreign to its price class.

The new Pontiac cars will incorporate new styles, additional power, four-wheel brakes additional weight with no change in the wheel base. Schedules call for a production of 270,000 cars in 1928.

The reduction in the prices of Chevrolet cars ranges from $10 to compared with last year's figures of $50. Prices range from $495 to $715 $525 to $745.

VICTORY ARRIVES

Dodge Brothers are now ready with their new Victory six, which contains several marked improvements. It is longer and lower, with the price range between $1045 and $1170. The standard four, equipped with four-wheel brakes, will be continued, as will be the senior six.

Although reported working at capacity, officials of the Packard company this week stopped long enough to announce substantial price reductions on six models. The sedan-limousine was cut $700; seven-passenger sedan, $700; convertible coupe, $700; two-passenger coupe, $650; five-passenger club sedan, $500, and four-passenger coupe, $500.

Increased production in the La Salle line has enabled the lowering of prices in that line, the price drops varying from $10 to $190. Five new body styles have also been added to this General Motors line. They are the two-passenger business coupe and five-passenger family sedan, each listed at $2350; the five-passenger coupe and five-passenger cabriolet sedan at $2675, and the seven-passenger family sedan at $2575.

The fact that these price drops are not excessive substantiates the claim that the decrease is the result of increased production and that the former prices charged for the car were just and not inflated values.

Safety Handle on Car Door Protects Child

Motorists with families, especially those with small children, will quickly realize the value of one of the minor, yet important new 1928 Hupmobile six features.

The inside door handles of the inclosed models do not operate by pushing down, as they do on older models. The action of the latch has been reversed, making it impossible to open the doors, except when the handles are pulled upward.

"Hupmobile engineers," states A. R. Reedall, manager of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors in California, "had several reasons for changing the action of these handles. Chief among these was to prevent accidents which may have been caused by small children playing and leaning on the door handles until the door flew open, allowing the child to fall."

Reedall points out that by reversing the action of the handles, Hupmobile engineers have made it impossible for this to happen. Parents can go for a drive in a new 1928 Hupmobile six four-door or two-door sedan, allow the children to play in the rear compartment of the car to their heart's content, and never worry.

PRECEDENT LACKING

It is interesting to note that despite much debate on the subject and conflicting rulings of various presidents, the question of whether the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court outranks the Secretary of State or vice versa has never been determined. Consequently, there is a hard and fast rule against inviting these two important personages to the same official gathering.—[Pathfinder.

SEATTLE ROAD OPEN

The new road from Tacoma to Seattle which has been open off and on during the past three weeks is now definitely opened to travel, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

BANNING ROAD BAD

The road from Banning to Idyllwild should not be attempted at this time of the year except by the most experienced of mountain drivers, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

LUMBER ROAD POOR

The road from General Grant National Park through the old lumber town of Hume is not advisable at the present time, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Choking May be Bad Usage of Car Motor

"Few motorists realize that the excessive use of the gasoline choke is very detrimental to the operating efficiency and life of any motor," states A. B. Kyle, service superintendent of the W. P. Herbert Company, local Chandler representatives.

"It seems to be a general practice during the cooler days of winter, for many motorists to use the choke to an excess when starting the motor. Of course, there are times when it is necessary to give the motor extra gasoline by means of the choke, but as soon as the motor starts, the choke control should be closed. Running the motor with the choke open allows an excess quantity of gasoline to seep down into the crankcase with the motor oil and cause what is generally known as crankcase dilution, in other words, a thinning out of the oil.

"There are very few motorists who would think of using a poor grade of oil in their cars, yet many of these same motorists fail to realize that operating the car with the choke open dilutes the oil so that it loses all its body or lubricating value.

"Nothing will cause more rapid deterioration of a motor, than running with a thin oil, which in reality becomes nothing more than gasoline. There is always the danger, when such a condition exists, of overheating the motor, which opens up the possibility of scoring the cylinder wall or burning out a bearing.

"Chandler motors are all equipped with an oil purifier, which of course, keeps out all foreign particles of dirt and dust from entering the oil, but it is next to impossible to do anything with oil which has been diluted with raw gasoline. Therefore this warning is not only issued to Chandler owners, but to owners of all makes of automobiles, from impairing the lubricating qualities of the motor oil through excessive use of the choke.

"You probably will admit, that if a certain habit was not agreeing with you, you would take steps to eliminate that habit. Why not treat your motor car in the same manner?"

CANYON ROAD GOOD

Topanga Canyon road which was under reconstruction for a considerable length of time will now be found in good condition, offering a scenic tour at this time of the year, advises the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Colorful Car Present-Day Auto Fashion

Bright, flashy colors still continue in popular favor for motor cars, says W. P. Herbert, president of the W. P. Herbert Company, local Chandler representatives. Cars of drab, monotonous dark blues and black are obsolete. Brilliant duotone combinations in blues, tans, greens and grays are the present vogue.

It used to be that the sport roadsters and sport touring cars were painted in bright colors, but not so now, for most of the heavier family cars and the business man's car are being finished in attractive, fascinating gay fashions of the day.

The new 1928 Chandler models are finished to suit the most exacting taste and the prospective Chandler owner may choose the colors of his or her car as one chooses the color of neckties or dresses. Many cars are chosen by the women of today because the color finish is almost identical or blends with her latest fall frock.

A unique color idea and one typical of the Chandler's high quality is that found on the special six four-door sedan. The body is of cabriolet gray with mountain ridge green mouldings and strips of the latter color on the hood louvres. The new royal eight sedan is finished in an attractive hemlock gray with mountain ridge green stripings and the bumpers are stripped to match.

Autoist Ends Ninth Journey Across Nation

Completing his ninth trip across the continent by automobile, George L. Sylvester of Trenton, N. J., arrived in Los Angeles recently after traveling the length of the Lincoln Highway at the wheel of a new Paige six sedan.

Sylvester's first trip from New York to San Francisco was made in a 1912 Paige touring car. On the trip he was accompanied by two companions and the car carried a large supply of equipment such as shovels, chains, ropes, extra tires and tubes, reserve oil and gasoline supply and mechanical tools. Thirty-two days were consumed in making the long cross-country trip.

On his last trip across the United States Sylvester traveled alone and he had no extra equipment other than two spare tires; emergency supply of gas, oil and water strapped on the running board; and the small kit of tools that every Paige owner receives with his automobile.

Sylvester told "Doc" Gordon, sales-manager of the Paige company of Southern California that his trip from New York to San Francisco this year had been nothing more than a pleasant tour. All the rough going is eliminated now, he claims, the car rides so well and the roads are so improved that it no longer takes a thrill-hunting vacationist to drive from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"When I made my first trip to California in my old 1912 Paige, it was a man's job to drive from coast to coast," said the visitor. "That is the case no longer, however."

CROOKED CLUB SALES LEAD TO ROAD WORK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Impetus is being given to highway construction throughout the country as a result of organized motordom's campaign to send to the chain gang all "gyp" operators apprehended and convicted of selling fake motor-club memberships.

One of the most striking examples of the success of this drive, the American Automobile Association announced today, was the recent arrest and conviction of Charles S. Kneeream, alias K. N. Morris, alias N. Morris, who was given six months at Salem, Va., after he had left a trail of fake memberships in several States.

MOTORISTS ATTRACTED TO RAINBOW CLUB

The coming of real summer weather last week enticed many motorists, holding membership in the Rainbow Angling Club to the club, located near Redlands in Mill Creek Canyon.

Leigh Garnsey, manager of the club, announces that rains so far this season have failed to do any damage to the club property or to the stream. The stream is running clear and very cold. Heavy falls of snow covered the mountains near the club, meaning a continuance of cold water for the stream.

George B. Clarkson, Fish and Game Commissioner for Southern California, accompanied by Eugene D. Bennett, executive officer of the commission, visited Rainbow this week and highly complimented Garnsey on the wonderful crop of healthy trout and also on the way the club is run.

The average cow in the United States produced 3700 pounds of milk in 1916; 4000 pounds in 1921, and 4700 pounds in 1926.

Winter Reigns in Mountains

Winter sports are in full swing in the Sierras and are drawing so much interest this year that practically all hotel accommodations have been spoken for weeks in advance in many places, according to word received by J. E. Brown, manager for Don Lee, California distributor for Cadillac and La Salle motor cars, following a tour made by executives of Don Lee, the Cadillac Motor Car Company and the General Motors Corporation in a new Cadillac sedan. Officials who made the tour about the State spent a day and a night in Yosemite with hundreds of other visitors at the Awahnee Hotel.

Those in the party in the Cadillac included Ray Newton, sales executive for the Cadillac Motor Car Company; Albert M. La Vert, attorney for General Motors Corporation; John F. Porter, General Motors dealer of Wilmington, Del.; C. C. Clark, western zone manager for the Cadillac Motor Car Company, and Fred Pabst, San Francisco manager for Don Lee.

ROAD CAMPS SOON TO BE PUT IN OPERATION

DEL MONTE, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Over 800 men from State penitentiaries will soon be put to work on the Carmel-San Simeon highway. According to present indications, work will begin at both ends of the road and five prison road camps will be maintained.

This is even a greater program than had been expected and will result in more rapid completion of this important Coast highway than had been anticipated. As a result, it is now expected that within eighteen months the main grading work will be completed and automobiles will be able to travel from Del Monte to San Luis Obispo over a graded dirt and rock road, along the most spectacular section of the California coastline.

The major portion of the project will be the ninety-mile stretch of road between Carmel and Cambria.

GLASS GRINDER FOR PARIS FIRM ORDERED

Extent to which Los Angeles manufacturers are expanding their markets to foreign fields again was indicated in the receipt of and order by the Weber Showcase and Fixture Company for a glass-grinding machine from the Societes des Automobiles Donnet of Paris, France. The machine, used for beveling and smoothing edges of glass used in auto bodies, will be shipped this month.

SEVENTEEN-MILF DRIVE DEDICATED TO PUBLIC

DEL MONTE, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The most picturesque portion of the Seventeen Mile Drive has been permanently dedicated to public use for parks and recreational centers. This is the gist of an announcement recently issued by S. F. B. Morse, president of the Del Monte Properties Company, which owns practically the entire area surrounded by this famous drive.

STUTZ NEW MODEL OUT

First of the new Stutz vertical eight motor cars have just been received here and placed on display by Marshall & Clampett, distributors, at Figueroa and Sixteenth streets. They are marked by many refinements in the chassis and added beauty and luxury in the bodies. These cars were introduced to the public at the New York automobile show yesterday.

According to F. W. Clampett, the new Safety Stutz is made even safer than previous models. Many parts have been enlarged and made stronger, a new braking system has been adopted and there are minor changes to be seen in many parts.

"A new type of Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes is now used on the Stutz," said Mr. Clampett. "It is the first of its type to use sixteen-inch brake drums which give great braking area to the internal expanding shoes. The emergency brake drum has also been enlarged from six and one-half to eight inches and it is two and one-half inches wider than formerly. These changes provide the maximum in deceleration.

"Front axles and rear axles on the five-passenger chassis are now duplicates of those used on seven-passenger cars, giving extra sturdiness. The tie-rods are larger and [illegible] shimmying. The size of the [illegible] shaft is greater than [illegible] double oil seals are provided to protect the larger universal [illegible] oil leaks. There are [illegible] chassis refinements adding to the car's sturdiness.

"More beauty has been [illegible] already handsome bodies [illegible] colors will be available. The lines have been redesigned [illegible] a most graceful sweep [illegible] fashionable view adds a [illegible] smartness that is eye-arresting [illegible] ders and running boards have [illegible] widened and fender wells for carrying spare tires are now standard.

SERVICE SCHOOLS PLANNED

Of exceptional interest to Oakland-Pontiac dealers and owners is the announcement made last week by Edward Lyons, factory supervisor of the Oakland Motor Car Company, whose territory includes the entire Pacific Coast from Denver west, that service schools, designed to fully acquaint every service man in the dealer organizations with the latest methods and practices as employed by the Oakland Motor Car Company are shortly to be inaugurated. The schools will be held in the establishments of the various dealers.

In these schools Oakland and Pontiac cars will be assembled before the men, making it possible for them to see at first hand the precision methods being employed by the Oakland Motor Car Company, according to Mr. Lyons, who was in Los Angeles for a short time attending conferences of Oakland Motor Car Company field representatives and service men.

"The more the service department of the dealer organizations knows about manufacturing methods the more the owner profits," Mr. Lyons asserted. "We are endeavoring to do more for the owner by improving the service to which he is entitled. We are virtually bringing the factory to the various dealer organizations with this school. In addition, a small shop manual has been planned for all service men, which will prove of extreme value, not only to these men, but also to owners whose cars are being serviced.

"A mechanical clinic is shortly to be established at the factory to which dealers are invited to send their service men for further education in the intricate and scientific methods by which Oakland and Pontiac sixes are constructed. We are certain this clinic will prove of exceptional value to dealers.

"The schools which will be conducted in connection with the clinic will be under direct charge of three factory service supervisors; one on the Pacific Coast, another in the Middle West and the third in the East. From present indications they will prove of great value to owners of Oakland and Pontiac cars, and will establish a more intimate relation between the factory and the service men of the various dealer organizations throughout the country."

While in Los Angeles Mr. Lyons visited Reeve Gartzmann, Inc., and conferred with Mr. Gartzmann and H. E. Franklin, general manager of the big local Oakland-Pontiac distributing organization. He [illegible] himself as greatly impressed with the manner in which Southern California has risen to its present [illegible] ing position in the automobile field and was high in praise of [illegible] recent sensational Oakland and Pontiac sales records established by the Gartzmann organization.

Mr. Lyons is one of the oldest in point of service in the [illegible] the Oakland Motor Car Company having been identified with the concern for fourteen years.

Radical Changes Made in Car Mechanically; New Type Radiator Feature

The second "birthday anniversary" of the Pontiac Six was marked Thursday in Los Angeles by the first public display of the new models in the showrooms of Reeve Gartzmann, Inc., Southern California distributor, and the headquarters of associate dealers. The unveiling revealed the new Pontiac Six which is said to surpass in beauty, power and performance all previous offerings of the Oakland Motor Car Company in the low-priced six-cylinder field.

The new chassis with four-wheel brakes, gasoline pump, an entirely new type of radiator designed to prevent evaporation, semicoincidental lock, improved carburetion, crankcase ventilation, new cylinder head, higher compression, new clutch and steering gear, heavier frame and other mechanical advances, appears to justify the statement of the manufacturer that it is "new from radiator to tail light."

BODY LINE SAME

The new series has the same number of cars that comprise the 1927 line. Two of the new models, though, are new types of bodies. They are the sport landau sedan and four-door sedan, which supersede the former coach and de luxe landau sedans. The two-door sedan, coupe, sport cabriolet and sport roadster again are included among the six body choices. All have been redesigned and closed models carry the latest Fisher body features, new Duco colors, new fenders, head lamps and other refinements.

The new Pontiac engine develops forty-three horsepower at 2600 r.p.m., a substantial increase over the power of the previous car. This greater power gives even better acceleration, while the new equalized mechanical four-wheel brakes provide sure and rapid deceleration. A separate internal parking brake is provided on the rear wheels.

One of the outstanding pioneering features of the new car is a radically changed principle of engine cooling as embodied in the unique "cross-flow" radiator, from which it is practically impossible to lose the water or antifreeze solution by evaporation. The water flows horizontally through the radiator cells instead of vertically as in other radiators. The water circulation is thermostatically controlled and the flow is maintained by a new water pump of the balanced impeller type.

NEW TYPE HEAD

Among other changes on the engine are the adoption of the G.-M.-R. cylinder head and the replacement of the conventional vacuum tank with a gasoline pump. The new cylinder head was developed by General Motors Research engineers. Its use on the Oakland All-American six resulted in elimination of spark knock and other indications of detonation. It also enables the Pontiac compression ratio to be raised to 4.9 to 1.

Other improved features include a new carburetor especially designed for the car, redesigned intake and exhaust manifolding systems, a combination pressure and suction type of crankcase ventilator which prevents fumes from entering the body compartment and decreases dilution of the engine oil, and a new design clutch very similar to that of the All-American. The steering gear is of a new design, with burnished bronze bearings and a new seventeen-inch wheel carrying finger grips on the inside of the rim.

A semicoincidental lock has been incorporated in the transmission, being operated from the ignition switch by the switch key and allowing locking of both ignition and transmission. A completely changed instrument board has choke and throttle controls on the right and the central assembly consisting of speedometer, oil gauge and gasoline gauge and ammeter is inclosed in a glass-covered, indirectly lighted metal case.

New Agent for Stearns Cars Named Here

W. Leavitt & Co. has been appointed Southern California distributor of Stearns-Knight motor cars, the [illegible] of the sleeve-valve motor family, according to an announcement made by L. V. Starr, president and general manager. The line was taken over last week and is housed at the Leavitt headquarters, Eleventh and Hope streets.

"With the acquisition of the Stearns-Knight line, we now handle [illegible] engined cars in a wide price range," explained Mr. Starr. "The Stearns-Knight is in the luxury class and one of the finest automobiles manufactured in America. The new eight-cylinder Stearns-Knight has the most powerful motor of its type in any American motor car today.

"These cars are practically custom built. Extreme care is taken in their manufacture and most rigid inspection is made of every bit of material going into them."

tie-rods are larger and act to prevent shimmying. The size of the propeller shaft is greater than formerly and double oil seals are provided to protect the larger universal joints from oil leaks. There are numerous other chassis refinements adding to the car's sturd'ness.

"More beauty has been given the already handsome bodies and many colors will be available. The roof lines have been redesigned, providing a most graceful sweep while a sharp fashionable visor adds a dash of smartness that is eye-arresting. Fenders and running boards have been widened and fender wells for carrying spare tires are now standard.

"Hood louvres are in an unbroken horizontal line from front to rear of the bonnet. New headlamps of the semibullet type are provided and are known as full-nickeled Parabeams. Cowl lights of the same design are standard.

"The car is fitted with a new type of transmission lock which locks the car in neutral by merely pressing down on the movable ball end of the gear-shift lever. Bodies have many refinements and much more luxury. The seats are wider and deeper and offer the maximum of comfort."

He expressed himself as greatly impressed with the manner in which Southern California has risen to its present dominating position in the automotive sales field and was high in praise of the recent sensational Oakland and Pontiac sales records established by the Gartzmann organization.

Auto Service Inaugurated for Shoppers

"Just in the nick of time," was the comment generally made by women shoppers who learned of the new Pierce-Arrow garage service in time to avail themselves of this time-saver during shopping hours.

The service was inaugurated two weeks before Christmas, and will continue throughout the year. It is used in conjunction with automobile parking in the Harold L. Arnold garage, Wilshire at Figueroa street. A fleet of Pierce-Arrow sedans has been put into use, carrying shoppers, business men, theatergoers and anyone who has business or pleasure in the downtown shopping district.

For a nominal sum, the owner of a car may park it in the garage, then step into one of the Pierce-Arrow sedans and be carried without cost to any destination between Second street and Eighth street and as far east as the main shopping district. The return ride is accomplished in just as simple a manner.

When business or shopping is finished, the garage customer merely hails one of the sedans, which are marked with red arrows on the windows, at a safety loading zone. The claim check for their car is their fare back, and the first, last and only charge is for parking.

Rates for parking are as low as any in this district, according to G. W. McCarthy and W. S. Sargent, who originated the system here. "In fact," said McCarthy, "we find that our parking rates are really lower than the majority of garages with similar parking facilities which makes this new additional service all the more remarkable."

SNAPPY HAIRCUT

Feeling the need of a haircut and a shave, an acquaintance walked into a barber shop in the Twenties the other afternoon. The place was impressive with its equipment and its white-uniformed operators. He slumped into a chair, murmured, "Trim and shave" and closed his eyes. The barber who worked over him seemed very slow, but the man in the chair put it down to excessive care. Altogether, the job consumed an hour and a half, and realizing that he was due for an appointment, the barbered one seized his check and headed for the cashier. He noted that the check called for only 25 cents and commented on the cheapness of the work. Then, for the first time, he spotted a sign setting forth the fact that it was a barber school. He took a look in a mirror at his haircut and fled. He had been given one of those trims that were popular with doughboys during the war—the sort that west of the Mississippi are known as Oklahoma haircuts.—[Philadelphia Public Ledger.

DIPLOMATS' UNIFORMS

Not many people know that diplomats, even though civilians, wear a distinctive uniform for formal occasions. The more gold on sleeve and collar the higher the rank. All wear dress swords. Their order of precedence is not governed, as many people think, by size or importance of the country. It hinges on length of service at a particular post. In other words, the man who has longest represented his country as Ambassador at Washington comes first. He is called the dean of the diplomatic corps.—[Pathfinder.

FRONT-DRIVE MACHINE POSSIBLE AS DEVELOPMENT

BY WILLIAM ULLMAN

After being pushed through the rear wheels for more than thirty years, the motor car is about to undergo a metamorphosis that will leave it being pulled by the front pair. That, at least, is the opinion of many automotive engineers who foresee front-wheel-drive as the next radical change in automobile design.

A subject of engineering study for years, and talked about and tested in a few cases, front-wheel drive now seems about to become an actuality because the motor-car designer is in a dilemma. He wants to build a less expensive car, a more efficient car, one that is more safe, comfortable and graceful. He cannot do it with rear-wheel drive beyond certain limits; so he is looking to the possibilities offered by turning the engine around in its frame and using its power through the front wheels.

The potentialities of front drive in these vital respects have been indicated in racing cars embodying this principle. Again the speedway has served as a proving-ground.

First among the advantages indicated in this manner is that front drive will be less wasteful of engine power, making possible the use of smaller motors. Smaller motors cost less to build because they require less iron and steel. They use less gasoline and oil, which means that operation costs are reduced as well as construction costs.

Front-wheel drive will be less wasteful of power because it will be a close-coupled mechanism using the engine's output at its source. The transmission, a very short propeller shaft, and the differential will be a few inches apart instead of being stretched out the whole length of the car as in the conventional design. Where power travels so short a distance it has less chance to get lost. At present, transmission and differential are from three to six feet apart. Six or seven inches will suffice in front-wheel drive, according to engineering authorities.

A small engine and a six or seven-inch propeller shaft will mean the elimination of a great deal of excess weight. Tire wear will be correspondingly less. Here is another item of reduced expense that is significant.

Just how much smaller the engine will be when front-wheel drive comes into its own is a matter of speculation. Some idea may be gathered from the fact that the little straight-eight ninety-one-and-one-half-cubic-inch motors used in racing cars embodying this type of drive have been highly successful. The bore of such engines is only 2 11-16 inches, and certainly their performance, allowing for different conditions, compares most favorably with passenger-car motors of much larger cylinder size and larger stroke. It scarcely is to be expected that so tiny an engine will be used in passenger cars, but it is not to be doubted that reductions in size are possible.

Greater comfort, every motorist knows, is one of the goals toward which the car designer constantly directs his energies. Front-wheel drive is declared to hold especially bright promise in this respect. Comfort definitely is involved in the ratio of sprung to unsprung weight in a motor car and present design gives unsprung weight an uncomfortably larger margin than is desirable. For instance, the present rear axle carries the heavy differential gears, the axle shafts, the propeller shaft and the brake mechanism as well as the wheels and tires, all unsprung weight. If driving the car were to be made the function of the front axle, this weight would be removed. Then, the rear axle would carry an unsprung weight only the wheels, tires and brakes.

This might seem to be a process of making the rear of the car comfortable at the expense of the front, to which these units would be transferred. This is not the case, however, for in the relocation of propeller shaft and differential, they are certain to be carried on springs.

Incidentally, the removal of these units would permit the achievement of one goal toward which the engineer has striven for years; namely, the lowering of the body. At present, even in those cars which have adopted hypoid and worm gearing for this purpose, the propeller shaft still presents a definite limitation in respect to reduction of road clearance and the achievement of that low, rakish appearance that is so desirable.

In front drive, no limitation to lowering the body remains except that interposed by the character of the highway itself.

Safety is one of the most appealing features of front drive, and that it permits a lower body, of course, is a factor in this safety. Such a step means a lower center of gravity and a reduced center of mass, which would give the car an ability to hang to the road and would represent an amazing improvement over even what already has been done in this respect.

Front drive automatically knocks out one of the worst foes of the motorist—the skid. It is inherently free from this tendency. In addition, it permits the employment of the transmission brake in its fullest expression, thereby assuring an equalization of braking force that is absolute at all times. The value of this to safety is not difficult to comprehend.

One of the points in connection with this unfamiliar design, about which curiosity is natural, is that of steering. It would seem that an axle which was called upon to fulfill the function of driving the car would be difficult to steer. This is not the case, according to race-car designers and drivers. Steering is even simpler and less of an energy consumer in front drive, they declare. This is true even where a separate axle for steering is not used.

Front drive has not yet been tried in the United States save in racing cars. Europe has seen it adopted with success in several notable instances—by Voran and Rumpler in Germany, Italia in Italy and Parville in France.

In principle front drive is essentially sound. Every type of vehicle, except the automobile, is pulled instead of pushed. Animals always draw the conveyances of implements for which they provide power. Locomotives perform their tasks in front of the cars they pull. Airplanes, universally, are pullers; whereas, in the early types, planes were pushers. The principle of pulling has more advocates than the other.

The dilemma in which motor-car designers find themselves may cause them to adopt this principle next year, or at the latest, in 1929, unless the prophets have gone far astray.

MYRIAD OF DETAIL IN CAR PLANT

Interesting Sidelights in Auto Factory Revealed by Report

Serving 5000 meals a day is in itself somewhat of a job. But that is merely an incident in the daily routine of manufacturing Buicks. The magnitude of the plants of the Buick Motor Company at Flint, Mich., and the manufacturing activities are strikingly shown in figures just received here by Harold W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles. Here are some of the highlights of statistics:

The Buick plant uses 3,730,000 gallons of water every business day.

Five hundred and seventy-five telegrams received and sent every twenty-four hours.

Approximately 9000 telegrams are received and placed every day.

There are 252 fire-fighters—a large enough force to protect a good-sized city—on duty at all hours.

Ten thousand tons of freight are handled every day.

The generation of power, light and heat by the Buick power-house consumes 385 tons of coal each day.

The Buick cafeterias, maintained and operated for the convenience of the employees, serves 5000 meals every day.

For the welfare and protection of its employees, the Buick plant has its own hospital with a staff of surgeons and physicians. There is a complete X-ray department.

"The Buick plant is the largest self-contained automobile factory in the world," said Tuttle. "It is one and a half miles in length, five blocks wide and covers 200 acres of ground. Its entire facilities are utilized in the manufacture of Buicks. For instance, in the foundry alone 87,000 parts are the daily output. These require 1000 tons of metal.

Town Sedan Addition to Line Appears

Appearance in the Chrysler line has been made by a town sedan on the "72" chassis, said by its manufacturers to be one of the smartest cars ever produced by their factories. In addition to the performance, appearance and easy riding features which have created a record-breaking demand for the entire "72" model since its appearance a few weeks ago, the town sedan incorporates a number of improvements in trim and finish that give it a distinction all its own. It is on view at the salesrooms of Greer-Robbins Company, distributor in Southern California.

The quality fittings of all cars in the "72" model are found in the new town sedan. Upholstered in a beautiful dark taupe all-mohair plush and trimmed in the French pleat style, its unusually inviting interior offers the attractiveness of saddle-spring seat cushions and arm rests on each side and in the center of the rear seat. The latter rest swings up and fits flush into the back of the seat when not in use.

Notables in Visits to Auto Factory Center

Visitors from China, South Africa, Persia, Holland, Java, Colombia, and other foreign countries are registered among the 50,000 persons who have visited the plant of Dodge Brothers, Inc., in Detroit during the past year. The advanced methods of manufacturing are so widely recognized that the intimate study of them has brought representatives from even the most remote countries.

To facilitate close study of the various departments, the Dodge plant has a corps of well-trained men who guide visitors through the factory and explain details of importance and answer questions concerning the different operations. The trip, which takes the visitors through the plants includes the pressed-steel division, the motor and body assembly rooms, gear, heat-treating, enameling and metallurgical departments and affords an intimate view of the manufacture of automobiles and trucks.

Among the notables from India, who have visited the plant recently, was Urince Arjan Singh of Lahore, Punjab.

NEW ROAD TO DEATH VALLEY

Efforts of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors have resulted in opening up a new route into Death Valley which offers very good traveling conditions. The Arrowhead Trail is followed to Baker Station where the new route by way of Silver Lake, Bradbury Well, Greenwater and Ryan to Furnace Creek commences, advises the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

A balloon attachment for airplanes is said to keep the plane afloat in case it becomes disabled at sea.

NEW ROAD AIDS HUNTERS

Leading into the big-game country of the Upper Kern River in the Sierras, the Kern Canyon road is now in completed and excellent shape its entire distance from Bakersfield to the junction with the Kernville road at Bodfish. "Outdoor" Franklin, the Buick road scout, brought this word to the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles last week following a trip to Fairview-on-the-Kern, which is headquarters for game and fishing activities in that section.

The new route, forty-nine miles long—thirty of which is in picturesque Kern Canyon—was built by Kern county and convict labor. Following the windings of the Kern River, the road reduces the distance to Fairview-on-the-Kern, twenty-five miles and eliminates the hard, tortuous climb over the mountain from Caliente to Bodfish.

"The entire distance of the new road is gravel serviced and may be traveled in any kind of weather," Franklin reported to Harold W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles. "This is of particular importance to hunters because winter storms need not prevent them from reaching the heart of the best game sections left in the West. The fisherman, of course, will find the road a delight in the summer months.

"The new Kern Canyon road is a fine example of the new California method of building highways into the mountains. In making the trip in a Buick brougham, I was in high gear all the way from Los Angeles to Fairview-on-the-Kern, 204 miles. For the most part the road follows the water-level route but in places the canyon is so narrow at the bottom that it has been necessary to go higher on the walls.

"Throughout the entire distance there is ample room for two cars to pass and the average driver can make the entire distance from Los Angeles to Fairview-on-the-Kern in seven hours and be well within the legal speed limits.

"From Fairview-on-the-Kern Wortley Brothers run pack trains to points of interest in all parts of the Sierras, including Mt. Whitney and the big-game country. In fishing season Fairview is the base of operations to the upper waters of the Kern and to the higher lakes in which are found the famous Golden trout. In the Northwest the police are famed for 'getting their man.' That applies to game in this section. I was told that no hunting party packed in without returning with their deer or bear.

"But not only the sportsmen seek this section. The Kern Canyon country at Fairview is becoming famed as a rest and health center. Having an elevation of 3200 feet it is in the pine timber. Accommodations, including meals and cabins and complete hunting and packing equipment, have been provided for visitors.

"On my trip I went through one of the most beautiful falls of snow I ever have seen. The whitened pine trees were like a great fairyland."

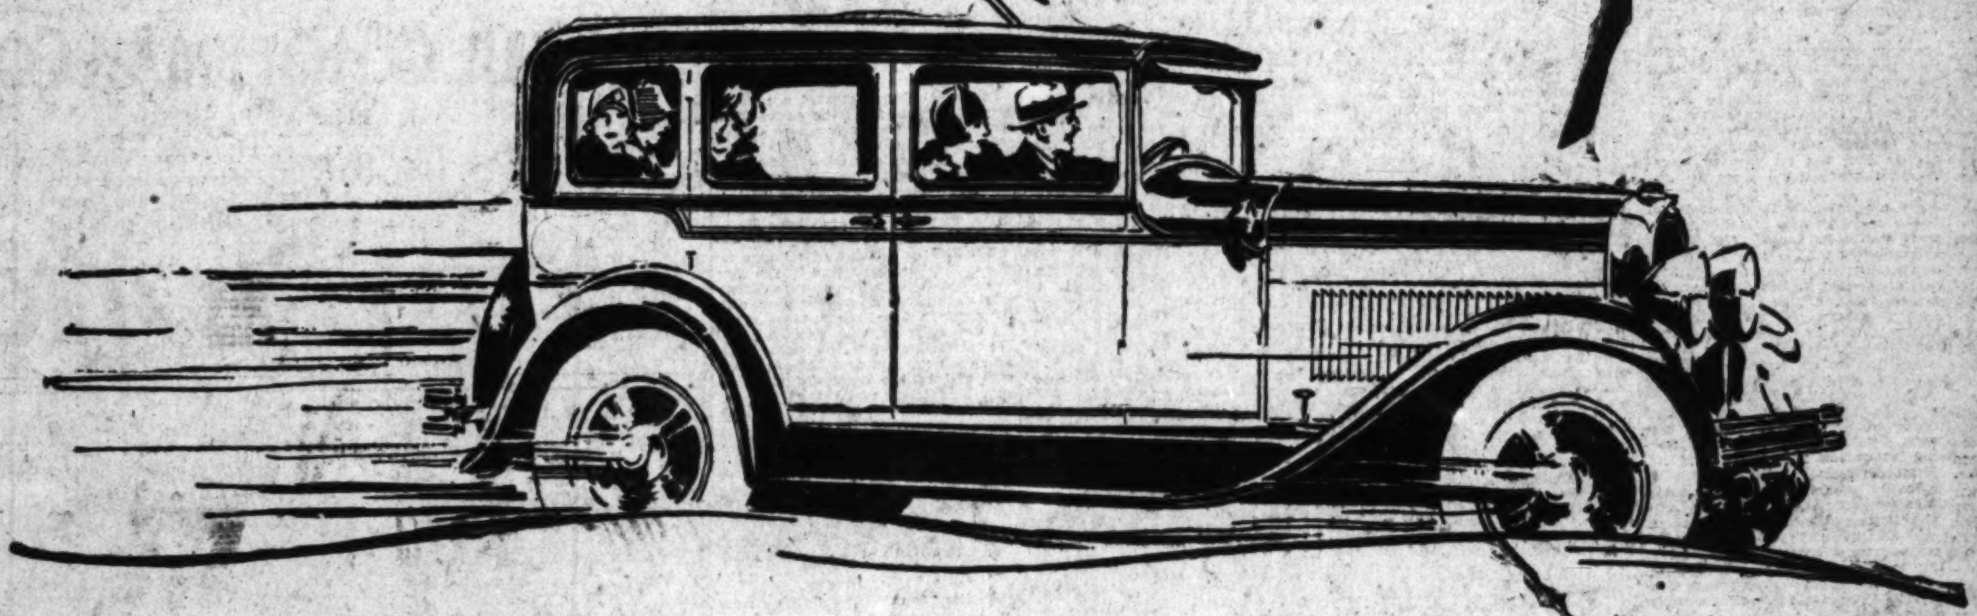
ANNOUNCING

A PRE-SHOW EXHIBIT

The New Marmon 78, which will be featured at the 1928 automobile shows, is now presented at an advance showing in our salesrooms.

The new

MARMON 78



—a new finer, larger and faster straight-eight at moderate price—

The new MARMON 78

YOU will like the New Marmon 78 because it has everything to a brilliant degree.

First, it is a truly remarkable performer. The new 86-horsepower straight-eight motor seems to deliver the power in streams. You are never conscious of the engine picking up the load. In hill climbing, running on the open road, acceleration, and flexibility in traffic, it offers an open challenge to any previous experience.

Secondly, it is a beautiful car. It has long, graceful lines that end with a sweep at the rear. Its exterior fitments are new in motif, and everything looks as though it belonged. The interior is an entirely new effect in the decorator's art. On a wheelbase of 120 inches Marmon engineers have achieved the comfort dimensions heretofore considered possible only in cars of 130-inch wheelbase, or more!

Thirdly, the "78" is a marvelous riding car. Marmons for years have been noted for this quality—but the "78" has it even more conspicuously perhaps than ever before.

Fourthly, it establishes a high standard of value. Certainly no car can give more in good looks, comfort, performance and utility than does the "78" at its moderate price.

PERFORMANCE FEATS

Top Speed—From 70 to 80 miles per hour, depending on driving conditions.

Acceleration—Instant—smooth—sparkling. (Tests show 10 to 50 miles per hour in 15 to 16 seconds.)

Hill Climbing—On repeated tests on famous Uniontown Hill, Pa., it mounted the crest in high gear from a standing start at the bottom, at a speed of 43 miles per hour. Nothing in our experience can approach it.

Riding Ease—Extremely long chassis springs (more than 79% of wheelbase) mounted in rubber have produced what we believe to be the easiest riding car in the world.

Gasoline Economy—In average driving, gasoline consumption is from 13 to 18 miles per gallon.

Six Standard Body Styles. Prices—

$1895 and upward—all under $2,000 f. o. b. factory

MARMON HAS NEW EIGHT

last year's capture of and enthusiasm at the New Show, which opened metropolis yesterday, has again taken the stage model 78, successor to straight eight of last its debut at the big display, this new Marmon of attraction. Simultaneously with the New York opening displays are being held important cities and at salesrooms of the Company, Southern and Arizona distributor.

The car being larger, a greater piston displacement is employed in the engine. Likewise, in clutch, transmission, rear axle, springs, steering gear, tires, etc., greater size and strength are provided to carry greater power with increased safety and economy.

In the engine the bore is increased to 3 15-16 inches, while the stroke remains at 4 inches, giving a piston displacement of 216.8 cubic inches, or an increase of 14 per cent. At the same time, by an ingenious improvement in the exclusive Marmon down-draft intake manifold, coupled with the use of larger valves, the power output has been increased 34½ per cent to eighty-six horsepower. Some idea of the remarkable increase in engine efficiency, accompanied by an equally gratifying decrease in gasoline consumption, can be gained from the fact that the model "78" engine turns out one horsepower for each two and a half cubic inches of displacement and one horsepower for each eight and three-tenths pounds of weight, inclusive of the weight of the larger clutch and transmission.

Another interesting factor contributing to the increase in power output is the reduction of two ounces per cylinder in the weight of the piston assembly, giving greater acceleration, power and smoothness, accomplished by employment of a new material for the pistons. It is aluminum alloy which can be heat treated to give as much surface hardness as cast iron, thus removing the last objection to the light aluminum piston.

In the transmission the outstanding change is an increase in size, with improvements in the bearing layout and the use of completely ground gears.

In the rear axle, gears and housings are larger and stronger, the chief change being in raising the gear ratio to 4.9 to 1, resulting in a smoother general car performance as well as greater economy and higher maximum speed. The top speed is given as between seventy and eighty miles per hour, and more, important to the car user, a very "sweet" sustained performance at between forty-five and sixty.

The spring suspension which has brought the Marmon "8" praise for its easy riding is retained, the springs being longer to take care of the increase in wheelbase and wider for greater strength. The new rubber shackles are also increased in size. Other detail changes are found in the frame, steering gear, larger brakes, with simpler, more direct linkage, front axle.

SALES GAIN TURNED IN BY MACHINE

Increase Registered During Year When Conditions Not Advancing Generally

Oldsmobile is one of the few companies that sold more automobiles in 1927 than it sold in 1926, according to reports from Oldsmobile officials. It is pointed out that this gain in sales has been made in a year when the automotive industry as a whole showed a decline estimated at 20 per cent.

This is the third consecutive year that the combined domestic retail sales and exports of Oldsmobile have shown an increase.

Commenting upon this record, I. J. Reuter, president and general manager of the Oldsmobile company, said: "In view of the sales record made by Oldsmobile, during what might be termed an off year in the industry, we are entering 1928 optimistically. In so far as Oldsmobile is concerned we are confident that 1928 will be a prosperous one with new sales records in the offing.

"General optimism prevails regarding the new year. This feeling is conservatively expressed by President Coolidge in his annual message to Congress which, in part, reads:

" 'Stocks of goods are moderate and a wholesome caution is prevalent. Rates of interest for industry, agriculture and government have been reduced. Savers and investors are providing capital for new construction in industry and public works. The purchasing power of agriculture has increased. If the people maintain that confidence which they are entitled to have in themselves, in each other and in America, a comfortable prosperity will continue.' "

IS INFERIORITY UNIVERSAL COMPLEX?

The much-discussed modern malady defined as the "inferiority complex" seems to be a human characteristic as common as the appetite for food. No one is entirely free from it, if we are to believe some of the psychologists, and we are led to the conclusion that the struggle of life is very largely a continuous battle with this complex.

In dealing with the subject a recent magazine writer quotes freely from the views of Dr. Adler of Vienna, who is probably one of the greatest of living experts on complexes. Life, as he sees it, is mostly a process of camouflaging the inherent sense of inferiority and fooling ourselves into believing that we are something which the subconscious is persistently trying to remind us that we are not and never can be. The measure of our success in life is determined by the extent to which we can crush the complex and fool ourselves and the rest of the world.

The view of Triumphant Man as an essentially abashed creature perpetually ridden by his sense of inferiority may be pessimstic, but there is encouragement in the thought that in thousands of instances he ultimately succeeds in riding the complex instead of being ridden by it. And there is a certain solace in the thought that even the ruthless autocrat or the perfect snob can never be sure that his inferiority complex will not some time, in some way, take the bit between the teeth and run away with him. We may reasonably suspect that even the great Napoleon never ceased to be bothered by this fear.—[Providence Journal.

Le Grand Guest at Convention

E. J. Le Grand of the Federal Motor Truck Company of California, is attending the seventh annual convention of the Federal Star Club at Detroit as a guest of the Federal Motor Truck Company. Membership in the Star Club is limited to a comparatively few men who have established outstanding records for salesmanship through the year and constitutes the highest honor conferred by the factory upon members of its world-wide field organization. The qualifications are based upon such a high standard of achievement that it is estimated that only one salesman in forty becomes eligible for membership.

HUDSON, ESSEX NEW MODELS PLACED ON DISPLAY HERE

New Hudson-Essex automobiles went on display yesterday at the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company and at all other Hudson and Essex dealers in the Los Angeles territory. Their arrival here was timed to coincide with their formal appearance at the New York show.

The new line offers a complete series of models with ten closed models. These are the Hudson standard four-door sedan, and the custom built victoria, landau sedan and seven-passenger sedan on the 127-inch wheelbase chassis; a coupe with rumble seat, a coach and a four-door sedan on the 118-inch chassis. There are a four-door sedan, coach and coupe with rumble seat in the Essex line.

Essex this year appears with Bendix four-wheel brakes. In making the change in the front wheel assembly when the four-wheel brakes were added, a heavier antifriction steering gear has been introduced. This is a ball-bearing type. It is said to be a feature peculiar to Essex.

The appearance of both cars has been altered. Both the Hudson and Essex have higher and more slender radiators and this effect is heightened by the shutters, which are cleanly patterned and vertical in design.

BOTH CARS APPEAR LOWER

Motometers on both cars have been removed to the dash and their place taken by a sculptured ornament. Both cars are fitted with head lamps of Colonial design and similar saddle lamps mounted on the cowl. In the Hudson all lamps are nickle and in the Essex the rims are nickled while the main lamp-bodies are in brilliant black. To complete the distinctiveness of the front end views, all cars have wide, sweeping fenders, extra narrow front body pillars and distinctively shaped visors.

It is noticeable from the side that the roof lines are new in design, that the rear quarters are attractively curved and that the windows are shaped in horizontal design. All windows are set off by recessed reveals and striping. The running boards are lower to the ground and are covered with rubber matting.

The interiors of the cars have received special attention to produce the maximum in utility and richness of finish. The new Essex bodies are roomier than in any previous cars, the low hung effect having been obtained without lessening any of the head room. The rear quarters are designed to give considerable more shoulder room for the rear seat passengers. The upholstering is of shades that match the body colors.

The panel between the windshield and the dash is of a burl walnut design while just beneath the instrument board is of ebony-black lacquer. Set into this background the instruments, including the motometer, oil and gasoline gauges, ammeter and speedometer are grouped under one glass.

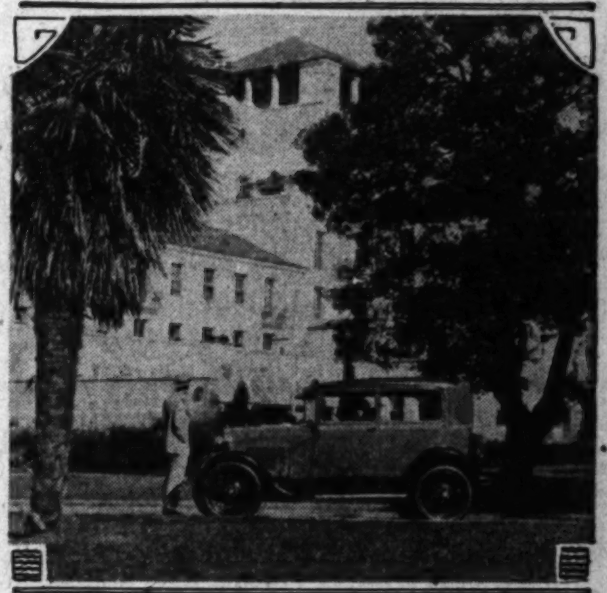
IMPROVED STEERING WHEEL

Another feature in both cars is the new steering wheel. This is slender in design, formed with finger scallops and colored an ebony black to match the instrument boards. The steering wheel jacket on both Hudson and Essex is nickled as far as the dash, and where it is fastened to the instrument board a ball-bearing eliminates all possibility of binding. On Essex, the steering wheel carries the parabeam light control, hand throttle and horn button. The automatic windshield wiper is hidden in the header over the windshield—a neat and unique construction.

In accordance with 1928 styles, the coach and sedan are built with two side windows each. They slide between felt pads against which is maintained a slight spring pressure which minimizes looseness and rattles. In the coupe the rear window lowers for the passengers in the rumble seat.

Both cars are again powered with their high-compression, high-efficiency motors that have been engineered to operate smoothly on any type of gasoline. This year, the motors have been refined and intensively developed to assure even smoother and more powerful performance, it is claimed.

New Car Display to Continue



By popular demand the new Ford car display at Grauman's Chinese will be continued during the coming week. This display comprises a tudor sedan, the sport and standard coupes. Preceding the showing of the cars on the stage there is a novel motion-picture showing the manufacture and performance of the new Ford car. The audience is invited on the stage to inspect the cars at the conclusion of each performance.

YOSEMITE TRAVEL HEAVY

Very heavy travel was experienced in Yosemite Valley over the New Year's holidays due to the excellent winter sports which were offered by the snowfall on December 28, last, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

New Erskine Car at Lower Price

The new Erskine in the two-passenger sport coupe and four-passenger sport coupe are illustrated here. These are but two of the models in the new line announced, at substantially reduced prices.

STUDEBAKER OUT WITH NEW STRAIGHT EIGHT LINE

Heading the 1928 line of Studebaker automobiles, the new President made its first local appearance here Monday at the salesrooms of the Paul G. Hoffman Company, local Studebaker-Erskine dealers.

The new President is the first car to be made by Studebaker with an eight-in-line motor, and it is asserted that engineers in designing the motor and body have set a new standard for excellence. For two years Studebaker engineers have been engaged in developing this car and it is presented to the motoring public after repeated and constant testing.

The new eight-in-line motor has a bore and stroke of 3 3-8 by 4 3-8 inches and develops 100 horsepower at comparatively low engine speed. Tests on the 800-acre proving ground of the corporation show that the largest body model, the seven-passenger sedan, will make seventy-six miles per hour.

D. G. Roos, former chief engineer of Pierce-Arrow, Marmon and Locomobile, and W. S. James, formerly head of the Bureau of Standards, Power and Oil Section, assisted by a staff of associated engineers, developed the new car. This same staff, headed by Mr. Roos and Mr. James, is also responsible for the creation of the Studebaker Commander.

Bodies in the new car are full-vision steel type, unit welded. Mechanical four-wheel brakes incorporating amplified action pedal pressure provide easy brake control. An exceptionally low center of gravity and the method of mounting the rear springs, which are five feet long, give the President great stability and road safety at all speeds. Steering uses cam and lever steering gear of an advanced type. Wheelbase is 131 inches.

One-piece full-crown fenders flank the radiator shell. The radiator, especially designed to harmonize with the new car, new type stream-lined headlights and cowl lights, and the bright bead separating cowl and hood are all chromium plated. Running from cowl to rear quarter below the windows is a wide panel which contrasts with the rich coloring of the windows set in deep reveals, together with the narrow windshield pillars essential to driving safely.

The President is offered in two body types, five and seven-passenger sedan. Two additional models—President State sedans for five and seven passengers, are furnished with wire wheels as standard equipment and carry two spare wheels and tires mounted on the front fenders.

All five-passenger sedans are equipped with a trunk, mounted on a rack in the rear. The seven-passenger models carry a folding trunk rack.

The interiors of the five and seven-passenger models are finished in broadcloth and mohair and present a new note of custom luxury and good taste. Deep-cushioned seats are wide and form fitting, with arm rests in the rear compartment. Interior molding is walnut finished with etched silver medallions on the door panels. Other interior fittings include dome and corner lights, the former automatically operated with the opening of the door, assist cords, silk curtains on rear windows, vanity case and smoking set. Interior hardware is of beautiful platinum and bright silver finish. The instrument board in the front compartment is of new and attractive design with all instruments grouped in a dull silver frame and indirectly illuminated. Both models have cigar lighters. The seven-pasenger sedan has an additional lighter in the smoking set in the rear compartment. Conveniently located on the steering column is a coincidental lock to both steering and ignition, illuminated by a special dash lamp placed directly over it. An electric gasoline gauge and motor temperature indicator are grouped with clock and the usual speedometer, oil gauge and ammeter in rectangular frames on the instrument panel.

CAR REFINISHING JOB DESCRIBED BY EXPERT

There is no good reason why delivery wagons should all be painted black any more than there is why all busses should be painted white. We are coming rapidly to know that a light business wagon or truck can express not only the name of the business and the proprietor in letters on its side, but can also have a real and constant selling appeal as it goes through the streets because of the colors used in its finish.

In fact, the lettering on business wagons and busses is a subject worthy of much consideration by itself. If you want your wagon to look long and efficient and powerful avoid these tall up-and-down glaring letters as you would the plague. They may be visible a block away, though often, because of their eccentric design they are scarcely readable even at ten feet. But, even if they are visible, they often destroy more than they create by making the wagon look either eccentric or squat and dumpy. The same applies to a bus. I have seen several beautiful busses refinished with some skill in color that have been literally spoiled by the ungracious flamboyance of their signs. The signs on a business conveyance must be as harmonious as the rest of its line and color or else it undoes the whole effect.

BUSINESS COLORS

Different sorts of business, of course, demand different color combinations. But as a rule the trend is to a greater delicacy of color than it used to be. Laundry trucks, for instance, may well choose from the soft pastel colors such as Talma brown, chalice, brilliantine and brocatelle green, expressing somewhat the crisp, clean idea that a laundry seeks to leave with us.

Neighborhood stores also should consider the colors of their delivery cars just as carefully as they do the signs over their doors. They are a constant advertisement for the people of their vicinity. It is possible to give color personality to even a coal truck. Black and orange and other dark colors used discriminatingly on coal trucks will make them agreeable to the eye and at the same time will look clean.

FOR BUSSES

Busses, both interurban and city, are rapidly growing features of our transportation method. And what colors to finish them? Well, the range is endless, but this fundamental thought will answer many of the complicated questions that lie around the subject. City streets are crowded with traffic. Why add to the apparent chaos by painting city busses in bright and garish colors? Better use two tones of gray trimmed with scarlet or some of the closely related harmonies of gray blues and greens.

On the other hand, interurban busses have a problem quite different. Many times they are the sole means of transportation for the people living along their routes. Their coming is looked forward to with eagerness. They should be to some extent treated like sport cars in color. Let their tones be brilliant so they will not disappear against the greens and browns of the landscape.

And, in busses in particular, the distribution of color is important. In every case it should be so handled that it will make the bus seem stable. Tipping should be far from the mind of the passenger. So dark, rich colors should be kept low and the lighter, sky-reflecting colors should be used high on the car. The impression then will be that of stability. The lower part of the car will seem to be a part of the road itself.

THE INTERIOR

And, inside the bus, color should be used so as to give it an air of spaciousness. Such cream and pastel tones as cigarette or soft bright greens as nyanza and zanzibar will create a feeling of roominess and freedom. And also it will make the passengers less likely to become tired and fretful on a long trip.

We are just beginning to enter upon a period of widening color uses. And when it is remembered that you can make your car look long or short, charming or eccentric, comfortable or not, by the use of color, the subject becomes one for every motorist to consider.

REMEMBERS A CENTURY

Yesterday Mrs. Jane Speer of Bollinger county, Missouri, celebrated her 109th birthday anniversary, and she celebrated it with a zest that might have been expected of a youngster of 80. Even those who think they are favored by length of years will find it difficult to comprehend a span of life that reaches back more than a century. Mrs. Speer was born in the administration of James Monroe, the fifth president, and she confidently expects to live until the thirtieth President is inaugurated.

When Andrew Jackson retired from his eight-year term, Jane Speer was 19 years of age, and she must recall much discussion of the first "President of the people" and the stirring events of his period in the White House. This centenarian, plus, was married at 18. Of the twelve children born to her, seven still live. She has had 225 descendants—her own children, fifty-three grandchildren, 136 great-grandchildren and twenty-four great-great-grandchildren.

Our congratulations to this hardy pioneer, who still is a citizen of Missouri and still finds herself disposed and able to take her part in an active, if narrowing, circle of our social order. May her years increase, and may her hopes of adding another "great" prefix to her line of descendants within her lifetime be realized—[Kansas City Times.

Upkeep Cost Gives Truck Classification

Operating costs are one of the most important factors that demonstrate whether a motor truck is an asset or a liability. The commercial vehicle that makes a profit for its owner is the one that works every day with a minimum upkeep expense and a minimum fuel bill as compared with the work it does, declared William E. Bush, distributor of Pierce-Arrow trucks.

Economies of the Pierce-Arrow truck are known—not guessed at—and all Pierce-Arrow owners will tell you that, he further stated.

"There is a daily saving in gasoline because the dual-valve engines that power these vehicles use 25 per cent less fuel than single-valve engines of the same bore and stroke. That is a saving of 25 cents out of every $1. The dual-valve engine produces 25 1-2 per cent more power than the single-valve engine of the same dimensions," said Mr. Bush.

ARMY MULE GETS KICKED

Motor Units Threaten to Displace Old Fixture of the American Military Forces; Problem Now Under Study

And now the army mule goes on trial for his life.

From Washington comes word that the War Department has issued orders for a thoroughgoing study of army transit problems to determine to what extent a motor can replace animal power. The study is to embrace the "upkeep" factors of both vehicle and beast. Hay and oat bills are to be compared with the gasoline and oil costs.

This mule-motor investigation involves the activities of practically every branch of army service. Undoubtedly the net result of the investigation will instigate the purchasing of light trucks, heavy trucks, tractors, trailers and specialized motor vehicles of other types.

Long a symbol of the Army's stubborn fighting spirit, the army mule has reached the point where machinery has usurped his position. It will only be a matter of days before the last mobile-eared veteran will have received his honorable discharge. The passing of these beasts of battle will rank as a sentimental event along with pensioning off the fire horses by the firemen.

From early colonial days mules have been associated with the activities of the American Army. George Washington was one of the first martial leaders to recognize the sterling qualities of the equine hybrid. Mules hauled artillery at New Orleans, at Chapultepec, at Bull Run, at San Juan, and even in the World War they played an important part in the transport service. All honor is due this dun-colored quadruped.

Watt Moreland contributed his share toward ousting the army mule. In the days when our armed forces had no motorized equipment, Moreland furnished trucks for tests of every description.

The new Chandler special six coupe with a rumble seat has eight inches of springs and padding for comfort in the back, say officials of the W. P. Herbert Company, local Chandler representatives.

Pals on Gridiron and Highway

Jesse Hibbs and Morley Drury, Southern California's two famous all-American football stars, are close friends, but they differ as to taste in transportation. Morley likes one of his classmate's Locomobile 8-70 sedans, while Hibbs prefers the "single blessedness" of his one-seater, four cylinder flea-mobile, the gift of an admiring football fan.

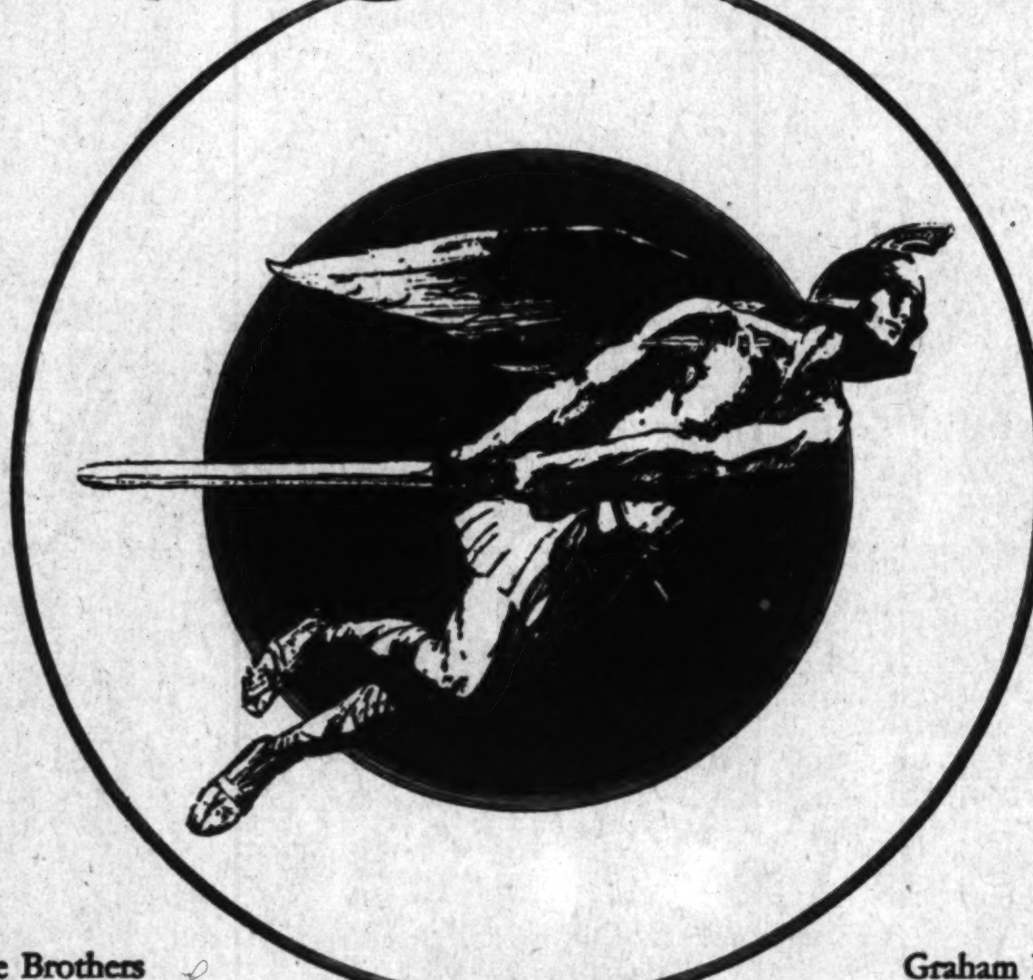
A BRIEF HISTORY OF A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT



IN THE Spring of 1925, Dodge Brothers undertook an important and gigantic task—which is now complete.

Since its inception in 1914 Dodge Brothers had specialized exclusively in a four-cylinder product. During thirteen years more than two million units of that product were sold to America and to the world.

It is unnecessary here to comment on the singular merits of that famous Four.

It was honored on the battlefields of war, and achieved equal distinction on the highways and byways of peace.

Its long life and complete dependability had become an adage.

Meanwhile, however, times were changing and tastes were changing with them.

While still as important as ever, dependability alone was no longer sufficient.

Greater speed and comfort, more style and luxury were the growing prepossessions of the hour.

Six-cylinder motors were gradually becoming practical at popular prices. Progressive engineering dictated the revision and refinement of existing four-cylinder power plants.

Two years ago Dodge Brothers appraised its task and embarked upon a program designed to place it and its Dealer Organization in a position on January 1, 1928, second to none in the industry.

Quietly, with deliberation and dispatch, and without interrupting the regular course of production and service to customers, the new program went swiftly forward

The astonishing results of this great achievement are now known to the world.

It is doubtful if industrial annals can cite, over a similar period, an achievement so outstanding.

A smart, swift, low-priced and immensely popular quality Four has replaced its famous predecessor.

The Senior Six, outstanding in performance, quality and luxurious appointment, has been created.

Graham Brothers Trucks and Motor Coaches (formerly exclusively Fours) have been supplemented by Sixes. Fifty new types have been added. The capacities are broadened to range from one-half ton to two-ton, all resulting in the most complete and capable line of work cars known, and with prices ranging from $670 to $4290.

Then Thursday came The Victory—a Six for $1045 and up—the most spectacular engineering achievement of the decade.

These accomplishments, one following the other in steady progression, have now provided Dodge Brothers Dealers throughout the world with the most diversified and comprehensive line of passenger and commercial vehicles ever manufactured and sold by a single organization.

For every need and purse there is now a Dodge Brothers vehicle built dependably and in full recognition of the progressive ideals of today and tomorrow.

Adhering rigidly to the sound and honorable standards of a great past, Dodge Brothers have met the challenge of a still more exacting future.

Los Angeles Aviation Activities Assure Centering of Great New Industry Her

AIR ACTIVITY CENTERS HERE

Ford Tour Western Terminus in City This Year

National Races Scheduled as Attraction

Plane Industry Leadership Held Locally

Just as 1927 was a year of daring feats in aviation so the year 1928 is going to be for Southern California a period during which the city of Los Angeles will become the center of a commercial development in the aeronautical industry which will place this area far ahead of the world in reaping the rewards of flying as a business.

FORD TOUR HERE

Projects now outlined in the field of aviation will focus the attention of the country upon the city during the year. The Ford Tour, which has grown in importance constantly as it has served to demonstrate the commercial possibilities of the airplane, will this year have Los Angeles as its western terminal. The annual convention of the National Aeronautical Association is to be held here this year, and will serve to bring the most prominent men of the industry, financiers, designers and pilots, to this section.

GREATEST EVENT

The national air races, the most important aviation event of the year, will be held here in the fall. These races will bring thousands of visitors who are vitally and financially interested in flying. In connection with this program will be held the first national airplane show, according to present plans.

There are other factors which make the commercial advancement of Southern California assured. Perhaps the greatest is the fact that the great distance flights, flights of exploration, and attacks on existing records will be made from the coast of Southern California. The Atlantic has been repeatedly conquered, both over the north and south routes, and the vast expanse of the Pacific Ocean now stands as a challenge to the pioneers of aviation.

FLIGHTS ORGANIZED

Flights are being organized and prizes posted for their successful accomplishment in an attempt to link California with Australia, Japan and China in nonstop efforts. Two expeditions to Australia are ready and will attempt the flight with the first fine weather of spring. A major in the Chinese army is in this country preparing for a nonstop flight to China in a plane now nearing completion in San Diego. A plane will soon be completed in a Hollywood factory which will be used by Capt. Wilkins in flights of exploration over unknown north polar territory.

Although the tri-engined Fokker monoplane, Spirit of California, failed by three hours of setting a new endurance record, a new and probably successful attack on this record will be made by this plane soon.

SEVEN LINES HERE

There are now seven air lines operating out of Los Angeles on regular schedule. These are the Pacific Air Transport, Western Air Express, Maddux Air Lines, Los Angeles-Phoenix-Tucson line operated by the Aero Corporation of California, American Airways scenic tour to San Francisco, the scenic tour to San Diego, and the Ryan Airway. All of these lines have been financially successful and will profit tremendously by the coming aviation activities.

To crown the achievements which will certainly make Los Angeles supreme in the aviation industry before the close of 1928, there are more than a dozen aircraft factories in Southern California now producing planes of worthy design which, with the acquisition of capital certain to be attracted to the local industry, will make Los Angeles the center for the production of aircraft and will attract the majority of aircraft manufacturers to locate in this vicinity.

RECALL METHODS OF MOODY AND SANKEY

Undoubtedly, in their day, Moody and Sankey's methods seemed sensational enough. It was Moody's aim to make religion exciting. He has been compared to Barnum in his use of publicity.

If Moody were riding in a train he would turn to the man next to him and ask simply: "Are you a Christian?" and follow it up with the equivalents of later persuasive slogans: "If not, why not?" and "eventually, why not now?" Harper once talked to the miscellaneous audience of a club car about the instant necessity of excavating the ruins of Baalbek so movingly that there was not a dry eye in the car—or a checkbook unimpaired.

An enormous influence tending to spread and perpetuate the spirit of Moody's revival was the "Gospel Hymns." Everybody knew them. My own first childish intimation that something unusual was on in Boston was hearing my uncle, who was known in the family to be a man of pleasure, singing

Hallelujah, 'tis done
I believe on the Son
I'm saved by the blood of the Crucified One.

as casually as he might have sung "Over the Garden Wall." The first collection of "Gospel Hymns No. 1" contained certain crude but popular songs such as "Pull for the Shore Sailor" and "Only an Armor Bearer," and "I Am So Glad That Jesus Loves Me."

The succeeding volumes were of higher quality, Mr. Sankey's naive talent having been reinforced by others. "Hold the Fort" was in "Gospel Hymns No. 2," and "Dare to be a Daniel." Also "Whiter than Snow," with its skeptical inquiry, "What, Whiter than Snow?" sung in a tone of extreme incredulity and followed by a terrific shout of assurance. "Yes, Wash Me and I Shall be Whiter than Snow."

The effect of the hymns was to put a sort of jazz into religion. They divided popular favor with Gilbert and Sullivan, and temporarily got away with the larger share.—[Robert Morss Lovett in the New Republic.

THOUGHTFUL DEALER

Therein Lies His Safety

Spirit of St. Louis

The half of "WE" pictured here, the plane Spirit of St. Louis, gets probably more care than its intrepid aviator partner. The motor and other parts of the plane that has grown famous along with the aviator who first crossed the Atlantic in an airplane get the greatest of attention and care with regular overhauls. This is just another of the contributing factor's to Lindy's success in the air. The motor is being taken out of his plane here for overhauling.

GASOLINE PRICES VARY

Survey Shows Wide Divergence in Cost of Fuel Regardless of Hauling Distance

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Gasoline prices in the United States range all the way from 10 cents a gallon to 27 cents for straight run and from 13 cents a gallon to 29 cents for high test gas.

The wide variation in the price of gasoline throughout the country was revealed in a check-up by 950 motor clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association and reported to national headquarters here.

The check-up by the national motoring body showed that on November 22, gasoline was selling at forty-seven different prices.

WIDE SURVEY

In order to secure an accurate picture of the gasoline price range on a given day, identical forms were sent to every A.A.A. club throughout the country; the local clubs in turn checked the prices in their respective areas and returned the forms to Washington.

The lowest price on the date of the check-up was 10 cents for straight run and 13 cents for high-test gasoline at Peoria, Ill., and the highest was 27 cents for straight run and 29 cents for high test, at Phoenix, Ariz.

Proximity to sources of supply appeared to be a negligible factor in determining current prices, says the A.A.A., since prices were in many instances higher close to the oil fields than they were at points to which a long haul was necessary. Prices at tidewater were on the whole higher than those charged at inland points.

20 CENTS HERE

The average price at points along the Atlantic Seaboard on November 22, the date of the nation-wide check-up, was 22 cents a gallon. The average price in the Mississippi Valley was 19 cents a gallon. The average price on the Pacific Coast was 20 cents a gallon.

One of the most striking features of the A.A.A. survey is its disclosure of the rapidity with which prices change within small areas where basic conditions such as rentals, supply and demand are the same. Says the A. A. A. statement:

"On the west coast of Florida, for instance, there was a range of prices varying 5 cents in a distance of thirty-two miles. Gasoline sold for 18 cents in Tampa, 20 cents in Plant City, twenty-one miles away, and for 23 at Lakeland, eleven miles from Plant City. Another instance, in Indiana, disclosed that straight-run gasoline sold for 19.3 cents and high-test gasoline for 22.3 cents at Columbus, while it sold for 15.3 and 18.3 respectively, at Edinburg and Franklin, ten and twenty miles away."

ILLINOIS VARIES

The widest price range was in Illinois where the price of gas ranged from 10 cents a gallon to 19½ cents for straight-run gasoline and from 13 to 22 cents a gallon for high test. Illinois has a 2-cent gasoline tax and in this, as well as in other States where the price fluctuated widely from city to city and town to town, it was shown that the tax is negligible as a factor in the wide fluctuation of prices.

The A.A.A. statement continues:

"In the New England States, far from the oil fields, and one of the greatest consuming sections, the price of gasoline varied 7 cents, ranging from 15 cents a gallon to 22 cents for straight run and from 18 cents a gallon to 25 cents for high test gas.

"Gasoline prices in the States of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, comprising the North Atlantic area, varied 11 cents on both varieties of gas, the range in the straight run being from 12 cents a gallon to 23 cents and for high test from 18 cents a gallon to 29 cents.

"Price variations of 10 cents for straight run and 4 cents for high-test gas were shown for the Middle Atlantic States, the range being from 15 to 25 cents per gallon for straight run and from 24 to 28 cents for high test.

"The four South Atlantic States, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina, showed price variations of 8 cents for straight run gas and 3 cents for high-test gasoline. The lowest price for the former was 16 cents and the highest 24 cents a gallon, while high test sold from 24 to 27 cents.

"In the Gulf States the price variation was 11 cents. Straight run gas sold from 13 to 24 cents a gallon and high test from 16 to 27 cents per gallon.

TWELVE-CENT CHANGE

"The Southwest States showed a variation of 12 cents in the price of straight run and 9 cents in the price of high-test gasoline. The range was from 15 to 27 cents for the former and 20 to 29 cents for the latter.

"In the East Central States, comprising Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kentucky and Tennessee, the price variation was 13 cents for both varieties of gasoline. The range was from 10 to 23 cents per gallon for straight run and 15 to 26 cents for high test.

"Variations of 7 cents for both straight run and high-test gas were shown for the eight West Central States, comprising Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Arkansas, South Dakota and North Dakota. The range varied from 14 to 21 cents per gallon for the former and from 17 to 24 cents for the latter.

"Variations of 2 1-2 cents in straight-run gas and 1 cent in high test was shown for Montana and Idaho, in the Northwest. The range of prices was from 23 cents per gallon to 25 1-2 cents for straight run and from 27 1-2 to 28 1-2 cents for high-test gas.

"Gasoline prices varied 10 cents for both varieties in the Western States of Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada. The range was from 16 to 26 cents for straight gasoline and from 19 to 29 cents for high-test gas.

"The three Pacific Coast States, Oregon, Washington and California, reported variations of 4 cents in straight-run gasoline and 5 1-2 cents in high test. The price range was from 21 to 25 cents for the former and from 23 to 28 1-2 cents for the latter."

ALPHONSE'S SHELTERED LIFE

The intention of the French government to close the partridge shooting season because of the scarcity of birds recalls to the Manchester Guardian a story concerning the paucity of other game in some French preserves.

An English guest at a chateau near Paris was taken out rabbit shooting by his host. After a while a bunny appeared, and the Englishman raised his gun.

"Stop! Stop!" cried his host. "That is Pierre. We never shoot at Pierre."

After a long interval a second rabbit was sighted.

"Ah!" exclaimed the host, "now you can shoot. That is Alphonse. We always shoot Alphonse!"—[New York Times.

The general Christmas custom in Spain is to have a family dinner where none but blood relations sit down, friends being seldom invited to the Christmas feast.

DIGGINS JOINS MADDUX

Veteran Flyer and Aviation Executive Now With New Associates

R. C. Diggins, veteran flyer and aviation executive, has just been appointed traffic manager for Maddux Air Lines, Inc., and already has started active work with the company.

This announcement was made yesterday by J. L. Maddux, president of the company which bears his name, and which operates Ford trimotored air transports regularly between Los Angeles and San Diego.

Diggins, with the traffic department of the Western Air Express since the establishment of that mail-carrying company twenty months ago, replaces Will N. Fox of Long Beach as traffic manager for Maddux. Fox, it is stated, resigned in order to engage in other aviation activities.

The new Maddux traffic head is a real veteran of aviation. He was a flyer in France with the Ninety-second Squadron and still holds his commission.

After the war he owned his own company in Chicago from 1919 to 1923. He has trained more than 400 students and has flown over 3000 hours. He was one of the charter members of the National Aeronautical Association, formed in 1921 at Detroit, and is a member of the Professional Pilots' Association.

Diggins holds the honor of having been the first aviator to carry an express shipment in the United States, having transported a shipment of silk for Marshall-Field Company from New York to Chicago in May, 1921, for the American Express Company. He used a six-passenger Ansaldo, an Italian plane, and the first cabin liner ever brought into America.

LONDON DAILY IS SOLD SOLD TO BERRYS

After three generations of control by Joseph Moses Levy, by Levy's son, Sir Edward Levy Lawson (name changed by royal decree in 1875,) Baron Burnham after 1904, and by the present Baron Burnham, the London Daily Telegraph is sold and becomes one of the string of twenty-three newspapers controlled by Sir William Berry, James Gower Berry and their associate, Sir Edward Iliffe. No more striking event marks the annals of Anglo-Saxon newspaperdom.

A certain Col. Sleigh issued the first number of the Daily Telegraph on June 29, 1855, a twopenny sheet. By September of that year he was in financial difficulties and sold the property to Mr. Levy, who within a week or two made it the first penny newspaper in London, with four pages, and started it on a long and honorable and prosperous career.

Sir Edwin Arnold, George Augustus Sala, Judah P. Benjamin and Clement Scott had a part in giving literary standing to the Telegraph. J. M. Le Sage, long its managing editor, was a very great journalist. Expedition features began with the Smith researches in the archeology of Nineveh in 1873. Two years later the Telegraph co-operated with the New York Herald in the second Stanley African expedition. In 1883 it financed Sir Harry Johnston's exploration of Kilimanjaro. The Daily Telegraph was the first English newspaper to put in American Hoe web presses (in 1874) and the first to adopt typesetting machines. Politically it was Liberal till 1878, when it broke with the Gladstone foreign policies and it became Unionist in 1886.

There are observers who say that the Daily Telegraph today is a greater money maker than the London Times. Perhaps it is. The price paid for it to Lord Burnham is not made public. The seller is about to go to India as a member of the Royal Commission to suggest home rule reform. The hearings of the commission are bound to be long continued, and Lord Burnham is understood to be anxious to simplify his responsibilities and give more of his energy to public service.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

WHERE CRIME IS UNKNOWN

"No police case within living memory!" This is the proud record of Eigg, one of the most delightful little islands to be found in the Inner Hebrides. It has been rendered famous by Hugh Miller on account of its curious geological formation, and several historians have invested it with a halo of romance owing to its tragic associations in what is now the remote past.

Twice it was the scene of dastardly massacres, but today it enjoys an immunity from exciting incidents that is continuous and complete. So at least says the chief constable for Inverness-shire, the county to which the island belongs.

Despite the serenity of its social atmosphere, and although no representative of the police force is stationed within its limits, yet Eigg is assessed for police rates and has to pay for the upkeep of a strong staff of uniformed men for which it has no use, and which might be disbanded for any harm that would eventuate to its inhabitants. The people are beginning to fret at these exactions, from which they receive no benefit, and also at the heavy burden of road rates, which go to maintain, "fine highways elsewhere." It is an old grievance, this matter of rates, which, in out-of-the-way places, are often very uneven in their incidence.—[Weekly Scotsman.

LA SALLE CUTS CAR SALE PRICE

Five New Body Types With Reductions on All of Line Announced

A lower price on every model of LaSalle's complete line has just been announced by the Cadillac Motor Car Company, according to J. E. Brown, Southern California manager for Don Lee, California distributor for Cadillac and LaSalle motor cars. The cut ranges from $10 to $190.

In addition to the price reduction the factory is adding five entirely new body styles to the line. These are two-passenger business coupe, five-passenger family sedan, five-passenger coupe, five-passenger cabriolet sedan, seven-passenger family sedan. This increases the LaSalle line to sixteen body styles in the Fisher line with all models also available in special Fleetwood custom built models.

"By marketing more than 15,000 cars in nine months, LaSalle has reached the goal set for it as a full year's achievement when Cadillac created this beautiful companion car.

"Every LaSalle is complete with all modern equipment, much of which is usually obtainable on other cars only at extra cost, and including at the new lower prices, winter front, Lovejoy shock absorbers, exclusively designed LaSalle bumpers, cowl lamps, cowl band, ventilators, windshield wiper, cigar lighter, rear vision mirror, etc.," Brown stated.

VALUE AND USES OF OLD PEWTER

In earlier days all ordinary household and table utensils were made of pewter, and in curio and second-hand shops we can often pick up various odds and ends quite cheaply in the way of platters, round and oval dishes, porringers, candlesticks, mugs, tankards, snuff boxes, bowls and coffee pots.

Any pewter article bearing an "X" and a rose surmounted by a crown is genuine old English, and generally of good quality, for the "X" was supposed to stand for richness of metal. These marks, by the way, will usually be found on the rims of plates, or in the case of jugs and tankards just under the lip, but sometimes they are stamped, rather indistinctly, at the bottom. Many of these old pieces show disastrous signs of wear and tear, and great care should be taken in repairing them, or more harm than good may result. Dents, for instance, should never be hammered out for the pewter may be brittle; the metal should be warmed, and then the dented parts can be gently pressed out.

The cleaning of pewter is a matter of importance. If it is too highly polished it assumes the appearance of steel and loses most of its beauty, for which reason many collectors affirm that it should not be polished at all. On the other hand, most of us wish to display our specimens to the best advantage by preserving the soft gray sheen which is the chief charm of pewter. A very good plan is to scrub it about once a month in hot water to which a little soda or ammonia has been added. Follow with an application of silver polish or whiting and polish with a soft cloth. This will brighten the metal up without removing any trace of age.

Apart from their decorative value we can make practical use of our pewter treasures in countless ways.

Pewter platters make most charming cake and fruit dishes; the porringers can be used for planting bulbs and roots; and the smaller plates as little trays on writing and dressing tables, or for the syphon and glasses. The mugs and bowls make delightful flower vases and plant pots, and the tankards and coffee pots can be utilized as hot water jugs, shaving mugs, spill jars, vases for Lenten lilies and other tall flowers, and in endless other ways.—[M. L., in the London Express.

FAST DIRIGIBLE SERVICE

Two mammoth airships now nearing completion for the British Empire Airship Service are designed to carry 100 passengers each and ten tons of mail. On a through airship journey from Australia to Canada, flying via South Africa and England, it is reckoned that the transit time would be under sixteen days, as compared with forty-eight days by sea travel.

Meet the Airplane

by Frank J. Carmody

If it is true that the only ones qualified to estimate properly a man's greatness are those engaged in the same field of endeavor, then Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's qualifications more than meet this most difficult of all tests. For, airmen of all types, flyers, designers, plane-builders—men whose names were great when Lindbergh was unheard of—take off their hats to him today not, as one of them said, "because it's the thing to do; but because he does know this game from bottom to top."

Naturally, the public's measure of Lindbergh is that he gets there—"there" being any destination that the intrepid flyer seeks. By this yardstick, of course, "Slim," which still is his name to all his friends, is 100 per cent perfect. Even more interesting, in some respects, is that he obtains the same grade when measured by the technician's ruler which is not so much that he reached his destination but the manner of his reaching it.

Although it lacked the spectacular setting of his New York-to-Paris flight, and even if it was a lesser achievement in every respect Lindbergh's recent flight from Washington to Mexico City has caught the fancy of those who know aviation.

For instance, the trip was made in a plane that already had traversed more than 32,000 miles. The mileage is not, in itself, impressive, but when considered in the light of the fact that the engine has not had a complete overhauling since the day Lindbergh left San Diego, the picture changes color considerably. The engine of the famous Spirit of St. Louis had more work done on it before the hop-off from Bolling Field than at any time since it left the factory, but at that, the work of the army mechanics represented what is known as a "top overhaul." Its nearest equivalent in the field of the automobile, the carbon and valve job, is well known to every motorist.

That the ship's engine needed so little attention is accepted by the technician as the greatest possible tribute to Lindbergh's ability as a flyer.

Typical of the care with which he treats the engine of the world's best-known airplane, in the opinion of his fellow-flyers, is the hourly mileage recorded by Col. Lindbergh on the hop to Mexico City. That it was twenty miles an hour slower than on the journey to Paris was a source of wonderment to many laymen, but to the expert, it was most significant.

Lindbergh, throughout the twenty-seven hours of the flight, kept the plane close to its cruising speed, the rate of travel at which the engine performs with the least difficulty and with the least likelihood of trouble developing. This, together with the fact that he encountered head winds instead of the tail winds which helped him so much on the trans-Atlantic flight, accounts for the lower rate of speed—and also for the fact that the J5 engine in the plane hews to the line regardless of where the line leads.

The 35,000 miles that the plane has flown represents approximately 350 hours in the air. Now, this is not an unheard-of performance for an air-cooled engine. The Navy's air-cooled engines, the Pratt and Whitney "wasps" and "hornets," which are given excellent treatment at all times, have gone 400 and 500 hour without a major overhaul. So have the Wright Whirlwinds in Navy planes. But the records of 350 hours is considerably better than the average in civilian flying, where 200 hours may be taken as a general standard for at least a thorough "top" overhaul. Those in heavy service require complete inspection at least and this necessitates tearing them down.

Army and Navy experts, at least as well qualified as any group to pass judgment, doubt that any plane is given better treatment than Lindbergh accords to the Spirit of St. Louis. In flight, it is handled by one who knows its every capacity. Before and after each flight, it is minutely inspected by a man with an unquestioned genius for detecting any possible slight flaw in motor or any other unit. As an indication of the recognition of this ability in Lindbergh by the greatest engineers in the country, one may cite the fact that, while the motor is watched closely by its designers and builders, they are leaving every small item of its care to "Slim's" discretion. They know he knows.

One of the large factors in revealing Lindbergh's mastery of his subject is his ability to do with any plane anything that it is capable of doing and to recognize immediately its inevitable limitations. It is doubtful if any pilot in the world has flown so many different types of planes as has Lindbergh since his famous trans-oceanic flight.

Wherever he goes, he is given carte blanche to try any plane on the field. Because he feels more at home in the air than anywhere else, he is avid to take advantage of these offers which come as readily from the Army and Navy as from the smallest of the commercial plane operators. When he does take advantage of these opportunities, he leaves no doubt in anyone's mind as to his being just as much at home in the cockpit of a Pt-1, the Army's fastest pursuit ship, or a Vought O-U Navy fighter, as he is in the cabin of the Spirit of St. Louis.

The Sunday before his Mexico City flight, spent in Washington, was a field day for the famous pilot. The greater part of that Sunday was spent at the Army and Navy air field, and in the course of the day he tried out the best planes of both services as well as those of the Department of Commerce, which are stored on the Army side of the field.

These flights, in their way, reveal to the qualified observer that Lindbergh is right in his objections to being called "lucky." He knows flying. He is master of the art in its every phase. All one has to do to learn this beyond a doubt is to talk to the greatest pilots in the country.

MACHINE AGE IS ALSO UNSOCIABLE

Ever since the war I have seen solitary young men on motor bicycles hurling themselves about the country, making loud noises and raising much dust, seeing nothing and speaking to no one. Sometimes, it is true, one sees a young man with a young girl perilously perched behind him, her pretty silken legs dangling uncomfortably while she clings with both arms to his waist. There she sits, gazing intently at the back of his neck, while he, goggled and silent, stares stonily ahead. I notice that at the inquest which frequently follows such jolly outings the body is nearly always that of the girl, a fact which confirms me in the belief that the courage of the contemporary young woman is immense, even if it be foolhardy.

The old push-bike, propelled by the feet of the man who sat on it, promoted sociability. Young men, before the invention of the motor bicycle, formed clubs and went for "runs" on Saturday afternoons. They took their fun in company. But the young man with a motor bicycle does not join a club. He rides by himself, unless he has a girl to take out, and she, so far as I can see, gets no fun at all. The motor bicycle imposes solitude and silence upon its rider.

If two young men, each with a motor bicycle decide to journey together, they discover at the start of the trip that they cannot journey together, but must allow some distance to separate them. No one has ever seen two motorcyclists riding abreast. No one has even seen two motorcyclists chatting to each other on the road And a horrid fear invades my mind that as we develop machinery we will develop a race of morose men who will occupy their leisure by tearing up and down the down the length of the land without ever seeing anything but dust.

There cannot be any doubt, I think, that machinery is to blame for this increase in moroseness and unsociability. In the old stage coach, according to the authors, people sought each other's society and were accustomed to talk without much restraint. But the commonest sight on a railway station platform is of a man or a woman distractedly pacing backward and forward in search of an empty carriage. The person who starts a conversation in a train is considered to be a bore and a nuisance. A carriage full of people will travel all the way from Aberdeen to London without one man or woman in that carriage addressing a sociable remark to any other person. People will sit down together in the dining car and eat a meal without uttering a word to their neighbors, beyond a request for the salt or the mustard.—[St. John Ervine in John o'London's Weekly.

NO WORRY FOR ANIMALS

As far as we are aware, animals have no notion of time in the sense we have. The future means nothing to them, and for this they are much happier than we are. They live for the present moment only. They have no fears of what may happen to them in days to come—no fear, then, of death and no yearning after immortality. Neither do we suppose that they have any clear conception of the past, although undoubtedly they have unconscious memory. The formation of habits depends on this. But they don't consciously think over the happy days of youth gone by, nor brood over the sorrows of old age.—[H. Munro Fox in the Forum.

Chrysler—third in volume of sales for 1928; third according to sales records of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce

In 42 months Chrysler, due to splendid public endorsement of its products from their very introduction, has come from 27th to 3rd place.

Of the 43 motor car manufacturers in the N.A.A.C. all but two, far longer established, have been outsold by Chrysler.

The order of precedence is determined by the dollar volume of sales in the twelve-month ended July 1st preceding the National Show.

In the forty-two months since the introduction of Chrysler the public has purchased more than eight hundred and fifty millions of dollars' ($850,000,000) worth of Chrysler motor cars.

No other make of car has ever recorded such phenomenally rapid progress.

There can be no more impressive public endorsement of Chrysler performance, Chrysler long life, Chrysler quality, Chrysler value, supplied in four great price fields by Chrysler's four great cars—the New "52," the Great New "62," the Illustrious New "72" and the New 112 h. p. THE MOTOR VEHICLE IN COURT

A threshing outfit, drawn by a steam tractor, was proceeding southerly on a public highway near Waseca, Minn. It was evening and lamps were lighted. The highway was thirty feet in width with but twenty-seven feet graveled. The outfit consisted of the tractor, a fuel carrier, the separator and a bunk house. Besides there was a water tank drawn by a team of horses. The tractor and separator each weighed over five tons, and it was necessary to keep them on the hard surface of the road. The hind, or driving, wheels of the tractor had a tread of nearly ten feet. The outfit was compelled to stop to take water, and the team with the water tank was driven to the left or east side of the tractor, leaving a clear space of graveled road of about seven feet to the east.

Seeing two automobiles approaching from the south, the owner of the outfit directed one of his men to flag them down. The man stepped forward from fifteen to twenty feet, waving his hat. The rear car of the two approaching while 500 feet away speeded past the other car and, not daring to use his brakes for fear of "turning turtle," struck the man who was signalling just as he had turned to step back. The blow from the car hurtled him over the tank wagon on to a wire fence sixty or seventy-five feet from the spot. He sustained twenty-four bone fractures, several of his ribs being fractured in two places, and one fracture on top of the skull. His left eye was out of the socket and was pushed back by one of the workmen in the crew. Nevertheless, he lived to testify in a suit against the car owner in which he was awarded a verdict of $9800.

In sustaining the judgment rendered, the Supreme Court of Minnesota (214 N. W. 52) said:

"We think it is plain that the court can not hold as a matter of law that plaintiff's contributory negligence was established. He had no authority in respect to the threshing rig's position upon the road. He was a mere servant of the owners and, in attempting to flag down or warn defendant, obeyed the direct command of his master. The only possible contention defendants can make would be that the compliance with the command so obviously exposed plaintiff to imminent danger that a reasonably prudent servant would not have obeyed. But how can that be held as a matter of law, when it is considered that there was a good light on the tractor, that plaintiff was within its rays, so that one coming as did defendant would be likely to see him, that he could not know that defendant was driving at the extremely high speed he was, and that he could assume that defendant had his car under such control that he could stop within the space that his lights disclosed plaintiff's presence."

CULPABLE NEGLIGENCE

While the word culpable usually means something worthy of blame or censure, it seems to have a narrower meaning within the New York statute as to culpable negligence in driving an automobile. In a recent conviction for manslaughter for causing the death of another by driving an automobile at an excessive rate of speed with culpable negligence along a public highway the people presented testimony to the effect that the pavement was dry, that the autmobile was running down a slight grade, and that defendant had a clear view for over 1000 feet ahead of him before reaching the point where the accident occurred. There was no other vehicle near at hand at the time, except a Ford automobile ahead of defendant and going in the same direction. Excessive speed was the only negligence charged. On that subject a witness, who was also in defendant's automobile, testified that the defendant's speedometer showed fifty-five miles an hour at an unlocated place before the scene of the accident was reached, and defendant admitted that before the mishap occurred he was going "thirty-two or thirty-three miles an hour." When defendant attempted to pass the Ford, he got over on the dirt or shoulder portion of the highway, the rear wheels of his machine slid into the ditch, the automobile tipped over.

Defendant testified that as he came opposite the Ford automobile it swung sharply to the left, forcing defendant to the edge of the road. In this he was not disputed. From the time defendant's automobile went off the road, with its back wheels in the ditch, it traveled about eighty-two feet and finally rolled over one and a quarter times. There were skid marks on the pavement 220 feet from the place where the automobile finally landed. There was no claim that defendant was not entirely sober, and no evidence, other than that specified, to indicate negligence.

The trial court in explaining the meaning of the expression "culpable negligence" to the jury, said that the negligence must be "culpable, blameworthy or criminal, or of such a character that it implies a reckless indifference to the consequences and a disregard for the safety of others."

In reversing the judgment of conviction and granting a new trial, the Supreme Court of New York, Appellate Division, Fourth Department, (221 N.Y.S. 778) said:

"We are of the opinion that from this charge the jury might well have obtained the impression that negligence to the extent of blameworthiness only, failure to use ordinary care (as well as reckless indifference,) met the test as to criminal culpability. We appreciate the difficulty of a near approach to perfection in defining this expression 'culpable negligence,' as used in the statute. But in a case like this, where the testimony does not point as convincingly as it might to guilt, where the burden of proof resting on the people has not been sustained to our entire satisfaction, justice to the defendant demanded that the jury should have been clearly informed that culpability, under this manslaughter statute, necessarily implied something more is sufficient as a basis for liability in a civil action for damage."

EXECUTIVE OPTIMISTIC IN OUTLOOK FOR COMING YEAR

Giving an outline of what the automobile merchant can expect in 1928, Herbert E. Woodward, one of the most experienced motor car distributors in Los Angeles, has prepared the following statement. Mr. Woodward is president and general manager of the Reo Motor Car Company of California:

"Business moves only as fast as transportation, and today transportation moves only as fast as highway traffic. All lines of business are going through a transformation and we are now at the peak of what may be properly called the transition period.

SYSTEMS CHANGE

"Distribution and merchandising of everything we eat, wear or use is being revised and accelerated. Prewar methods—methods of only a decade ago—are obsolete. Production, either agricultural or industrial, is vibrating at a new rate. Competition is swift and merciless. It is now based on quality, speed, service and personality. Time is the most valuable thing in the world and time and labor-saving devices are bringing about this transition in competition which, at times, is almost bewildering, if not staggering, until one scarcely knows where to look for competition.

"Railroads and electric lines, after passing through a dormant period, thought they had discovered that their competition was the motor bus and almost overlooked the competition of the privately owned motor vehicle; and even yet these pioneer users of the telegraph and telephone are not awake to the fact that these agencies of transportation of the spoken word or message are the greatest competitors their passenger car departments have.

"Pity the poor hardware dealer. Not only has practically every other mercantile line encroached upon his field, but along comes the tremendous progress of the baking industry, which is reducing the sale of cooking utensils to the housewife.

BEAT TROUBLES

"Theaters faced the movie competition and now have radio to contend with. And the rapid stride of the radio has brought a new engineering note to the phonograph which is giving competition to the commercial musical organizations and it is prophesied that the inland orchestras are fast passing out.

"Fuel oil, electricity and industrial gas have given the coal industry a bad bump. The garage has replaced the blacksmith shop and the foot accelerator has put the whip maker out of business. The power washing machine for the home and the soft collar gave the laundry a few hard years, but the laundryman has countered with wet wash service. On every hand we see one industry taking reprisals on another.

"The rapid development in the art of food preparation has put the canning industry on the map, and today, while suffering from the competion of the cafeteria, even the most ordinary restaurant can serve you on fifteen minutes' notice the same variety of food you can find on the most exclusive hotel menu at about one-third the price.

"Science has revamped the refrigerator business and forced new equipment upon the soda fountain world. The groceryman and meat retailer have a cold sweat in fear of the chain stores, but there is a way out for them. It is through their delivery department.

"The textile mills, which were worrying over a reduction in sales due to women wearing less clothing and lighter weight garments, are making up for lost volume by selling millions of yards of upholstering now used by the automobile industry, while the leather industry is frantically trying to find an outlet for its product and is rapidly turning to furniture and kindred lines for its relief.

"The silk industry, so recently hit by Rayon, is redeeming to some extent their lost volume by greatly increasing the use of pure silk in hosiery. Fine linoleums are giving the lumber industry a hard battle for hardwood flooring. Lacquer has hit the brush maker and has routed the lead and turpentine industry. These things have all happened in your day and mine—most of them during the last ten years.

TRANSPORT EVERYWHERE

"Right now things of no lesser importance are happening, and we'll hear about them during the next five years. Transportation is either the cause or the effect in every step of evolution, and Reo set the highway pace in 1915 when the Speed Wagon was introduced. Since that day, fast motorized transportation has given almost every industry a helping hand.

"The railroads use busses, many of them Reos, in bringing passengers from wayside points to the rail lines. They use trucks to haul farm produce to the freight cars.

"The hardware merchant who can make quick deliveries is the one who is getting his share of the business and Reo has designed many special body types to exactly suit this merchant's needs. And the bakeries, which are giving the hardware dealer some worries, are also big users of Speed Wagon equipment.

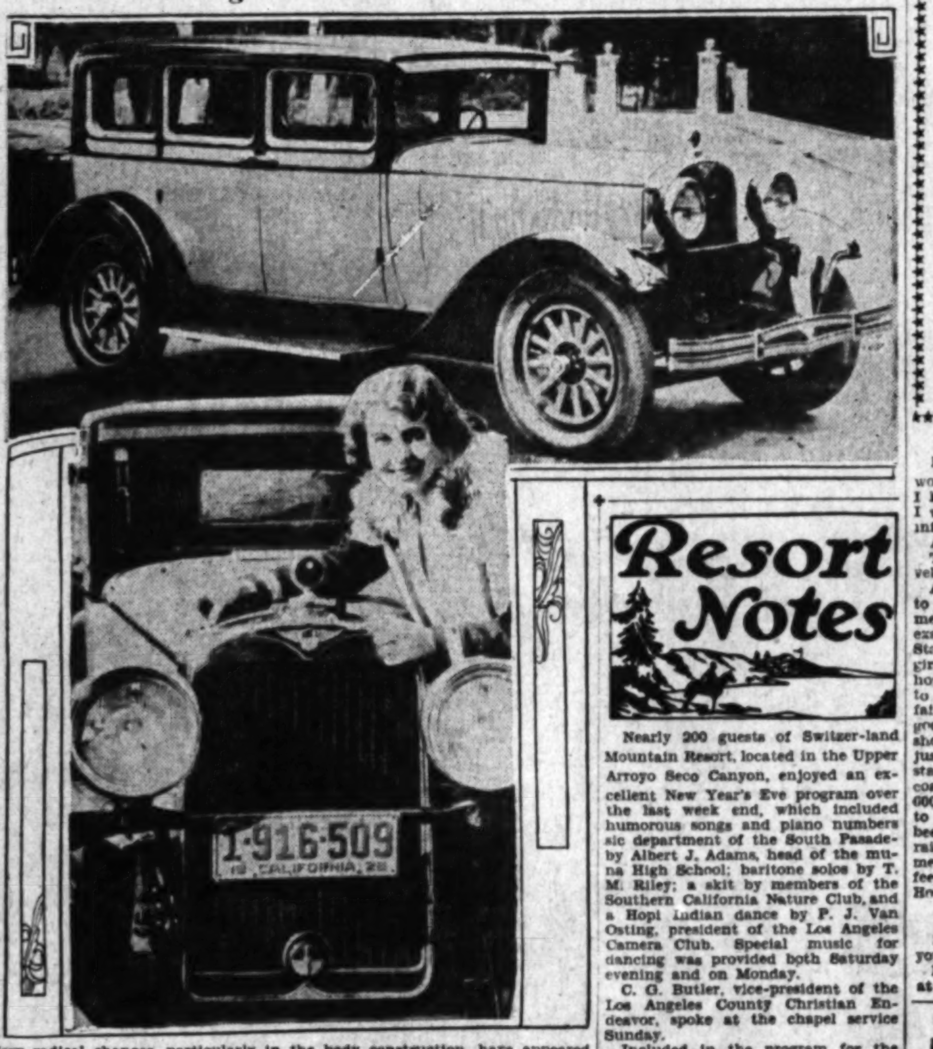
TRUCKS AN AID

"During 1928 the automobile company that has a good truck line is going to be fortunate. I do not mean to say that the pleasure car business is going to suffer, but unless all lines of business prosper, the automobile industry will be affected, and merchants are alive to the fact that in order to hold their trade and develop new business, they must offer something in the way of service that the man next door doesn't have.

"Taking orders over the telephone and delivering promptly, thus saving the purchaser the trouble of coming to the store, is one means that many merchants have taken to build business. And there is scarcely a business house today that does not realize the value of having its truck equipment not only speedy and economical, but good looking as well. The reason is apparent, for a housewife in a humble cottage, or a dowager in a mansion are both averse to doing business with a concern that is shoddy, and if the delivery equipment of the merchant does not reflect good taste, or neatness, they are very apt to take their trade elsewhere.

"Reo has recognized this truth, just as it recognized the need for a real speed truck years ago, and has made its Speed Wagon line for 1928 not only improved mechanically but better looking as well."

Dodge Brothers' New Victory Six



Very radical changes, particularly in the body construction, have appeared in this new six-cylinder Dodge announced here Thursday. The car, two views of which are reproduced here, is on display in several models at the Albertson Motor Co.

DODGE VICTORY SIX HERE

The new Victory six just announced by Dodge Brothers, Inc., embodies innovations and improvements upon present-day automobile design which have found immediate favor with the motoring public. Within the reach of millions in price this new product promises sensational performance at high speeds.

Long, low and graceful, the Victory six presents a smart and voguish appearance coupled with sweeping advances in construction and design that have brought a flood of enthusiastic acclaim from the throngs who have viewed it at the showrooms of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers distributor for Southern California, where the car is on display.

Providing safety, comfort and roadability the body and chassis of the Victory six are a single unit. To provide road-holding qualities necessary for high speeds and at the same time to permit the low sweeping body lines dictated by fashion without sacrificing roominess or road clearance, Dodge Brothers have employed this basic innovation in automotive design in effective fashion. Because conventional sills and cross-members have been done away with, the chassis and body being integral, the center of gravity is closer to the road and the overall heighth of the car is about at the ordinary man's hat brim. The low center of gravity, and the union of chassis and body are claimed to have marked stabilizing effect adding greatly to riding comfort and safety at all speeds.

More than a million miles of tough driving and special hardships were turned up by engineers in their work on the new car. Not only was the motor, which is a special one of the L-head medium duty type with seven crankshaft bearings and pistons of aluminum alloy, given severe tests but the new body and chassis were submitted to the most drastic punishment possible.

Further structural distinctiveness has been obtained by a novel type of body design, which might be described as a steel shell welded inside an outer steel shell to form a double wall with an air space between. By perforations and other sound-deadening devices, all body noise has been suppressed, leaving strength, lightness, appearance and absence of rattles as a net gain. The frame of the Victory six chassis is so deep that no splash shields are necessary, thus eliminating another source of noise.

Lockheed hydraulic brakes for all four wheels have been adopted.

The line will be offered in a wide variety of colors.

The engine developed for the car is an L-head, medium duty type, with bore of 3 3-8 inches and stroke of 3 7-8 inches. Pistons are aluminum alloy. Seven bearings support the crankshaft, which turns approximately 1285 revolutions per minute at twenty-five miles an hour and about 2350 revolutions per minute at sixty-five miles an hour. Because of rigid support and careful balancing of the fifty-two-pound crankshaft, no counterweights or other vibration dampeners are used. Gearshift positions are S.A.E. standard; namely, lever to left and back for low and to right and back for high.

Plans for 1928 at Dodge Brothers include the continuance of the standard four, equipped with four-wheel brakes, and the Senior six, in addition to the Victory six. The Graham Brothers truck division will continue to build commercial cars and trucks of five capacities: two-ton, one and one-half ton, one ton, three-fourth ton and one-half ton.

"With this program," said President E. G. Wilmer, "the Dodge dealers are prepared to meet a wide range of the demand for automotive transportation. These three distinct classifications of passenger cars and five separate types of trucks fit into a high percentage of the public's requirements as indicated by the industry's total sales."

THE MACHINE'S PLACE IN AMERICAN LIFE

In what is characteristic of our American scheme the machine is not regarded as a substitute for labor. What we perceive is that when you dispense with the worker as a producer you dispense with him also as a consumer. And as a consumer he is indispensable. Unemployment, once the anxiety of the worker alone, now becomes the anxiety of business. How to sustain and improve the wage-earner's buying power is its scientific study.

The machine, therefore, comes rightly to be regarded as an extension of the wage-earner's power of production in order that his power of consumption may rise. Cheap labor is no longer an asset; its wants are necessarily limited. Unskilled labor represents a waste of human effort. With the same expenditure of time and effort, plus skill, much more might be produced, much more for that reason might be consumed.

The cost of digging a ditch with hand shovels at $2.50 a day might be the same as digging it with power machines handled by men working in gloves at $10 a day—exactly the same cost per cubic yard of material moved. But in the latter case you have high productivity per man, and as a consumer that man is worth four hand shovelers.

A few years ago, any time before the war, you might have seen men carrying pig iron and steel ingots from the stock pile to the charging hoppers on their backs. Their day was twelve hours long and the pay was $2.50—a little more or less. That was what that kind of labor was worth.

Now you will see this drudgery performed by a crane and swinging magnet. This one machine does the work that formerly required sixty or seventy human burden bearers. If the two men now operating the crane magnet were receiving the same wage as when they carried the load on their backs, then you would say the machine was a substitute for labor. But their wage is now $7 or $8 dollars for an eight-hour day. This is responsible work and much more productive.

What has become of the others? They, too, have been graded up into semi-skilled work touching machines, according to their aptitudes, and their wages have increased as their labor has become more productive.

The mechanization of American industry does not dispense with skill On the contrary, it requires at the top more and more skill and at the bottom less and less unskilled drudgery. In the motor-car industry at Detroit alone you will find more skilled men than in the entire motor industry of Europe. They are designers and builders of machines, makers of tools and patterns and gauges, engravers of dies, workers in the mechanical research laboratories. And in the factories, serving the assembly line, you will find thousands who formerly were and might have been always unskilled workers.—[Garet Garrett in Saturday Evening Post.

EVEN CLOWNS ARE NOT ONE-SIDED

It is an old saying that clowns never laugh when off the stage. Sounds fishy that these fellows who are constantly rousing gales of laughter from their fellow-men should be solemn or sad, and one is tempted to brand it as another of those foolish sayings.

But we are assured that it was true in the case of the famous Marcelline of the Hippodrome who recently took his own life. It was said to be true also of his friend "Slivers" who made Broadway rock with laughter many years ago. Same was said to be the case with Sammy Watson, another famous funmaker, who passed away a short time ago in his eighties.

The evidence is convincing. The old saying is doubtless true, in general, at least. There is psychology for it. If the pendulum is swung in one direction it will not go back to normal and stop there, but will go to the same distance in the opposite direction. Bend a tree or a bow, and it will act like the pendulum when released. A bent man is the same. No doubt the clerk in the store who smiles a welcome all day long to the customers is often quite a crosspatch at home in the evenings. On the other hand our morticians, who must preserve a solemn face in their daily work, must be rather jolly companions when off duty.

A man should realize this human tendency and not permit himself to become one-sided. There is a time to laugh and a time to weep, and the well regulated, well tuned individual can do either at the proper time. He will not stay bent too long in any one direction. Too much clowning makes a man sad; too much gloom makes him funny.—[Pathfinder.

ODD MIDDLE NAME

Lindbergh Airplane Wagner is the name of a Niagara Falls (N. Y.) baby born on the day that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh completed his nonstop flight from Washington to Mexico City. The parents are enthusiastic admirers of the Lone Eagle, and when they heard the news that he had landed safely they decided on the baby's name.

NEW YOSEMITE ROAD IMPROVED

Lifting the face of the All-Year Highway into Yosemite National Park is the task of 100 convicts from the State prison camp on Bear Creek, near Mariposa. Sagging earth lines extending into the road are being raised and the earth used to fill in the furrows made elsewhere. A steam shovel is carefully eliminating sharp curves, and according to advices reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California the undertaking is proving very successful with the new route in its very best shape.

SUCH IS GALLANTRY

I have never been able to look a woman in the face, and tell her what I know about her. From early youth I was fed on gallantry, and this has influenced me.

And all men are like me.

The manner in which they have developed gallantry proves it.

A woman would not have the right to hammer a man as Lita Gray hammered Charlie Chaplin but for the exaggerated gallantry in the United States. The mistakes of women and girls of which we complain—and how bitterly we complain!—are due to gallantry that is neither sensible, fair nor economic. For their own good, for the good of the race, women should be handled with the rough justice meted out to men. I saw a statement the other day that 150,000 coal miners (said to be starving) had 600,000 women and children attached to them. The statement may have been exaggerated, as a fund was being raised, but being a man anywhere means three or four other mouths to feed, owing to gallantry.—[E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Resort Notes

Nearly 200 guests of Switzer-land Mountain Resort, located in the Upper Arroyo Seco Canyon, enjoyed an excellent New Year's Eve program over the last week end, which included humorous songs and piano numbers by Albert J. Adams, head of the music department of the South Pasadena High School; baritone solos by T. M. Riley; a skit by members of the Southern California Nature Club, and a Hopi Indian dance by P. J. Van Osting, president of the Los Angeles Camera Club. Special music for dancing was provided both Saturday evening and on Monday.

C. G. Butler, vice-president of the Los Angeles County Christian Endeavor, spoke at the chapel service Sunday.

Included in the program for the coming week end is John Anson Ford, who will give "Gleamings from the Adventurer's Club" on Saturday evening and who will also speak at the chapel next Sunday morning. On the following week-end the "Juvenile Troubadors," a Pasadena orchestra, will entertain with Spanish music.

The Mt. Wilson Hotel was filled to capacity over the New Year holidays, as reported by W. L. Larry, manager. An exceptionally warm sun flooded the mountain top, and a clear atmosphere brought into view not only Los Angeles, many surrounding towns, the ocean beyond and Catalina, but also the Coronado Islands of Old Mexico, south of San Diego, over 100 miles away by air line.

Snow was still on the ground, and many guests enjoyed the thrill of coasting while others basked in the sunshine on the porches. "Old Year" and "New Year" turkey dinners were served.

The Nature Club of Southern California, visiting there over the holidays, enjoyed the astronomical Friday evening lecture given by J. Wendell Hoge of the Mt. Wilson Observatory. They were also afforded the opportunity of viewing the 100-inch and the 60-inch telescopes. Every Friday evening the public is permitted to view the heavens through the 60-inch telescope, by courtesy of the Mt. Wilson Observatory.

Dr. George Bunton, general manager of KELW radio station, Magnolia Park, Burbank, and family, were among the Friday night house guests, who were most appreciative of the lecture and the views through the telescope.

On New Year's Day a number of members of the Epworth League of the Alhambra First Methodist Episcopal Church occupied the Casino at Mt. Wilson, for lunch.

Among the guests from Los Angeles staying at the Carrillo Hotel in Santa Barbara, last week, were: Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Koeberle, Miss Josephine Brown, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Donovan, Mrs. Jessie L. Sells, Miss Lucy E. Leurs, Miss Louise Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Riess, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Paten, Mr. and Mrs. Dodd Mauldin, Mr. and Mrs. Sam B. Bingaman, Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Rhynsburger, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Verrin, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. B. Breck, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Meinzer, Mrs. J. B. Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. A. Otis Birch, Mrs. Margaret Shotwell and Mrs. M. Edwards.

Valley Forge Lodge, located on the west fork of the San Gabriel River, northeast of Mt. Wilson, is in the back country of the Angeles National Forest and retains much of the original primitiveness of that region.

One of the main attractions of this resort is the coming together of three streams in the center of the grounds, making it an ideal spot during the fishing season.

It is an enchanting little camp, with cozy housekeeping and sleeping cabins nestling in nooks close to the sparkling west fork stream.

The lodge is accessible by automobile to within five miles, via Mt. Wilson. From there the lovely Valley Forge trail leads to the resort proper. Also, the camp can be reached by trail from Sierra Madre; from the Switzer's relay station, in the Arroyo Seco Canyon, and via the trail up Millard's Canyon.

Forest Home Resort, in the San Bernardino range, is seventeen miles east of Redlands, reached via a paved mountain road, and is just eighty-six miles from Los Angeles. Mill Creek, famous for its trout fishing, runs through the resort property.

Housekeeping, sleeping, and hotel cabins on the American plan extend varied accommodations to the guest. It is a delightful place for the entire family, offering a wide field of entertainment.

The rustic dining hall and the large amusement pavilion with its big, cheery fireplace are attractive features.

During this time of the year snow sports are the fashion, the elevation of Forest Home, 5240 feet, guaranteeing it abundant snowfalls throughout the winter.

ABOUT MEN

When a man says he has given up women, it usually means some woman has just given him up.

When a man is in love with you he thinks you are the smartest little thing that ever happened. He says: "You are so different from other women!" A fortnight later, when things are wearing off a bit, he complains: "I can't understand a girl with your taste in clothes choosing a hat like that!"

When a man says he wants his freedom, he usually means he wants to get free in order to tie himself up again with another woman.

Most husbands expect their wives to combine the arts of a siren with those of the proprietress of a French restaurant.

Adam was the first man to be tempted by a woman, and his descendants have been trying to get their own back ever since.—[Buena de Mesquita in "Men and Pigs."

Highway Information

The following highway information was issued by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California under date of January 3, 1928. Motorists desiring any further information may obtain it by communicating directly with the club.

With the completion of paving operations between El Toro and Galvin, motorists will now find a completely paved and open highway from Los Angeles to San Diego over the Coast Route.

Casitas Pass between Foster Park and Carpinteria in Ventura county is again passable, but should not be attempted should any indications of mud be seen.

Travel into the Big Basin (California State Redwood Park,) of Santa Cruz county, should not attempt to use the road from Saratoga during the wet weather.

There is now a short detour around a washed-out bridge on Foothill Boulevard, two miles east of Etiwanda.

A heavy rainfall experienced a short while ago in Imperial Valley resulted in the dirt roads becoming very disagreeable for several days, but continued sunshine had dried the valley out.

The Bankhead Highway between Little Rock, Ark., and Memphis, Tenn., is closed to travel on account of flood water in the lowlands of the White River between De Valls Bluff and Brinkley, Ark. SEDAN GOES TO COLD COUNTRY

Holidays Spent in High Mountains

The car above is a Gardner "90" sedan photographed New Year's Day in the snow near Lake Arrowhead.

A Gardner "90" sedan spent New Year's and several days that followed high up in the "cold country" of Arrowhead, and while countless motor cars of Los Angeles and environs rolled along sun-kissed boulevards.

Piloting the car was J. L. Curtis, the well-known photographer, who wanted some real California winter scenes to enhance his gallery. He chose, among other retreats, Mile High Park, several miles off the main road at Crestline.

"I chose the Gardner to see me through," he said to Harry Sperl, Southern California distributor for this eight-in-line. "We had to pass over some mighty skiddy territory, aside from steep grades, but the Gardner came through. Where my best pictures were taken I saw no other cars."

"There's a secure sense of safety as you scoot around sharp and treacherous curves at high speed without the slightest rolling, slipping or sideway. That's why Mr. Curtis so thoroughly enjoyed his trip to the recesses of Arrowhead, many of which are seldom visited at this time of year," said Mr. Sperl.

DEATH RECALLS A NOTED SCANDAL

The recent death of Mrs. Arthur Wilson in England, at the age of 86, has revived interest in the half-forgotten scandal of Tranby Croft—which developed into a cause celebre. Those were Victorian days, the September days in 1890, when Col. Sir William Gordon-Cumming, bart., of the Scotts Guards, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson at Tranby Croft in Yorkshire and was accused of cheating at baccarat. Some one let a very private cat out of the bag, thereby bringing about a suit for slander and plunging the country into a horror-stricken state, from Queen Victoria down. It became a case, Sir Edward Clarke says in his volume of reminiscences, "which at one time threatened to have consequences in England as grave as those which in Ireland had followed up on the Parnell divorce." This seems almost unbelievable in perspective; but those were different times. Then again, it must be remembered that no less a personage than the Prince of Wales was involved.

Having been a guest at Tranby Croft at the same time, the Prince of Wales, who was destined to become Edward VII, was called into court as an important witness and, although he testified that he had seen no cheating, the circumstance that Mrs. Grundy was telling how much she knew about the heir to the throne playing baccarat made such a hue and cry that the sovereign betook herself to Balmoral to recuperate from the shock. Guessing the name of the talebearer who gave the cat its freedom at the Doncaster race track became so common as almost to be played as a society game. Talk even went so far as to single out the name of a woman who was not at Tranby Croft when the episode occurred and she eventually had to call on her lawyer to put a stop to the uncalled-for accusations.

The verdict in the slander trial was against Sir William, but even twenty-five years later Sir Edward Clarke was still strongly convinced of the innocence of his client in the matter of the charge of cheating. As for Sir William's American fiancee, Miss Florence Garner of New York, she stood by him so faithfully that she insisted upon having the marriage performed by special license the morning after the jury had made its decision in the law courts.—[The Spur.

ANIMAL BOUNTY SYSTEM ABUSED

The Biological Survey regards the bounty system as expensive and ineffective, as there has been no diminution in the wolves, although the amounts paid steadily increase.

One reason for the failure of bounties to eradicate wolves and other destructive animals is that under this system hunters resort to all kinds of schemes to maintain their income, the survey declares. "For example, a female wolf or coyote may deliberately be set free when trapped; coyotes have actually been farmed in order to increase the number of animals on which to collect bounty; where bounties are not paid animals shipped into another State where a reward is obtainable. On one Indian reservation where a bounty was paid for squirrel tails, an agent of the Biological Survey found a large number of female bobtailed squirrels, some of which would produce a crop of good new tails to be cut off another season.

LIVER DIET FOR BLOOD

The supply of liver to be found in the meat markets has been cut down recently by a demand from the doctors, who are recommending it for persons whose vitality has become lowered from one reason or another. At the same time the meat is being put up in convenient form by manufacturers of ready-made medicines.

Durant Celebrates Anniversary

Durant celebrated his twenty-five years in the automotive industry [illegible] by tendering newspaper men a silver anniversary luncheon in [illegible]. It was at this affair that Durant announced that Star four [illegible] match those of Ford, model for model, thus firing the [illegible] in what is expected to be one of the most spectacular [illegible] and merchandising battles in the history of the industry. [illegible] telephotograph of the luncheon was transmitted over the [illegible] Telephone system.

BLINDNESS COMING—SEES THE WORLD

An honor graduate of the University of Wisconsin and a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Miss Carol Hovius, 20 years of age, was teaching school in a small town in Iowa last year. At Christmas her sight failed. She came to specialists in Milwaukee, writes a correspondent to the New York World.

The verdict of the specialists was unanimous—in a year she would be blind. Her ailment is a rare disease which affects the eye so that double vision is registered. It has baffled science, and blindness invariably results, often swiftly.

When Miss Hovius learned that she had only a year in which to see the world she retermined at once to see just as much of it as she could. With Miss Stella Hinz, head of the German house at the University of Wisconsin, she sailed in August.

From London and Paris she has written letters describing things she has seen. But in not one of her letters has she mentioned her eyes. She plans to go to Berlin soon and hopes to be able to visit Italy.

Miss Hovius is a poet of considerable promise, according to several literary critics who have studied her compositions. She has published no verse, however, and is still carrying on her studies of poetic technique. In some of her recent poems she has stated her philosophy of cheerful resignation to the fate which awaits her.

So is bitter fate cheated, says an editorial writer in the Milwaukee Journal, writing of Miss Hovius's spirit. And we poor human creatures, all of us in some sense or other prisoners of Nature, rejoice at the coming of a conqueror. We are all a little bigger, a little less puny, a little farther from the clay and nearer to the sky, because this girl rises above weakness and flings back the challenge of despair. "Though much is taken, much abides," and not one fraction that abides is to be lost in repining, or even sitting down in helpless submission. Life is not to be cheated of its richness; nor, mark it, is this young girl's life to fail of usefulness.

We rejoice, but we are humble. The brain was here to turn defeat into victory. But greater than the brain was the spirit.

STAR FEELS BENEFIT OF PRICE CUT

Durant Announces Entry in Competition With Ford at Anniversary Dinner

Public reaction to the startling announcement made yesterday that 1928 Star cars will be priced at the same figures as those recently announced by Ford is already being felt by Star dealers here, according to Tom R. Johnson, Southern California zone manager for Durant.

"Friday, W. C. Durant, at a silver anniversary banquet tendered eastern newspaper men in New York, told those present that henceforth the Star four price will be exactly the same as that of Ford, model for model," said Johnson.

"Back in April of last year Durant announced that he was back in the automotive industry to stay. This price slash is the answer to that announcement.

"The 1928 Star four which is being shown all over the country by Durant representatives has a 107-inch wheelbase, four-wheel brakes and standard equipment.

"The Masury patented rubber motor mounting, used in the manufacture of the Star four, is one of the outstanding mechanical features of the Star product. Vibration, which has been taken more or less for granted in a four-cylinder automobile, is claimed to have been successfully eliminated by the installation of the Masury motor mounting.

"With the Masury motor mounting, the famous Red Seal Continental motor and many other mechanical features found only in the most expensive motor cars, there is every reason for the increased popularity of the Star four during the 1928 season. Officials of the organization predict that 1928 will be the greatest year in the history of the Star car, even topping 1926, when Star sales reached a total of more than 150,000 cars and placed the company in ninth place among the motor-car manufacturing concerns of the world."

METAL BAR IN MIDAIR

A horseshoe magnet made of an alloy of cobalt steel and tungsten has remarkable magnetic power, holding a piece of metal thirty times greater than its own weight. The material was developed by Dr. P. H. Brace of the Westinghouse company. At a recent demonstration a bar of magnetic metal was made to hang in midair by the action of two of these magnets, one above and the other below.

CAR'S FOUR-WHEEL BRAKES DEMAND STRONGER BODIES

Higher speed ranges, more powerful engines, faster pick-up and even faster deceleration, due to four-wheel brakes, subject present-day motor car bodies to strains much more destructive than those of a few years ago.

According to A. R. Reedall, manager of Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributor for California, bodies that were highly satisfactory even as recently as three years ago are wholly inadequate for today's modern automobile. "Today's body must contain greater durability, structural strength and rigidity than ever before," he says. "It must group with those features a finer appearance, enhanced comfort and increased spaciousness. The bodies of three years ago would fail completely to withstand the strains to which the greater performance advantages of the newest in motor cars would impose on them."

"The new 1928 Hupmobile six well illustrates the newest in body construction. In addition to being the latest expression in body design, the coach work for this car contains, we believe, the qualities of appearance, comfort, durability and construction that make it attractive to the eye, pleasurable to ride in, durable to own and comparatively simple to manufacture," he continues. "The last two features give the bodies a remarkable freedom from service.

"They are of the composite, or steel-and-wood type. Practically every quality body built today is of this composite type. Where steel is superior to wood, steel is used. Where steel is unsatisfactory or of no advantage, wood is employed. Wood's greater resiliency gives it a definite advantage wherever there is any question.

"Particular attention has been devoted to designing a rigid body front—including dash, cowl, front pillars, windshield and instrument board. Much of the unusual rigidity achieved in the front end is traceable to the differently designed dash. Heretofore, this body part has generally been a simple flat steel panel, with little ability to resist flexure. In the new Hupmobile the panel is edged by continuous U-shaped channel section. In combination with the cowl's front edge, this forms an extremely rigid structure, resisting any tendency to twist or wobble."

JAPANESE WORDING LENDS HUMOR TO ROAD WARNING

"Go soothingly in the grease mud, for there lies the skid demon."

If you were in Tokio, this would be one of the traffic rules in "English" issued to you as a visiting motorist, according to reports reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. Its meaning is especially applicable to this season when the rains loosen up the oil on the roads to make them slippery.

Avoid skidding accidents by driving "soothingly," and also take heed of another warning of the Japanese rules, to wit:

"When a passenger of the foot hove in sight, tootle the horn. Trumpet at him melodiously at first, but if he still obstacles your passage, tootle him with vigor and express by word of mouth the warning 'Hi! Hi!'"

PINE VALLEY BETTER

Recent rains in San Diego county resulted in rather muddy conditions in Pine Valley, but with dry weather this has been completely eliminated, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

AUTO FEATURES FOR TROLLEYS

The newest design in street cars has a number of automobile features. A car designed for one of the New York railways was on exhibition recently for the approval of street-car men generally. The car represents the efforts of manufacturers to produce an electrical vehicle that will compete in speed, acceleration, quietness and comfort with motor vehicles. It weighs only 30,000 pounds, but seats forty-five passengers. It has a low body with stream lines tapering from vestibule to vestibule and has automobile bumpers in place of the old type fender.

The new car has drum-type brakes. Operating machinery is concealed behind panels. The vestibule windows resemble automobile windshields. Dome lights extend over either row of seats. The body is of steel with aluminum panels and the floor is slightly more than twenty-eight inches above the rail. The car has double-end operation. Doors cannot be opened unless the brake is applied and the car cannot be started until the doors are closed. An emergency device sets the brakes and unlocks the doors in case the motorman is incapacitated.

Burma has a home building boom.

If the brakes on your car bother you—try out the "World's Best Brakes"

If your brakes do not take hold well in the mud, or after driving in the rain—try out the Reo Flying Cloud's Velvet Stop protected four-wheel brakes.

If your brakes need frequent adjustment to keep them equalized—try out the Flying Cloud, whose brakes never need equalizing adjustments.

If your brakes at times lock certain wheels while the others are free—try the brakes that always take hold of each wheel with equal pressure.

If your car has a tendency to skid on slippery pavements when you set your brakes—try the car whose brakes halt it in a straight line.

If your brake pedal is awkward to reach, if you have to use lots of strength to stop your car, try the Reo Flying Cloud, whose pedal is easily found and whose brakes are applied with the pressure of your toes.

If you want brakes that will last all the way down the long grades, that will hold you on the steepest pitch, that work equally well whether you are going forward or backing up, in wet or dry, hot or cold weather—you want a Reo Flying Cloud.

"The Best Motor Car Brakes on Earth"

The maker of the brakes on the Flying Cloud—even though he manufactures many more brakes of other types—has said that every automotive engineer and automobile manufacturer who has thoroughly tested these brakes has proclaimed them the best brakes ever developed for a motor car.

You can judge that for yourself. There's a Flying Cloud near you. Ask for a demonstration. Pick a day of dirty weather and slippery streets so that you can test it under the most unfavorable conditions.

You'll find all the speed you dare use, all the power you'll ever need, more comfort than you ever expected in a car at its price, beauty that you'll be proud to possess, economy unequaled anywhere near its price—class, and sturdy construction similar to that which has made Reo famous as America's longest lasting car. Be sure to try one out.

Flew It Successfully in 1903 at Kitty Hawk

Lieut. Selfridge First Man to Give Life

The amazing progress in aviation, which has been emphasized this year, cannot be appreciated unless it is realized that only twenty-four years ago man achieved mechanical flight. From the first clumsy machine of the Wrights, airplanes have grown in size and power and speed, until they roar through the air at five miles a minute, carry loads of passengers and freight weighing tons, and span oceans in their flight.

It was December 17, 1903, that mechanical flight based upon sound principals of control was first seen. The Wright brothers had been experimenting with gliders at Kitty Hawk, N. C., for three years. Having found means of preserving lateral control while gliding something which had not been discovered up to that time, they put a small motor in their glider and managed to make four short flights.

The first flight was not a very encouraging one. It lasted, as a matter of fact, only twelve seconds. On the long expanse of sand dunes and beach grass the two brothers and their queer machine were watched only by coast guards, neighbors and the birds, although they had extended invitations to the people of the district. Only nine, however, were interested enough to attend.

They tried four times that day and on the fourth trial they covered 852 feet and stayed in the air a minute. Just one minute in the air, and in the face of a fairly strong wind which in itself was almost enough to keep the plane up. But that forward motion of 852 feet was due to the engine and the propellers, the latter having been designed by the Wrights after long research. The main point, writes Russell Owen in the New York Times Magazine, was that the plane had flown ahead, keeping a short distance above the ground.

The world heard of the birth of a new method of travel—the conquest of another element. But few realized it then, not even the persevering and clear thinking Wrights themselves. In 1904 they flew as much as five minutes at a time. In 1905 they flew twenty-four miles.

Flying developed slowly in those years. Even the Wrights believed at first that their plane would never be good for much except scouting in war time.

The Wright brothers brought their experiments in the theory and practice of flight, which even then had been going on for many decades, to a point where the work of some of their predecessors was forgotten in the applause that marked their progress. If they had not flown when they did someone else would have done so in a few years; it was inevitable. Two other men had built planes with sufficient lifting power to leave the ground, although they could not be properly controlled.

The father of all modern airplane experimentation was Otto Lilienthal. In 1891 he began his long series of flights in birdlike gliders—flights which ended with his death when his machine broke while he was some distance above the ground. Lilienthal was not only an able, practical experimenter, but he was also the first carefully to investigate the properties of wings in flight. In his book he set down all his observations, making them as simple as possible so that all might read and be inspired to follow his example. Many of his calculations and formulas are basic principles in airplane construction today.

Then came Pilcher, an Englishman, who made successful gliders and contemplated building a machine like a monoplane, mounted on wheels and propelled by an engine driving propellers. Pilcher also was killed by the breaking of his glider before he had opportunity to fully develop his theories.

While Lilienthal was experimenting with gliders to determine the principles of flight, a Frenchman, Clement Ader, began his work by building a plane to fly under power. There was no hesitation about Ader, if all the stories about him are true. He had spent some years studying bird flight and anatomy, and his airplane was a monoplane built after the pattern of a bird's wings. It was mounted on wheels and driven by a steam engine. He is said to have flown it first in 1890 for a distance of 150 feet.

The success of this first attempt emboldened him to build a second machine, which weighed 1100 pounds and was driven by a forty-horsepower steam engine. The French War Department became interested in his work, and in August, 1897, Ader again flew his machine a short distance in a strong following wind instead of against the wind. However, he is reported to have made a flight of some distance before the wind turned the machine over and smashed it. Ader could get no more support in the face of the resultant skepticism and he destroyed all his calculations and work, except the first machine, which was years later exhibited at an aviation exposition in Paris.

There were a number of brilliant experimenters with gliders in America before the Wrights began their work, including Octave Chanute and A. M. Herring.

The great contribution of the Wrights to aviation was to build warping wings, which enabled them to keep their glider and, later, their powered airplane under lateral control in flight. Rudders had been used to turn gliders to the right or left and elevators to raise or depress the front of the plane, but the Wrights made it possible to move the glider around its other axis and so prevent side slipping on a turn.

The Wright brothers felt that the airplane was their exclusive property and that they should be paid royalties or a sum for the use of their patents, and they subsequently spent much of their valuable time in litigation. It was not until 1908 that they resumed their flying. Meantime they had received a much more cordial welcome in France, where many experiments were going on and a number of successful flights had been made by Santos Dumont, Farman, Bleriot and others. A French syndicate bought the Wright's patents and they contracted to build a machine and instruct three pupils to fly it, although they had the most limited flying experience themselves.

The year before the United States Army had invited bids for an airplane capable of carrying two men at a speed of forty miles an hour. The plane was to be paid for on the bonus basis, the original cost to be $25,000 and 10 per cent on the price for each mile over forty miles an hour.

The first tests of the plane were in September, 1908. Orville Wright conducted them, as Wilbur was in France. On September 9 he flew for nearly an hour, astonishing a distinguished group of spectators, including President Taft, members of Congress and the Diplomatic Corps. He made other flights, and on September 17 he went up with Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, who had been a member of the famous Aerial Experiment Association formed by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. While over the parade grounds at Fort Myer, near Washington, where the flights were made, a propeller struck a loose stay wire of the rear rudder and was broken and the stay pulled loose. The plane crashed, fatally injuring Lieut. Selfridge, the first man to be killed flying in an airplane. Selfridge Field was afterward named for him. Mr. Wright was also seriously injured and spent six weeks in the hospital.

But the next year the Wrights again began their government flights and, after many delays, flew for more than an hour. Then with Lieut. Benjamin D. Foulois, now Lieut.-Col. Foulois, in command of Mitchell Field, Orville Wright flew to Alexandria and return, a long flight for those days, at an average speed of 42.6 miles an hour without mishap.

Nothing went wrong with this plane, because the lessons from the first fatal crash had been learned. The Wrights always built their planes the best they knew how; they were conscientious men who would shiver at some of the engineering done on airplanes at present. The crashes they had were the result of inexperience, such as marked all the early years of airplane construction.

Aviation advanced very rapidly after the Alexandria demonstration. Although the Wrights did not do much public demonstrating of their planes and went in for manufacturing, the new sport of the air brought a multitude of eager young men to its ranks. The planes these enthusiasts devised were purely sport machines, however, and it was not until the war that necessity brought careful research to bear upon flying problems, and planes developed faster than they would otherwise have done.

Largest Auto Sale in Manila Consummated

MANILA, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The Bachrach Motor Company, Star car dealer organization of Manila, is receiving congratulations on the closing of the deal with the Rivero Transportation Company of this city for forty Star cars. In point of the number of units, this is claimed to be the largest automotive deal ever consummated in Manila in a single purchase.

The Rivero Transportation Company has just closed a long-term contract with the municipal authorities for official transportation of the city of Manila.

"From the various standpoints, including that of true economy, I consider the Star car the leader among that class of automobiles," declared Senor Rivero. "The low maintenance cost of the Red Seal Continental motor, the power plant of the Star car, is very naturally what proved the determining factor that finally led me to buy Star cars," continued the official of the transportation concern. When one operates a large fleet of cars the maintenance cost is, of course, the most important factor to be considered; then the Star car has both style and power."

The Star cars were purchased by the transportation company after Antonio Rivero had staged a contest at the Luneta to determine which automobile is the most economical to operate in the Philippine Islands. Five other makes of cars were represented in this publicly witnessed open contest in which the Star car won first place for power as well as the honors for economy.

FAMILY LIFE IN THE JUNGLE

The main apparent preoccupation of the male gorilla is fighting for the continued possession of his wives. As the family party moves along through the forest, rarely sleeping twice in the same spot, there is every night the business of making beds. For the gorilla has at least this in common with his human cousins, that he likes and demands a comfortable sleeping place, and, what is more, he prefers to make his sleeping arrangements well before darkness falls.

For this purpose paterfamilias bends down saplings and covers them with leafy branches, while the members of his harem, who are sent up neighboring trees, make each her own bed in a suitable fork by breaking off branches within her reach. Their beds are never very high up—never too high for the old man to be able to keep his eye upon them. You may find chimpanzees nesting in tree tops, but never gorillas.

Once I had a chance of studying this proceeding. I had made my camp close to two parties of gorillas. My own bed was made in five minutes, but the gorillas took twenty minutes to finish theirs to their liking, and probably were more comfortable than I. They are certainly very fastidious in this matter. Even when they remain in the same spot for a few days they make fresh beds every night, sometimes even in the same trees as the night before, but in other forks.—[Dr. N. A. Dyce Sharp in the Continental Edition of the London Daily Mail.

DEEPEST GOLD MINE

The main vertical shaft of the Kennedy Mine at Jackson, Amador county, California, has been sunk to a depth of 4764 feet—making it, so it is said, the deepest gold-mine shaft on the North American continent.

Open Car Holds Own in Winter

Winter weather in California has not decreased interest in motor cars of the open sport type. This is particularly true of the high-grade automobile, declares William E. Bush, distributor of Pierce-Arrow in Southern California. He asserts that the new Pierce-Arrow Series 81 runabout just received here is attracting unusual attention.

"These cars are obtainable in many color combinations and one that we received recently is marked by beauty, smartness and luxury that compel instant admiration," declared Mr. Bush. "This particular runabout has a body finished in beautiful desert sand, striped with vermillion. There are wide vermillion panels on the doors.

"It has vermillion wire wheels with two extras which are mounted in fender wells and encased in khaki-colored covers. The top is of khaki-colored cloth beautifully tailored and can be folded down and covered with a boot for those who love the sunshine. The windshield frame is nickeled. The runabout is fitted with the new type fender headlamps with smaller auxiliary lamps between. Nickeled bumpers also are furnished."

Byron Foy in Union of Large Auto Agencies

Formation in the New York metropolitan district of the world's greatest Chrysler distributing organization through combination of two great eastern companies brings word to Los Angeles of Byron C. Foy, former president of the Reo Motor Car Company of California and director of the Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association.

Byron C. Foy

Foy, who at one time was one of the best-known automobile men in California, and who was vice-president of the New York distributing firm of Colt, Stewart & Foy, Inc., holds the same position with the new organization, which brings into the company Guy O. Simons, as president, succeeding William L. Colt. William D. Stewart is also vice-president of the new company, and Arthur Beam is secretary-treasurer. The new firm is Simons, Stewart & Foy, Inc.

Prior to the combine of these two companies, the Greer-Robbins Company, Chrysler distributor for Southern California, held the unique distinction of being the greatest single unit in the great Chrysler organization. However, the new eastern organization controls a huge market, comprising Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx.

NEW REMBRANDT IN AMERICA

Another painting by Rembrandt has come to this country, it was learned after the recent publication of a cable from Warsaw that public opinion in Poland was disturbed over the reported sale by Count Tarnowski of one of the three Rembrandts remaining in Poland.

The picture actually left Poland some time ago, although the sale has just become known. It was acquired in France by a New York art dealer who has brought it to his galleries. Presumably it is to remain in this country.

The painting is believed to be Rembrandt's first self portrait, executed about 1627, when he was not much more than 20 years of age. The circular canvas is only about eight inches in diameter, rimmed with a gold leaf molding and set in a square oak frame.

Only the artist's head is portrayed. He is seen full face, his left side slightly in shadow, while the right is brilliantly illuminated by Rembrandt's characteristic golden brown light.

The portrait is reproduced in the work by Dr. Wilhelm Bode, the principal authority on Rembrandt, and is also described by Dr. Valentiner. It was shown at the great exhibition of Rembrandt's works held in Amsterdam in 1906 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the painter's birth. The picture is valued at $25,000.—[New York Times.

SAVE THE EYES

A warning to women who constantly strain their eyes rather than wear glasses, and let their vanity endanger their sight, is sounded by Eileen Bourne in an article in Liberty.

"The worst of making your eyes pay the price of your vanity,' explains Miss Bourne, "is that your looks are often the worse for it. Eyestrain produces a habitual frown or a squint or sometimes an unpleasant nervous jerking of facial muscles. Moreover the lids are apt to be red and the eyeballs bloodshot.

"You should heed any symptom of eyestrain. Giddiness, nausea, nervousness, burning sensations in the eyeballs, pains in the head or the nerve center in the shoulder blade—here are the familiar signs that you're being cruel to your two best friends and that a rebellion is starting.

"Maybe you can set things right by merely wearing glasses when you are reading or working," continues Miss Bourne. "Usually you are more or less alone then and can afford to look your second best. Besides, don't portraits in certain show windows and one's own personal observation indicate that some eyes actually look more distinguished behind glass?"

Supply Store Wins Prize in Rose Tourney

Covered wagon days in the State of Utah beautifully depicted in flowers, won first prize in the class for commercial entries for the Western Auto Supply Company at the annual Tournament of Roses at Pasadena, Cal. A covered wagon with a realistic canopy of white carnations, body of marigolds and wheels of ferns and sweet peas, drawn by live oxen and resting on a base of heather was built on one end of the float.

Grouped at the opposite end of the float were seven real American Indians in native regalia and war paint that gave a taste of the Old West when Indians roamed the plains of Utah. Near the prairie schooner were a man, woman and child dressed as the pioneers. Outriders, dressed as scouts of the prairie, astride spirited horses, preceded the float, carrying the "Blazing the Trail Westward" banners.

Between 90,000 and 100,000 natural blossoms, including pompoms, roses, marigolds, sweet peas, carnations and chrysanthemums, were used in the construction of the float. The building and arrangement of the flowers required the services of thirty people. The entire float was designed and built by members of the Western Auto organization.

The Western Auto Supply Company has taken first place in the division for commercial floats four times out of the five they have been entered. In addition to first prize, they were awarded second theme prize this year.

ALLIGATOR'S EYES

Ernest and August McGee are brothers of Texas who earn a livelihood by hunting alligators, which they did on Cedar Lake during the past season. They hunt at night and during the first three nights of operation on Cedar Lake they killed 163 of these creatures. The McGees hunt from boats on the lake each night, beginning as soon as it is dark. They use a headlight worn on their head for shining into the alligator's eyes. They hunt in separate boats and can easily sight the eyes of an alligator, which look like two red coals of fire when the headlight is reflected on them. They use shotguns to kill the larger alligators and most of the smaller ones were killed with a .22-caliber rifle. However, quite a number of the smaller alligators were captured without being wounded. When the light is thrown on them the boat is rowed up to the saurian and the hunter reaches down and jerks it into the boat before it knows what it is all about. Then a sharp hatchet is applied to a spot in the back of the neck and it is all over with that alligator.

APPETITES WRECKED SHIP

Some time ago Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson, a London man, who has also been a man of the world, started making a collection of pictures of tea-trade clippers and this led him to a wider field of operation and now he has a valuable collection of all sorts of material pertaining to old seacraft. This includes ancient maps and charts, atlases and whaling implements and other paraphernalia of ships and shipping. Taking a visitor through his museum he said: "Look at this old spotted print. To talk of a vessel's grounding on an island formed of beef bones thrown overboard by members of the crew seems too 'tall' a yarn to be believed by the simplest sailormen. Yet this tale concerning the fate said to have befallen the Royal William was told by many an old salt in years gone by.

"At the time when Napoleon threatened to land in Great Britain this vessel was a guardship at Spithead. Her crew are said to have been famous trenchermen and to have discarded so many meat bones that their vessel was 'wrecked' on the pile."

PROFITS OF FORESTRY FARMING

The profit possibilities of wise management of a piece of woodland are illustrated by the experience of two generations of farmers in New Hampshire. The piece of land in question is merely a seventeen-acre lot, which was cut over in 1894, at which time the father of the present owner paid the choppers a bonus of $20 to use care and leave the small growth. For lumber sawed from logs delivered at a near-by mill he received from $9 to $11 a thousand feet at the mill. The son has cut 50,000 feet of lumber which sold for $18 a thousand feet, or $900, piled at the roadside. Two years ago he refused an offer of $2000 for the privilege of cutting all trees more than eight inches in diameter, or more than $117 an acre. Including the lumber sold, the income and increase in timber value, the land has been earning at the rate of $5 an acre per year for the thirty-three years.

WOMEN SMOKERS OF SCOTLAND

Toward the end of the eighteenth century pipe smoking among women seems to have become a general habit in rural districts north of the border and the compilers of a "Statistical Account of Scotland" published in 1791, found cause to lament: "The use of tobacco may almost be said to be excessive especially among the female sex, there is scarce a young woman by the time she is taught to spin but has also learned to smoke a pipe." The authors attributed this habit to the idea that smoking was an antidote to rheumatism and ague, and they mentioned that "the favorable alteration with respect to these diseases has produced only a greater avidity for tobacco." Among the "auld wives" of the countryside, of course, a pipe has always been regarded as a legitimate comfort.

Knight Line to Have New Car in Line

That there will be an important announcement made regarding Willys-Knight production this week, which will include an expansion of the Willys-Knight line to price fields which have not been previously occupied by this car, was the information received here by J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributor.

According to L. V. Starr, vice-president and general manager of the Leavitt company, progress in the Willys-Knight has been marked during the past three years since the production has been confined to six-cylinder models. The present Great Six and "70-A" have stepped into the front ranks among cars of their price class, he declared.

"The motor building plant at Pontiac, Mich., has been enlarged and equipped with many new special machinery features," said Mr. Starr. "These have aided materially in quantity output and in manufacturing economy.

"Since the Willys-Knight six-cylinder cars have been placed on the market there has been a marked trend toward sleeve-valve engined cars on the part of the motoring public. This favor is increasing every day for the efficiency of this type of power plant has become very well known."

THRONGS VIEW NEW CAR

A most remarkable reception greeted the new model Chevrolets that went on exhibition last week at Chevrolet dealers everywhere. Careful check by the Los Angeles Chevrolet zone office showed that more than 60,000 people visited Chevrolet salesrooms in Los Angeles during the first two days that the car was shown, and all through the week crowded sales floors bore witness to the enthusiastic comment which maintained the interest in the new car in undiminished volume.

Universal surprise was expressed over the fact that Chevrolet had been able to substantially reduce prices, in spite of such added features as four-wheel brakes, longer wheelbase, larger bodies and added power. The new lines of the car brought an endless amount of favorable comment, as did likewise the many mechanical changes.

Interest was expressed in the manner in which the Chevrolet organization swung into full production on the new car. In spite of the radical changes in the car, which necessitated equally radical changes in factory equipment and production methods, production is already at 2000 cars per day. Four hundred of the new models reached Southern California dealers prior to the first of January, giving dealers perhaps the most complete initial showing of a new model that dealers in a low-priced car ever were fortunate in securing.

"Large as the initial production is, we could wish it were still larger," said George H. Wallace, zone manager. "While deliveries to buyers will begin in considerable volume this week, they will not keep pace with the orders received. Many of our out-of-town dealers took orders in the first two days equal to a normal business for an entire month.

"Though the factory achieved a production of 1,000,000 cars in 1927, the outlook for this year is even more encouraging than last. Certainly no new Chevrolet model ever received such a marvelous reception as did this year's car. The enthusiasm shown here in Southern California was duplicated everywhere over the entire United States, according to wires we received from Detroit.

"The advantage which General Motors enjoys through the testing which a new model receives on the proving grounds is well illustrated by the way in which production on the new Chevrolet was launched. Because every feature of the new car was proved in hundreds of thousands of miles of actual driving on the proving grounds, large-scale production could be launched at once without hesitancy, and with the certain knowledge that the car would prove completely satisfactory in the hands of owners."

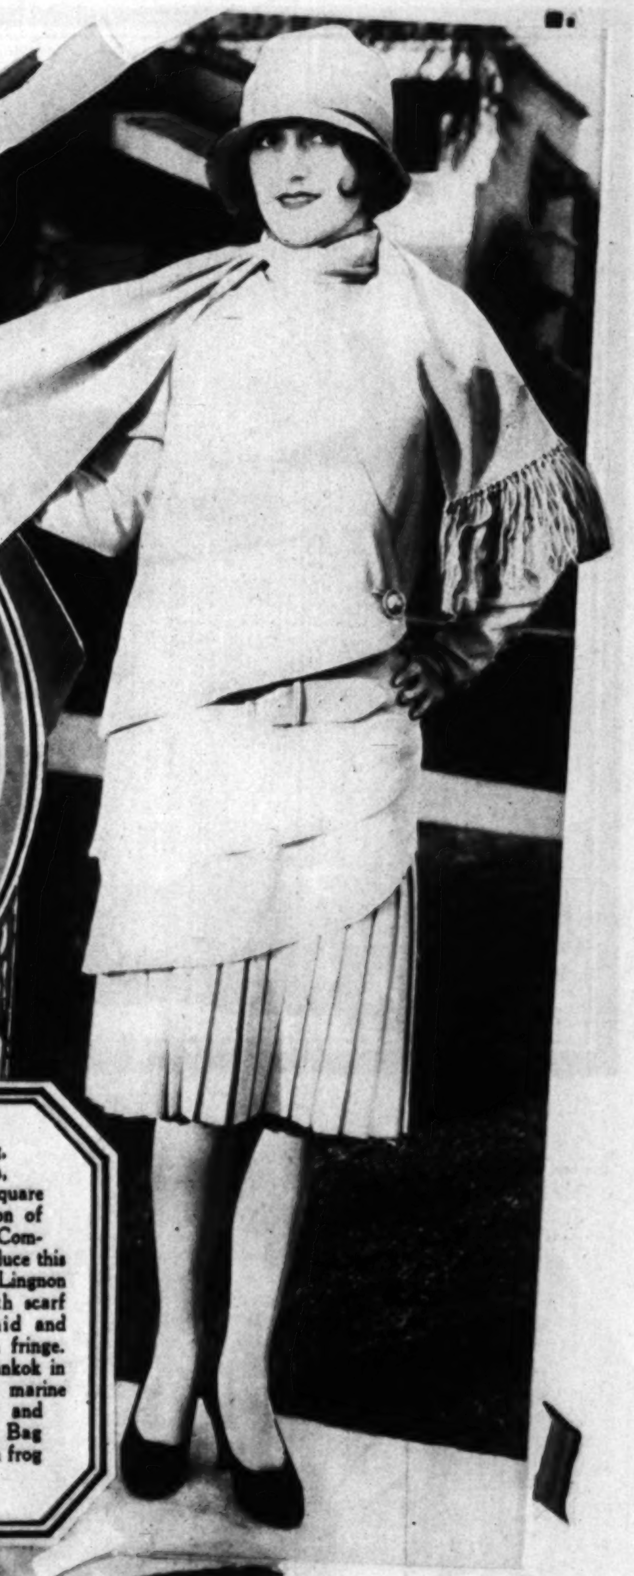
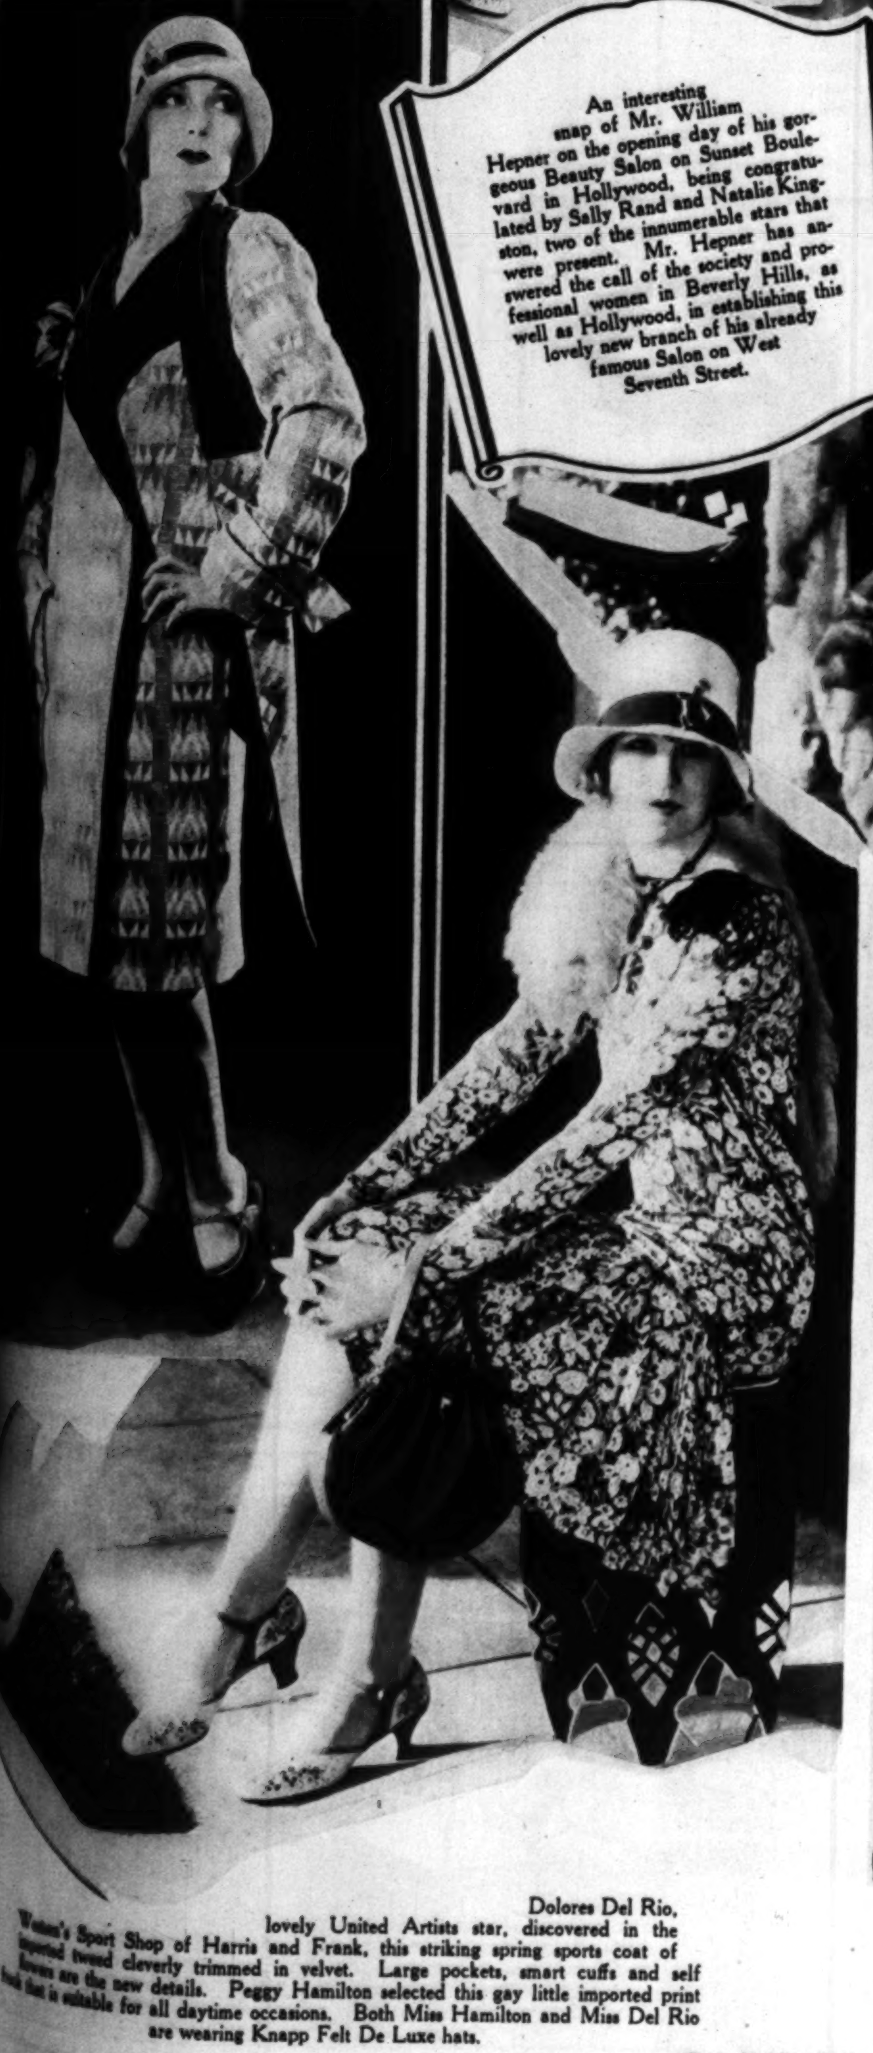
Specially posed and directed by
PEGGY HAMILTON

The shops, whose costumes appear on this page, represent the most exclusive importers, and announce an early display of spring hats, shoes, costumes and accessories suitable for Southern California. Los Angeles is conceded as having some of the best-dressed women in the world and there is no place in the world where the shops have more efficiency or cater with greater discrimination, the buyers bringing to our shores original creations from Paris and New York, many times before they are even shown in New York or abroad.

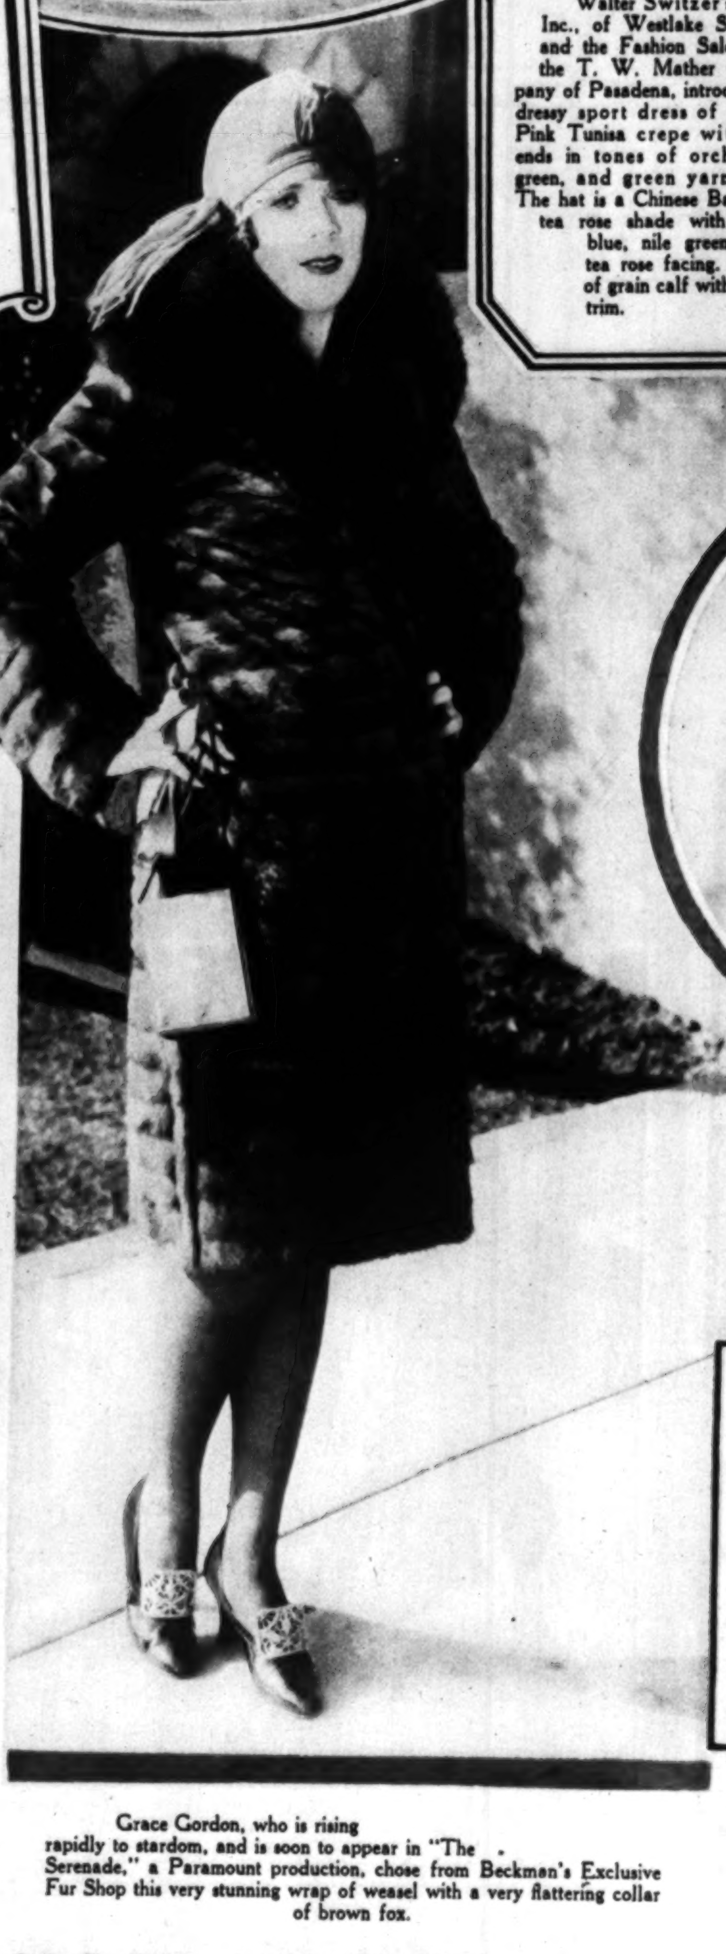
An interesting snap of Mr. William Hepner on the opening day of his gorgeous Beauty Salon on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood, being congratulated by Sally Rand and Natalie Kingston, two of the innumerable stars that were present. Mr. Hepner has answered the call of the society and professional women in Beverly Hills, as well as Hollywood, in establishing this lovely new branch of his already famous Salon on West Seventh Street.



For early spring, Walter Switzer's, Inc., of Westlake Square and the Fashion Salon of the T. W. Mather Company of Pasadena, introduce this dressy sport dress of Lingnon Pink Tunisa crepe with scarf ends in tones of orchid and green, and green yarn fringe. The hat is a Chinese Bankok in tea rose shade with marine blue, nile green and tea rose facing. Bag of grain calf with frog trim.

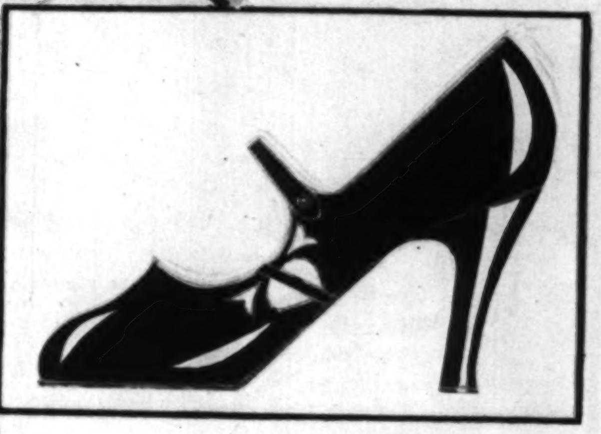


Dolores Del Rio, lovely United Artists star, discovered in the Women's Sport Shop of Harris and Frank, this striking spring sports coat of imported tweed cleverly trimmed in velvet. Large pockets, smart cuffs and self bows are the new details. Peggy Hamilton selected this gay little imported print frock that is suitable for all daytime occasions. Both Miss Hamilton and Miss Del Rio are wearing Knapp Felt De Luxe hats.



Grace Gordon, who is rising rapidly to stardom, and is soon to appear in "The Serenade," a Paramount production, chose from Beckman's Exclusive Fur Shop this very stunning wrap of weasel with a very flattering collar of brown fox.

Doraldina's new Ceylon "Allura" is finding much favor as a general make-up for brunettes, as shown here by Bernice Young, while dark Java and dark burn is being worn by blonde types for the street and orchid and light java for evening wear.



The Bootery, exclusive shoe shop of Los Angeles and Pasadena, realizing the extensive use of sequins and rhinestones this season, introduced to Los Angeles some of the most original and exquisite slipper creations fashioned entirely of sequins and rhinestones. Street, sport and afternoon shoes in the Bootery are also original and striking creations; such as "Pamela," which comes in dull mat kid and patent leather with grey kid inlay and piping.

Constance Talmadge Says: "The demand for slender figures is so universal that movie stars must have them. Not only beauty, but good health and vitality argue against excess fat."

The Pleasant Way to Banish Excess Fat

This is to women—and to men—who admire and desire the slender figures shown by movie stars.

There are several ways in which millions now attain them. One is self-denial in the diet, one is excessive exercise. Both require discretion, both stamina, and both must be continued long. Excess fat was very common when these were the only ways to end it.

The Modern Way

Twenty years ago another method was developed, based on wide research and scientific tests. The purpose is to aid the natural process of turning food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat. It supplies an addition to the substance which does that in the body.

This discovery was embodied in Marmola Prescription Tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. And delighted users have told the results to others.

The use has grown to very large proportions. Now note how slenderness prevails wherever you look today.

No Starvation

Users of Marmola are not required to adopt abnormal exercise or diet. Moderation aids results, but extremes are not advised. Users depend for the main results on the factors in Marmola.

Take four tablets daily until the right weight is attained, then stop. If again you start to gain weight take a little more Marmola. Simply use Marmola to supply lacking factors, until Nature keeps the slenderness you desire.

Is it TRULY FAREWELL?

WILL they be permanently separated? That is a question that suggests itself, despite announcement of the dissevering of the co-starring partnership of Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Since their first appearance together in "The Dark Angel" they have been considered the most romantic film team. "The Passionate Adventure," it is stated by Samuel Goldwyn, the producer of their pictures, will be their final double appearance. It is the story of love and adventure, laid in the sixteenth century Netherlands, blending a dramatic theme, with a note of mystery. It was directed by Fred Niblo. The Colman-Banky pictures together have been "The Night of Love," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," and "The Magic Flame," in addition to those already mentioned.

Mystic Mother Love Note Attracts in "THE NOOSE"

Strong Emotional Elements in New Barthelmess Starring Feature

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

The appealing mother-love theme lends much of beauty to "The Noose." Richard Barthelmess and Alice Joyce.

Barthelmess presents a characterization of great poignancy.

Montague Love portrays an unusually forceful heavy as Buck Gordon.

Lina Basquette in this, one of her first featured roles, gives an exceptionally promising performance.

The governor and the wife, peculiarly involved in the picture's complications. Robert E. Haines plays the governor. The emotional highlights of Miss Joyce's interpretation are splendid.

Mack's melodramatic "The Noose," telling the story youth who committed a mur to shield his mother's name, to the screen as a picture of emotional strength. Richard Barthelmess is the star, and the produced by Henry Hobart First National, directed by John Dillon.

"The Noose" offers anything but convincing plot in its original Nor is it fundamentally more convincing in the screen interpretation. However, it is so and appealingly done in the scenes, that one is willing to the inherent defects for engaging treatment.

Barthelmess has a perfect role as boy tossed into a world of and longing for a better environment. In the plot of the picture, as in the play, he is shown in revolt against his presumed guardian (or father), Buck Gordon. The matter of the relationship is dealt with a trifle equivocally.

As Nicky Elkins, Barthelmess is desirous of knowing his real identity, which he finds a mystery. Gordon becomes involved in a shooting scrape, and on the verge of being arrested discloses to the boy that his mother, formerly on intimate terms with himself, so he asserts, is now the wife of the governor of the state. He threatens to force her into the situation arising over the shooting affray with a rival bootlegging gang to save himself.

The boy becomes enraged at his plan, and in the fury of the moment kills Gordon, even though believing that Gordon is his own father. He is brought to trial as a patricide, and sentenced to be hung.

The governor of the state is against a reprieve. His wife and the defense attorney, who is a friend, constantly plead with him to stay the sentence. He resists every argument and all their solicitations. The boy, himself, will say nothing in his own defense, except that he killed Gordon because "he was no good." This, the governor contends, chiefly, makes it impossible for him to show clemency, because he has no valid reason for doing so.

The boy is led to the scaffold in the early hours of the morning. The governor is disturbed, but does nothing. The boy's mother (not realizing, of course, that it is her son) decides to keep a vigil during the hour of his hanging, but instead falls asleep.

During this sleep she rises and goes to the telephone.

The next morning she assumes that the boy is dead. She comes to the governor upbraiding herself because she had slept through his execution. He looks at her questioningly, and then informs her that during the night a mysterious telephone call purporting to be from himself had been received at the prison, telling the warden to stay the sentence, because "the boy's mother was coming to see him."

There are various developments after that in the picture, but this is the main point in the plot, and is remarkably dramatic and affecting.

"The Noose" is really very excellent screen material. In a way it might seem a preachment against capital punishment, but essentially it is only a portrayal of an individual instance.

The proximity of the prison to the governor's home is one of the less acceptable bits of mechanism in the plot, just as the arbitrary measures of the trial may fail to engender belief from an audience. These are secondary issues in the attractions of the mother love theme as brought out in the picture, and the sentimental pathos of the leading character. "The Noose" is, taken all in all, pretty well bound together.

Barthelmess in serious mien is at his best. He is almost unrelievedly serious in this production, and he touches the heart with his work.

Lina Basquette looks very promising as the little cabaret girl, who is devoted to Elkins. This is one of her first features since she entered the lists of picturedom in earnest. She is a decided type, and has feeling.

Alice Joyce plays the mother very poignantly in the scenes that count. I can't say that it is one of her very best portrayals, but the highlights are splendid and sufficing.

Montague Love does a very powerful heavy as Gordon. He looks distinctly different in this picture.

Robert E. Haines merits more than a passing mention as the governor. William Walling, Robert E. O'Connor, Thelma Todd, Emile Chautard, and Ed Brady are others.

MELODY LANE

"Our Gang" has its melody-makers, too—yes, indeed. Take, for example, Mildred Kornman. Mildred expects to be a prima donna some day, and to all appearances she's off to a good start.

Napoleon is musically inclined, or, to be more exact, this is. In case you fail to recognize him he is Pasquale Metropolitan Opera star, who is portraying the part of "Little Corporal" in "Glorious Betsy," Dolores Costello's picture.

"The Drinking Song" . . . and how! Lupino Lane, center, is self-appointed to this group of sturdy Melody—as it isn't! In which Laura La Plante and her husband, William Seiter, and Glenn Tryon get together long enough to prove that all noise isn't necessarily musical.

"The Leopard Lady"

VIVID and EXCITING

A huge ape is the figure about which much of the action revolves. To explain more here, however, would tend to lessen the interest when the picture is released. This scene in particular is one of the dramatic highlights of the production.

An exciting moment the close, with Robert strong, Alan Hale, and Logan.

Dick Alexander not been seen before of any importance, quits himself admir "The Leopard Lady."

JUST as "The Cat and the Canary" struck a new note in mystery screen plays, so does "The Leopard Lady" initiate a new order of mystery play construction.

Long before the final scene is reached the spectator is fully aware of the identity of the murderer, and the tricky manner in which these gory deeds of his are perpetrated—in fact, he is in full possession of all the facts that are generally relegated to the last reel for denouement. And, far from destroying the illusion and story enjoyment, this new method of plot unraveling accentuates the interest.

"The Leopard Lady" is a story of the sinister events which follow in the wake of a traveling circus troupe in Austria. Against this background of a Continental circus is etched a mystery tale that has every element for popular success, a melodrama that is fascinating both to eye and to imagination. Through it all lurks a subconscious menace which one cannot perceive but which, at all times, one can sense.

Rupert Julian has taken Beulah Marie Dix's adaptation of Edward Childes Carpenter's play, "The Leopard Lady," and has made a picture of absorbing appeal. There are several instances wherein the action becomes somewhat illogical, but this, in part, is due to bad cutting.

A splendid climax is reached when the villain, a few moments after he has saved the leopard lady's life from her animals, discovers that she is a member of the police. A still greater climax comes when this girl, played by Jacqueline Logan, learns that the man she has been sent to detect knows her secret—and in the subsequent action, through gratitude, refuses to expose him to her chief.

Miss Logan, in this character, reveals a talent for the finer shades of acting. Theatrical, throughout the course of the production, her part is all the more difficult for its being so. As a Continental animal trainer, the role calls, not for the repressed character that should distinguish a straight part, but for an entertainer's view-point on life, showmanship. This should be clearly understood, else the average theater-goer may take her acting literally.

It is between the performances of Miss Logan and Alan Hale that the interest in personalities is centered. Hale, as the Cossack rider, is outstanding and his work in this production rates with the finest. He displays a rare quality for combining heavy drama with subtle humor that will find keen and wide-spread appreciation.

The scenes in which Miss Logan is attacked by her leopards are among the most thrilling ever filmed. There is a consistency of tempo here that never lets down, and the action is sufficient to keep any audience in a warm glow of pleasurable excitement.

Robert Armstrong, new to pictures, enters the plot toward the close, as Miss Logan's fiance, but his part is almost parison to the other There is a note of guishing him, however, doubtless meet with proval.

Remembered as "The Swede" in "The Blood Ship," Bradbury, Sr., contributes but effective character chief of the secret Alexander, seen, too, likewise presents a performance that larger roles. Others Ashton, Hedwig Reicher, Burt, Kay Deslys, and Carson.

"The Leopard Lady" less be received as a tion of more than The cryptic manner story is narrated, the the characterization, ness of direction, the pense, and atmosphere the story as a whole, mystery—all combine noteworthy picture.— liams.

James Bradbury, Sr., repeats the success he achieved in "The Blood Ship." As the leopard lady, Jacqueline Logan is utterly convincing.

K. Howard, Norman Kerry, Mr. and Mrs. William Sistrom, Al Cohn and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Korda, Rudy Cameron, Edmund Goulding, and simply scores of others.

"Do you know it is becoming all the rage," remarked Stella, "to serve buffet suppers, even at these huge affairs?"

"It's considered fun to do it," observed Gardner James, with shrewd wit, "by those who don't eat at cafeterias during the day."

OUT ON the dancing floor, Harvey Barnes and I noted Svend Gade dancing with his wife. He is a marvelous dancer.

"It does take those foreigners to have the grace and smoothness on the floor," remarked Harvey, who is no slouch of a dancer himself. Harvey has lately come from Pittsburgh to enter pictures, and is having a lot of luck.

Ben Lyon was dancing with an unknown girl, probably an aspirant in pictures. Usually we see Ben alone. I think he hardly ever takes a girl anywhere. I'm sure he is always dreaming of Marilynn Miller.

The orchestra, an excellent one, played obligingly late, and everybody voted the party one of the nicest Hollywood has ever seen, because there was such a delightful air of informality about it, largely due, of course, to the wonderful spirit of warm cordiality which Ruth Collier knows so well how to put into any social affair she has anything to do with.

STELLA was giving a little party over at the Montmartre the other night, with just dozens of film celebrities all about us. The gaiety of the occasion was added to by the fact that there was a gorgeous fashion show put on by the Mays, and a dance contest.

Gertrude Olmstead and Robert Leonard were in Stella's party, with Gertrude looking—well, you know how Gertrude always looks. She never looks weary or cross or anything except radiantly pretty.

"And you hardly ever see that," confided Stella, "except in the dumb Doras; but Gertrude is one of the wittiest girls in Hollywood. I'm sure if she weren't so beautiful she would be writing sub-titles, so the world has to lose one way or the other."

Ona Brown was there with Harvey Barnes, and there were Mabel McCane, the noted musical comedy and vaudeville star, and Shep Kelly, the aviator, who won a record in the world war, although he looks as mild as a Sunday School teacher.

ETHEL JACKSON, who is the daughter of the well-known Hollywood financier, Herbert Jackson, and who has just gone into pictures, danced with Irving Harris in the dance contest, the pair winning the cup.

Ruth Taylor was at the next table with a big crowd, while Bertha Mann and Raymond Griffith were tete-a-tete across the way.

"A lot of people were surprised at Griffith and Miss Mann's engagement," remarked Stella, "but I'm not a bit astonished. Surely anybody who plays such heavy dramatic roles as Miss Mann does, must crave a little comedy relief, while if I had to be as funny as Ray is, I'm sure I should long for some dramatic balance to my comedy life!"

Vernon Rickard came late, as he is working in Vitaphone records. Vernon told us how, before Gertrude Olmstead won her beauty prize and came into pictures, one Clancy, a college mate of his, used to moon around about the lovely young girl back in his home town, and how, when anything went wrong between them, he used to ask Vernon's advice. The girl was Gertrude. Vernon said he longed to utter the magic name of Clancy to Gertrude, but didn't quite dare, especially before husband Bob Leonard!

Lois Wilson was there with Jerry Miley, and Viola Dana came to dance and dine with a very nice looking young man whose name we didn't learn; Alice White peeped at us over her dancing partner's shoulder, and Anita Stewart was there with her handsome Italian doctor.

"Anita is getting prettier every day," said somebody, and everybody remarked "Amen."

QIK CREAM HAIR REMOVER

These two famous products—

All your skin needs for a scientific facial—

WOMEN who heretofore have had to spend a great deal of time and money in beauty salons for scientific facial treatments will be grateful for the simple new home beauty treatment that Daggett & Ramsdell have perfected.

It calls for just two products—Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream and Vivatone, the Perfect Skin Tonic. Yet this simple cream-and-tonic combination gives you everything that the more elaborate treatments offer. The cold cream, used as a cleansing massage, keeps the contour and texture of the face youthful. Vivatone, the new skin tonic, refines the pores, stimulates tired muscles and gives the skin a glowing freshness.

First—Massage the face and neck generously with Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream. Let it remain on until its fine oils reach deep down into the dust-and-powder-laden pores. Then remove gently with a soft cloth.

Used after the daily cold cream massage, it removes any surplus cream left in the pores, and leaves the skin in perfect condition for make-up.

Next—Saturate a pad of absorbent cotton with Vivatone and apply to the face and neck, using a rotary motion. This will remove any excess cold cream and close the pores. Let it dry before applying powder.

As soon as you feel its delightful cool tingle, fatigue seems to vanish from your face, leaving it rested and invigorated. If you need a powder base, follow the facial with an application of Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Vanishing Cream. It holds the powder evenly and gives that satiny finish!

This beauty regime takes only a few minutes a day. And it is not at all expensive. Vivatone is now for sale at all the better drug and department stores in and around the city—wherever Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect creams are sold—at the modest price of seventy-five cents a bottle.

Cinerarias

—the ideal plant for the shady places of your garden

Of all the plants that bloom in the late spring and early summer there are none so colorful and gorgeous in their display of bloom as Cinerarias. A bed of these beautiful subjects makes the most wonderful mass of color that can be imagined. When the plants reach maturity the foliage is literally smothered with their gigantic trusses of bloom.

Besides the wide range of color that is covered by Cinerarias there is another point worthy of note, and that is the metallic appearance of the flowers. It is safe to say that they are the most brilliantly colored flowers in existence and with the strain we are offering there is no question but that in a short time Cinerarias will be among the most popular of all the early summer flowers.

It is not an uncommon thing to see Cinerarias, raised from our strain of seed, that carry as many as one hundred and fifty flowers to the plant and many of the flowers measure as much as four inches in diameter.

The plants we are offering are strong, sturdy plants in 3-inch pots, $2.00 per dozen.

(When ordering by mail, 10c extra per dozen is required for postage.)

OTIS SKINNER'S FIRST SEASON

Complimentary Words of Mark Bates Helped Future Star Over Many Early Discouragements

By Preston Wright

THIS is back in the days when the drama in America was provided in most cities by stock companies.

In Philadelphia, in the summer of 1877, William Davidge, Jr., was organizing a company for the Philadelphia Museum. An announcement of his purpose was printed in The Clipper, New York theatrical paper, and was read, up in Hartford, Ct., by the 18-year-old son of the Rev. Charles A. Skinner, a Universalist minister.

This youth was Otis Skinner. Otis Skinner aspired to be an actor. So he sat down and wrote a letter to Davidge, asking him for a place.

It happened that Davidge needed a young fellow for utility business. Experience wasn't necessary.

"Come on over in September," he wrote young Skinner. "I can use you at a salary of seven dollars a week."

How does a minister's son break the news to his family that he intends going on the stage?

Dr. Skinner was in his study, at work on his sermon for the next Sunday, when Otis entered. Absorbed, he kept the boy waiting for a time before he asked:

"Well, what is it?"

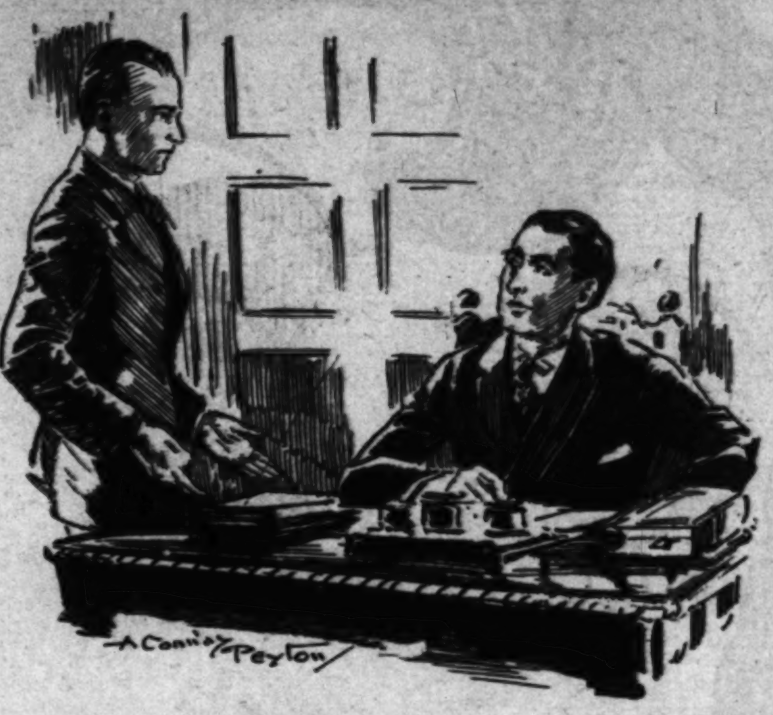
Otis told him and braced himself for a storm. But his father only looked at him quizzically.

"If you've made up your mind, I suppose that's what you're going to do," he remarked. "Well, you'd better speak to your mother about it. But don't bother me, now. I'm too busy."

Before the would-be Thespian set off for Philadelphia, he did a neat bit of headwork. Since his first correspondence, he never had had a word from Davidge. He knew his father had long been a friend of that famous showman, P. T. Barnum, whose home was at Bridgeport. Bridgeport was on the route to Philadelphia. Otis asked his father to give him a letter of introduction to the great P. T. He had an idea that he would be much better off if he should have some sort of missive of introduction and approval from Barnum.

Little things often assume great importance. If Otis Skinner had not seen Barnum his trip to Philadelphia would have been a failure, very likely. And that might have changed his career completely.

The young man asked the showman if he knew Davidge.



"Well, you'd better speak to your mother about it—I'm too busy."

"Indeed I do," said Barnum. And he was very glad to give Otis Skinner, son of "the finest man I ever knew," as he declared, a note to the Philadelphian.

It quickly proved its value, for when Otis presented himself in Davidge's office the next morning, it developed the manager had forgotten the youth from Hartford.

"I'm sorry—very sorry," he explained, "but there is no place for you now. Everything is filled. Really, you should have written sooner to remind me."

Rather raw stuff, but Skinner was not yet daunted. He produced the Barnum letter and handed it over.

Davidge's glance shifted. He hemmed and hawed. Finally—

"Drop in tomorrow," he said—"something may turn up." The next day he gave Otis Skinner a contract.

It was a strange company that the new actor found himself in. The Philadelphia Museum was a minor theater—the members of its company by no means representing the best traditions of the stage. There was plenty to discourage Otis, but one event was sufficient to outweigh every unfavorable circumstance.

Mark Bates, an actor who had filled many important engagements, but who, because dissipation had caused him to grow undependable, was now glad to have a place with a second rate company, was the leading man at the Museum.

During that first season, when Otis Skinner, despite his inexperience, played ninety-two characters, Bates watched him closely.

"Keep at it, my boy," he said, "for you have ability. You'll get to the top."

Poor Mark Bates. Late one rainy night, Skinner found him homeless and penniless in the street. He had played his last engagement with the company.

Skinner showed his appreciation of the poor fellow's interest in him, by getting him a lodging and staying with him until he had steadied himself. It was not long until he died.

Bates' prediction remained in his mind, however, and prevented him from getting discouraged. It was partly verified soon after.

At the season's end, the Chestnut Street Theater was opened for a few weeks for the presentation of some standard plays. Skinner obtained a place with the company, which included such well known actors as Louis James and William E. Sheridan.

One night George K. Goodwin, manager of the historic Walnut Street Theater, dropped into the Chestnut Street Theater to see part of the presentation of Macbeth. Otis Skinner was playing the part of Malcolm.

"Who is that fellow?" said Goodwin to himself. "He's good!"

He made inquiries. The result was that when Skinner went home for the summer he carried with him a contract to play for Goodwin the next season at $15 a week.

That season Skinner appeared in the support of the great stars of the day. The next summer he went to New York, the city of every actor's dreams.

Augustin Daly, the great and only Augustin Daly, decided that he "wouldn't do." But, just when his funds were exhausted, he got a job with the Brothers Kiralfy. The critics spoke kindly of him and before the end of the year he was appearing in the support of Edwin Booth.

After five more years passed, Augustin Daly reversed himself by engaging the youth he had said "wouldn't do" as a member of his famous stock company.

Otis Skinner was definitely on the way to becoming one of the stars of the American stage. Already he had proved the correctness of Mark Bates' judgment that he had real ability.

WITH the POETS

When Birch Leaves Are Falling

Sad is my heart when the birch leaves are falling
And the green hill-tops have turned into gold,
When the wild-roses that bloomed by the mill-pond
Their scented petals no longer unfold;
For there is hint of a deep desolation
Over the land where the sweet-grasses blew,
Breezes no longer hold glad invitations
When skies are bereft of their tenderest hue.

Sad is my heart when the birch leaves are falling
For the wide branches that sheltered my door,
Hold now no songs of the birds at the dawning
Vibrant and care-free with old woodland lore;
Only the incense of fires slowly burning
Brings to me memories and notes of the Spring.
Of the green buds that are hidden and sleeping
Yet softly unfolding, that April shall sing.

MABEL W. PHILLIPS.

Then and Now

When Grandma was a youthful miss
She didn't paint her face;
She never smoked a cigarette;
She always knew her place.

She didn't wear her dresses
Up well beyond the knees;
She didn't shock the world at large;
She didn't chase the he's.

She didn't go on auto rides
'Way back in 'eighty-seven;
She didn't do a lot of things
To keep her out of heaven.

She didn't stay out late at night;
She didn't roll her socks;
She didn't dance the Charleston;
She didn't bob her locks.

She didn't do these little things,
She didn't, we'll allow;
But, if she didn't do them then,
Why does she do them now?

R. C. O'BRIEN.

Rain Today

Rain, rain, rain, rain, drops of rain
Pattering 'gainst my windowpane,
Falling softly one by one,
Quickly to my casement run.
Sometimes windswept, fierce you race
In a wildly hurrying pace,
Scurrying clouds go swiftly by—
With their precious burden fly
Far away o'er land and sea.
What a glorious day for me!
Turning quickly to the door
With no thought of the downpour
I step outside—raise my face
To the wondrous open space
Of mountain and hill and dell.
Precious drops! Oh, Mother Earth
Drink them in, for they are worth
More than priceless jewels, far
Hidden deep where naught can mar.
Parched your bosom, sere and brown,
Hill, ravine and sloping down
Cry aloud, though silent all,
For the blessed rain to fall.
Dust-gray leaf and drooping flower
Sadly waiting for this hour,
Quickly change to robes of green
Bend and sway in graceful mien.
Perfumes from my garden fair
Ravish sweet the heavy air.
Just beyond, the mountains lie,
Summits reaching to the sky.
When the clouds shall roll away
Somber peaks now tipped in gray
Will their diadem renew—
Purple, rose, and lilac hue.
Twittering birds 'neath drooping leaves
Seek the shelter of the eaves.
Soon on wing they'll sing their lay
In praise of rain—rain today.

Tells How Flaxolyn Stops Acute and Dangerous Gas Attack

Dr. Harris H. Lentz, Who Spent 20 Years in the Study of Herbs, Roots and Barks Before Flaxolyn Was Perfected.

Canadian Woman Saved By Flaxolyn

Dr. Royer of Montreal, Canada, tells of the following interesting case wherein prompt, effective results were secured not through drastic drugs, but with harmless, natural Flaxolyn:

"I was recently called into the home of a lady patient and found that she suffered from an acute attack of gastritis. Complications had already set in. Instantly I gave her a Flaxolyn herb powder. This treatment I repeated in 15 minutes and again in 30 minutes. In one hour the patient was recovering rapidly and surprisingly. Upon the following day when I called she had spent a good night's rest and was positively normal."

FLAXOLYN A TONIC-LAXATIVE

Faulty elimination brings on serious trouble and very often dangerous gas attacks. Don't delay. Start taking Flaxolyn now. Waiting may simply increase the seriousness of your frequent stomach disorders, intestinal poisoning, high blood pressure or general rundown condition. Flaxolyn contains 12 herbs, including Spanish Licorice Roots, Culver's Roots, which stimulate the flow of bile; Baked Flaxseed, which relaxes congestion and acts as an astringent; Greek Valerian Roots which help to induce the natural sleep of health.

made of water, half a lemon and honey. Drink while in bed. Place double or triple the number of blankets on the bed so as to induce free and copious perspiration. Then windows may be opened and sleep as usual.

The steam and hot rooms of the Turkish bath may be used for this purpose where the household facilities are inadequate.

Free adequate perspiration is itself an excellent remedy for the average cold.

Irrespective of these measures, however, the common cold, if we but stop feeding it, would run its course and produce no complications.

It is when we seek the short-cut methods involved in various forms of drug medication that the cold most often becomes complicated.

Heart Palpitation and Gas

Often a patient complains of heart pains and distress. Examination with the stethoscope shows nothing abnormal about the heart. The fluroscopic examination with the X-ray machine also reveals nothing abnormal. The reality is that the gas pressure, pushing the walls of the stomach upward, irritates the diaphragm which in its turn presses against the heart, confining it to a lesser space for its contraction and consequently causing pain.

The stomach lies immediately underneath the diaphragm (a large muscle which separates the chest from the abdomen;) the heart lies immediately on top of the diaphragm. When the patient eats the type of foods which generate considerable quantities of gas, the bloating which takes place forces the diaphragm upward against the heart. The heart, being compelled to contract and expand about eighty-five times per minute, cannot withstand this compression. Consequently the sensations of pain and palpitation.

Tersely, the so-called "heart disease" is readily overcome merely by basic correction of diet.

Gas is a by-product of inflammation. The symptoms of this inflammation are usually manifested in an excessive secretion of stomach juices such as hydrochloric acid and pepsin or a failure of these digestive juices to form.

We cannot put into the stomach artificial juices from a pig or a sheep to serve when one's own digestive glands cannot manufacture them. We do not thereby get at the causes. The reason the digestive glands cannot manufacture the secretions in proper quantity and quality is because the diet has been such as to irritate and constantly inflame. The result is that all the stomach remedies used are palliative, temporary in nature, have no intrinsic healing powers, and, above all, are not corrective of the cause of the inflammation.

Always it simmers down to one hypothesis—diet. Of course, associated with this must be all the other elements of hygiene such as nervous poise, sensible hours, proper work and similar factors.

So long as diet is the keynote, a critical question before the patient always concerns the items which should be incorporated into the diet and those which should be prohibited. Putting the question in clearer language, what foods are gas-producing or inflammatory to the digestive system and what foods are not? Of course, to answer this in any conclusive fashion is impossible.

People of different races and nationalities differ. Various climatic conditions create variations. The personal factors surrounding each individual will also play their parts, so, at the best, one may only generalize.

Sugar in all its products is one of the chief offenders. Next comes a host of products manufactured from refined flours. Doughnuts, cakes, hot cakes, waffles, pastries and similar products come under this category.

Many people seem to think that meat is the crux of the dietetic situation. Personally, I would not classify meat as the leading dietetic crime.

Next comes the host of refined drinks—the extracts and derivatives which grace the American table.

With some people certain vegetables are also productive of gas. Many individuals cannot eat cabbage, onions or garlic. Some few cannot eat nuts. This group, however, is very small and each will have to experiment with himself. The diet is largely an individual question rather than a general one. Handle the problem from this aspect instead of the drug way, and you will usually find that much of the so-called "heart palpitation" and "heart diseases" have as their foundation dietetic stupidities.

Nasal Sprays

A visit to almost any home will usually reveal a spray bottle on the dresser. Somebody in the family has nasal catarrh and the doctor has recommended a spray to alleviate the clogging, choked-up sensation.

Quite as a matter of routine, the spray bottle is used without second thought or knowledge as to its effects.

Every day the nose becomes choked and clogged. In practically every case, the spray bottle contains a nasal astringent.

The action of most astringents is to coagulate the mucus membrane surface and thus to prevent the normal excretion of catarrhal wastes.

Perhaps a good picture of it would be a microscopic enlargement of the nasal mucus membrane. If we could magnify it, say one thousand times, we would see an immense number of tiny little openings on the surface. Through each of these the membrane-secreting cells pour liberal quantities of mucus.

During inflammation these cells excrete very profusely. When we spray an astringent on the surface, its literal action is to choke or coagulate this multitude of tiny openings and thus prevent the mucus from escaping. It is really sealing the orifices through which waste must escape and furnishing temporary alleviation at the price of the health of the tissue.

Consequently, there comes a time when the spray astringents have so eroded the mucus membrane tissue that they are no longer effective. Then we have genuine disease pathology of the nose.

We cannot compel morbid waste material to remain in any tissue without having it undergo degeneration.

Astringents are by far the greater of the two evils between permitting the mucus to escape freely and suffering the choked-up feeling, and the temporary relief furnished by their usage.

There is nothing healing in an astringent. There is nothing fostering better health. Their action is purely suppression—nothing more.

Learn how to eat so that the blood will no longer furnish the materials for mucus manufacture. Then only will be found the solution to congested nasal mucus membranes. You will not find it in the spray bottle of astringents.

Jackson A. Graves Completes His Book

By John Steven McGroarty

This blessed Sabbath morning we feel that as we stand in our far-flung Synagogue we have a new feather in our cap.

And the reason we feel that we have a new feather in our cap is that Brother Jackson A. Graves has completed the book that we have long nagged him to write. The book is not only written, but is off the press of the Times-Mirror Company in Los Angeles, beautifully done in large, clear type on fine paper.

But it is this way about books, that the work of the printer is the body, and the work of the writer is the soul of it. Especially is this true of this particular book that Brother Jackson Graves has written. It is his soul that you will see when the book has been read.

You all who sit in the Synagogue on blessed Sabbath mornings will remember well that for years past we have been challenging this man to write the story of his life—the story of a man who has lived seventy years in California, which, in that time, has emerged from a peaceful pastoral country into an amazing land of unbelievable activity and vast prosperity. And among the men who have had a big hand in this evolution is our friend Jackson A. Graves.

He was for many years an able lawyer, associated with great men at the California bar. And for many years more he has been one of the really few great bankers of America.

We have never met a man with so extraordinary a memory—a man who can at will open a cell in the back of his brain and call to minute recollection anything that has happened to him or to the world around him in these seventy years. A ready writer, a man of sound education and unusual natural talent.

He has sat in the Synagogue as long as anyone else. And that he is a member of the Congregation of the Faithful, saying his prayers every night and every morning, we have no doubt. Because he was educated at St. Mary's and was the first graduate of that college where he was under the watchful eye and the loving care of the good Christian Brothers. And though he is not of their creed, he gladly acknowledges the wholesome influence their teachings and their example have had upon his spiritual life. He believes in God, and in the mercy of God, and in the rewards of the Hereafter. And any man who so believes surely says his prayers even though he may not go down upon his knees to do so.

But all this is neither here nor there. Only that the Conductor of the Synagogue feels that he can claim at least an esthetic part in this great book which has now been written, at last, by Jackson A. Graves.

The real reason that for years we kept at his heels nagging him to write the book is that he shall not be forgotten in the generations of the future when California shall have become the wonder of the world. As an able lawyer and as a great banker he will assuredly be forgotten. The world does not remember lawyers and bankers, useful and necessary though they be. But once a man has written a book, if it be a book worth while, he will never be forgotten. Even Homer and Ossiam who thundered their great songs through Greece and the Isles of the Narrow Seas long before books or the papyrus were known, are still remembered. They will always be remembered.

And so it shall be now with Jackson A. Graves. His book will live and last because it is a great book and it was necessary that it should be written. For he, more than any other man we know, is equipped and mentally constituted to reflect the stirring times in which he lived and had so big a part.

Here is a man who came of good sturdy pioneer stock to begin with. And it was the pioneers who laid California's foundations. It is as Henry O'Melveny in his fine introduction to the book says: "As to the man portrayed by this book, I would say he is of the finest type of an American. He comes of good Kentucky stock. The Southerners have always been good pioneers—Lewis and Clark were from Virginia—Fremont was from South Carolina. Eighty per cent of the white population of Los Angeles, between 1865 and 1870, was from the South."

And as we go back farther than that to the Spanish pioneers, to Serra and Crespi and Portola who blazed the first trails, we begin to realize the deep debt we owe the pioneers.

Perhaps to a great many people the most intensely interesting and fascinating chapters of this book will be those in which the author relates the stern struggle of his family during their first years in their new Californian home. And it cannot fail to serve as a high inspiration to the American boy of today to know with what desperate courage J. A. Graves as a boy struggled for an education and fought his way up from the common soil to so high and eminent a position in the world's affairs. To attend the San Francisco High School he rode twenty miles a day on horse back. Obstacles even greater than this were constantly thrown across the pathways he trod to gain an education. But nothing daunted him then, or since. And no one will gainsay that it is a good thing to be a brave man.

Another reason why we kept so persistently on the heels of Jackson A. Graves to write the book was that we wanted preserved in the archives of our libraries an authentic story of what the author himself used to term "The passing of the dominant race." And this he now has done.

It always seemed to us to be a great story—this passing of the dominant race. The story of the Spanish pioneers and their descendants who came one day to dominate as their own possession the golden land that stretches along the Sunset Sea from Siskiyou to San Diego. The story of the great overlords and patriarchs whose vast ranchos were flung across the shining hills and through the flower-flamed valleys of the Land of Heart's Desire. The sweet and gentle hospitality that was theirs. The good lives they led. And how, in their day and time, California was the happiest land that was ever known.

And then how it came to pass that the glory of Spain faded and passed away. Their vast land holdings were broken up, the gringo came and plucked the scepter from the grasp of the old race.

This was the story we wanted told. And now it has been told—told by the best man to tell it, and written down with his sure hand to stand forever and a day as authentic record. It seems to us that this feature of the book alone is an invaluable contribution to history.

Venerating womanhood after the splendid traditions of his Southern ancestry, Mr. Graves pays a beautiful tribute to the women of the one time "dominant race."

"The wives of these old grandees," says he, "were noble home-loving women, loyal to their families and devoted to their religious duties. They tenderly cared for both the physical and spiritual welfare of their children. They pointed out to them the straight and narrow path. They fed and nursed and clothed the Indians, by whom they were surrounded. They restrained the passions and prejudices of their husbands, brothers and sons, who, too often, were goaded to desperation by the hypocrisy and deception practiced on them by the Americans who were rapidly settling up this country, and who were not overscrupulous as to the means used in order to attain ends desired. To the beneficial influence of these noble women, such prosperity as came to their households was due."

Though it were for this story only that we prodded Mr. Graves into writing, we would feel justified. But, happily he has gone much farther. He has written more fully of the past seventy years, the stirring events of which he has glamorously set down. The men of those seventy years, a few of them still living but most of them dead, pass in vivid review before all who shall read these gripping pages.

"My Seventy Years in California" is essentially a book of history, and, being written as a biography, is the more valuable. Biography is the best history and constitutes the most reliable document in that sense. The life of a man is the thing—his story of what he did and what he saw and the events in which he took part.

It has been said by some one that "an institution is but the lengthened shadow of a man." This is even more true of the State. The State is but the lengthened shadow of the men who reared its rafters and laid its strong foundations.

Too often, however, books of history are as dry as dust. But, oh, not so with this book that Brother Jackson Graves has written. It fairly scintillates with humor—that strong and saving sense of humor inherent in the author—the thing that must have saved him in the hard struggle of his early life and against the riptides that have since attacked his foothold on life's sands.

There is many a good yarn in the book. Every once in a while there is a good side-splitting laugh. Indeed, it is a book to sit up with o'nights, and to turn to to be read again. It is deep with sound philosophy, stern with the living truth, gentle in the little blame expressed in it, charitable in thought, just to all men, and wide in wisdom.

The author dedicated the book to his wife, and of this we are glad. It is a loving tribute to a loving helpmate. Her sweet and gentle memory will go down the generations linked with that of her husband.

Interesting as the book is now, how much more so will it be a century from now when some student of history digs into the dusty tomes of the past to learn what manner of men we were in our days and what Los Angeles was like in the early stages of its existence?

For, no one doubts that Los Angeles is to become one of the world's greatest cities. Indeed, there are those who prophesy its destiny in even greater measure—those who say that it will at length become the world's greatest city. It needs not the vision of the prophet to see a city greater than Babylon in all its glory builded solidly between Santa Barbara and San Diego. And so, when the student of history a century from now, or, maybe five centuries from now, is patching together the fragments of the past to re-create the California of the South that existed in the long ago, this book will be of the utmost value.

Mr. Graves pictures Los Angeles as it was in the year 1875 when everything centered around the old Temple Block near by the present astounding new City Hall.

At that time, somewhat more than fifty years ago, the Pico House was the leading hotel. There were three little struggling banks in the town, one telegraph office and one messenger to deliver the telegrams. A single Wells-Fargo & Company Express office with a man and a one-horse wagon to make all its deliveries. "On the night of July 4, 1875," says the author, "I was at a ball and danced with all the belles and many of the matrons of the city." It would take more than one dance for Jackson A. Graves to do that now.

In 1879 Mr. Graves bought for I. N. Van Nuys from Judge Sepulveda the southwest corner of Seventh and Spring streets for $500—the same lot that now if it stood vacant would bring a million. He subdivided and sold for Mrs. Arcadia B. de Baker land on Main street along the neighborhood of Fourth at $100 a foot. These statistics are amazing in the light of present-day facts. They will be more amazing a century and two centuries from now.

Fifty years ago the land upon which great skyscrapers now stand in Los Angeles were the sites of the suburban homes of the people. Vineyards and fruit trees were there instead of stone streets and side walks. Mr. Graves draws a very vivid picture of those times. And he does not fail to make many a pen picture of not only the prominent figures of the time in the life of the little struggling town, but he also brings before us the distinguished visitors who came to Los Angeles, now and then. He has stories about great actors and orators who were here in those times.

Indeed it seems that in this remarkable book nothing at all that anyone would want to know is left out. No thing that anyone would want to remember is neglected. All that the student of history a hundred years or a thousand years from now would care to be informed about is set down in these magical pages.

The book portrays the religious and the political activities of the times of which it treats. What happened at elections and what was going on in the churches, what the lawyers were up to and what the courts, presided over by one or two judges, had to do with the execution of justice. Now we have an endless list of lawyers and a hundred or more judges presiding over as many courts engaged in the feverish and quite hopeless task of catching up with overcrowded calendars.

We are happier than words can tell to be able to say in the Synagogue this blessed Sabbath morning that the task which Brother Jackson A. Graves set himself to do has been done, and well done. Our thanks and the thanks of all the world are due him.

Important new discoveries concerning foods and various diseases are reported by prominent medical men who recently have turned their attention from vitamines and calories to calcium carbonate. Investigation shows that the average diet of grown-ups and children alike is deficient in this important element.

For building up run down health calcium carbonate is being recommended more and more. A lack of calcium in the body lowers vitality in young and old, while a sour or acid stomach produces headache, biliousness, dizziness, nausea, gas, insomnia or griping pains.

No wonder Stuart Tablets are in greater demand than ever before! A single one of these wonderful little lozenges contains ten grains of calcium carbonate, together with magnesia and other stomach-soothing acids to promote assimilation of food and overcome all the distressing symptoms of indigestion.

CARE OF THE BODY

body to do with the minimum quantity of sleep. The nerves of far too many of us are frazzled. Consequently sleep is difficult and often procured by means of opiates, drugs, or similar measures.

For one suffering from insomnia, a large number of recourses may be had in the realm of natural methods. If you are nervously tired—literally, too tired to sleep, try a warm or tepid bath and observe its relaxing effect. Again, if the mind is torn by a confronting chaos, too active to secure the relaxation of sleep, try reading some light, unstimulating literature. The mere diversion from the thoughts that fill your mind will often induce sleep.

Sometimes insomnia is due to digestive disturbances. A resort to an enema or two will often clear the digestive system of much of the gas that is preventing sleep. Sometimes the blood needs to be forced from the brain to the digestive system as the brain is too active. A piece or two of fruit or perhaps a warm drink such as warm lemonade or milk will often suffice for this purpose.

Again, there may be congestion in the head such as is evidenced in headache or in neuritis pain. A hot foot bath or a hot sitz bath will serve to bring considerable quantities of blood to the lower extremities and consequently relieve the pressure above.

In other cases, insufficient physical activity is responsible. Then a short walk, deep breathing and proper attention to posture will accomplish the desired results. If this is impractical, five or ten minutes of "setting-up" work with special emphasis on the abdominal and pelvic exercises will induce the necessary relaxation.

The person suffering from insomnia should guard his nervous resources—should not be guilty of overstimulation. His activity should be more of a physical nature than of a nervous kind. He should strive toward physical tiredness rather than nervous fatigue.

Sleep is more a question of nerves than of body. Sleep is one of nature's best medicines.

Get enough of it!

Aneurism

Every health writer is confronted with the problem of converting technical phraseology into popular terms. Since, as doctors, we are constantly faced with the actual conditions of disease which have been described in the technical literature under technical names, we must of necessity resort to such titles.

What is meant by the term aneurism? Many people believe that they are suffering from heart disease when in reality the affection ailing them is really an aneurism. Technically, an aneurism is nothing more than an exceedingly dilated blood vssel usually of the larger type such as the aorta. If we can conceive of the blood vessels as being of a definite diameter, an aneurism would be that type of blood vessel in which the diameter has been increased several fold.

In so far as the ailment will be known to the patient the symptoms manifested will show themselves, in the main, somewhat similar to those of a heart disease. That is, there will be a marked listlessness, fatigue upon limited physical exertion, and a general systemic lassitude. Usually there will be no pain or any other evident distress; the symptoms will be entirely of a general nature.

Where the patient is taking medication it will usually be in the form of heart remedies, as certain types of aneurisms are frequently confused with heart disease. There is no way by means of which drugs of any kind can affect such a development.

Somewhat similar to a heart lesion, however, an aneurism can be counterbalanced by compensation. That is to say, the other blood vessels can be made to do a larger proportion of the work allotted to them and thereby relieve the strain of aneurism.

In this ailment, as in several similar diseases of the heart and blood vessels, exercise of any kind should be taken with extreme discretion. The possibility of rupturing the enlarged and weakened blood vessel is ever present. Under no consideration should one suffering from an aneurism undergo excitement or extreme emotional strain of any kind. The bursting of the vessel may be followed by serious and disastrous consequences.

Therefore, the tone and tenor of life should be even, quiet and calm. Regularity of hours and freedom from excesses are vitally necessary. Rest, calm, quiet and peace are about the best medicines available. Aside from this and the following out of an intelligent diet regime, there is very little which can be done to affect the aneurism itself directly, excepting in so far as the general systemic health may be brought to a point where full adequate compensation occurs.

Treating a Cold

Now, when perhaps 20 or 30 per cent of our population are undergoing changes of health due to congestion from colds, a knowledge of handling and of treating these conditions is essential. Each fall and winter season takes its toll of sickness and fatalities in the form of the various respiratory diseases generally commencing as colds.

A cold when "nipped in the bud" need not evolve into the dangerous manifestations so often encountered. Its treatment may resolve itself into several sound procedures. If we but understood the common cold to be merely a method of respiratory elimination, our program of treatment would be markedly simplified.

There is never a cold unaccompanied by the profuse discharge of bacteria-laden mucus and pus. That is essentially the cold. Of course, it is associated with such unpleasant symptoms as cough, the choked-up sensations in the nose and head, general nervous irritability, sometimes toxic fever and often a marked general malease or disinclination toward effort or work.

Since Nature's intention is directed almost exclusively toward elimination, her purposes should be aided rather than retarded. First and foremost—stop eating or, if that is impractical or impossible, confine your diet to fruits, fruit juices or both.

The digestive system should be emptied naturally and artificially by means of the enema. The objective is, of course, the removal of toxic wastes. If the head and nose are congested there are several methods of procuring immediate relief. A twenty-minute hot foot bath taken two or three times per day in a warm room will usually suffice. A hot sitz bath of fifteen minutes' duration, that is, immersing the body in hot water to the top of the hips, would also act in a similar fashion.

A good method of procedure is somewhat as follows: At night, before retiring, take a hot foot bath or sitz bath as directed. Then get into bed in a warm room. Have some other member of the household serve you one or two glasses of hot lemonade

DANGEROUS TO USE

Massage or suction to try and change the shape of the eye ball, as this may cause detachment of the delicate retina only 1-2500 of an inch in thickness, causing blindness and glaucoma which ends in blindness. Incorrect sight is a mechanical defect that can only be corrected by glasses.

which a mother should be sparse with her eating. It is during the last two months of gestation.

Then the probability of the development of birth jaundice is reduced to a minimum.

For treatment there is little I can recommend except to stress the importance of breast feeding. I have seen cases of birth jaundice terminate fatally because mothers were not prepared to nurse their little ones.

Nasal Catarrh

It is sometimes amusing to listen to people's conversations for effects other than words. Intonation, resonance, pitch and the quality of the voice are often indications of a condition that is exceedingly common—nasal and respiratory catarrh.

Not only is this evident in conversational contact, but it also may be seen by observation. The frequent use of the handkerchief and the repeated irritation indicate the same general condition.

If we were to see the internal surface of the tissues we would find the mucus membrane of the nose, the naso pharynx, the eustachian tubes, and oftentimes the ear itself, red, angry and inflamed. The engorged tissue, with its hypertrophied glands, discharges the by-products of the inflammatory process.

When an individual is confronted with the problem of increasing deafness he may get the impression that it is due to some local infection of the tonsils, teeth, adenoids or to an obstruction in the nasal passages. Perhaps he permits himself to be subjected to a surgical operation for the removal of the focal point of infection. The typical case history shows a brief measure of relief following the surgical operation, largely because some of the morbid accumulated impurities are also disposed of with the inflamed organ removed.

Surgery does not get at the cause. Something has been responsible for the engorged, irritated, inflamed tissue. There can be no catarrh, no inflammation of any kind, without finding a lowering of the vital resistance to such a point that the inflammation easily ensues.

The causes of this lowered resistance are manifold. Of them all, dietetic misdemeanors constitute a more potent factor than all others combined. When elimination is inadequate, when the by-products of faulty digestion are absorbed by the blood circulation, the toxic waste materials find an outlet, usually in the form of catarrh. With some these bad habits of diet manifest themselves in the form of nasal and respiratory catarrh—with others in the various respiratory diseases such as asthma, tuberculosis, bronchitis and similar afflictions. With still others it breaks down the kidney function and produces kidney inflammation in the form of diseases such as nephritis.

A catarrh is nothing more than a long continued inflammation that becomes deep seated and thoroughly impregnates the tissue that is affected. Essentially its cause lies in nutrition—the type and quality of blood that is fed to that area. If the blood is charged with the morbid waste materials received from faulty digestion and inadequate elimination, it is only logical to assume that the correction of these causes will also directly affect the catarrh in so far as it will no longer be fed with inflammatory by-products.

Study reveals a marked uniformity in the methods by means of which the catarrh was produced. In the majority of cases it is due to the excessive consumption of refined starches, white flour, bread stuffs, cakes, pastries, sugar, sugar products such as candy, creams, jellies and jams—in fact, any sort of sweets or starches. Next to these comes the excessive consumption of refined cereals and the dairy products. A person having catarrh should eliminate, partially or completely, these elements from the dietary. Then when the blood stream is no longer fed by these elements the mucus membrane affected will be given an opportunity to disengorge its wastes by means of the toxic discharge in the form of mucus, pus and similar excreta.

Of course, other measures should be applied. When the nose is stuffed, breathing difficult, when the hearing is affected so that noises and rumbling sounds are experienced, other measures of immediate relief and permanent benefit are thoroughly applicable.

There is a definite technique evolved for the clearing of the nasal orifices by means of deep breathing. Every catarrhal patient should be taught this method of deep breathing. Certain electro-therapeutic measures, which will produce internal heat and thereby enlarge the capillaries producing relief from congestion, have also been found to be decidedly effective. The administration of both osteopathic and chiropractic treatments, through their release of the nerve and blood energy, will also be found beneficial.

In short, diet must be the foundation, with other measures assisting. Catarrh, though yielding with difficulty, in spite of its deep-rooted and persistent nature, may be markedly alleviated and in many cases completely overcome if we but use the sound common-sense principles that natural methods teach us.

Sleeplessness

Sleep is the great rejuvenator. In sleep the body rebuilds itself for the new day's activities. Sleep is a tonic, restful, stimulating, a builder of the vital resources.

Periodically we read here and there of this or that individual who is able to go with three, four or five hours of sleep. Without implying the truth or lack of truth in these statements, I very much question their pertinence or relationship to the general problem of sleep with the average individual.

Merely because an Edison or other genius has so freakishly trained his body is, under no circumstances, a criterion that anyone can do likewise. Furthermore, I see no object in any ambition to thwart nature by training the body to do with the minimum amount of sleep. Rather, the problem is just the reverse—the question of permitting the human body an adequate amount of sleep in spite of the jazz life, the insatiable craving for excitement and stimulation, and the distorted hours kept by the average individual.

Biologically speaking, man is not a nocturnal animal. It is only in so far as he must resort to the artificial means embodied in our so-called improvements, such as the electric light, the use of fire for lighting purposes and similar measures, that he is able to use the night for his work or pleasures.

It is impossible to live a night life and at the same time retain the perfection of eyesight characteristic with so many animals.

Again, biologically speaking, man's body is adapted to sleep from sun to sun, that is, from dawn to dawn as evidenced by the reactions of the very young babe. He sleeps or should sleep from dawn to dawn and it is not until he becomes thorough inoculated with our "jazzomania" that his habits are changed.

From a health viewpoint, the question of insufficient sleep or insomnia is a far more pressing one than the adjustment of the

"I hate Gilbert," the man remarked, and he certainly spoke with conviction.

SHUBERT'S "SERENADE"

The Music Seemed to Be Everywhere, and There Was a Strange Feeling of Tension in the Air

"I WAS there when this thing occurred," remarked Donaldson, pointing to his newspaper.

"There must have been quite a bit of excitement," I commented, glancing over his shoulder at the headlines. "Did you see the woman?"

"I should say I did. In fact, I was seated at the adjoining table and, I am ashamed to confess, had been listening to her conversation for a long time. She was one of the most striking women I have ever seen, and I am sure I should have remembered her, even if there had been no unusual event to mark the evening."

"I'll have to read it then," I began, "and see—"

"Suppose you allow me to tell you about it first. There will be just about time enough before my train pulls in."

He flipped away a half finished cigarette and began his story.

"I ate dinner alone last night in a restaurant I had never tried before. The place had been recommended to me by some friends on the paper. Naturally, as do all newspaper men, they pride themselves upon their knowledge of quaint places where one may eat, smoke and, if possible, think.

"The name of this particular place is The Vodka and it is very much what its name implies. Last night, for instance, there was so much tobacco smoke in the air that one could barely see ten feet across the room. Through the haze it was possible to distinguish the usual crowd of pseudo artists, who are, apparently, always talking of the work they never do accomplish, and I noticed a great many very uncomfortable looking individuals who were, I suppose, people from 'uptown' doing the Village. The room was crowded, and the eternal (I nearly said immortal) newsboy paced sadly about moaning 'Wuxtra!'

"I am trying, in my inefficient manner, to give you a picture of The Vodka, for, really, the woman was so incongruous in such surroundings that it made her, for me at least, especially noticeable. I was busy trying to dissect a steak which had spent the greater portion of its distant youth upon the Siberian wastes. The orchestra, and of course they all wear smocks, was doling out the notes of a sad Slavic chant, and was flirting in its entirety with a little Jewish girl at a convenient table. The music was nice, but it was infinitely sad, and the steak was rapidly dying and becoming stiff, and a Columbia freshman who had wandered into the room seemed to be determined that all mankind should be aware of the fact that he had recently broken the Eighteenth Amendment.

"In short, I was feeling very desolate, and was mentally consigning my knowing friends to a worse place than The Vodka when I chanced to glance up and meet the eyes of the most beautiful woman ever created by God. You know that I am a very enthusiastic person. Each new book I lay my anxious hands upon is 'the best book I have ever read;' every new play I have money enough to view is a 'real work of art,' and you spend a large portion of your too many idle moments sneering at women whom I call beautiful. This one was glorious. Even you would have admired her.

"As she came into the room, the orchestra, for no apparent reason, slowed up on the sad thing they had been playing and floated on to Schubert's 'Serenade.' I am a rank sentimentalist, and I insist that that composition is the sweetest music ever written. Somehow, the woman and the song seemed to fit one another. I did not consciously notice the fashion in which she was dressed, but it must in some manner have been registered upon my mind, for I remember that I later wondered why she had on such an old-fashioned costume. She had come in alone, which is no unusual circumstance at such a place as The Vodka, except for the fact that such a creature would arouse comment anywhere she went unescorted.

"With my usual poor taste I turned around as she passed by my table. Then for a moment I doubted if she really existed except as a figment of my imagination, for she was nowhere in sight. But suddenly I heard her speak. How did I know that it was her voice? How can you tell the voice of a nightingale from the chirp of a sparrow? Why, it couldn't have been any one else talking! An old-fashioned voice, causing the hearer to picture old lavender and lace. Really, it was uncanny.

"'Peter,' she was saying. 'I have absolutely no interest in Gilbert, save as a friend. There is no reason for this insane jelaousy.'

"'I cannot help it, Martha,' replied a man's voice. (Wouldn't her name just be Martha?) 'I love you so, and I cannot bear to have another so much as—as touch you!'

"I should not have listened to their conversation," continued Donaldson, "but I could not seem to help myself. I'm sure you'll think me a consummate ass, and it's hard to explain exactly my sensations at that moment. It sounds extremely ridiculous but I felt as though the conversation was more in me, than merely something I heard. I seemed to have a hazy idea of what each was going to say just before a remark was uttered. You have had that sensation? The conviction of having been before, at the same place, with the same people, and having heard the same things said. Our neo-psychologists account for such phenomena by shouting 'Subconscious Mind!' and we cannot refute that argument as we certainly can't be conscious of our sub-conscious, since—but at any rate I attempted to listen to the music (it seemed that the orchestra intended to play Schuber's 'Serenade' forever) and I could not turn my mind away from the people sitting in back of me. Possibly this is all very boring to you, but I assure you that you shall remember it with interest after you read that item in the paper. At this very moment I can distinctly remember every word which was spoken in my presence last night.

"'I hate Gilbert,' the man remarked, and he certainly spoke with conviction.

"'If it gives you any peace of mind,' the girl replied, rather bitterly, 'he feels very much the same toward you.'

"'Because I am Russian, I suppose, and an artist. There is a certain type of mind which cannot appreciate art. To such a man as your Gilbert, the artist is a useless fellow, amusing himself with childish things. Well, I detest him I tell you. Him, and his grand English manner. To him the most important thing in life is the proper cut of his coachman's coat! Cold! Unemotional! Brutal! It is what a man feels that counts. In here, the heart, that is what matters! A man's faith, his purpose and his life. My faith and my purpose and my love, they all lead to you, Martha! I hope you can appreciate them.'

"'Oh, I do, Peter! I do. How could you doubt their meaning for me; yes, and your meaning too! You know how much I love you. What I have done for you, and what I have promised for you. Peter! Listen! They are playing Schubert's 'Serenade.' Remember? Our song. Don't be cross with me now! You can't be angry, not while they are giving us that music. Please! I love it so, the music I mean, and it—it makes me want to cry when I think of all you have meant to me.'

"'Have meant to you!' responded her companion, bitterly. 'What have I meant to you? Sometimes I cannot understand you at all. I wonder just what I have meant to you. A song? What do I care for Schubert's "Serenade"? It is trash, silly, sentimental trash! Nothing, but—why Martha what have I done? You are crying! Don't be hurt, sweet. Forgive me. Please Martha. I feel so badly. Anything I can do, I promise you! And that song! Why Martha, this is Saturday, our last time to-

CARE OF THE BODY

Manipulative treatment of the spinal muscles, especially the cervical muscles of the neck, are of considerable importance. Release of all pressure on the nerves emerging from the spinal vertebra will permit the nerve energy to flow uninterruptedly to the inflamed eustachian tube and ear.

There is a definite breathing technique which permits the eustachian tube to open and allows sufficient air to enter the middle ear. Many physicians have an apparatus which forces the inflation of the eustachian tube and consequently enlarges the orifice to the middle ear. This can be accomplished by a definite breathing technique. Close the mouth and clamp shut the nostrils. Then force the air through the ears. Those of you suffering from catarrhal deafness will find considerable relief merely by this method of breathing. Do not overdo it.

Many cases of catarrhal deafness seem to do very well in a moist, damp atmosphere such as is found at the beaches. The moisture assists in opening the nasal passages and the eustachian tube. As a rule, the beach climate is to be preferred to the mountain climate.

All of these measures have yielded, in actual practice, a fair measure of success but the principal ingredient in any form of treatment is infinite patience. The patient who expects to get results in a month, two or three, is inevitably doomed to disappointment. It can't be done.

Of all the types of inflammation, the catarrhal, deep-rooted, deep-seated inflammation is the most stubborn and difficult to heal. One of the favorable symptoms showing that elimination is going on profusely is a copious discharge of the phlegm and similar mucus purulent waste discharged continuously.

The dry catarrh is much more stubborn than the so-called "wet" catarrh.

Keep these measures up a year or two years, and you will at least find that the deafness will not become worse. That of itself should be a victory.

With persistent courage and stick-to-itiveness, there is no reason why even such a stubborn ailment as catarrhal deafness will not yield to the proper, remedial measures as presented.

Pyorrhea

Every year sees an increase in the number of people afflicted with this disease. Pyorrhea is needless and preventable. There is no justification for its presence. In the realm of prevention, more constructive work can be done than in the knowledge of its cure.

Pyorrhea undoubtedly is built on the foundation of wrong diet and careless eating habits. When we supply the body with those ingredients necessary toward building good teeth, pyorrhea will never develop. When we learn to chew our food as it ought to be chewed and minimize the pre-refinement and adulteration which characterize our present eating habits, the bacterial colomies incidental to pyorrhea will not form. After the necessary prophylaxis by the dentist, the cure or failure to cure of pyorrhea becomes almost exclusively a question of diet and general health.

The coarser the food and the more closely it approaches its natural state, the better it becomes as a remedy for this dread disease.

Do Drafts Cause Colds?

With an adroitness characteristic of most people, the blame for our misfortunes is inevitably shifted from our own shoulders to something else. It is always the draft or the cold weather or the wet feet or somethingelse which is responsible—not ourselves. Candidly, I think it is high time we truthfully faced the facts. Instead of shifting the blame for most of our illnesses upon external environment or the peculiar conditions surrounding us, it would be better if we came to a realization that most of our ailments are a direct sequence of the crimes we commit against the sane laws of Nature.

Let us take the case of the relationship of drafts to colds. What do we find? Is the draft directly responsible for the cold? If this is true, why is it that not all of us "catch cold" when we are exposed to the draft? If one hundred average men and women are in a drafty room, three, four or five may snuffle and sneeze. The rest will be uninjured.

Again, what is there in a draft which in any way can be responsible for a cold? What is a draft?

Our common understanding of a draft is a current of air entering at one opening and leaving at another. As a rule, in a drafty room there are two currents of air; one warm, the other cold. The cold is displacing the warm. Consequently, the draft.

Next, what happens when the draft strikes the body?

Being nothing more than a cool current of air, some muscles of the body contract. It is merely this contraction, especially of the millions of tiny little muscles imbedded in the skin, which causes shivering and goose flesh, and in turn is responsible for the contractile nature of the cold that ensues.

But why is it that some people will "catch cold" when exposed while others will not? What is there peculiar about the 5 per cent who come down with sneezing and snuffling symptoms? Granting that the draft is the immediate cause of the cold, what, in turn, has been the main cause?

In every case where one becomes readily subject to a cold one will find the body loaded with toxic wastes, the mucus membrane engorged, the elimination poor, or the digestive system catarrhal and inflamed.

It is this constant engorgement and intestinal catarrhal inflammation with inadequate elimination which furnish the highly susceptible background for the cold.

It is somewhat similar to traveling a long road to the edge of a precipice. For days and weeks one travels this road. Then a very slight push is sufficient to cast one over the brink.

Thus it is with the cold. For weeks we gorge and stuff, charging the body with huge quantities of foul, toxic wastes. Then comes the little push in the form of drafts. Presto, the cold!

If drafts or cool currents were sufficient to cause colds, there would not be a man, woman or child free from snuffles and coughing—not even a day of the year.

We are continuously exposed to winds and temperatures ten times stronger and many degrees cooler than the average draft in the room. Every time you ride in your automobile, you are subject to drafts or to a stream of cool air. Yet you do nt "catch cold."

Keep the body clean internally as well as externally and you will be immune from drafts or cool currents. Keep the body unclean and though you stuff every crack beneath every door and windowsill, you cannot prevent the cold, drafts or no drafts.

So give your rooms plenty of fresh air. Don't be afraid of the open window. Don't fear the cool current of air. The closed window is infinitely more dangerous than all the draft fobias concocted.

Birth Jaundice

The child, at the moment of birth, is usually dark-colored through lack of sufficient arterial circulation. After the cord is severed the arterial blood rapidly makes the child almost a "lobster pink."

In very many cases, however, this fails to occur. Instead, the child remains a bronze yellow color, the whites of the eyes a dull yellow and the skin a somewhat similar color.

The child is jaundiced.

Fortunately, this condition is usually not fatal. In most cases, after a week or two of breast nursing it disappears entirely.

The causes of birth jaundice are easily understood if we study the function of the embryo.

Before the child draws its first breath, his lungs do not function. His heart beats but instead of the blood being passed through the lungs for oxygenation, it is passed to the liver.

Proportionate to the size of the body, the liver in the unborn is four times larger than it is in adult life, this for the reason that the liver is compelled to do the work of lungs as well as liver.

It cleanses the blood as it passes from mother to child. Before birth, it is the purifying and eliminative organ in one. Its function is exceedingly important.

When, however, due to the toxic nature of the mother's diet, the liver of the child becomes technically constipated in the same sense as it does after birth, there is no other way of discharging the excessive bile and other liver material than through the skin.

Before birth, neither the child's kidneys nor bowels function.

I do not think I would be wrong in saying that birth jaundice is almost entirely due to the poor diet of mothers. Overstuffing is undoubtedly the principal cause.

Mothers-to-be ought to know that 50 per cent of the child's weight is formed during the first seven months and the other 50 per cent from the seventh to the ninth month.

If there is any period of pregnancy in gether. What a brute I am! No, a fool! To spend our last evening together in a silly childish quarrel. You know I didn't mean that about the music. I love that song. I adore it! They play it! I think of you, just as you think of me. I am ashamed. I wanted to make you feel bad. When I think that I shall never see you again, I am crazy. I do not know what I say. Forgive me!'

"'Forgive you?' said the girl, 'I can't forgive you, because you could never hurt me. I love you, and to me you are always right.'

"'You mean that, Martha? Then say that you will go away with me tonight. You and I, just we two. Please Martha. Forever and ever.'

"'That's a long time,' responded the girl, with a little catch in her voice, 'but it isn't too long—with you.'

"'Then you will go?'

"'Yes,' and her voice was very strange, 'I will go—tonight!'

"'You will? Oh, Martha, I am so happy. I could sing. I could dance. You will go, with me. Pouf, Gilbert! What is he, ha! I laugh at him. Conventions? What are they? I break them. Tonight, you and I. But something might happen. Your people, they are so strict, so—so what do you say, straightlaced. Swear to me, Martha, swear an oath that you will go.'

"'Peter,' laughing, 'don't be ridiculous, this isn't your Russia. It isn't necessary for me to swear an oath. I shall meet you.'

"'But Martha, this is so big. This is new, this is different. You promise them. You promise by our song, by Schubert's "Serenade," you will go with me tonight. Nothing shall keep you from me. I too swear an oath! Whenever, wherever that piece is played, I shall be with you. When they play those beautiful notes I shall join you, we shall be together, you and I, no matter what barriers have come between us. Even though it be death itself! But why speak of death? It is life, together, you and I.' And he repeated these last words in a sort of chant. And then, 'And the night to love is given Dearest come with me! See? Just like the song, Martha, forever.'

"'Peter,' said the girl, and her voice had changed. There was purpose in it. 'I am leaving the details to you. I must be able to depend upon you now, if we are to succeed in this. My family must not suspect anything. They are already worried about my being with you, and father,' here her voice trembled, 'has forbade my seeing you again. I am giving up everything for you.'

"'Then I must take you home now,' said the man. 'I have hoped for this night, dreamed of it. Lived for it. Listen, we shall leave here at once, and I will take you to your home. But no, I can't do that! Tonight your people must not think of me. I shall take you to the corner. Tell them—'

"'I'll tell them I've been across to Marian's house,' suggested the girl. 'I often run across to her in the evening. But oh, Peter, I hate so to lie. Why can't things be for us as they are for other people? Why must we always be hiding?'

"'After tonight we will never have to hide from people again, Martha. I admire your honesty. I love you for it. How could you be you and not be honest? But it is necessary! Your people must not suspect. They do not trust me. They—they like Gilbert!'

"'Forget Gilbert, for the moment, Peter, you impractical child, and tell me what you want me to do.'

"'I take you to your corner, you go to your room. Take what little things you may need. You can get out of the house without being seen?'

"'I—I—think so, Peter. I can go through the back. Through the servants' rooms. Until tomorrow, or late tonight no one need know that I am gone. I shall leave a note. On my dresser.'

"'On your dresser, yes! Anywhere. What do I care for notes. I care for you. Oh, my sweet, to think—but I must be practical. See! Now I am a business man, now I am your Gilbert. Ahem! Details, I attend to details. When you have taken what you shall need, come from the house. I shall have a carriage waiting. In front of the church on Eighth street and Fifth Avenue. Where we have met so often, the same church. You know it? Of course! There will be no mistake. It is all arranged then. Oh, at last! How I have waited for this moment. Really, after this eternity of waiting I am suddenly impatient. Are you ready? Let us start!'

"I heard a chair drawn back, as some one rose," said Donaldson, "and I half turned to see these two lovers leave, when suddenly the girl spoke again. 'Just until they finish this,' she whispered. And I realized that the orchestra was still playing Schubert's 'Serenade.'

"'Our song,' sighed the man, happily, 'the song that shall always bring me to you.'

"I had never, in all my rather uneventful life, heard just such a conversation before. These people hardly seemed real to me. At the moment there was a poignant silence at their table, and the music seemed to fill the room, and indeed my very soul vibrated to the chords."

Donaldson paused and lit his last cigarette.

I'M TURNING AWAY

By Vincent Jones

I'm turning away, I'm closing the door;
I'm fated to know California no more.
Sad heart is there left one cause to rejoice?
These purpling hills will echo my voice
No more in the spring—no more in the fall.
I've loved it too much—I'm losing it all.

I'm turning away, oh sad be the day;
And skies that were blue are turning to gray.
My mountains and lakes—my coasts of delight—
And dreams that were born in sweet langorous night—
What gifts hath the world for me to implore
Like these I have lost? I'm closing the door.

But ever in days that leaden the years,
I'll think through the mist of yearning and tears
Of something I gained far better than gold,
A gift from the Gods forever to hold—
Some touch on my soul, uplifting and rare—
A blending of hope, high courage and prayer.

"You know the ridiculousness of the human mind—well—I had been listening to that conversation with all the powers of concentration I possess. You can see how well I remember each word that was spoken. Nothing I have ever heard has impressed me quite so much, and yet it never dawned upon me until after the whole thing was over that last night was Friday, not Saturday. I told you that the man mentioned the night as Saturday night, didn't I? And the church on Fifth Avenue at Eighth street. There has been no church there as long as I can remember, and I can find no record of any being there. I wonder if there was a mistake in his idea of the location of that church! I never thought of that. It would explain so much that I cannot understand. And then too, 'I'll have a carriage waiting.' A carriage, mind you, in this day and age! Well, it never dawned upon me until today.

"As I said, the music seemed to be everywhere, and there was a strange feeling of tension in the air. I remember that I gripped the edge of my table, and then"—Donaldson watched his cigarette as it described an arc in the air and fell at the edge of the station platform. He turned to me and laughed in a rather peculiar fashion. "There was a frightful, inhuman scream, which actually made my teeth sting, an explosion, shattering the notes of the song which the orchestra seemed to have been playing forever, and a body fell against my chair. You may believe me or not, as you see it, but in all the confusion I noticed that there was a peculiar scent in the air. Such as one notices about old muslins, or flowers left between the pages of some old forgotten volume. The place was in an uproar, but I managed to get out before the police came. No, I didn't turn around. I wanted to get into the air."

Donaldson stopped talking. I heard the whistle as his train neared the station. "Got a cigarette?" he demanded. I handed one to him just as the train pulled up, but I was too busy with my thoughts to speak for a moment. He was on the steps of the car before I started to ask a question, "But how," I began—"Good-by," said Donaldson, as he swung aboard the train, and he thrust the newspaper into my hand. It was folded at the page containing the item which had elicited Donaldson's story. The article was quite brief.

"Martha Thorndyke," I read, "once prominent in New York society, committed suicide last night, shortly before twelve o'clock, at The Vodka, a restaurant on West Ninth street. Friends of the dead woman could give no reason for the act, although she has been more or less melancholy for years. Mrs. Thorndyke, who was in her seventy-fifth year, has for a long time been more or less of a recluse, hardly ever leaving her home, which is one of the oldest houses in the Washington Square section.

"Indeed, last night was the first occasion upon which she had left the house, in the memory of her servants. They did not know that she had gone out until notified by the police of the tragedy. The woman was identified by a card in her bag. No one in the restaurant had taken especial notice of Mrs. Thorndyke except her waiter who thought it strange that such an elderly woman should come into the place alone. She had only been at her table a moment when she pulled a revolver from her bag, and, placing it at her temple, pulled the trigger. Death was instantaneous.

"The dead woman is survived by an only son, Peter Tardoff Thorndyke. When the famous Peter Tardoff visited this country in the seventies rumor linked his name with that of Mrs. Thorndyke, who was then Martha Ransdall. Tardoff, as lovers of music will remember, disappeared when returning to Russia in 1875. There was a great deal of conjecture as to the cause of his disappearance at that time. In 1877 Martha Ransdall married Gilbert Thorndyke, who was prominent in Wall Street until his death in 1900.

"The Vodka, where this unfortunate event occurred, is a remodeled restaurant, which was famous fifty years ago when fashionable New York was farther downtown. One peculiar fact, mentioned by Mr. Strenuv, the manager of the restaurant, is that last night was the first time the orchestra has played any music except Russian, in his memory. They had just played the first few notes of Schubert's 'Serenade' when the tragedy took place."

Dr. Theodore S. Appel, eastern health expert, deploring the foolish diet of what he calls "this upholstered age," voices this eloquent warning: "Remember 10 or 15 years longer under the ground is nothing, but 10 or 15 years longer on top of the ground is worth a lot." The man is right. He should spell his name "A-p-p-l-e."

With the heavy banqueting of the holiday seasan still fresh in the memory of your stomachs you will be especially inclined to agree with anything I say regarding moderation in eating. What I want to say is this: "If you must eat until you feel full, avoid the heavy concentrated food articles. See that your meals are mostly of vegetables and fruits—non-clogging and easily digestible, yet amply rich in balanced nourishment—and you can easily add 10 years to your life.

I do not know of any place where such meals are better exemplified than at the Health Cafeterias, 217 West 6th street (between Spring and Broadway) and 1000 West 7th St., and at the Whole Wheat Bakery-Cafe, 820 West 6th St. No doubt you are already acquainted with the deliciousness of these menus, and also with the wonderful whole wheat bakery products and other tested health foods sold there for your home tables. I have long been a convert to the Ehret System of diet and healing as outlined in Prof. Arnold Ehret's "Mucusless Diet Healing System" and practiced at the Health Center Clinic, 1000 West 7th Street. It is the sanest, most logical and natural system in the world—founded upon a principle of innercleanliness as the key to health. Once you understand this principle you cease to be astonished at the successful treatment of inflammatory rheumatism, diabetes, gout, asthma, obesity, hemorrhoids, partial paralysis and other serious ailments. Elimination is the only real cure—suppression is a hopeless measure. Send for free illustrated booklet describing the wonderful Hydralite Bloodwash Baths and other Health Center treatments. You will be given a free consultation any weekday between 8:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

You will find the whole subject of elimination vs. suppression of disease covered in a most convincing manner in Prof. Ehret's famous book "The Mucusless Diet Healing System." It contains most helpful information for wives and mothers, in addition to a complete 25-lesson course which cost $100 when taught personally by him. There are also actual menus to be used for different curative purposes. Get this book without delay. You will find it a valuable health guide for the rest of your life. Chlorine Treatment

If any of you recall the methods of warfare during the great conflict, you will know that both sides used deadly, poisonous, destructive gases whose sole intent was slaughter. What many of you perhaps do not know is that the principal ingredients of these war gases were a group of chemicals known as the halogens, namely, iodine, fluorine, bromine and chlorine.

Chemistry has established that the halogen group, of which chlorine is the most easily manufactured, is decidedly destructive to life. How a deadly gas as this will destroy life at one time and save life at another, only the advocates of this method can explain.

Chlorine is a poison. If mothers would reason that substances strong enough to kill resistant bacteria are also sufficiently virulent to at least injure human cells, they would not resort to such devices.

The only gas the human body was intended to absorb is oxygen as contained in air—no other. The lungs are built to inhale air. They are not made to inhale chlorine or any other fumes.

If mothers would pay more attention to the body filth in which germs breed and less to the "kill-the-bug" stunt, there would be less whooping cough and less childhood disease. Instead, they pay no attention to diet and the consequent ill health, but when the time comes to pay the price, they attempt to circumvent nature by nostrums and inhalations.

If mother wants to try chlorine gas, let her try it on herself. At least she is over 21 and should be able to reason for herself.

Catarrhal Deafness

It is tragic to behold the apprehension with which so many people greet the oncoming of old age. The declining period of life is so often filled with sundry disabilities, many of which can be borne, but nevertheless faced with considerable misgivings.

Of all the ailments characteristic of advancing age and most dreaded by the average person, the loss or partial loss of one of the senses is perhaps most feared of all. Our reliance upon our five senses is so absolute, so all-important, that even though diseases of any of the five senses do not jeopardize life itself, many of us would rather have ailments of a more serious kind than the impairment of our sense of sight or hearing.

The gradual approach of deafness, due to a long accumulating catarrhal state of the ear, the hardening of the tisues and the associated decreasing power of hearing is one of the chief problems faced by those who are entering old age.

The onset is so insidious, so slow, that sometimes years may elapse before the victim is aware that his hearing is becoming impaired. Unfortunately, to a considerable extent, its path is inevitable. The human machine grows old and one of the main signs of age is the gradual hardening of the tisuess.

The sense of hearing depends to some extent upon the refined sensitivity of the ear drum and its associated structures. As the tissues become harder and harder, this sensitivity is gradually lost, until the power of catching the air vibrations which constitute the mechanics of hearing is slowly lost.

One thing, however, has been noted again and again in cases of catarrhal deafness. As one looks into the back portion of the mouth, as investigations of the tubes leading into the intricate structure of the ear are made, one usually finds that not only is the ear structure itself involved but also the surrounding structures, especially the eustachian tube.

The eustachian tube is a canal leading from the nasal pharyngeal orifice into the middle ear. Anatomically, the ear is divided into three portions—the external ear which you see, the middle ear which receives the sensitive vibrations of sound, and the internal ear which contains the nervous mechanism toward converting the sound into conscious sensation. The eustachian tube permits the ear drum to maintain a sensitive balance. The air pressure is equalized inside and outside of the drum by means of the air entering through the eustachian tube.

When we have what is generally known as a "respiratory catarrh," the clinical picture presented by the eustachian tube is usually indicated by considerable swelling and a lessening of the size of the opening. This catarrhal inflammation usually spreads upward and inward until it reaches the middle ear. Then, of course, the mechanics of hearing are interfered with.

Therefore, in all our consideration of most cases of catarrhal deafness, we must not only have in mind the normal functioning of the ear structures but the eustachian tube as well.

A number of procedures present themselves. The main issue is to overcome the catarrh itself irrespective whether it be in the eustachian tube or in the actual ear structure.

To accomplish this nothing better than sensible diet will fulfill this purpose. We know, more or less definitely, exactly what foods produce catarrhal deafness. Knowing this, we should adopt a more rational menu.

Leading all causes, undoubtedly the congestion in the tisues is due to the excessive consumption of food together with insufficient and inadequate discharge of the morbid waste materials through the eliminative organs.

Not only must the bowels be made to function properly but all the other organs must assist in the vital process of elimination. The skin, kidneys and lungs must also do their full quota of work.

The quantity of food consumed should be the minimum quantity consistent with good health. Do not be afraid to lose weight. As a rule you will find that nature will generally discharge the morbid waste substances of the body in any weight-losing process. Often a patient may lose five or six pounds. In reality, he has not lost a solitary ounce. His body has not decreased its weight. What really has happened is that the eliminative organs have discharged five or six pounds of morbid waste material.

Therefore, the principle involved in overcoming catarrhal inflammation can be brought down to the general understanding of one word—elimination.

The diet should not contain those foods which are usually productive of catarrh. Meats and animal products should be rigidly forbidden. Tea, coffee, sugar, white flour products, milk, eggs, cheese, excessive consumption of cereals and bread stuffs—all of these should be almost completely on the forbidden list.

Fruits in their natural fresh or dried state should be the leading item on the dietary and with that an adequate consumption of the fresh vegetables.

Auxiliary to these measures, many other methods of treatment present themselves.

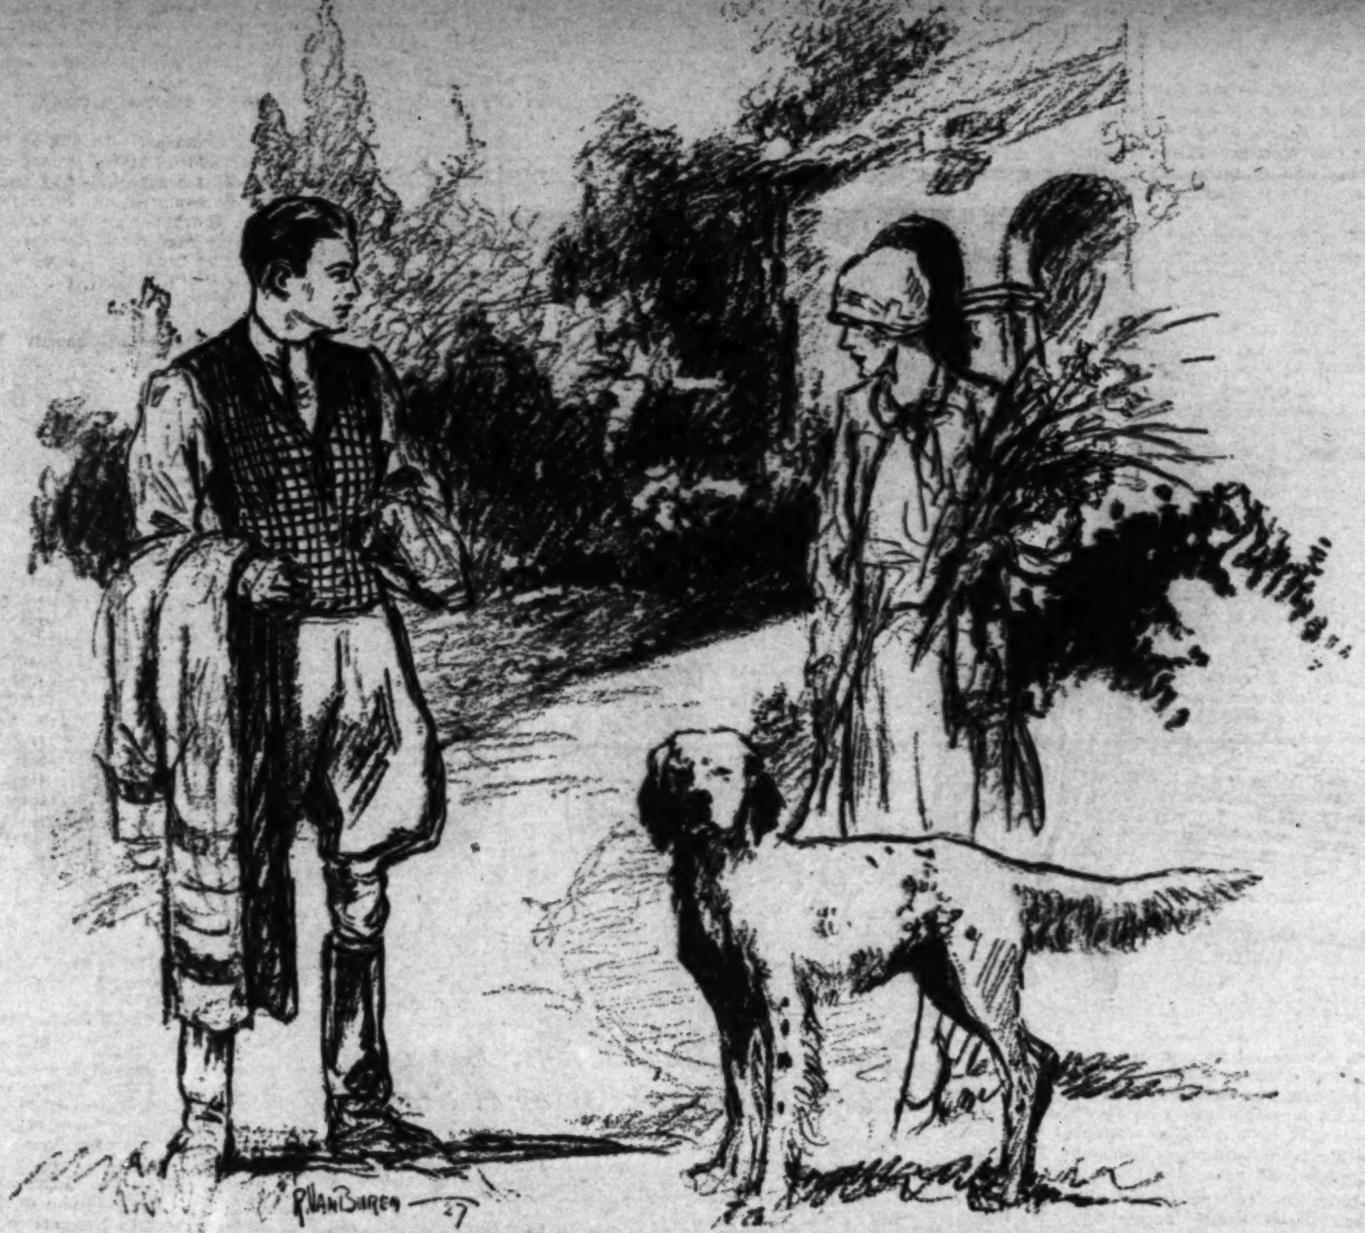
REALIZATION

By FANNIE HURST

Illustrated by Raeburn Van Buren



Abby met a stable boy named Maurice who had exclusive charge of a race horse in her stables. Abby clapped eyes on him on Monday. On a Saturday, the colossal thunderbolt fell across her social world. Abby eloped with the stable boy.

MISS ABBY LANE had a coming-out party that occupied the front page rotogravure space in every newspaper in the country. The dinner-favors of this occasion were gold cigarette-holders for the girls and platinum cigarette-cases for the men. The press screamed to a gasping public the number of Killarny roses that festooned the ballroom where Miss Abby Lane made her bow to the social world.

The rotogravure photographs of Abby were the pert, flirtatious ones of an age which referred to her type as "flapper." She had a nose with a tilt at the end that made her audacious. She had such close-cropped yellow hair, that it looked painted on, and she wore two garments. A silk underthing and a slip-over top-thing that cost more for the sheer finesse of their beauty than the whole wardrobe of an extravagant belle of two decades ago.

Miss Abby, when she was seventeen, had flown in a Zeppelin from Berlin to Edinburgh; had twice circled the globe; had an amateur rifle-woman's championship; had ridden to hounds with the son of the King of England; had danced the Black Bottom on a banquet table for a Newport hostess, and wore a string of tiny, matchless Oriental pearls when she went in bathing that would have kept a family of seven living in affluence over a period of five years.

She was a daughter born into millions; one of those who inherit the earthy earth. Her father cherished a dream to make her the richest heiress in the world. Her mother cherished a dream to tie up with royalty through the marriage of this ridiculously pretty slab of a flirty girl who raced through life as if it were a fleet steed under her that responded to the slightest dig of her golden little spurs.

So it did.

Whether Abby awoke to a desire for an Etruscan urn, a Bolivia lizard, the most subtle chartreuse in the world or a pink topaz that was blue, it mattered not.

Everything was obtainable. The curious part of it was, that to Abby, to whom everything was obtainable, so much remained desirable. The hand-tooled book, the rare bit of China, a mandarin's flamingo coat, a port wine that had grown superbly old, a piano with agate keys were happiness to Abby.

When she was sixteen, her father gave her an estate with a water-fall, the third largest in America, Niagara excepted.

For a month, the water-fall remained the most exciting possession she owned. Then one day, she sold it and endowed a baby hospital with the money.

When she was seventeen, her mother took her to the Alhambra at Granada, and they brought back to America with them the most honored architect of Spain to duplicate a little Alhambra for Abby.

While the plans were being drawn for that fabulously palatial pile, Abby met a stable boy named Maurice, who had exclusive charge of a race horse in her stables which had name and fame the country over. Abby clapped eyes on him on a Monday as she was making a tour of her stables at Tuxedo. On a Saturday, the colossal thunderbolt fell across her social world. Abby had eloped to Greenwich and married the stable boy, son of a horse-trainer.

Even in an age of one sensation after another, this marriage remained the nine-day wonder. Without a moment of hesitancy, Abby's father came out publicly and denounced and disowned her. The mother retired for four months to a private sanatorium. Abby's stupendously huge promise of legacy was cut off clean as a whistle.

Abby made a good job of it, too. She walked out of a fifty-room house on Fifth Avenue without bag and baggage. Every bauble and trinket she owned, down to the Oriental necklace, were left behind her in the Venetian casket in which she kept her jewels.

She went to Maurice with far, far less than the average shopgirl goes to her honeymoon. The day after they were married, he bought her, in a cheap little shop in a side street, the ordinary necessities for day-by-day living. They went to immediate housekeeping in a three-room apartment. For the first summer of her life, Abby spent the blistering, torrid, heated term in New York, in the shadow and the crash of an elevated.

Abby became one of the people she had endowed. There could have been no one gentler than Maurice that first summer of their marriage in those months before their first child was born. The pale, half-prostrated figure of Abby, all through those parched days, was before his eyes in white fire. Sometimes, it seemed to him that he must send her home, bag and baggage, out of the travail he had brought upon her.

One August night, when the fire escape along the apartment-house they occupied was crowded with babies and adults half lifeless from heat, he came home to find Abby in what seemed to him a half-faint before a window. This, he thought, must be the end. Abby must go back home. Abby must surrender. Abby must confess to him the horror that so surely was in her heart at the realization of what she had done with her life.

"Abby," he said, and went up and took her hand, "tell me what you're thinking. I can stand it."

She opened her eyes that were always to remain lovely to him.

"I can't, Maurice," she said. "There's a kind of happiness too precious to put into words."

Lesson on a Pedestrian

This harmless person is a pedestrian. For appropriate slang synonyms see any of the comic strips in any of the liberally pictorial newspapers. Anything opprobrious will do, because you will usually be out of hearing when he collects his person and his wits from the place where you have knocked him down. He is always in the wrong. If he is seriously hurt and the police are acting officiously, remember to say that he, the poor ——(use something strong and expressive in the blank,) deliberately stepped in front of your car. Or he wasn't crossing from sidewalk to sidewalk at the proper angle. Or he was blinking at the wrong time.

Important: Some one is sure to have the fun of bumping him off and it might as well be you.

CARE OF THE BODY

victim of this disease should know. He should know, above all, its causes and with this knowledge should stop doing those things which are responsible for the affliction. He should also know methods of alleviation other than drugs, so that the ravages of this ailment may be speedily offset.

The theory as to its causes are manifold. The focal infection theory presumes that the disease is caused by the presence of certain germ centers or germ colonies distributed throughout the body, but especially in the mouth structures such as the adenoids, tonsils and the sockets which hold the teeth.

In almost every case we must look further than the theory of focal infection to find the cause. Even granting that the body does harbor certain well-developed colonies of germs, reason ought to teach us that these colonies must grow upon some form of nutrition. Germs are living things, the same as any other form of life. As such they must have food to nourish their growth.

In consideration of the focal infection theory, common sense and reason ought to teach us that it is more important to remove the conditions of bacterial growth than it is to destroy the germs. If we merely create an environment in which germs cannot grow and develop, then only is it possible to procure and maintain a sterile environment. So, irrespective of whether the teeth or tonsils or gall bladder or any other structure of the body be surgically removed, germ colonies will be present in the body just so long as the nutrition for their development is present.

The waste debris upon which germs feed is present in the body before the germs develop. The entire growth of any colony is determined by the food on which that colony lives. If that body be clean, germs cannot grow in it. Therefore, when you have a number of abscessed teeth, or pus sockets in the tonsils, or inflamed gland in any other area, reason back to first cause. Consider how the pus, upon which germs thrive, developed. Ascertain how this body waste material is formed. Then you will see that the cause lies rather in faulty digestion and in insufficient elimination which, in its turn, creates the environment wherein the necessary accumulation of debris is secured so that bacteria will thrive.

The conclusion we inevitably come to in consideration of this disease is that the cause is almost exclusively toxic. Several other factors to confirm this belief are also present. Analysis of the blood usually shows an excessive quantity of the by-products of faulty protein digestion.

In many cases a condition of partial acidosis exists, in which the alkalinity of the blood is markedly decreased. In almost every case we find that the diet history has been exceedingly poor, while digestive disorders, such as considerable accumulation of gas, nervous indigestion and chronic constipation, are usually present.

The foul toxic wastes acumulated by faulty digestion are sufficient to poison the blood thoroughly. These waste materials, circulating through the blood stream, find a ready lodging place in the membranes which line the joints.

A normal healthy joint is covered on each side by what is called the synovial sac, a membrane filled with a lubricating fluid known as synovial fluid. When the blood becomes charged with the waste products of poor digestion and elimination, this debris slowly filters into the synovial sacs, gradually replacing lubricating secretion until the lubrication has been replaced by the decomposed products of protein digestion. Then the joint becomes enlarged, red, swollen and inflamed.

Motion becomes increasingly difficult while the spasms of darting, shooting pains tear through the delicate nerve centers located in the vicinity of the joints. This condition becomes progressively worse until almost the entire joint cavity is filled with the debris. Then we have what is technically known as ankylosis or immovability of the joint. At this stage the joint is "frozen stiff" and movement is thenceforth impossible.

Now understand that, even though I place digestive disorders and dietetic errors as the foremost causes, yet incidental to it we shall also find practically every one of those factors which can produce depletion of the body's vital resources and a lessening of vitality. Fear, worry, anxiety will rob the nervous energy so as to place one liable to this disease. Any factor of personal life or hygiene which is responsible for lessening of the body resistance may also be a factor tending toward this disease.

However, when once acquired, the consideration of primary importance for the average patient always revolves on methods of alleviating and overcoming this ailment.

What is to be done?

First and foremost, make an intelligent study of diet. The chances are that the excessive consumption of the animal proteins which include every kind of meat, fowl, fish and eggs have been the main criticisms of diet. Second to those and almost as prominent comes the excessive consumption of refined starches, especially the by-products of refined certals in the forms of cakes, pastries and white flour products of all kinds.

The person afflicted with rheumatic arthritis has no business whatever to consume sugar or sweets in any form. Tea, coffee, soft drinks, near-beer and alcoholic drinks of all kinds should be rigidly forbidden.

Since a condition of acidosis is usually present with this disease, a common belief has sprung up that acid fruits should not be consumed when one has this disease. It is a difficult task to counteract a popular foolish idea when it has once gained hold of the public mind. During the past quarter of a century the theory has sprung up that acid fruits are directly responsible for acidosis and that under such conditions acid fruits should not be consumed. Sane dietitians and intelligent physicians have attempted again and again to overcome this fallacy.

Acid fruits are not responsible for acidosis! In fact, it is just the reverse. Acidosis is caused by the absence of fresh fruits and green vegetables. —Acidosis is, in reality, the formation of certain body acids manufactured from the by-products of excessive protein digestion and from the decomposition of refined foods.

One can go still further on the subject of acidosis, which is an incidental factor in rheumatism. Acid fruits are the direct specific antidotes for acidosis, and their liberal use should be strongly encouraged under conditions of rheumatism and arthritis.

Every measure by means of which the digestive system may be restored to normal should be followed. Natural bowel elimination, two or three times per day, not by means of purgative drugs but by means of natural diet only, is most important. A number of auxiliary measures also present themselves in the care of this disease.

Complete binding of the joints should be prevented by means of skilled manipulation and passive exercise. The average osteopath, chiropractor and naturopath are thoroughly capable of doing this work.

All measures which favor skin elimination and absorption should be followed. Sun baths are of particular value, not only over the inflamed area but over the entire body. Hot packs placed around the affected joints will give considerable relief. The blood congestion which is induced by these packs will also favor the absorption of the salts which have usually gathered in the joints. Sustained baths and salt water hot packs have also given fair measures of relief.

Rheumatism, whether in the form of arthritis or any other form, first may be readily prevented if we but adopt a changed mode of living, secondly, when once ac-

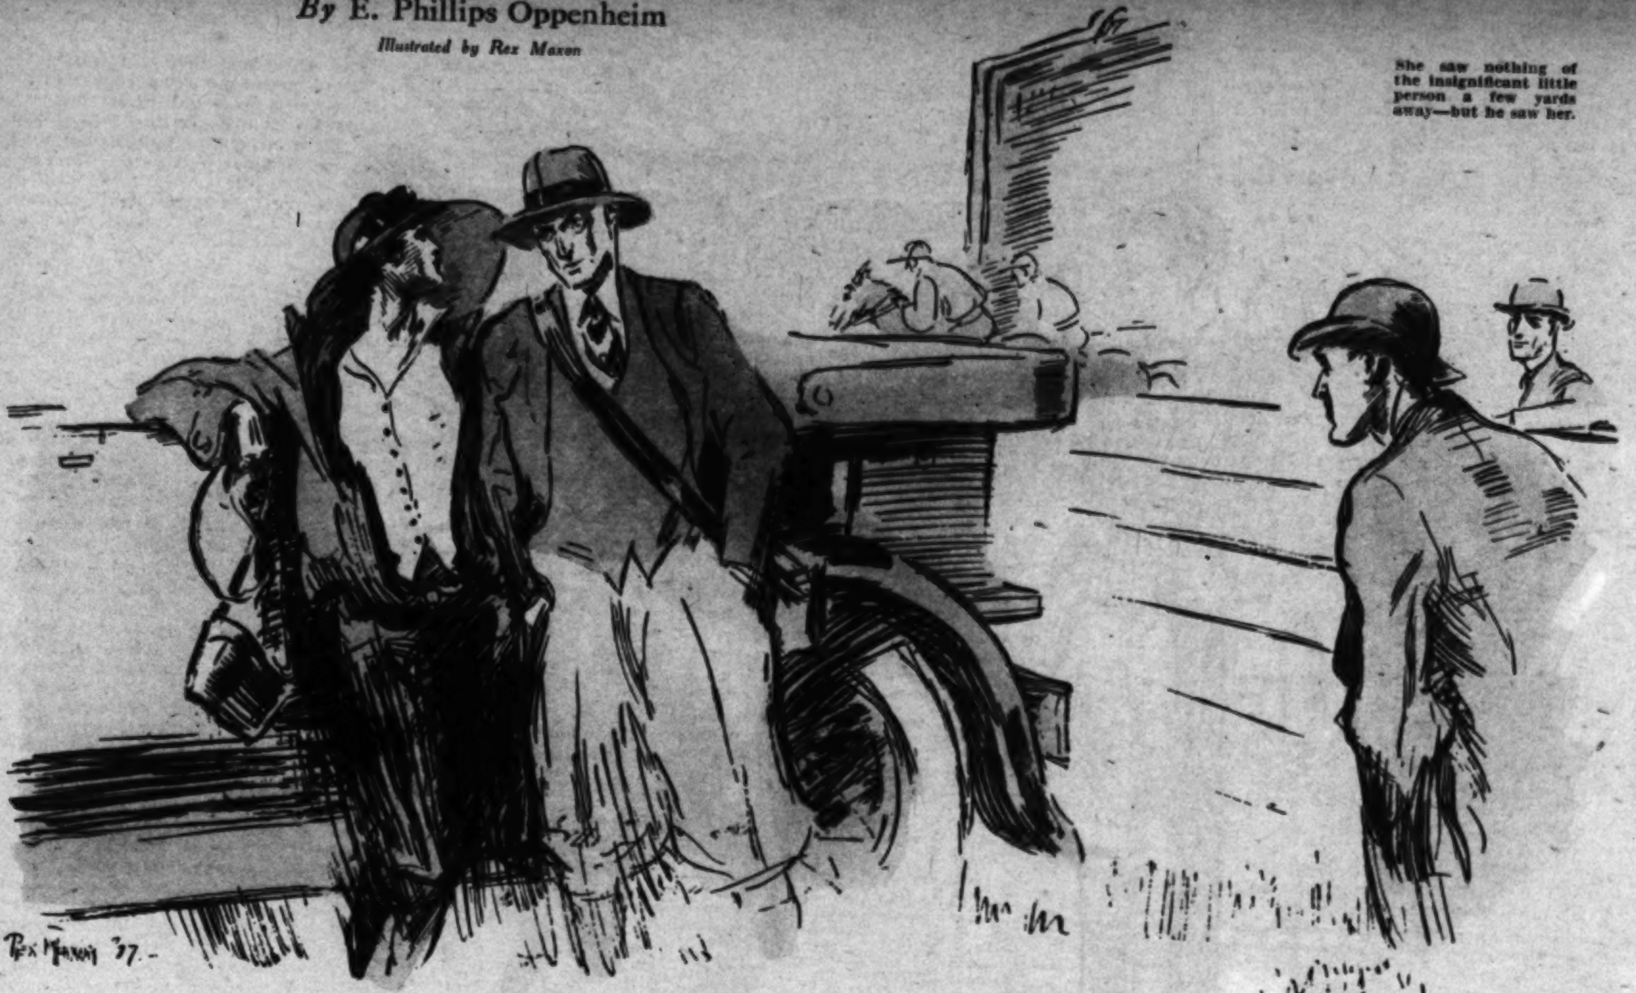
KUTNOW'S OINTMENT

THE NINETY-NINTH THREAD

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

Illustrated by Rex Maxon



She saw nothing of the insignificant little person a few yards away—but he saw her.

Angus Had Convictions, But No Proof, And a Life Was at Stake

THE Hon. George Angus, pleased with the world and happy at the freedom from sartorial restraint indulged in at his favorite annual holiday, strolled along the lawn at Goodwood toward the grandstand, his card in his hand, waiting for the numbers to go up for the next race.

At the corner of Tattersall's inclosure he came face to face with Charles Hunley, the famous King's Counsel, a fellow member of his club, but a man with whom he had only the slightest acquaintance. Rather to his surprise, the barrister stopped him. The usual casual greetings were exchanged, and afterward Hunley took his companion by the arm and led him back along the lawn.

"I wonder, Angus," he asked, "whether you remember the Coulson case, about four years ago?"

Angus shook his head.

"Can't say that I do," he confessed. "What sort of a case was it?"

"I suppose it was before you entered upon your peculiar line of activities," the K. C. mused. "The case was the Crown versus Coulson, and I was for Coulson."

"And the charge?"

"Murder! We got it reduced, during the hearing, to manslaughter, and the jury, if they could have done so, would have let the man off altogether. Would it bore you, if I run over the case? I'll tell you why afterward."

"Of course not," Angus replied. "The numbers won't be up for another quarter of an hour. Have a cigarette."

He passed his case. The two men sat down upon an unoccupied seat, and Hunley looked thoughtfully out across the richly wooded country toward the Solent.

"Coulson was an accountant's clerk," he began, "and engaged to be married. Almost on the eve of his marriage his fiancee jilted him for a wealthy sportsman. Coulson learned that, for months, she had been planning this, and that the money he had given her to use in preparing for their marriage had been squandered. In a fit of rage, he attacked the man. There was a tremendous fight, and, although Coulson was the smaller and the weaker, he so injured his opponent that the fellow later died. Coulson was arrested and tried, but, under the circumstances, got off with three years for manslaughter."

Angus nodded. "With good-behavior remittance," he asked, "when will he be out?"

"He's out now," Hunley announced. "I've just seen him."

"Where? On the course?"

The barrister nodded.

"I went up to bet with Sammy Martin in Tattersall's ring," he confided, "and I noticed that he had a new clerk. I didn't recognize him at first. He's a pale, undersized, shrunken little fellow. Then he looked up, and I knew him. He knew me, too."

"Rather a come-down for him, isn't it?" Angus suggested. "I should have thought, if his case had excited so much sympathy, one of his pals could have found him a better job."

Hunley looked idly into the faces of the passersby. "I'm afraid it's one he chose himself, Angus. You see, I kept my mouth shut, of course, for I wasn't going to do anything to aggravate the case against him, but it fell to my lot to tell him at the hospital that the man was dead and that he'd be charged with murder."

"Nasty job, that!"

"Yes, but not in the way you'd have thought," Hunley continued, taking out his glasses for a moment and looking at the numbers that had just gone up. "1, 3, 5, 8, 11. If you want to be off, I'll finish presently."

Angus glanced at his card.

"Nothing doing," he decided. "There's only one horse in it and no place betting. I shall have a rest. Besides, I'm interested in what you are telling me."

"Well," Hunley proceeded, putting his glasses away, "I rather funked telling him, but he simply raised himself a little in bed and smiled. 'You know what it means?' I warned him. He looked at me for a moment, as though he didn't understand. 'You think I mind?' he asked. 'Tell me,' he went on, 'do you think they'll hang me?' 'Not a chance of it,' I assured him. 'The charge will probably be reduced to manslaughter, and I should say that you'll get a light sentence.'

"He smiled again. It wasn't a smile, Angus. It made me curious to know what was at the back of his mind. And then I asked him point-blank. He hesitated only for a moment. 'The first luxury I shall enjoy when I am free,' he confided, 'will be to deal with Ada as she deserves to be dealt with. I hadn't the strength that night.' . . . The man's character came out in the evidence. He was a mild, inoffensive accountant's clerk, saving money every week, wonderful at his job, thought the world of by his employers—they paid for his defense, by the bye—a man whom all his neighbors liked, although the men called him rather a milksop, and he lay there, just come back from the borderland between life and death, and, in perfect sincerity, told me that he had yet 'to deal with Ada'."

"He has probably changed his mind, after all this time in prison," Angus observed.

Hunley shrugged his shoulders.

"Maybe," he admitted, "but I fancy not. I spoke to him, just now. He pretended not to recognize me, but I tell you, Angus, there was exactly the same look in his face when I talked to him that day in the hospital and when I said good-bye to him before he went down to the cells."

"What has become of the woman?" Angus asked.

"That is where the drama of the thing comes in. She is here, on the course, with her latest victim, and I am perfectly convinced that Coulson has only accepted this job with a bookmaker because he knows that, sooner or later, he'll come across her. She never misses the races."

"Have you ever spoken to her?" Angus asked. "She ought to be warned."

The other nodded.

"I shall do that," he said. "I thought I'd tell you this, Angus, because one or two of your little exploits have come my way, and I felt that this sort of affair might interest you. Knowing the man, I'm afraid there's nothing we could do, unless we could keep them apart, and I honestly tell you that I don't believe that's possible. I have the feeling that, if she were to change her name and bury herself in San Francisco, or New York, or the Falkland Islands, or the steppes of Tartary, he'd find her. He's that patient, dogged sort. He'd come quietly along one day, and, before she knew, he'd be there, with that queer smile of his. I'd do anything to prevent trouble, because I rather like the little fellow. He's been treated leniently once, but, if he kills the woman, he'll swing for it."

"Where is the woman?" Angus inquired curiously.

The K. C. rose to his feet and brushed some cigarette ashes from the waistcoat of his neat gray tweed suit.

"She's in the third automobile from the entrance in the front row," he confided, "dressed in rose—you can't mistake her—with a large hat. Go and have a look at her, and then make a little bet with Martin. You can mention my name. By the bye, are you staying down here?"

"I'm over near Chichester, with some friends," Angus replied.

"We shall meet again, then," were Hunley's parting words. "I'm coming every day, and I suppose you will."

The two men separated. Angus strolled from the lawn into the Royal Automobile Club inclosure, and loitered by the third car—an ostentatious-looking car, painted red, with brass lamps and showy carriage work.

There was no mistaking the woman—a slightly faded type, with masses of fair hair, of which she made a brave display; large eyes, artificially beringed; features that might once have been good, but that showed signs now of coarsening.

She was standing by the door of the car, her card in her hand, talking eagerly to a man with a keen, hard face, thin lips, and narrow eyes, but with a pasty, almost green complexion. He was watching the horses go by, and the very way he glanced at them seemed to indicate knowledge. The woman hung upon his scant words.

They seemed to be without companions, but a large luncheon basket stood open, and there were two or three empty champagne bottles scattered around. Presently

CARE OF THE BODY

By Philip M. Lovell, N.D.

Stomach Ulcers

The cause of stomach ulcer lies in dietetic stupidity. When one considers the amount of putrefaction and foul decay that precedes the formation of an ulcer the surprising thing is that the results are so exceedingly mild as merely to form an ulcer. The diet habits of those who have ulcers of the stomach have been of a nature almost capable of eating through vanadium-steel stomachs rather than of stomachs made of living tissue.

Various dietetic measures have been tried. With some, a milk diet has been proved successful. With others, a fruit-juice diet has yielded considerable results. Many medical doctors prescribe a liquid diet with frequent intervals of soda, bismuth and various other drugs.

It is impossible to outline any specific diet, for a specific condition as a diet is not prescribed for an ailment but rather to an individual who has that ailment.

For instance, if two individuals have ulcered stomachs and one weighs 200 pounds and is constipated, lives a sedentary life, has kidney trouble and eats his meals outside, while the other weighs half as much and has a completely different background of general health, the diet would have to be different for each case.

Pinworms

In order to live, every living thing must have food. In practically every case where an intestinal parasite has invaded the digestive system and has successfully maintained itself, it has done so by virtue of the food stuff and favorable environment that surrounded it.

Notwithstanding the medical hypothesis that infection by the various parasites is due to the consumption of foods containing them, such as pork and other kinds of meat, unless the individual makes a favorable host, these parasites will not grow or develop.

Putting it in different language, if two individuals were to eat of the same parasite-infested meat, one could become infected and the other would not. Yet both of them had consumed the same substance.

Why?

The one in whom infection was successful undoubtedly had sufficient nutrition, due to faulty digestion, retained intestinal wastes and poor elimination, to nourish and grow the worms. The other in whom infection was unsuccessful had a fairly clean intestinal tract and consequently could not nourish a growing worm.

The moral of this contrast should be fairly apparent. If worms infest you, clean house, and remove the favorable environment for their growth.

The next thing of importance is, "What shall be done and how?"

In most cases relief is instantly desired. One is not willing to wait for a long period of time. Even though this is somewhat inconsistent as it has taken a long period of time to create the favorable environment and to procure the infection, yet such is human nature that we quickly want to get rid of an ailment which has taken us, sometimes, years of unhygienic living to create.

It is because of this desire to dispense with unfavorable symptoms quickly that so many people resort to the short-cut methods of drugs and injections.

I have often said that there is not a single procedure known to medicine in combating a physical condition which cannot be done more successfully and more efficiently by natural methods.

In overcoming pinworms this principle is just as true as in any other condition. Where medicine usually uses such substances as quassia seeds, pumpkin seed extract, emetin and various other compounds, natural methods proceed to get at the causes and eliminate them.

In the case of the adult, an out-and-out fast of five or six days, accompanied by the drinking of quantities of water, are often all that is necessary to discharge the infecting pinworms. Enemas taken during this fasting period will usually be found laden not only with the worms, but also with their eggs. In the case of the child, fasting is more or less impractical as children do not readily lend themselves to this valuable measure. However, one can place them on a diet which will be both repulsive and destructive to the invading worms. It should not be a difficult task to place a four-year-old child on a diet of oranges for three or four days.

Pinworms live on intestinal refuse. The citric acid of oranges acts in a distinctly negatve manner aganst pinworms.

After three, four or five days of oranges exclusively, a series of enemas will usually reveal an immense number of worms. If this is followed up by an exclusive fruit diet for ten days or two weeks the worms will usually find the digestive system untenable and, in most cases, one will be fairly free from them from that time on. The whole process is merely one of house-cleaning and the removal of the favorable environment for their propagation.

Rheumatism

Rheumatism, being a very common expression, is frequently used by the lay public to cover almost every kind of local or systemic pain.

Of course, as far as the patient is concerned, it is of very little importance what we label his ailment. Whether we call it neuritis, neuralgia or rheumatism, is of secondary concern. What is of major importance, however, is first the recognition of the ailment and secondly the methods and the technique for curing and avoiding it in the future.

We have several forms of that which is popularly called rheumatism. There is the rheumatism which is associated with arthritis, or inflammation and swelling of the body joints. There is the rheumatism popularly known as muscular rheumatism which is evidenced principally by pain in the various muscles of the body. Then we have rheumatic forms such as are evidenced by rheumatic fever, when the patient has an acute attack from which he readily recovers, and from which he will not suffer again for a long period of time.

Then we have the popular forms of inflammatory rheumatism—rheumatism which is due to toxic infection, rheumatism which comes from venereal origin and rheumatism which comes as the result of a definite injury to the body.

Since the rheumatism associated with inflammation and enlargement of the joints is by far the most common, it is, therefore, worthy of prior consideration.

Rheumatic arthritis, which is the name given to this inflammatory type of rheumatism, is found in virtually every age, in every climate and in both sexes, although women as a rule are more commonly affected than are men.

The joint inflammation is present in almost every stage and degree from a simple enlargement and inflammation of one or two joints to the extreme case where almost every joint in the body is affected. In very severe cases it ultimately might develop into what is technically known as rheumatic arthritis deformans, in which the joint becomes so enlarged that the body takes on a deformed and grotesque appearance.

The pain associated with this disease is excruciating. In many cases it drags on for many years, becoming worse until the patient is more or less resigned to the condition.

There are a number of things that every

FOR YOUR HEALTH'S SAKE

Have you made ALL of your New Year resolutions?

Here is a mighty important one that should be kept every day of the year:

"Beginning right now, I shall do everything within my power to build a strong, healthy body."

If you are now enjoying the best of health, you are certainly to be congratulated. Few people go through the festivities of the Holiday season and really feel physically fit afterward. The results of overindulgence in rich mixtures of food, late hours of entertainment, and the nervous reactions due to so much hurry and anxiety in preparing for Santa Claus bring about a shaky foundation upon which to begin the foregoing New Year's resolution.

Start the New Year in the right way! Begin by taking stock, an inventory, as it were, of your physical condition at the present time. Have a thorough physical examination made to determine any handicaps that might prevent your even beginning to build a "strong healthy body." You can then intelligently direct your forces where they will do the most good.

Perhaps you are filled with toxic material from re-absorption of poisonous matter, which has been forming within the system over a long period of time. It may be disclosed that, due to enervation and the extreme toxic condition, your resistance has been so lowered that you suffer continual colds, backaches, headaches, nervousness, constipation, rheumatism, etc.

Having located the trouble, what is to be done about it? In your resolution, you said that you were going to do everything in your power, and since we want to help you keep this resolution, we strongly urge that you use the most effective natural methods to remove the handicaps.

These methods include a proper dietetic regime and skillful manipulation by those thoroughly trained and experienced to reduce adhesions, relieve nerve impingement in the spinal vertebrae and to stimulate the blood and nerve supply to various parts of the body. The use of various electrical modalities, such as deep therapy lamps, ultra violet radiations to tone up the blood stream, sine wave for assisting in reducing adhesions, which is a contributing cause of constipation, and diathermy, where indicated. Corrective physical culture exercises play a very important role in overcoming faulty posture, building up muscular tone, and stimulating sluggish circulation.

What is the idea of all this treatment, you ask. It is much easier to make even the smallest gain by way of building a "strong, healthy body," if the start is made in the right way.

Your intentions to carry out the resolution for every day in the year may be of the very best, but carrying on through misdirected effort and stumbling around in the dark, not knowing the proper way to prepare and combine your food, nor how to do your exercising correctly, etc., would, no doubt, cause you to break your resolution before the end of the first week.

A real opportunity awaits you. Have a thorough examination; relieve the handicaps, then begin following a daily regime that is constructive in every way, yet simple to follow. In this way, your resolution will not be a play on words, and before many weeks have passed, you will see that you are "doing everything within your power" in the right direction, and are beginning to experience the real joy of a "strong healthy body."

Let us help you build your health. You are assured of careful and individual treatment in every respect.

THE NINETY-NINTH THREAD

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

there broke the hoarse murmur of voices that, with the accompanying bugle, denoted the start of the race.

The woman thrust her hand into her bag and took out a small handful of notes. She passed them over to the chauffeur, who hurried off toward the bookmakers. Then she climbed to the back seat of the car and stood there, holding the glasses to her eyes.

Goodwood was at its best that day. The sun was warm, but not oppressive; the south breeze brought with it a flavor of the sea. The long rows of tents set among the cool of the trees were more than ever inviting.

Royalty was present, and the boxes were filled with women in graceful summer costumes. The long season had come to an end, and the world was on holiday. Angus, from the rails in front of the lawn, watched the finish of an unexciting race, joined his friends in their box, and afterward strolled to Tattersall's.

Mr. Sammy Martin greeted him cheerfully, and accepted his modest bet with enthusiasm. Angus, while he asked for some other prices, glanced at the little man who was entering his name in a book. He had gathered from Hunley's description that the central figure in this sordid drama was barely more than middle-aged. The man's hair, however, was iron-gray, his face almost phenomenal. He was like the tragical lay figure of some ventriloquist—the perfect human automaton. One could scarcely believe that he really heard or that the words that passed from his lips were not mechanically contrived.

As he turned away, Angus ran into Hunley. "Well, I've seen both figures in your little drama," Angus confided, as they moved off together. "They are, in their way, interesting. Is there anything to be done?"

"Nothing. I daresay the whole thing will fizzle out. I've been talking to Coulson."

"What did he say?"

"I asked him why he was doing such work when I happened to know that his old firm would have taken him back. His only reply was that he could never bear the life back in his old office. He was perfectly satisfied. Martin told me that he was the best clerk he'd ever had."

"You think he's only taken the job to watch the race courses?" Angus asked.

"I'm sure of it," was the terse reply.

So was Angus sure of it on the following morning before the first race. There was no mistaking the stiff little figure in plain dark clothes and derby. In an unostentatious way, Angus kept him in view for the better part of an hour. He saw him walk slowly past the seats on the lawn, pausing to examine every car, watched him make a circuit of the tents, where refreshments were already being dispensed, waited for him half an hour, while he made a tour of the grandstand and boxes, and, finally, on the other side of the railings, walked slowly toward the front of the R. A. C. inclosure.

Suddenly the red car appeared—open, too, as Angus noticed, with a little sense of disquietude. The man and woman were there, still alone, the woman in blue. Notwithstanding the brilliant coloring of her lips, her features seemed more pinched and her eyes deeper set than on the day before. They drove into their place. The man lit a cigar and stood about with his hands in his pockets. The woman sat, for a moment, looking into a small mirror and arranging her slightly disordered hair. As soon as she was satisfied, she, too, stepped to the turf.

And then, up the broad walk between the lines of cars, came the little bookmaker's clerk . . .

If Angus had expected anything dramatic, he was doomed to disappointment. The man and woman stood side by side, talking now and then—the man sallower and more unprepossessing in appearance than ever, as he puffed stolidly at his cigar. At first, it seemed as though the sinister searcher would have passed them without recognition.

Angus, a little in the background, watched his slow approach, took note of the set immobility of his face. He was looking from side to side, without obvious curiosity, yet with an air of patient expectancy. He reached the car. He was in the act of passing when, by some chance, the woman looked up suddenly. She saw nothing of the insignificant little person a few yards away—but he saw her.

Not a muscle of his face moved. He slackened his speed, however, drew a pencil and note-book from his pocket, and made a note of the number of the car. The man and woman were again busy with their cards, but the chauffeur stood in Coulson's way. The latter addressed him, and Angus, by moving a step forward, heard his question.

"Isn't your master's name Pallett," he inquired—"Andrew Pallett of Sydenham?"

The chauffeur shook his head.

"We live at Hampstead," he answered—"Carnsforth Buildings. That's the governor there. Merridew, his name is."

"Thank you very much," Coulson said. "A remarkable resemblance."

He walked on. His search was ended. He looked neither to the right nor to the left. Yet, as he passed within a few inches of Angus, there was not a single sign of satisfaction in his face.

He was looking just the same when, before every race, drawn there by some attraction he failed to analyze, Angus went up to make some small bet.

Angus's final glimpse of him was as he followed his principal out of the inclosure, after the last race, a soiled blue mackintosh buttoned up to his chin for shelter against the sudden squall of rain, his satchel under his arm, his eyes fixed upon his employer's broad back. Angus watched the two climb into a car and start off Londonward. A few minutes later Angus, driving his own coupe, had to draw up while the stream of automobiles crawled by on their way to the main road. Among them was the red car, also turned Londonward.

Peter Bragg, alias Pudgy Pete, Angus's partner, had absented himself in Monte Carlo for two months, so Angus, after Goodwood, found himself with a prolonged vacation on his hands. Yet, when he strolled into his office, bronzed and cheerful, on the first day of his return to London, he found, seated in his clients' chair, the little man whom he had never altogether forgotten.

"This gentleman is waiting to see you," Peter Bragg explained, after he had shaken hands. "He wouldn't confide his business to me—says you would remember him."

"I remember you, of course," Angus said, turning to his visitor. "Mr. Hunley told me your story, and I saw you at Goodwood."

"I saw you, too, sir," Coulson observed. "I felt that you were interested—I knew that you were when you waited in the R. A. C. inclosure to see whether I should find Ada and Merridew."

Angus nodded sympathetically. "I hope you've got over all that nonsense you were talking to Mr. Henley," he said.

"Perhaps I have, and perhaps I haven't, sir," was the quiet reply. Have you seen the papers this morning?"

"Not yet," Angus admitted.

"Better read about a certain shooting case first, sir, before I explain my business," Coulson suggested.

Peter Bragg passed across a newspaper. Angus gave a little start as he read the headlines:

MAN AND WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN HAMPSTEAD FLAT

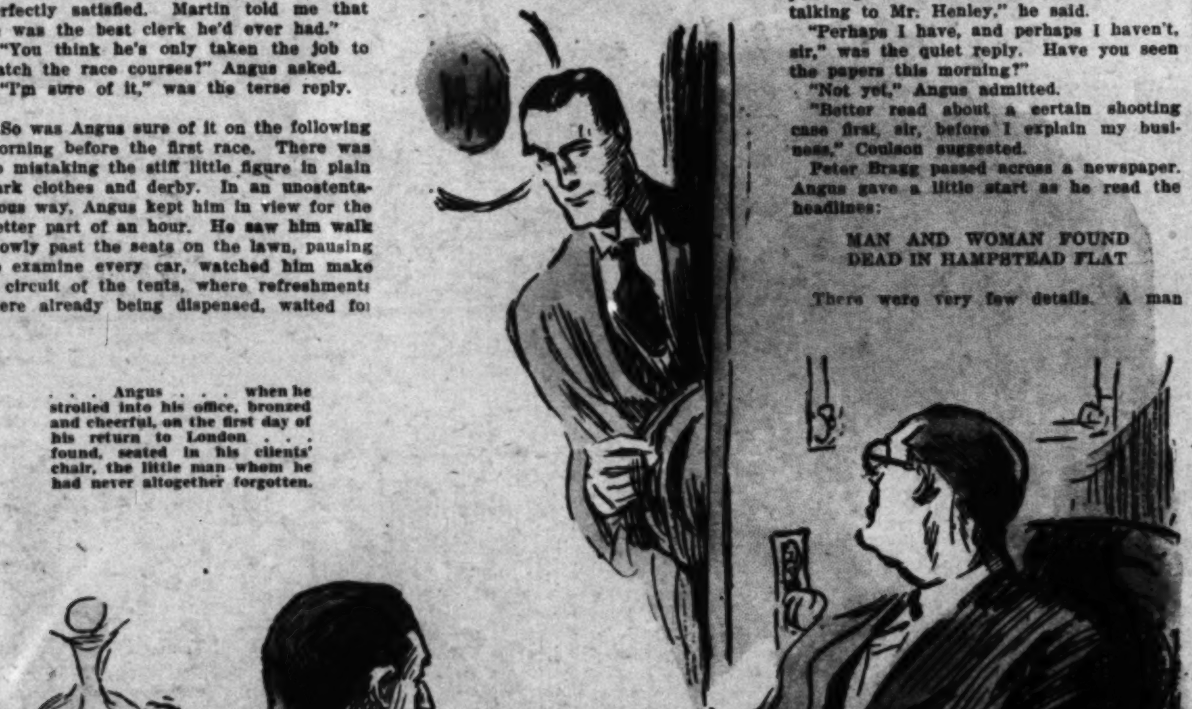
There were very few details. A man named Merridew, a betting agent, and a woman had been discovered by one of the servants at Carnsforth Buildings, Hampstead, dead, early in the morning, both shot through the head. A revolver had been found by the side of the man, and an arrest was expected hourly. Angus threw down the paper and turned to his visitor.



. . . Angus . . . when he strolled into his office, bronzed and cheerful, on the first day of his return to London . . . found, seated in his clients' chair, the little man whom he had never altogether forgotten.

"Well?"

"I have some facts to lay before you," the latter announced calmly. "Please listen. I killed a man because of that woman and went to prison for three years for it. Since my release I threatened the woman and Merridew with death. That is common knowledge. They have told a dozen people of their terror of me. I visited Merridew's flat last night, knowing the woman was dining with him there. The revolver found by the side of Merridew is mine. I believe that I was seen to enter and leave the flat, yet I did not shoot either of them. They were alive when I left them. I have no idea how they met their death. I know perfectly well that I shall be arrested before the day is over. Will you do what you can for me?"

Angus sat back in his chair. A fit of speechlessness was upon him.

"There must be a chance for me to clear myself," Coulson insisted, "because I did not kill them."

"What did you go there for, then?" Peter Bragg asked patiently.

"To tell them that I'd changed my mind. I have turned over a new leaf. I am engaged to be married."

"If your present story is the true one," Peter Bragg remarked, "I think that coincidence has made you the most unfortunate man in the world.

"Listen here," Coulson continued, addressing Angus. "I've heard about you. You're not in this business like the police, to worry along the routine ways. Here is your one chance in a lifetime. On the face of it, it's a hundred to one that I'm guilty. I'm not. Try to find that ninety-ninth thread."

"Can you help?" Angus asked.

The man shook his head.

"I cannot," he admitted. "I am just like everyone else will be. I should believe myself guilty, if I didn't know I wasn't."

"I'll do what I can," Angus decided, "but I warn you—"

"You needn't trouble," the other interrupted. "I'm not going to attempt to get away. I shall be arrested before the day is out, of course. I shall spend the night in prison, trying to imagine what happened."

"One word more," Angus begged, with his hand upon the doorknob. "There's no question of suicide and murder, I suppose?"

"Why should there be?" was the hopeless rejoinder.

Angus dined, a few nights afterward, at his club with Hunley.

"So our little friend has kept his word." Angus observed.

Hunley nodded gloomily.

"Silly fool!" he muttered. "He got off once, and now he must go and absolutely pay for what he's certain to get. I'd defend him, if he had a leg to stand on, but he hasn't. To make things worse, he's lost his nerve—wants to plead 'not guilty'."

"I suppose there's no doubt that he did do it?" Angus asked.

The K. C. shrugged his shoulders.

"My dear fellow," he pointed out, "he announced his intention of killing them. He's seen to enter Merridew's flat; he's seen to leave. His revolver is found there; the two are dead."

"I know," Angus remarked, "but he says he didn't do it."

The K. C. scoffed.

"Every man's nerve breaks now and then."

"Can I look over the rooms?"

"If you wish to, with pleasure. I'll give you a card to Ryan, of Scotland Yard. He's in charge. He'll be there tomorrow, I believe."

Hunley drew his case from his pocket, scribbled on the back of a card, and passed it over to Angus. As though by common consent, they dined thenceforward without a mention of Coulson's name. Angus spent the rest of the evening in the neighborhood of Carnsforth Buildings.

At eleven o'clock on the following morning, Inspector Ryan and Angus ascended by the elevator to the fifth floor of the Carnsforth Buildings, and the former exchanged a word or two with the policeman who was on guard at the entrance to the flat.

That conversation probably saved Coulson's life, for, in the interval of waiting [illegible] before the [illegible] are [illegible] to later imitation. "Our collections," says Taine, "composed of scattered [illegible] and heads and limbs, resemble a battlefield after a combat." And our histories are but hypothesis.

Polycleitus (ca. 480-412 B.C.) was the leader in this effort for precision of technique. In his masterpieces, the Diadumenos (The Fillet-Binder) and the Doryphoro (The Spear-Bearer,) he sought to study the athlete not in the agony of victory, but in the beauty of repose; and on the basis of these works he composed his famous "Canon" of rules for sculpture, basing all the proportions of the perfect body on the width of the brow. He was the Bach of ancient statuary, turning mathematics into beauty.

In these men beauty was as yet chiefly a matter of health and strength, as nature sought to make it before chemists and tailors came; in Praxiteles (fl. 360 B.C.) suddenly an almost modern sense of beauty as seductive loveliness appears; and woman enters to contest the prize with man. For Praxiteles was a lover rather than a warrior; his heart was lost to Phryne, the fairest hetaira of her day; and when at a festival she frolicked nude in the water before the assembled Greeks, Praxiteles fell at her feet and begged her to pose as his model for Aphrodite.

The inhabitants of the Island of Cos had ordered from him a statue of the goddess of love; nothing could have pleased him better. In defiance of precedent he chiseled the fair body ungarbed. Then fearing that the people of Cos would recognize in the statue his own Phryne rather than Aphrodite, he made another statue, draped, and gave Cos its choice. Cos chose Venus draped; and the rival city of Cnidus just across a strait, took it into its head to buy the Aphrodite au naturelle, gave her its name (the Aphrodite of Cnidus,) and became the Mecca of artists from everywhere in the ancient world. The King of Bithynia offered to pay the entire national debt of the Cnidians if they would sell him into apotheosis of beauty; they refused, and rightly, since only by this statue are they known to history.

This representation of a goddess in the nude was a new departure and aroused the wags and moralists of the day. Perhaps it did portend a softening of Greek morality and character; it was not man that was beautiful now, so much as woman; and in woman it was the tempting sweetness of the flesh that the artist carved, not that strong and yet gentle motherliness which makes the anonymous Demeter of Cnidus (in the British Museum) the finest statue in the world.

This tendency to delicacy and soft sentiment appears in Praxiteles' male figures too: in the Apollo Sauroctonos (Apollo the Lizard-Killer,) in the Capitoline Faun, in the Eros, and even in the famous Hermes. The Faun (inspiration of Hawthorne's tale) is the luxurious son of Bacchus and Pan, loving pleasure and not knowing work or sin. The Apollo looks less like a youth than like a girl, and might be classed with those hermaphrodites which so abound in Greek statuary; it is no actual male, nor any actual female, but almost the reunion of the sexes in an ideal of unharassed love. This is the Athens of Plato and Euripides, no longer of Anaxagoras and Eschylus; here is no flat-footed Doric strength of pre-Periclean sculpture, nor the one-footed agility of Myron, nor the majestic power of Pheidias' heroes and gods; this is Ionic grace and ease, beginning the conquest of suiciding Greece by the patient Orient.

Before Praxiteles Eros had been a winged boy, as vigorous as any urchin in the streets; under the hand of this subtle master he became that symbol of dreams and tenderness which so pleases our romantic souls. Story has it that Phryne, to trick Praxiteles into revealing which of his works he liked the best, told him that his studio was on fire; whereupon he exclaimed that all his labor was lost if his Eros and his Faun were destroyed.

The last figure in this little survey of Greek sculpture before Alexander is the fiery Scopas. Here is the Byron to Praxiteles's Keats and Pheidias' Milton; a passionate and fury of style which, by the side of the Hermes and the Aphrodite, remind us of Michelangelo's suffering heroes pictured and chiseled in the same age which saw the quiet and tender madonnas of Raphael. Scopas (fl. 350 B.C.) achieved renown by the great relief which he carved on the east side of the gigantic Mausoleum of Halicarnassus, representing the war of the Amazons and the Greeks. The queen who had ordered the tomb for her husband Mausolus died before it was finished; legend says that the artists, loving the task, finished it unpaid, and worked so well that it became one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. (The others were the Pyramids, the walls of Babylon, the Hanging Gardens of Nebuchadnezzar, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Olympian Zeus of Pheidias, and the Colossus of Rhodes.)

See now in review the development of what we may loosely call Periclean sculpture. At first crude strength, as in Myron; and then classic perfection of form as in Pheidias and Polycleitus; and then romantic tenderness and passion, as in Praxiteles and Scopas. It is a frequent sequence in art and history; it is the relation between the Doric, the Ionic, and the Corinthian, between Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides, between Anaxagoras, Plato, and Epicurus. Greek sculpture began with gods and heroes and it passed on to athletes and men, it ended with hermaphrodites and courtesans. But even in that fatal parabola it was great. It found for a time the secrets of proportion, harmony, and unity; it fashioned in enduring stone the passing loveliness of woman, and the frail strength of man; and it came nearer to pure and perfect beauty than any art has ever come again. It is one valid excuse for the existence of man.

and looking around, Angus was attracted by the letter-chute, just outside the door. He studied it thoughtfully. Presently the inspector produced his keys, and passed into the sitting-room, the scene of the tragedy. The inspector took Angus by the arm.

"I don't know that there's much to show you of interest here, sir," he remarked. "The chalk marks show where each body was lying. Look around the room as much as you like. My job this morning is just to see if there are any bullet marks in the walls. Nothing else has been touched."

Angus, with a little shiver, drew up one of the blinds, and took stock of his surroundings. The room was furnished with a certain amount of ostentation—heavy plush chairs, a thick carpet, a number of meretricious ornaments, a piano draped with faded silk, photographs in silver frames, even a few fans upon the walls. In a corner of the room was a small writing table.

"Have you the key to this, Inspector?" Angus asked.

The inspector nodded, and selected one.

"We've been through the contents," he observed. "Very little, except bills and sporting tips. We didn't disturb things more than we could help. There wasn't anything to look for, really."

"Just so," Angus murmured.

The inspector turned the key, and the top slid down. Inside there was a blotter and an inkstand. The pen, Angus decided, had probably been used within the last few days, and there was still ink in the pot. The blotter he lifted out and took to the light.

"There's an address of a letter here, Inspector," he remarked.

The inspector was not greatly interested.

"Might have been written at any time," he commented. "Besides, we're not looking for the murderer, are we? He's safe under lock and key."

Angus made no reply. He was holding the fragment of blotting paper up to the window.

This is probably," he observed, "the last letter written by Merridew. He must have had a brother. This is addressed to R. Merridew, but I'm hanged if I can read the rest of it."

The inspector was only concerned with finishing up the technical details of his perfect case. He did his best, however, to decipher the remainder of the address.

This much," Angus said earnestly. "On the face of it, Coulson is undoubtedly the murderer. Curiously enough, however, although he pleaded guilty to the first affair, this time he swears that he never killed either of these people. Very well—it's a thin chance enough, but let's give him that chance. If he didn't—if there was anyone else concerned—the last letter written by Merridew might help us."

"That's quite right, sir," the inspector admitted doubtfully.

"It's some club of two syllables in the W. C. 2 district," Angus went on. "Do you mind my turning my men off it? If I discover the letter, of course, I'll do nothing without you."

The inspector smiled.

"Why, you go right ahead, sir," he agreed. "I've got to be able to swear as to the condition of these walls. It will take me about an hour. I shall be at Scotland Yard afterward."

Angus, with the sheet of blotting paper in his pocket, took his leave.

It was barely midday when Angus, with two of his Strand House employees, started the rounding up of all the social clubs in the district comprised by W. C. 2; it was nearly ten o'clock when he found himself seated opposite the letter rack of the Alpha Club in Henter street, W. C. 2.

There were indications of the fact that the Alpha Club was scarcely an establishment of high social standing, but Angus had only one anxiety—that the letter should remain where it was until the arrival of the inspector. When, at last, a car stopped outside, not only the inspector himself, but also the deputy chief commissioner of police made their appearance. The uniform of the former reduced the hall porter, who had risen to his feet, to stupefied silence. Angus advanced to greet the newcomers.

"There's the letter, Inspector," he pointed out, "that, according to my theory, was written by Merridew, on the night of his death, to his brother. If there is any other explanation of the tragedy besides the obvious one, it is to be found there."

The deputy chief commissioner turned to the porter.

"Mr. Merridew is a member of the club?" he inquired.

"He's a member, sir," the man admitted, "but he ain't often here."

"Do you know where he is now?"

"I did hear," the man ventured, "that he was in France somewhere."

"You don't know when to expect him back?"

"Not exactly, sir. A good few as calls here says he owes them money."

The deputy chief commissioner withdrew the letter from the rack.

"I'm taking possession of this letter in the name of the law," he announced curtly. "Have you a room where we can be alone for a few minutes?"

The man ushered them into a bare little waiting-room, and turned on a jet of gas. The deputy chief commissioner cut the flap of the envelope. He spread the letter out upon the table. The three men read it together:

"9 Carnsforth Buildings,
"Hampstead, N. W.

"Dear Bob:

"I can do nothing to help you out. It's all up with me, anyway. I have spent my last shilling—sold car yesterday—and Ada knows it. By the time you get this, I shall have gone out.

"Bob, you've been right to stay free from women. You know what Ada's been to me. Worse and worse, I've been getting for weeks and months. Yesterday I went to a doctor. He didn't spend five minutes over me; looked at me in a queer, old-fashioned sort of way. 'Are you honest?' he asked, 'You don't know what's the matter with you?' 'I'll be hanged if I do,' I told him, 'or I wouldn't have spent a guinea coming here.' 'You've either been taking or you've been given arsenic steadily for the last three months,' he said. 'It's gone too far. I should get into a hospital quick, if I were you. I can do nothing.'

"Arsenic, Bob! What do you think of that?

"It's been a queer night. I got back to Carnsforth Buildings and found Ada there. I didn't tell her what I had found out. I didn't tell her I was broke, although she'd pretty well guessed it, but, while we were sitting there, who should come but little Coulson—turned up this very night, after all the months we've dodged him. I thought he'd found the courage at last, and I just laughed. It seemed like saving me a job. He came in, and Ada was scared. He took an automatic pistol from his pocket and laid it upon the table. 'You don't need to be afraid of me any more,' he said quietly. 'I've found a girl and I'm going to settle down. As for you, Ada,' he went on, 'I've been meaning to kill you for months—I was wrong. You aren't worth it. You need never be afraid of me any more. There's my gun. Do as you please!' And, with that, he turned his back on us and went out. We heard the lift go down. Ada, she was all excited like. 'Thank heaven!' she exclaimed. 'Jim, I'll have a drink on that!' She went toward the sideboard, and I picked up the pistol. 'There's another besides him means to make an end of you, my woman,' I said, 'and that's the man you've been poisoning for the last three months.' With that she squealed, but I shot her . . .

"I've had three drinks, Bob. I've found a stamp, and I'll shove this in the chute. When I've done that, I'm off myself. If there's anything left, it's yours, but there won't be much. So long.

"JIM."

The deputy commissioner shook hands with Angus.

"If there is one thing in the world, Mr. Angus," he said, "that could reconcile us to the activities of you amateur gentlemen, it is the fact that you have vision. You have saved us a bad shock this time, anyhow."

They had passed out into the stuffy little hall, and, for a moment, Angus made no reply. He was looking at the dilapidated letter rack. But for a chance, that letter might have moldered there behind the worn tape while Coulson was hanged.

"It's a matter of psychological conviction against circumstantial evidence, sir," he said, after a pause. "Coulson's guilt seemed a certainty, and yet, as man to man, I felt that he was telling me the truth."

Two months later Mr. Coulson, smartly dressed in a light gray suit, with racing glasses swung around his shoulder and carrying his derby in his hand, presented himself at Angus's office. He was accompanied by a very charming young woman, neatly dressed for a day's racing.

"I've called to know what fee I owe you, sir," Coulson announced. "This is my wife—Sam Martin's daughter. She'd like to help me pay it."

Angus smiled.

"Well, what's his life worth to you, Mrs. Coulson?" he asked.

"Everything in the world," the girl answered.

"How's your book today?" Angus inquired.

'We're light on Arioso, sir," was the smiling reply.

"I'll have a fiver each way, then."

"You're on a fiver to nothing, sir," Coulson announced. "And it's the best bet I ever took in my life!"

stands on the city's peak (Acro-polis,) with nothing between it and the sun, its golden pillars visible even from the Aegean.

You mount the broken steps (or "stereobate" (to where the columns rise from the topmost step (or "stylobate.") Note the curvature of this stylobate—see how it slopes slightly downward at either end. It is but one instance of Ictinus' antipathy to straight lines; everywhere in the Parthenon, as in the space of Einstein's physics, straight lines are curved. All horizontal lines are perceptibly convex, all vertical lines incline a little toward the center, all corner lines toward the diagonal. These architects knew life and love, and man's instinctive preference for curved lines; by avoiding mechanical monotony they gave vitality and freedom to dead stone, and mitigated the austerity without losing the sublimity of the Doric style. For this style, as its name reveals, had come from Sparta, as cold and hard as marble itself; its glory lay in its strength, but it needed a touch of gentleness to give it beauty.

Observe that the columns, in this Doric style, have no base; they rise immediately from the plinth (or supporting stone,) in graceful "fluted" shafts—not smoothly round, but indented with graceful grooves. They narrow slightly in a gradual "entasis" (or inward-leaning) at the top—not merely because this is more pleasing to the eye, nor only because a column broader at its base than at its summit gives a comforting impression of stability, but because, presumably, the first temples were of wood, and the first columns were tapering trees.

Each is crowned at the top with a curved "necking," a round "echinus," and a square "abacus," all three uniting to form the "capital." Across the capitals runs the "architrave," or main beam, indicating again the timber origin of the Doric style. Over the architrave is the outer "frieze" (Fr. frise, a ruff,) alternately of "triglyphs" (three carved vertical lines,) where were originally the ends of beams; and "metopes" ope, hollow, and meta, between,) here adorned with powerful reliefs. These metopes, numbering ninety-two, ran entirely around the Parthenon, and told the barbaric tale of how the Lapiths waged their legendary war against the centaurs—a strange blend of animals and men.

Above the frieze is the slim triangle formed by the western end of the roof, constituting one of those two "pediments" which are the supreme glory of the Parthenon. They have been cruelly mutilated by time and war and thievery; all the heads save one are gone; and yet the sculptor Canova said of the surviving torsos: "All other statues are of stone, these are of flesh and blood."

In the corners, fitted into the narrowing space, are the heads of horses representing sun and moon—nostrils snorting and eyes flashing in action livelier than life. Toward the center rise the majestic bodies of decapitated gods: the nude figures are magnificent, with all the power and none of the contortions of Michelangelo's giants; and the clothed figures are as perfect in drapery as the drawings of Leonardo. Nothing in sculpture surpasses these robes of flowing stone; even in the cold stillness of the British Museum they almost move in the wind.

Pass now within the outer colonnade which runs around the building; in just such porticos as this the philosophers of Greece found shade for their discourse. Before you is another row of columns, as strong and stately as the first. Behind them is the western wall of the temple itself, surviving only in portions; here are the wounds left in the marble by the cannon shot which the Venetian gunners aimed so well. You look aloft to find that inner frieze which Pheidias carved round the top of the temple wall; here the artist placed his noblest statuary, too high to be comfortably seen by men, but, as Pheidias said, quite visible to the gods.

Alas, the sculptures are not there; Lord Elgin carted them away a hundred years ago. It was high-handed robbery; but if he had left them where they were they would by this time, with earthquake and neglect, have fallen into a thousand ruins. Now they form the greatest treasure of the British Museum, as carefully preserved as English air and damp can keep them.

The famous frieze ran for 525 feet along the wall, and pictured the procession of Athenian maidens and youths bearing homage and offerings to Athene on the festival day of the Panathenaic games. The most renowned of the panels shows two horsemen, riding chargers whose beauty and spirit outshine even the comely nobility of the young cavaliers. Another fragment (in the Louvre) shows a group of women, perfect in loveliness and grace, carrying a veil to the goddess. (Near that fragment, in the Salle Grecque of the Louvre, is a marvelous head, detached from the same frieze, still bearing some of its original color, and, even in its ruins, indescribably delicate in conception and execution.)

On either side of the temple sacrificial animals moved immovably on the frieze, with philosophic resignation, toward the gods who adorned the eastern wall. There sat Poseidon, Apollo, Artemis, Athene and other deities, magnificent in figure, clear of eye, and divinely calm. This is the characteristic repose of classic statuary at its best; the fundamental principle of the grand style, said Winckelmann, "was to represent the countenances and attitudes of the gods and heroes as free from emotion, and not agitated by inward perturbations, in an equilibrium of feeling, and with a peaceful, always even, state of mind." Of what use would it be to be a god if one could not be calm?

"I can't stand him—he offends me!"
"Unintentionally, perhaps?"
"Exactly! Otherwise, I'd rather like him!"

Copyright, 1927, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Now enter the naos of inner temple. Only the marble floor remains desolate and bare. Near the center rose Pheidias' great statue of Athene Parthenos, thirty-nine feet high, carved and cast in ivory and precious metal, and so placed that the morning sun, streaming through the eastern portal, bathed her golden head. Above, a magnificent ceiling ran; and on every side, along the walls, a double colonnade. Here the people came to worship the patron deity of Athens; and here poets, artists and philosophers came to worship beauty and doubt the gods. Here was the center and summit of a great city's spiritual life.

Now let us walk a little away from it, back toward the Propylaea through which we came. Turn and give it a parting look, and see it as a whole. It is not large; many Gothic cathedrals, as at Milan and Seville are larger; St. Peter's is twice as large; and the Parthenon would have been lost in the vast temple of Karnak. But the Greeks sought perfection rather than magnificence; Pericles phrased their ideal in three words when he said; "Philokaloumen met' euteleias—we love beauty without extravagance." The men of Athens idolized moderation because they were not moderate, except in art; they scorned excess and inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi their aspiration: Meden agan—nothing too much. When our own art and taste become fantastic and bizarre, anxious for novelty rather than for perfection, let us go back to the Acropolis, and look again on the Parthenon.

If we have spoken so much of the Parthenon it is because we have taken it as a symbol of Greek art, and of Greek civilization at its best; but we must not suppose that it was alone among the architectural achievements of the Greeks. On the Acropolis itself a quite different style of architecture from the mighty Doric had its triumph in the Erectheum and the Temple of Athene Nike'; here were the slender "Ionic" columns that had come from the Greeks of Asia Minor, with a base for each column and a graceful "volute" or curling earlike top to form the capital; and here, on the Erectheum, almost intact, is the famous "Porch of the Maidens" held up by six substantial women called the Caryatids (women of Caryae, probably priestesses.) One might find fault with this Oriental use of human figures as pillars for an edifice; but see the strainless adaption of these ladies; they do not seem to feel the weight; they are strong broad-shouldered women, but the fruit and slender bloom of our identity.

And down on the plain stand the great of the Olympieion, or Temple of the Olympian Zeus, built and rebuilt by twenty generations of Greeks and Romans, and illuminating, with magnificent flowerlike capitals, that "Corinthian" style which had come to Athens from Corinth, and presumably, in its origins, from Egypt and Crete. So within a little distance three forms of columnar architecture found completion.

Such was one part of the work of the age of Pericles. Never before and never since did democracy spend so lavishly on art. Indeed the people complained of this expenditure; had not the funds of the Confederacy been voted for war? So they questioned Pericles in Assembly, and for a time it seemed that they would call a halt on this orgy of perfection. But Pericles, said Plutarch, cleverly persuaded them saying: "Do not then, put this expense to the debt of Athens, but to mine; and I will inscribe my name" (and not that of the Athenian people) "on all the public buildings." "When Pericles had said this," Plutarch tells us, "the people, either in admiration of his munificence of manner, or being eager to bear their share in the glory of their buildings, shouted with one accord that he should spend so much on the buildings as he pleased."

Nevertheless, the power of Pericles waned; one after another his skeptical friends were prosecuted and exiled; finally Pheidias himself was indicted on a charge of embezzling gold from the statue of Athene Parthenos. When the artist refuted this by having the gold weighed, he was indicted again for having placed on the shield of the statue the figures of himself and Pericles. On this charge he went to prison; and there, together with the toil of seventy years, and the ingratitude of the state, he died. The world does not readily forgive a man for being great, until he is dead.

From Myron to Scopas

If sculpture, as Santayana thinks, is the greatest of the arts, then the glory of Greece is secure, for in sculpture she has no rival. Never since have artists so well portrayed the strength, the health, and the beauty of the human frame; and never since has the body been in such profound harmony with the mind. The unity and proportion of all parts of the organism, the smooth co-operation of all the powers of flesh and soul, this was the ideal of the Greeks in life and their ideal in art; they would show man at one with himself.

Plato said that the wise man will wish for three things above all others: first, to be healthy; second, to be beautiful; third, to be rich without dishonor. Even the intellectuals in Greece had health and strength; and beauty in a man was held to be as noble as a subtle mind. Greek histories record the handsomest figures of various ages in the past; Greek cities offered prizes for virile beauty, and erected statues to those who were judged best. When Cleisthenes, tyrant of Sicyon, examined the suitors for his daughter's hand, he provided them with an exercising ground in order (says Herodotus) "that he might test their race and education." A man was rated not by his wealth or by his degrees, but by his happy union of health and intelligence. So came at last that race whose features—the straight line of nose and brow, the full lip, and the small ear—have been for every later age the standard of human beauty.

And so sculpture grew, when the flesh was a thing of splendor rather than a cross of shame. It was not merely in their games that they honored the body, but in their daily lives and their simple dress; they loved garments that could be removed with the turn of the arm, or which any breeze might blow aside, revealing some Charmides to some Socrates. "It is a Greek peculiarity," said Pliny, "to conceal nothing."

It was natural that the first development of sculpture should come from the Peloponnesus, where the body was honored most; and that it should not develop supremely there, where art was honored least. So the great name is Ageladus of Argos, teacher of Myron, Pheidias and Polycleitus; but we know him only through his pupils. Myron (ca. 500-410 B.C.) too, is but a name; we presume that the famous Discobolos or Disc-Thrower, and the Marsyas, Dancing Satyr, are his work; but we know almost nothing of his life. Let us remember, throughout, that the Hermes of Praxiteles is the only original in all our samples of

THE STORY OF CIVILIZATION

By
Will Durant, Ph. D.

The columns of the temple of the Olympian Zeus at Athens.

It Was Pericles' Good Fortune to Find for His Purposes the Architectural Genius of Ictinus and the Sculptural Genius of Pheidias

IN THE year 478 B.C., a number of Greek states, under the leadership of Athens, formed a league for self-protection against Persia. Athens contributed ships, the other states money; and since the common treasury was at the Temple of Apollo on the Island of Delos, the league came to be called the Delian Confederacy. Aristides, known as "the Just," was placed in charge of the finances of the league.

But years went by, and Persia made no war. The Athenians, tempted to imperialism by their power, transferred the treasury from Delos to Athens, against the protest of their allies; and very soon the league became an empire autocratically ruled by the democracy of Athens. Sparta saw, feared for her own independence, and set about to form a rival league. In the midst of the greatest age of art in all history, war raised its head.

Pericles, falling heir, as controller of the treasury, to the league's accumulated gold, fretted at the idleness of so much wealth, and longed to use it in some way that might immortalize his city and his name. He saw the sunlit peak of the Acropolis, and visioned for it temples fairer than any that man had ever reared to the gods. He did not care for these deities as the people did, having too many skeptics for his friends; but he saw that they might be made symbols and inspirations of heroism and civic pride, if they could be refashioned in the image of the noblest men.

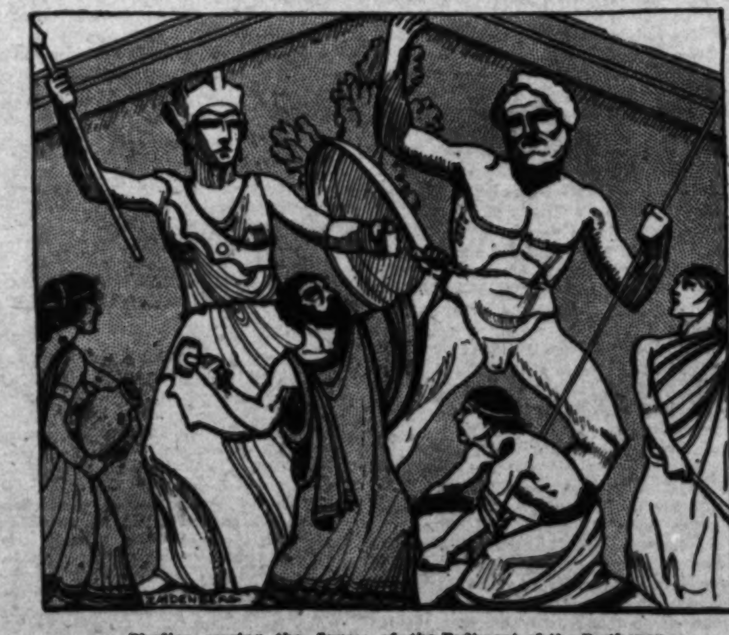
But who could refashion them? Where were there artists profound enough to conceive a Zeus, a Hermes, an Aphrodite, an Athene, worthy of an age of poets and philosophers destined to remain for many centuries unsurpassed?

Not that there had been no great Greek art before. Architecture had flourished in this dry air, among these mountains so rich in perfect stone. Far back in the seventh century B.C. the Ionian Greeks of Asia Minor had built a temple to Artemis (Diana) at Ephesus: at first of wood, which the Cimmerians burned; and then of stone, which Herostratus destroyed on the day of Alexander's birth. Peisistratus, about 530 B.C., had begun a gigantic temple of Zeus on the plains of Athens; it had been left unfinished at his death, and only in the days of Antiochus Epiphanes were those fine Corinthian columns added of which fifteen still stand to greet the modern pilgrim. At Girgenti in Sicily, home of that fiery philosopher, Empedocles, Greek colonists had built a Temple of Concord as a gentle emollient of Mediterranean pugnacity. And at Paestum (some thirty miles south of Vesuvius) other Greek colonists had built a magnificent Temple of Poseidon (ca. 530 B.C.) which still ennobles Southern Italy, and rivals the majesty of the Parthenon.

Sicily and Italy were fortunate; the Persians did not reach them in 480 B.C., nor sack their capitals. But Xerxes' army destroyed not only every home in Athens, but every work of art; when Salamis was won the Athenians returned to a city which had lost half its wealth and all its beauty. It is one of the marvels of human history that the Greeks, who might well have despaired at this quick undoing of the work of many generations, resolutely set to work, under the guidance of Themistocles, Cimon and Pericles, to rebuild their city and make it more beautiful than before. Pericles merely brought to completion the plans and labors of sixty years.

Pheidias, though here again it is only legend that speaks—had been a slave, or the son of a slave; so genius persists in rising recklessly in any rank, and starves as often as it grows. Cimon, predecessor of Pericles as a ruler of Athens, had given Pheidias his first great commission—the moulding of a colossal bronze statue, fifty feet high, of Athene Promachos—Athene the Warrior. The body was of ivory, the drapery of gold; the gilded spear-top and helmet were visible from the sea, proud symbols of the militarism that infected the victorious city. Nothing survives of it now but its pedestal.

Time has been equally ruthless with other masterpieces of Pheidias. His statue of the Lemnian Athene, which Lucian called his most perfect work, is gone without a trace. Of another statue—the Zeus at Olympia—only a copy of the head remains. It was a colossal affair; if Zeus had risen from the seat on which the sculptor placed him his divine head would have bruised itself against the temple roof. This disproportion was atoned for by the benignity and majesty of the face, which already revealed in the artist's work the influence of the philosophers. "Its beauty," thought the Roman rhetor Quintilian, "seems to have added something to the received religion." "Fare to Olympus," counseled the historian Arrian, "that ye may see the works of Pheidias; and account it each one of you a misfortune if ye die with this still unknown." And Dio Chysostom said: "Any man who is heavy-laden in soul, who has suffered many misfortunes and sorrows in his life, and who has no comfort of sweet sleep, even such a one, I think, if he stood before this statue, would forget all the dangers and hardships of this mortal life."



Phedias carving the figures of the Pediment of the Parthenon.

Such was the man to whom, in the year 445 B.C., Pericles assigned the task of adorning with statuary the temple which Ictinus and Callicrates were designing as shrine of the Athene Parthenos (Athene the Virgin,) and as home of the virgins (parthenon) who served as her priestesses. For nine years they drew, and carved, and built. When they were finished they had produced the most perfect work yet made by the hand of man.

The Parthenon

As you stand before it the first impression is one of desolation. Under your feet crackle and glisten fragments of marble that once were part of the temple. You take a chip in your hand and examine it; it is of sparkling white, and comes from Mt. Pentelicus, where you may still see the quarries and runways that provided the marble for the Parthenon.

Then that impression of ruin passes for a while, and the combined simplicity and power of the edifice envelops you. This is no mere beauty, as the Alhambra has beauty, or the Taj Mahal; it is grandeur, sublimity, the masculine majesty of mountains or the sea. Nothing could be less pretentious or more impressive; these unadorned Doric columns, this simple triangular pediment, this plain rectangular design—here are no frills of any kind, no bizarre embellishment of details, no romantic dominance of any part over the whole.

For its greatness is in its entirety rather than in its parts. It was so placed that one might see it all at a glance; it is not suffocated by its surroundings, as are so many cathedrals of the Gothic age; it does not lie buried in a chaos of dwellings, workshops and stores, invisible except in details; it

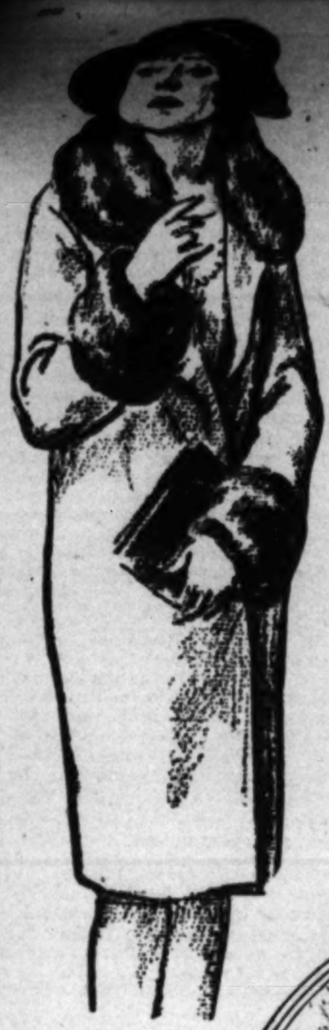
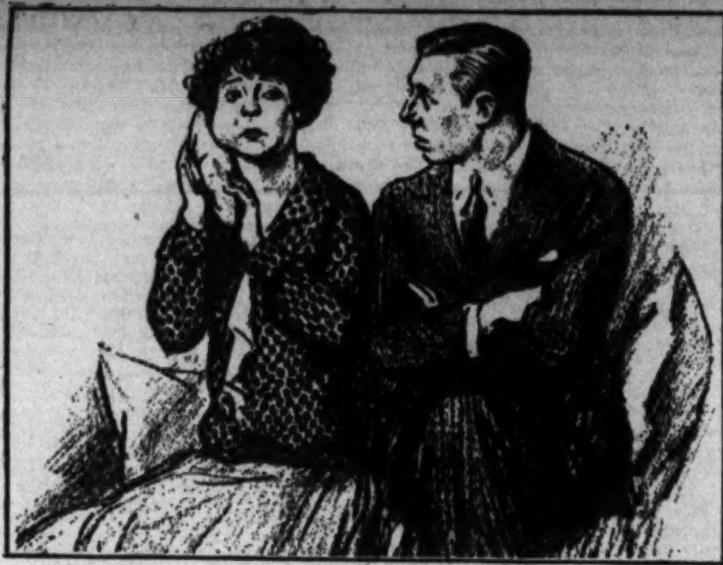
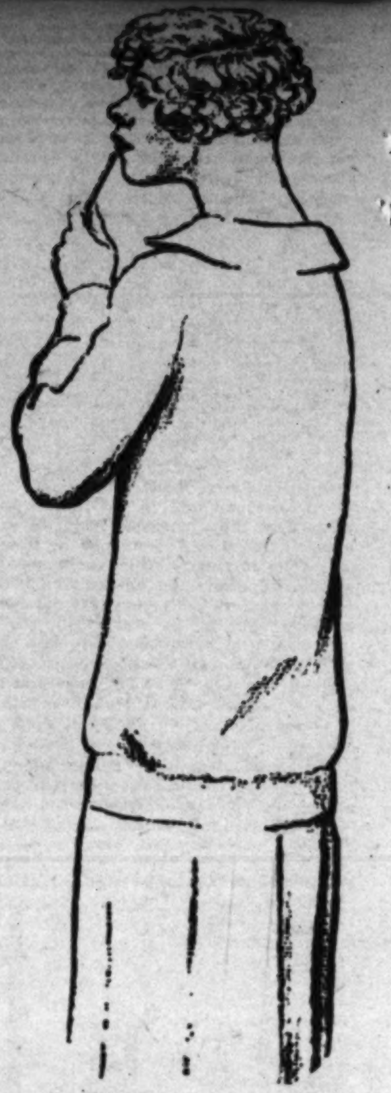
Wisdom Teeth

By W. E. Hill

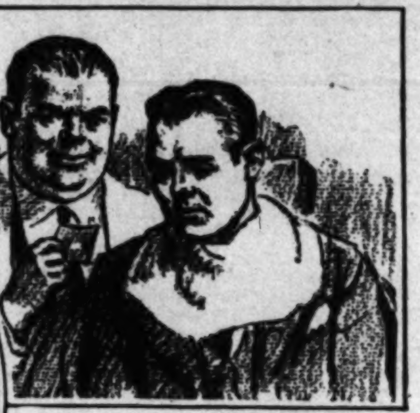




Sufferers from wisdom teeth love to tell all the horrid details. Here is poor Gladys, making use of the cracked ice bag to keep down the swelling. She's telling her young man all about how she nearly fainted every time the mallet struck home.

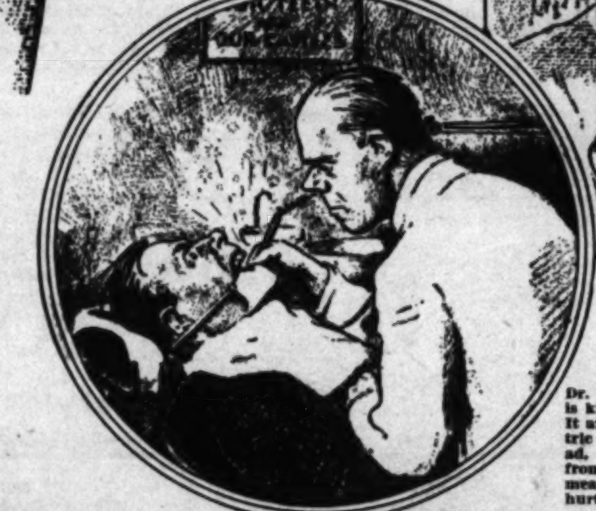


The novocaine. Florrie was given a local anesthetic, which has, for the time being, slightly paralyzed her tongue. The taxi driver will do well if he comes within a mile of where Florrie's home is.

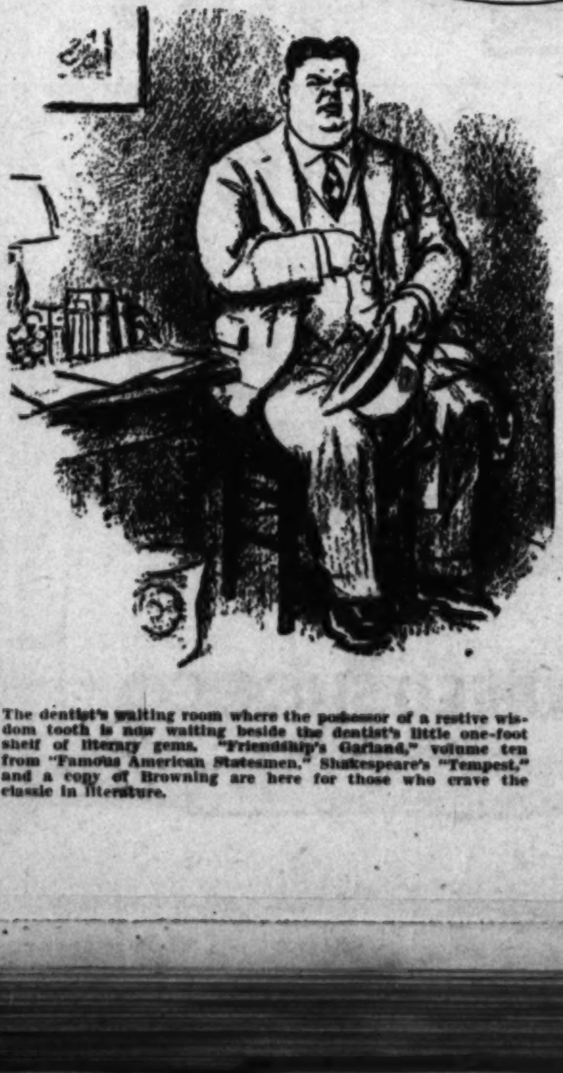


"Now in this one, you can see how the gum had to be cut away from the bone," etc., etc. Dentists are justly proud of their X-ray pictures and love to show the X-ray of a wisdom tooth in all its impact.

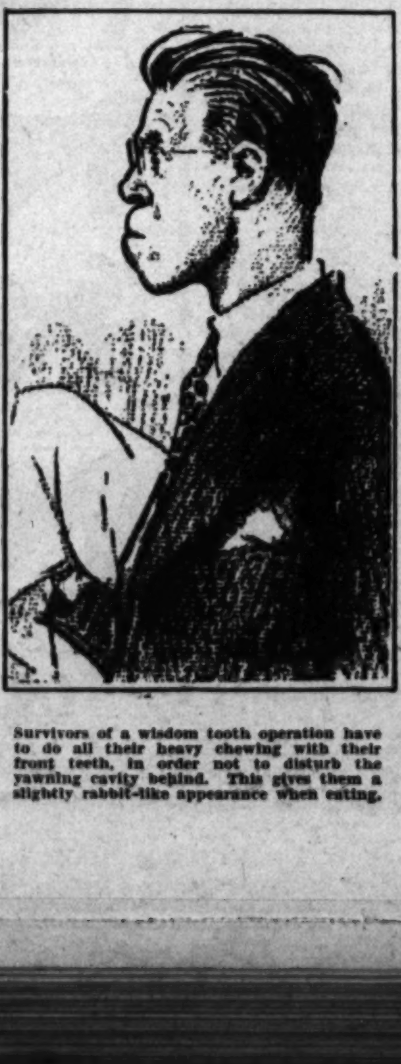
Miss Agnes Augenblick is Doctor Gouger's assistant. Agnes answers the phone and tells Mrs. Hodge or Mrs. Podge that though Dr. Gouger has most of his time filled she can have an appointment at six-thirty on Tuesday morning, or at five-twenty-five p. m. on the following Friday. Besides answering the phone Agnes is often called upon in moments of great stress to hand Dr. Gouger the saliva eradicator.



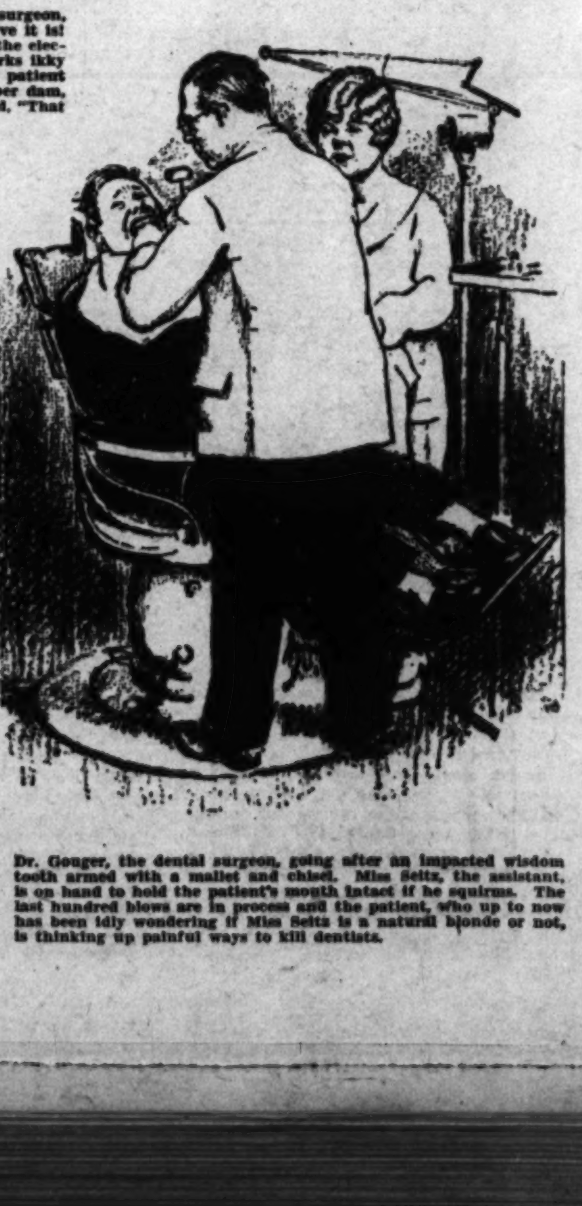
Dr. Gruesome, the genial dental surgeon, is killing a nerve and such a nerve it is! It answers right back every time the electric drill burrows into it. "Ak urks ikky ad, 'octor," gurgles the frenzied patient from somewhere behind the rubber dam, meaning, as you may have guessed, "That hurts pretty bad, doctor."



The dentist's waiting room where the possessor of a restive wisdom tooth is now waiting beside the dentist's little one-foot shelf of literary gems. "Friendship's Garland," volume ten from "Famous American Statesmen," Shakespeare's "Tempest," and a copy of Browning are here for those who crave the classic in literature.



Survivors of a wisdom tooth operation have to do all their heavy chewing with their front teeth, in order not to disturb the yawning cavity behind. This gives them a slightly rabbit-like appearance when eating.



Dr. Gouger, the dental surgeon, going after an impacted wisdom tooth armed with a mallet and chisel. Miss Seitz, the assistant, is on hand to hold the patient's mouth intact if he squirms. The last hundred blows are in process and the patient, who up to now has been idly wondering if Miss Seitz is a natural blonde or not, is thinking up painful ways to kill dentists.

A WORLD SLIPPED THROUGH

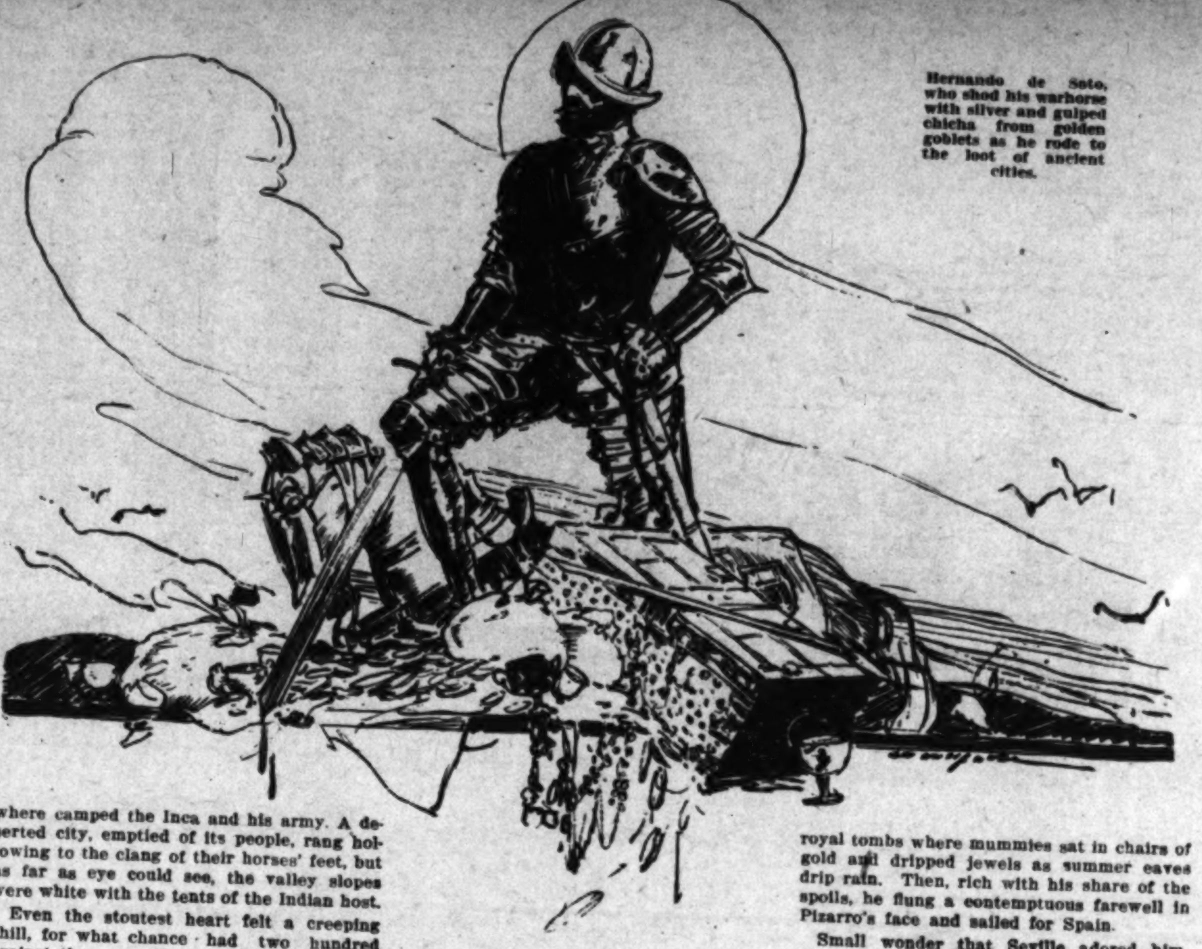
NO ROMANCER, giving imagination full rein, ever dreamed adventures half so mad as the actual deeds of those Spaniards who sailed the uncharted ocean in their flimsy caravels, stormed the walls of the New World, and waded through blood to fabulous riches that they diced away in a night. As cruel as brave, as treacherous as heroic, as religious as depraved, prattling prayers the loudest when outraging God the most—amazing figures as tremendous and incredible as though they stepped out of the Apocalypse.

Cortes burning his ships and advancing against the might of Montezuma with a scant four hundred men; Pizarro conquering Peru with less than two hundred; Pedro de Valdivia enslaving Chili with one hundred and fifty; eighty four-year-old Francisco de Barbajal leading forlorn hopes—what a list it is that beat against the gates of memory with their sword hilts!

It is with Hernando de Soto, however, that this story has to do. We see him first, as he leaves his mountain home in Estremadura, a lad not taller than his sword, seeking his fortune in Panama with Pedrarias Davila, who cut off Balboa's head, and in the fifteen years that follow we catch vivid glimpses of him as he races through Hispaniola and Nicaragua pursuing fortune.

Well did he hold his own among those swarming adventurers, for when Pizarro prepares his blow at Peru we find young Hernando in high command and rated as the Company's "best lance and finest horseman."

It was in the eleventh month of the invasion that the Spaniards came to Caxamalca, where camped the Inca and his army. A deserted city, emptied of its people, rang hollowing to the clang of their horses' feet, but as far as eye could see, the valley slopes were white with the tents of the Indian host.



Hernando de Soto, who shod his warhorse with silver and gulped chicha from golden goblets as he rode to the loot of ancient cities.

Even the stoutest heart felt a creeping chill, for what chance had two hundred against these countless thousands? At last they understood why the Peruvian monarch had not opposed their march from the sea coast, taking no advantage of mountain passes where a tumbled boulder could have swept them all to death. This valley, with its prison walls, was his trap.

All through the night Pizarro and De Soto upbraided and exhorted. Were cavaliers to turn tail before these heathen dogs? Could they not see that retreat was an invitation to disaster? When had they ever fought except against overwhelming odds?

What of repeated proofs that God had them in His holy care and keeping? In every great battle had there not been sight of St. Michael high above them, crying his angels to the assault? Was there not ample assurance of the land's incalculable wealth? Forward, caballeros! Another sword stroke and every man might plunge his arms shoulder-deep in yellow gold and emeralds.

Before the morning sun topped the peaks of the Andes, De Soto was spurring across the plain to face the Inca and learn his will. With gay arrogance and a certain shrewd intent to strike fear, he sank his rowels deep, and galloped down the warrior line at furious speed, throwing his charger back upon its haunches only at the very hem of the royal robe.

Not by the twitch of a muscle did the dusky ruler betray awe or astonishment, and it was in cold, implacable tones that he dismissed De Soto, saying that he would visit the Spaniards on the following day, and then acquaint them with his pleasure.

"By St. Jago!" cried Pizarro. "God is delivering him into our hands." A cheer burst from every hairy throat, for some of the men had been with Cortes in Mexico, and all held in mind how the Great Captain had seized Montezuma as a hostage.

All night long there were feverish preparations, assignments of stations, and much furbishing of arms, and at mass in the early dawn, Exsurge Domino was roared to heaven as a challenge.

From their concealment these human tigers watched the Inca enter the city, and eyes flamed as they marked the jewels that incrusted his litter, and saw the throne of solid gold.

All unsuspecting—for how could he dream that this beggarly handful would dare aggression?—Atahualipa came to his doom. As he reached the great central square, with less than seven thousand of his men inside the gates, a cannon boomed its signal, and out from hiding poured De Soto and the cavalry.

Picked soldiers ringed the Inca about with steel at once, and the others rode their horses back and forth through the huddled, screaming mass, stabbing and slashing. When arms fell slack at last, from sheer exhaustion, five thousand Peruvian bodies littered the plaza.

There is not space to tell of the ransom brought in by countless pack trains. Atahualipa filled one room with gold, and another with silver—the value of the whole has been estimated at fifteen millions—and still they kept him prisoner. Evading, delaying, for his dark heart meant murder from the first, Pizarro fell finally into well-simulated rage, and charged the Inca with plotting against their lives.

Only De Soto held to faith. A fast friendship had sprung up between him and the royal captive, and affection joined with honor to make him cry out against this shameless treachery. Riding off to Huanachuco to secure proof of the Inca's innocence, he was not well away before a mock trial sentenced Atahuallpa to be burned at the stake. As the unhappy ruler accepted baptism at the last moment, however, the garrote was substituted for fire, and he was only strangled.

De Soto, returning, went white with fury, branding it as assassination, crying that his honor had been stained.

"But what," he sneered, "could a Pizarro, base born, know of honor?"

Forcible intervention prevented bloodshed, but De Soto was all for leaving the country, and only greed cooled his hot anger. There was still imperial Cuzco to sack, and even as he led the vanguard on the long and bloody march, so was he foremost in gutting the Temple of the Sun, and stripping the royal tombs where mummies sat in chairs of gold and dripped jewels as summer eaves drip rain. Then, rich with his share of the spoils, he flung a contemptuous farewell in Pizarro's face and sailed for Spain.

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of brilliant articles, scaling heights of American adventure, and animating its personalities, by George Creel, editor, author, and chairman of the President's Committee on Public Information during the World War. Painted with the verve and boldness of the acts themselves, and with all the color of the men who did them, these narratives should make real history live for the reader.

Mr. Creel is a native of Missouri. He had extensive newspaper experience, originally in Kansas City and Denver, before becoming a magazine writer as well as an author of books. He is the husband of Blanche Bates, the noted actress, and the father of two children.

Small wonder that Seville adored him. Only thirty-three—rich, handsome and a figure of romance—the beautiful Isabella de Bobadilla gave him her heart and hand, and the highest fawned upon him in his palace. For eighteen years he had fought and suffered, and now, in every softness of love and ease, he would forget the swamps of Haiti, and the bitter hardships of Peru.

Vain resolve, for how could bull fights and pompous ceremonials satisfy one who had shod his warhorse with silver, hunted slaves with hounds, gulped chicha from golden goblets as he rode to the loot of ancient cities, and had seen the Indies glow?

Ambition burned him! Cortes, no better born and not more brave, had lorded it in Mexico, and as for Pizarro, De Soto's proud soul sickered at the thought of having played second fiddle. What he dreamed of, what his heart panted for, was some virgin realm that he might make his own.

Florida, discovered but not won, occurred to him, and when he offered to undertake the conquest at his own expense, the thrifty emperor not only named him captain-gereral, but also threw in an appointment as governor of Cuba.

As the news flew that Don Hernando was taking to the sea again, sailing to a fair land where the very trees dropped gems, cavaliers raced to Seville from every quarter, even Portugal furnishing a contingent of swart hidalgos.

Out of the thousands that offered, De Soto picked six hundred—"men of courage and condition"—and ten ships were bought and double rationed. Even so, still another year was spent in Havana that no detail of the expedition might be overlooked.

It was in May, 1539, that the fleet put to sea for the passage of the Gulf, and as the little army landed in Tampa Bay and caught the fragrance of jasmine and magnolia, a great cheer broke from every lip.

Now at last was America's threshold to be crossed. Not once, in any voyage, did Columbus touch the great continent that stretched before him; John Cabot came to Labrador in 1497, but explored no further, and a year later his son, Sebastian, skirted the coast from Nova Scotia to the Chesapeake without attempt to pierce the forest walls; Vasquez de Aylion and his men were massacred within sight of their ships; Ponce de Leon fell in a beach fight, and the atrocities of Panfilo de Narvaez earned him death almost before he had touched the interior; Jacques Cartier found the St. Lawrence in 1534, but seventy years were to pass ere Champlain carried on. scene and the Battle of The San Gabriel was over, with the laurels of victory crowning the brows of our forces. Having few mounted men, our troops could not pursue the enemy, all of whom were superbly mounted, and hence could easily evade us. Stockton camped that evening within sight of the Californians' camp; and both sides slept on their arms that night, in readiness for the next encounter of the contending forces.

Battle of the Mesa

January 9, 1847.—At nine o'clock next morning, Stockton resumed his march toward Los Angeles over the Mesa, a broad plain that lay between the San Gabriel River and the Los Angeles (then called the San Fernando) River. Small bodies of the enemy hung upon his flanks, reconnoitering his movements from a distance, until the Americans had marched some five or six miles, and there had come in sight of the main body of the Californians, drawn up near a wide ravine, off to the right of the American advance.

General Flores had posted his men above the crest of this deep hollow in the mesa; but the Americans marched calmly along the road to Los Angeles as if no enemy were in sight. When our troops were abreast of Flores, he opened a long-range fire on them with his guns, but our column serenely kept on its way, with only one man and a mule wounded by this futile bombardment. As Stockton advanced still further, Flores lined up his lancers in front of our column, and opened fire with his two nine-pounders on our right flank, and with two smaller guns on our front.

The fire from these nine-pounders so harassed our troops, that Stockton halted, and opened fire upon these guns. In fifteen minutes these enemy cannon were effectually silenced; and our troops again moved forward, only to have the Californian cavalry assail our left flank, in a charge as skirmishers.

Our men were ordered to hold their fire until orders were given them to open up; but when the charging Californians were still a hundred yards away, our excited troops opened fire on them, sans orders, dismounting many of the enemy, and bringing their mad charge to a sudden halt. At the same time, our guns gave them a round of grape-shot, that sent the rest of them scurrying off to safety.

Meanwhile, the enemy's horsemen had made a simultaneous charge upon our rear, but had been quickly driven off by the fire of our men. Hastily gathering up their dead and wounded, the enemy vanished amid the hills to the right; and thus this battle ended just about the time that the astonished Americans thought it was going to commence in real earnest! Stockton camped near the river, expecting to next day fight another battle with the enemy, who had marched off in plain view, toward Los Angeles.

Next morning, just as Stockton broke camp, a delegation from Los Angeles appeared on the scene, and offered to surrender "their dear City of the Angels" to him, if he would agree to respect the persons and private property of the Angelenos. Stockton really was greatly relieved at this welcome news, as he had not expected to capture the city without another battle; and, therefore, he instantly granted this request, and marched into the city on January 10, 1847, and took possession of it.

Captain Gillespie was allowed the honor of again hoisting over our rebellious city the American flag that he had hauled down here, four months before this—and this time the Stars and Stripes went up to stay forever. Los Angeles was henceforth strongly garrisoned by the American forces, until the hostilities of the Mexican War were over.

Gold Discovered in California

January 24, 1848. One of the world's most famous and romantic discoveries was that of the discovery of gold in the Sierra Nevadas in 1848. And the discoverer of this Golconda was none other than a man well known in Los Angeles for the stirring part that he had played here in September 1846, when the American garrison under Capt. Gillespie was besieged on Fort Hill in Los Angeles by the revolting Angelenos; to repel whose attacks, an old cannon had been unspiked by this American hero, James W. Marshall.

The Californians had long known that gold existed in California; for it had been found at several spots. In 1841, it was first found in appreciable quantities, in the "San Fernando placers," not far from Los Angeles; and the first package of gold dust ever sent to a United States Mint, was shipped from Los Angeles by Abel Stearns around Cape Horn to Philadelphia, not long afterward.

The Spaniards and Mexicans had discovered many gold and silver mines in the northwestern parts of Mexico, close to California; and it is all the more remarkable that the enormously rich gold mines of the Sierra Nevada had never been discovered by them. However, it was a very lucky thing for us that they had never done so, before Mexico ceded California to us by the Treaty of Hidalgo—on February 2, 1848—just nine days after Marshall made his gold discovery at Coloma!

Captain Sutter decided to build a flour mill; but, in order to build this mill, he needed lumber; so he planned to build a saw mill to obtain the necessary lumber. About this time, along came Marshall, an honest, hardworking man, a wheelwright by trade, who wanted to go into the lumber business; and so, in this Fall of 1847 he and Sutter agreed to build a saw-mill, and operate it together.

Marshall found a good site at a place on the South Fork of the American River called Culloomah (Coloma) by the Indians who lived there, in a little round valley, some forty-five miles northeast of Sutter's Fort. Here Marshall and his men built their log huts, cut and shaped the frame-work timbers for the saw-mill and built a dam in the stream, from which they dug a ditch to supply and carry off the water that furnished the mill's motive power. At night, Marshall would have the gate in this ditch raised, so as to let the water carry off the sand and gravel; and in the morning, the gate was shut down.

On January 24, 1848, as Marshall was walking along this tail-race of the mill, he saw several yellow specks glittering in the bottom of the ditch; and smitten with curiosity he gathered them up, wondering what they were. Presently he found one as large as a pea. It looked like pyrites, but when he hammered it out on a rock, the ductile yellow metal merely flattened out. All the gold that he had ever seen was reddish in color—this was a deep yellow. In the next three or four days, Marshall gathered up some three ounces of this yellow metal; and he took it down to Sutter, and requested a private interview with him. Behind locked doors, he told Sutter of his discovery, showed him this strange metal; and then the two men thoroughly tested it, and found that—it was gold!

Sutter and Marshall fully realized what would happen if this wonderful discovery became known; and both tried to keep it a secret until the sawmill was finished. Marshall hastened back to the mill; but it did not take this exciting news long to spread; and on March 15, it was printed in the weekly paper in San Francisco. Sam Brannan slipped off to the American River to take a look-see; and in May he stalked into San Francisco, waving his hat, holding up a bottle full of gold dust, and shouting aloud the glad tidings. Men went wild at this first sight of gold in quantity, and dropped everything and lit out for the foothills.

On May 29, in San Francisco, the Californian sent this notice to its subscribers:—"With this slip ceases for the present the publication of The Californian . . . 'Othello's occupation's gone' . . . The majority of our subscribers and advertising patrons have closed their doors and places of business and left town. The whole country, from San Francisco to Los Angeles, and from the seashore to the base of the Sierra Nevada, resounds with the sordid cry of 'Gold! Gold! Gold!' while the field is left half planted, the house half built and everything neglected!" After emitting which, the editor locked up his printing press, and left for the mines himself!

The news had spread through California like wild-fire, as mounted men galloped past towns and ranchos with the tidings; and a mad rush to the mines set in on all sides, amidst the most intense excitement. Men left their homes and families, merchants closed their stores, farmers abandoned their ranches, soldiers deserted their garrisons, laborers dropped their tools, and the jailers ran off and left their prisoners, who promptly broke out of their prisons and followed [illegible] on their [illegible] bound for the diggings! As fast as ships anchored inside the Golden Gate, their sailors deserted their ships; and many small towns were almost depopulated.

Americans, Mexicans, South Americans, British, French and Spanish poured into California, now the focus of the amazed world's interest. In 1848, $10,000,000 worth of gold was found; in 1849, over forty millions' worth; and in 1853, some $65,000,000 was dug up from this Golconda. The news had quickly spread Eastward; and in only three weeks of the Spring of 1849, over 18,000 Americans crossed the Missouri River, bound for "California or Bust!" From this river to Fort Laramie, there flowed for two months almost a continuous procession of wagons, mounted men in crowds and great herds of cattle and horses that stretched as far as the eye could see, in the daytime; while at night, their innumerable camp-fires glittered far and near on the great plains, as if a whole vast nation was on the move, in this huge historic trek of myriads over thousands of miles, that resembled the ancient migrations of races that once changed the course of history in Asia and Europe.

One of the most remarkable events in the world's history, it was more than merely the discovery of a metal precious to man—it was the epochal soul-stirring migration of a mighty race to the Pacific, impelled by all the powerful motives that move men to great historical actions. And the gold of California ultimately saved our country, and helped to make our great nation what it is today; for, during the darkest days of our terrible Civil War, when our national credit was tottering on its last legs, and it seemed that the Union was doomed to speedy dissolution, California saved it by pouring into the national treasury its yellow flood of gold, that furnished forth "the sinews of war," and made our great and beloved President, Abraham Lincoln exclaim—"Thank God for California!"

Marshall's fateful discovery made old Padre Catala's most famous prophecies all come true at last—the discovery of gold, the advent of the American, the loss of California to the Spanish race, and both the rise and ruin of the splendid city of San Francisco, that soon arose anew, Phoenix-like from its ashes.

Hernando de Soto, One of Those Amazing Spaniards Whose Sword Flashed in and Out of History, and Who Once Grasped America—But Lost It for a Dream of Gold nando de Soto was reserved the honor of genuine entry and true discovery.

Well was he entitled to curse the fate that sent Aylion and Narvaez before him, for memory of their abominable cruelties made every Indian an implacable foe. Nor were they sheep-like Peruvians, nor yet befuddled Aztecs with their legend of a Fair God, but fierce tribes as deadly as swamp snakes, fully conscious that white men were not divinities, but human beings with blood that a knife could spill.

From the great trees, screened in dripping moss, came flights of bone-tipped arrows, and woe to the cavalier who laid aside his armor for a moment.

At first De Soto's luck seemed due to hold, for from the swamps crawled Juan Ortiz, a survivor of the Narvaez expedition, able to act as interpreter by reason of his twelve years of captivity.

Repeatedly, vehemently, he told them that there was no gold in the land, but Indian prisoners, with cunning intent to lure the Spaniards on, invented tales of a mythical Chisca, where the people wore hats of the precious metal.

Inflamed by these lies, the company plunged forward into the dark forests that rang to cries of "Come on, robbers and traitors! Death is waiting for you." The bearers tried to brain them with their chains, or else killed themselves, so that the hunt for new beasts of burden became part of a bloody routine.

Marching through Florida and Georgia, another May brought them to the banks of the Savannah, where ruled a princess, young, beautiful and friendly; and the Gentleman of Elvas, chronicler of the expedition, writes glowingly of fairy valleys thick with fruit of tree and vine, the winds only stirring to shake fragrance from the flowers.

"All wanted to stay in this sweet country," he moans, "But Soto, as it was his object to find another treasure like that of Atahualipa, Lord of Peru, would not be content with good lands." And, too, records the Gentleman, he was "an inflexible man, dry of word, and after he had expressed his will did not like to be opposed."

Grateful the shade of the mulberry groves, and soft the arms of the Indian maidens, but with visions of treasure vaults ever before his eyes, De Soto scourged the company on through the Carolinas, Tennessee and south again into Alabama, kingdom of Tuscaloosa, the Black Warrior.

The swarthy ruler was seized as he held out his hand in friendly greeting, but this habitual treachery was not followed by the usual tame submission. Maubila, Tuscaloosa's capital, was secretly ordered to prepare a plan of extermination, and ten thousand fighting men gathered against the day when the hated invaders should arrive.

Only a blunder saved the Spaniards. Before the trap was well set, an exultant chief shouted an insult at Balthasar Gallegos, and the fierce cavalier sounded the battle cry even as he split the savage from hair to chin.

For nine hours the struggle raged, so furiously that De Soto fought standing in his stirrups, not having time to draw an arrow from his thigh. Successive waves of red men swept over the little company, but St. Jago rode the heavens on a white horse, calling encouragement, and as the sun fell from sight victory perched on the banners of Spain.

The flimsy huts, set on fire, turned the village into a furnace, and men, women and children perished in the flames or were spitted on the lances of the blood-mad companeros.

Victory indeed, but at what a cost! Many of De Soto's bravest and best lay dead, the living were sore wounded, and the flight of the bearers had not only lost them clothes, supplies, medicines, and booty, but worst of all, even their dice and playing cards.

At this dark hour came a messenger with word that the ships were in Pensacola Bay. That way lay safety and comfort, the ease and dignity of his command in Cuba where the Lady Isabella waited in all her young loveliness, while northern marshes held hardship, danger and the daily threat of death.

To return, however, was to admit defeat, and facing away from the sea, De Soto set forth on another hunt for golden Chisca.

A man! Cortes cajoled and befooled his mutineers; Pizarro lied and intrigued, but here was one who ruled his lawless spirits by sheer force of character. Alone with them in a trackless wilderness, without gold and jewels to end their bitter disappointments, he lashed them to obedience as though he sat in Seville with the king's might at his back, not one daring to mutter as he scourged them with his bold, intolerant eye.

"Presume not upon any rank you may possess," he told them, standing slim and graceful as his drawn blade, "for I will take the head of him who does not do his duty."

No matter how fast they marched, tidings of Maubila went ahead and every defile was an ambush; Indians dropped from trees to engage in a death grapple or slipped from the underbrush to rip a horse's belly; game fled at the noise of fighting and berries and persimmons were their food.

It was a tattered, famished band that went into winter quarters on the upper Yazoo, but to their credit, they did not cringe under misfortune.

The Chickasaws, reinforced by neighboring tribes, were finally strong enough to strike, and on a wild March night the Spaniards woke to find their huts in flames, and as they dashed forth into the storm, half-armed, half-naked, flint-tipped darts struck them down.

"But God," boasts the Gentleman of Elvas, "who chastiseth His own as He pleases, and in the greatest wants and perils hath them in His hand, shut the eyes of the Indians."

The riderless horses, plunging everywhere in mad panic, were thought to carry cavaliers, and the Chickasaws fled before them. Everything that had been saved from Maubila was lost in this last disaster, but reverses seemed only to tap new wells of courage in De Soto.

Rude forges re-tempered swords, steel stirrups were beaten into lance heads and ash trees gave new shafts; shields were made from hides, clothes from skins and grasses, a vision of the Holy Virgin strengthened their hearts, and April saw them marching across Mississippi, bearing always to the north.

Balboa waved back his men that he alone might have first view of the Pacific, but the Gentleman of Elvas makes no mention of the emotion that De Soto must have felt when he came to the banks of the Father of Waters and beheld that mighty flood.

To the weary Gentleman, at least, it was merely another river to cross. The useless slave chains were beaten into bolts and rude ferries were built, but dawning hope died quickly when they saw the poverty-stricken Indian villages on the other shore.

Captives, however, repeated the lie of gold to the north, and off they staggered, wading waist deep in cypress swamps, wasted by fevers and harried by savages whose pirogues skimmed the sullen pools like water moccasins.

Swift forays netted prisoners now and then, and the wretches were sent ahead as the white man's heralds. Whatever De Soto's own despair as the bitter days went by, no man was privileged to see a lowering of that proud crest nor was his hand less heavy and assured.

"What now!" he reproached his grumbling soldiers when they dared at last to talk of home. "Having it in your power to become lords in a vast and noble land, do you prefer Spain and the lives of base dependents? No one shall leave this country until we have conquered it."

Gone now were his dreams of gold and gems, and in this challenge to his men there is evidence that he was beginning to see that the wealth of the New World was in its broad streams and fertile soil. If so, it was a vision that came too late.

Swinging through southern Missouri and eastern Oklahoma, De Soto pitched his winter camp on the banks of the Arkansas near Fort Smith. Several restful months repaired the ravages of the ghastly march in some degree. "Humped-backed cows," as they called the buffalo, gave them ample food and skins for covering.

But even the Iron Captain realized the impossibility of further wandering. Of the proud array that had set forth with him from Havana three years before, less than half remained, and these were worn and wasted.

Return was compulsory. Strangely enough, almost at the same time a similar tragedy was working to its grim conclusion farther north, for Francisco Vasquez de Cornado, starting from Mexico, had gone as far as Nebraska in his vain search for the Seven Cities of Cibola.

Reaching the Mississippi once again, after a terrible journey, De Soto felt himself sickening to his death. "Deep was his despondency," writes the Gentleman of Elvas, and who shall say that there was not excuse for his despair? What of his wife, stripped of fortune to finance this mad venture?

And the shame of failure, for in his following there was none with enough vision and faith to make the emperor see that this land of mighty forests, shining rivers and fertile plains was a possession more to be prized than all the gold of Mexico and Peru!

When he knew the end to be at hand De Soto called his men together and, out of his knowledge of their fierce, contentious natures, named Luis Moscoso as his successor; then, swearing all to obedience and thanking them for their loyalty, he pulled the skin coverlet over his face and died, old and worn at forty-two.

Five slaves, three horses and some swine composed the estate of this man who but nine years before had sailed from Peru with a fortune in gold and silver bars, precious metals curiously carved and great, gleaming emeralds.

They buried him at night that the Indians might not know his grave, but the keen eyes of the bearers marked the fresh turned earth, and when darkness fell again Moscoso had the body carried down to the Mississippi's edge.

Working by touch, not daring to show a light, they took a huge tree trunk, half hollowed by native boat builders, and packed the gaunt body in soft skins. Sealing the whole as best they could, a push gave it to the current, and the wind in the trees joined with their sobs for requiem.

An epic of lost opportunity! Had Hernando de Soto come of a race that loved the soil, he could have changed the history of the New World, for all of the rich sweep of America was in his grasp to have and to hold. It was the tragedy of Spain, however, that her hawk-faced adventures saw wealth only in gold and silver, and scorned to plough except with swords.

JANUARY in California History

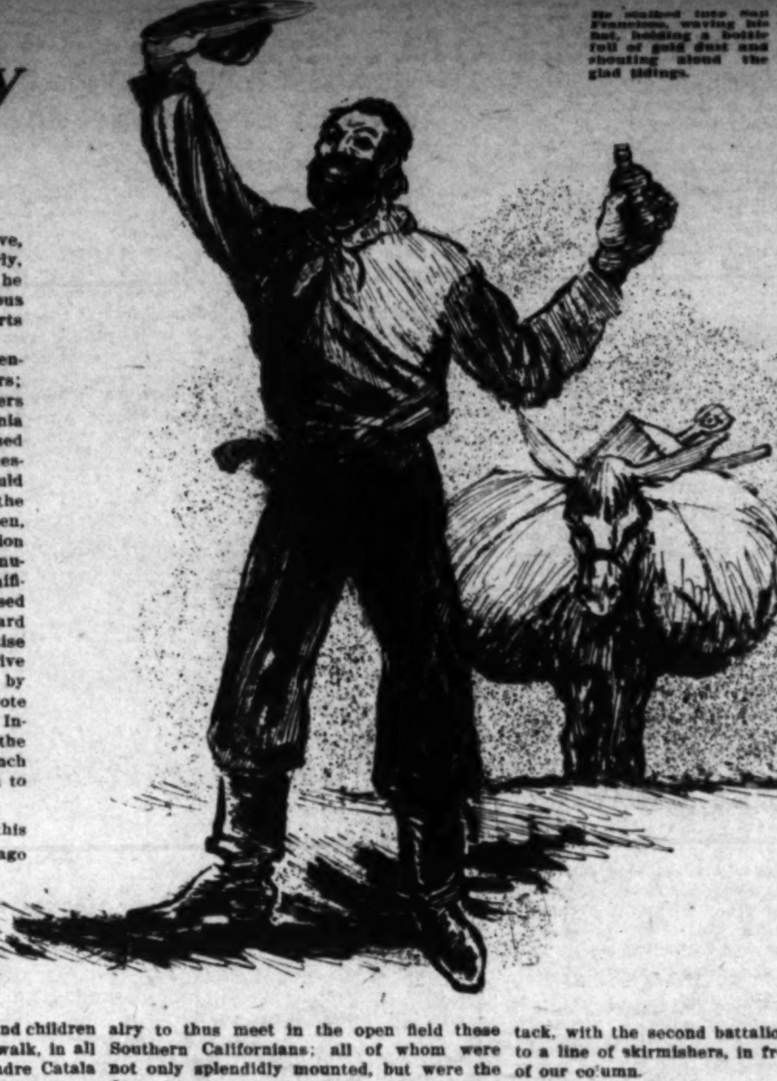
By George Wycherley Kirkman

Drawing by Ralph Criswell



He stalked into San Francisco, waving his hat, holding a bottle full of gold dust and shouting aloud the glad tidings.

TO SAVE California by stopping the southward advance of Russia along the Pacific Coast, Spain had decided to immediately found a military post (presidio) and two missions on the bay now called San Francisco Bay; and thus the Presidio of San Francisco and the Mission Dolores had been founded there in 1776, the same year as our Battle of Lexington.

The Santa Clara valley was then studded with numerous Indian villages, and its broad and fertile plains were covered by huge oaks and watered by many sparkling springs. Hence, a site for the second mission was soon located in the northern part of the valley, not far from the bay; and here on January 12, 1777, was founded the Mission of Santa Clara of Assisi, the spiritual sister of San Francisco (St. Francis.) The erection of these missions and the presidio was, therefore, a historical event of world-wide importance, and had the most tremendous consequences to our country, and especially to California.

Earnest and cheery Padre Joseph Murguia was the architect of this mission church; and he set to work with his Indian wards to build it, toiling with his own hands at setting adobes, shaping the timbers, and overseeing operations. When it was completed in 1784, Father Serra praised it as being the best mission church so far built in California. Poor Padre Murguia had put his best, and overly spent himself, in the building of it; and he died only four days before its formal dedication and was buried in this beloved temple of his, into which he had fairly built himself. Nunc dimittis—might well have been his epitaph.

Here two faithful friars from Catalonia in old Spain, Catala and Viader, looked after their Indians for thirty-seven years.

Huge and powerful, but with a big and kindly heart, and an abounding faith evidenced by the enormous crucifix that hung from his girdle, Padre Viader toiled in the vineyard of the Lord and the fields of man so efficiently that he made the mission famous for its agriculutral excellence; and he acquired amused renown in carriageless California by inventing a low two-wheeled contraption, in which he rode about the lordly mission domains in ease, if not in state.

Padre Catala was almost a medieval saint, somewhat like Father Junipero Serra himself, in that he mortified his flesh by scourging himself, and practicing like austerities that gave him the by-name of "El Santo"—The Saint. No man ever saw a smile upon his stern visage; but, though he shunned the presence of women, and even averted his eyes from these daughters of Eve, yet he loved little children dearly, and it was mainly for them that he devised the Christmas religious plays so dear to the pious hearts of Spanish America.

The mission was noted for its generous hospitality to all wayfarers; and hence all the famous travelers and explorers who visited California in those early days, always praised it. Also, its splendid Indian orchestra was famous; and nothing could exceed the astonishment of the French explorer De Mofras when, at a Sunday's service in this mission church, he beheld these Indian musicians gorgeously clad in magnificent French uniforms, purchased from some trading vessel, and heard them burst out in the Marseillaise and the ancient French air of "Vive Henri Quatre"—played here, by these redmen, in a land so remote from France! These tunes the Indians had learned by ear from the airs played by a little old French barrel-organ, that had been given to this mission by an early padre.

The most famous feature of this mission—whose old church long ago disappeared—was its lovely Alameda. When the town of San Jose was founded, in 1777, its inhabitants had no church of their own; so they used to attend services at this mission. Taking pity on the women and children who had to take this three-mile walk, in all the heat and dust of summer, Padre Catala in 1800 ordered his Indian wards to plant on each side of the road a row of alamos (poplars)—a word from which the Spanish alamedas derived their name—extending from the mission clear to San Jose. These trees grew up, reached a lofty height, and their branches joined to form a vast green archway, which later became the favorite promenade of San Joseans, and the admiration of all Californians and travelers.

This remarkable padre had an uncanny gift of second-sight; and in such wizard-fashion could he peer into the future, that many called him "El Profeto"—The Prophet. Amongst his most famous prophecies made in those early days, he foretold the future discovery of gold in California; the advent of us Americans into it; its loss to the people sprung from Spain; the building of San Francisco; and the future destruction of that metropolis by the dread demons of fire and earthquake!

Everyone of these startling prophecies of his was fulfilled, many years later; and he rightly foresaw that the most portentous to California, and the most fateful to our nation, of all future events, was the discovery of gold in California by the Americans.

Battle of the San Gabriel

January 8, 1847. In 1846 the American forces under Commodore Stockton had taken possession of all California, without firing a shot; and Stockton had then gone to San Francisco, leaving a small American garrison in Los Angeles, and other little detachments in Southern California. However, Los Angeles rose in revolt and besieged and drove out our garrison here under Captain Gillespie. Soon all of Southern California was up in arms, and had again hoisted the Mexican flag, after expelling our forces in this region. A naval force had then landed at San Pedro, and marched toward Los Angeles, to try and recapture it—only to be halted by the Battle of Dominguez Rancho, and forced to return to San Pedro. Stockton himself came to San Pedro, but was deceived by a Moorish trick of the revolting Californians into believing that the latter were present in great force; so he had sailed down to San Diego, and there organized an expedition that was to march overland to Los Angeles, the center of armed resistance to the American conquest of California.

The Californians had driven all their horses and cattle inland, thus handicapping our forces, who had neither mounts nor cavalry to thus meet in the open field these Southern Californians; all of whom were not only splendidly mounted, but were the finest horsemen in the world. And they had given sufficient proof of their prowess by their three defeats of the Americans at Chino, Dominguez Rancho and San Pasqual. But, thanks to the native Californians of San Diego, Stockton secured cattle for food and draft purposes; and on December 29, 1846, he had set out from San Diego with nearly six-hundred men, six guns, and his baggage train, over the rough road that then afforded the only practicable wagon route to Los Angeles.

It was a long hard march for the sailors and marines, especially as the draft cattle were so weak that our men had to lend a hand in hauling the baggage wagons up hill and over sandy stretches; but our cheerful gallant tars won through handily, and arrived safely at the Santa Ana River, without encountering any enemy. Setting out again, on the morning of January 8, 1847, Stockton's forces marched over an open country; and about 2 p. m. they sighted the San Gabriel River, at a place called by the Californians the Paso de Bartolo. Several bodies of cavalry soon appeared on both of Stockton's flanks here, and the enemy plainly intended to dispute the passage of the San Gabriel by our forces—which brought on quite a spectacular battle, as related by Brevet-Major Emory, United States Army, who was in this fight, and wrote an official report upon it.

The San Gabriel River here was about knee-deep and a hundred yards wide, with a level approach on the side toward which our forces were advancing, but with a bank about fifty feet high on the other side—upon which the enemy now posted four small cannon, within point-blank range of the river-ford that our troops were now approaching, unchecked by the scattering fire opened upon them by the Californian sharpshooters posted in the thickets that fringed the river on the American side of this stream. Some two hundred fifty California lancers also now appeared to the right of their battery; and about as many more supported the left of their guns.

This position of the enemy was thus a very strong one; and to make the passage of the river still more perilous, the bottom of this stream is here sown with quicksands. It was therefore a desperate undertaking to try and cross the river, but Stockton ordered his troops to advance; and gallantly did his sea soldiery rush forward to the attack, with the second battalion deployed into a line of skirmishers, in front of the rest of our column.

No sooner were the latter in the middle of the river, than the enemy opened up on them with grape and round-shot from his cannon that fairly made the water boil around our men; but the only effect of this was to hasten the passage over of these undaunted sailors and marines, who dashed through the stream, gained its farther shore, and immediately opened up a fire from their muskets upon the enemy.

Stockton had thus gained a precarious foothold on the farther bank of the river, but he needed his cannon-fire to silence the enemy's guns; so he now ordered our artillery to cross the river.

Quickly our blue-jackets unlimbered the guns, dutifully yanked them across said river, and placed them on the farther bank, from which our American cannon soon thundered their iron message of doom to the foe. So rapid and accurate was their fire, that that of the enemy's guns became erratic and gradually slackened; owing partly to the poor quality of the remaining gunpowder of the Californians, who had manufactured it themselves (for lack of any other) at the Mission San Gabriel, using saltpetre brought from the desert.

Under cover of this infantry and artillery fire of ours, our wagon-train and beef cattle were gotten across the San Gabriel River, after tremendous exertions by our panting men, who had just repulsed a very bold cavalry charge made by the enemy upon the rear of our column.

Thus assembled on the enemy's side of the river, our troops now made a general advance against the foe; but when our men were about half way to the hill, the Californians made a furious charge on our left flank, at the same time threatening our right flank. Our first and second battalions were instantly thrown into squares, to meet this danger; and after firing a round or two at the enemy, the latter was driven off. Our right wing was also ordered to form a square—the usual infantry formation designed to repel attack by cavalry—but as the Californians confronting us here, now seemed to hesitate, this order was revoked, and our first battalion charged the hill, which seemed to be the enemy's chief center of resistance. But, on reaching this coign of vantage, our troops were greatly surprised to find that the enemy had completely abandoned it!

The Californians withdrew from the

A HALL-CLOSET COMEDY

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By Mabel Herbert Urner

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"YOU'RE always having tonsillitis," Carrie took the chair by the bed. "Why don't you have them out?"

"This is the first time in over three years," Helen turned her heated pillow. "Bobbie, don't do that! You jar the bed."

"Don't, precious—Aunt Helen's sick. Run in the other room."

"Gimme my train!" tugging at the blue-papered package in his mother's lap.

"No, darling, we're only staying a few minutes. Let go of that!"

"Why, can't you stay for dinner?" invited Helen, fervently hoping they wouldn't.

"No, we're taking the six-ten," glancing at her wrist-watch. "Only eight more days—and a world of things to do!"

"I hope I'm well enough to see you off," wishing her old kimono was out of sight. "Your boat sails at noon, doesn't it?"

"Yes, we're sending our trunks the day before. Don't whistle in the house, Bobbie. Oh, while I'm here, I want to get those things. Warren said you'd lend us a steamer rug and a suit case."

"Yes, of course," tightening the compress on her throat. "But I couldn't get them now. You'll be in town again?"

"I can't leave everything to the last. You needn't get up. Let that cat alone, pettie! Just tell me where they are."

Visions of Carrie rummaging through her closet—prying, criticising.

"I don't know just where that steamer rug is," evaded Helen. "Bobbie, please! I'd have to look for it."

"Nonsense, I can find it!" peeling off her gloves. "Oh, here's Warren! Just in time!"

"Hello, Carrie!" greeting his sister first. "All set for the big trip?" Then, turning to the bed, "How's the throat, Kitten?"

"Better. It doesn't hurt so to talk."

"That's the ticket. Here's that book you wanted," dropping his package on the bed.

"What'd you bring me, Uncle Warren?"

"Didn't know you'd be here, Skeezix," swinging him up by the elbows. "Make up for it next time."

"Now about that steamer rug," persisted Carrie. "Warren, you can get it for me. And you said something about a roll—"

"Yes, we've a great steamer roll," sitting on the edge of the bed. "Holds a lot. Wouldn't travel without it. Where is it? Hall closet?"

"On one of the upper shelves. I don't know which—you'll just have to look."

"I'll help him," Carrie rose with alacrity.

"You wanted some guide-books—better get those now," to keep her out of the closet. "The big bookcase—right hand side. Look over them and take what you want."

"Where the devil d'you say that roll was?" bellowed Warren from the hall.

"Bobbie, tell Uncle Warren to come in here. I can't call with this throat."

"You gotta come here!" yelled Bobbie, not troubling to leave his train, finally nagged from his mother. "Aunt Helen can't holler good!"

"No steamer roll out there," from the door. "Don't see the rug, either."

"Done up in paper. Dear, you'll have to get the step-ladder. It may be on the top shelf—way back."

"Let me look," Carrie returning with half a dozen guide-books.

"No, no—I want to tell you about these guides. That 'Your Week in Paris' is particularly good. Let's see—where are the restaurants? I marked several," trying to divert her while Warren continued his search.

With so little storage space, everything crowded into the hall closet. Carrie's big suburban home rich with closets and an attic—easy to keep in order.

"Here's Florence, Berlin, Southern Germany—" Carrie looking over the guides. "Venice, Vienna—no, we won't get to Austria. Nothing on London?"

"I've given them all away. We know London so well—"

"How in blazes can you find anything out there?" Warren again at the door. "Way that junk's packed in—"

"Oh, I'll have to get up after all," reaching for her kimono. "I might've known—you never can find anything."

"Let me!" dropping the guidebooks. "I know I can—"

"No, no, Carrie," fumbling for her slippers. "You'd have to unwrap all the packages."

"Don't you mark them? I always label everything plainly," with her exasperating superiority.

Helen trying to ignore her criticism. Too weak for altercations.

"Just you show me where—I'll get it," Warren followed her out.

"Oh, you've dragged down all those things!" shrinking from the chaos of his careless search.

The floor piled with boxes and bundles, contents tumbled out.

"How in thunder could I tell what was what? Way you cram things in—"

"With my throat—to have to get up for this!" tremulously. "She's coming in town again—can't she get them then?"

"Oh, well, guess she's anxious to get packed. They don't go to Europe every year as we do—more of a trip for her," kicking a hat-box out of his way. "Here, tell me what you want. Don't you climb up there!"

"I have to. I can't see—it must be way back."

Weak and shaky, she mounted the ladder while Warren held it.

"Oh, it's so hot up here!" faintly. "Sickening!"

"You come down! You're in no condition to be climbing around."

But Helen, with feverish, intensity, shifting bandboxes and bundles.

"Here's the rug," almost toppling over as she tugged at the bulky package.

"Let it alone—I'll get it. You come on down—never mind the rest."

"Good gracious, had a cyclone out here?"

At Carrie's derisive voice, Helen's hold tightened on the dusty shelf.

"If you'd only mark everything, as I do! You wouldn't have to drag—"

"Most of them are marked!" Hot waves of dizziness.

"Oh, those old lampshades!" peering up at the crowded shelves. "No wonder you're cluttered up if you keep trash like that."

"The frames are perfectly good. I'm going to recover them."

"And all those old magazines! What're you saving those for?"

"Salvation Army," trying not to scream. "When I get enough, I have them call."

"What're all those things on the top shelf? Not old picture frames?"

"Carrie, if you want that roll—please let me find it!"

"Well, you needn't be so touchy. Now look at your blouse," jerking Bobbie out of the closet. "We'll go in the library where we won't bother Aunt Helen."

"Here, we've had enough of this!" exploded Warren, still holding the ladder. "You're coming down right now!"

Dizzy and tremulous, she pushed back a toppling box. Couldn't find the roll Carrie—and the near-the-ceiling heat—Sick—faint—everything reeling—

Her foot slipped—

The next second Warren was carrying her in to the bed.

"Told you not to get up there! Twist your ankle? Kitten—you're not hurt?"

She didn't answer. Couldn't. Inner hysterics. One word and she would burst into tears.

"Now what is it?" Carrie rushed in. "She didn't fall?"

"Would if I hadn't been there to catch her. You're all right, Kitten?"

Helen nodded—her face in the pillow.

"She'd no business climbing up there," his voice still tense.

"I wanted to look for it," self-righteously, "but she wouldn't let me."

"Whole week before you sail, Carrie—you didn't need that roll this minute."

"I don't need it at all!" bristling. "I can buy a new one."

"Now don't be a fool, Carrie. We'll find it and send it out. Helen's all upset now. You'd better take Bobbie and run along. Never mind the guide-books—I'll send them all in the suit case. Anything else you want?"

"No. If I'd known there'd be such a furore—I wouldn't have asked for anything. "Oh, not a quarter of six?" at chimes from the hall. "We must make that six-ten! Come, Bobbie—quick!"

"Don't wanna go home yet! Wanna stay for dinner."

"No, Aunt Helen's sick—she doesn't want us. Pull up your socks and come along. You'll be all right in the morning, Helen—you get upset over the least little thing. You ought to cultivate poise. I'll call you up tomorrow—"

The excited scurry of their getting off.

Her hot face in the pillow, with tremulous relief Helen heard the door slam.

Warren striding back to her. The springs creaked as he sat on the bed.

"All right, Kitten?" squeezing her hand.

Sobbing now. Letting herself go.

"Now don't do that!" a note of alarm. "Make your throat worse. Shouldn't have let you climb up there!"

"Cultivate poise!" quiveringly. "To—to insist on those things—now! And—and criticising that closet—"

"Now don't you mind, Kitten—that's just her way. What're you looking for—a handkerchief? Carrie means all right. Here's mine."

Sobbing now. Sensing his anxiety. Wanting to make him show it—more! Craving demonstrations.

"Here, Kitten—nothing to cry about! What've you eaten today? What's that? Only orange juice? No wonder you're weak! Let me get you something—"

"No, no, I don't want a thing! I—I just want to be held— You do care, don't you?" irrelevantly.

"Care? slipping his arm about her. "Course I do, Kitten. Now stop crying."

"Much as you—ever did?"

"Whole lot more!"

Silly—she knew. Foolishly sentimental. Yet his tenderness so rare—

Blissfully snuggling against him as he awkwardly stroked her hair.

Still sobbing. Reveling in her unpent emotions.

Just then she could have hugged Carrie. Worth it all to have Warren indulge her like this. Always she must suppress her emotionalism—he loathed tears. Only when she was ill—when he was really concerned—did she dare give way. And oh, the luxury—the rare luxury of it!

PUZZLES

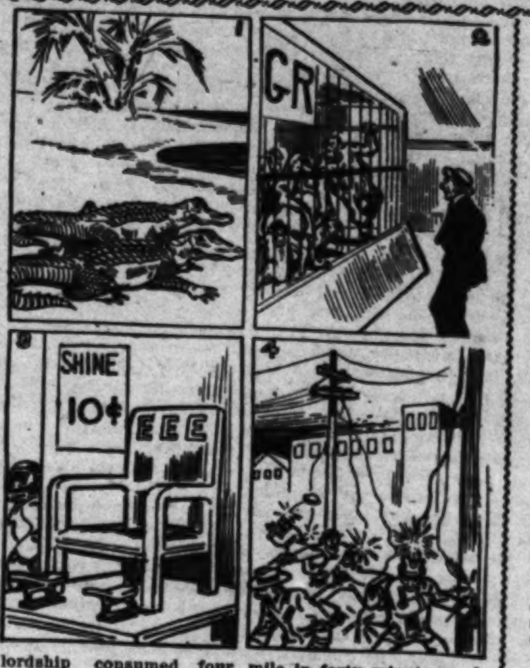
JUICY PUZZLES

Four kinds of luscious fruit are here served in rebus form. What are they?



NUMERICAL ENIGMA

My 4th, 5th and 12th letters spell a top-piece.

4, 7 and 19—a good feeder.

4, 11 and 9—the center of revolution.

5, 11 and 12—a humble abode.

4, 7 and 6—a carrier of units that go to make an edifice. My whole is one of Shakespeare's best-known plays.

Until they scented sizzling bacon cordial relations existed among the hounds.

When down South don't forget the corn cakes.

Four men of leisure issued from the hay-stack.

On his bass viol Andrew is more energetic than musical.

SUITING A GUEST

When Lord Wopping arrived in Mud Springs and inquired the way to a first-class hotel on the European plan, an old miner directed him as follows: "That shack on the corner is run by Dutch Louie, the clerk is a Swede, and a Chinaman does the cooking, so you will find everything strictly foreign."

Lord Wopping found that three meals at the hotel cost $1.50 more than a night's lodging, but his lordship consumed four meals per day, and at the end of the week his bill was for $87.50.

Our problem is to figure out how much he was charged per meal.

FLIVVERING UP AND DOWN

Charlie went up one mile in forty minutes and came down one mile in one minute. Therefore, he averaged a mile up and down in forty-one minutes. We may determine the distance to the hill's top by dividing 300 minutes, the time required for return trip, by forty-one. The answer is 7 and 13.41 miles.

COMPILED FOR THE TIMES SUNDAY MAGAZINE

Ready to Step

Success brings out a lot of leeches. One approached Gilda Gray, the popular dancer, with the avowed idea of making a touch. He said: "Would you care to join us in a new missionary movement?"

"I'm crazy to try it," gurgled Gilda, without cracking a smile. "Is it anything like the Charleston?"

Legal Defense

"Criminal trials are involved with so many technicalities, nowadays," said Attorney L. G. McCann, who at one time was a noted prosecuting attorney, "that unquestionably a great many criminals escape their just deserts. Leniency to women witnesses was largely responsible for the opening wedge; and precedent, the bugaboo of all trial lawyers, has done the rest.

"What could be more absurd than the testimony of Mike the Killer, rearrested shortly after doing time under the name of Jones?

" 'Now, Mr. Jones,' coos the prosecutor, 'isn't it true that you were released from the penitentiary only a month ago, after doing ten years for murder?"

"And Mr. Jones, alias Mike the Killer, who has read the newspapers, promptly answers: 'I don't remember.' "

Her Opportunity

Harry Carr, The Times Lancer, at last admits, privately, that there may be some hope for Hollywood. He had been bemoaning the fact that nobody did anything, knew anything or talked anything in Hollywood but motion pictures, but when introduced to a certain new and attractive starlet he took one more desperate chance and remarked:

"I met a most interesting chap the other day; he was a Buddhist."

"Oh, I'd so love to meet him!" gushed the starlet. "All my geraniums are wilting!"

Couldn't Fool Him

"Holidays," said Mrs. Jason Lindeman, the social worker, "are not merely vacation days. Each has its patriotic reminder and lesson, and, for the young folks especially, repictures some of the events that have led to the making of the nation.

"It is for this reason that we have launched the crusade to compel factories in certain cities to observe all the legal holidays. It helps in making good citizens. Too many of these sweatshop waifs, toiling year in and year out, seven days a week, never heard of Washington, or Lincoln, or Armistice Day. How could they?

"I asked a little colored lad to state what holiday he had in July.

" 'Neber had none,' he declared.

" 'Think hard,' I insisted. 'Of course you had one.'

" 'No'm,' he insisted, 'Ah don't hab to. Ain't nobody in mah fambly died fo' a long time.' "

Tin Soldier

Just after America entered the war, all sorts of amateur flyers were enlisting. One of these, who had been a member of some local military organization, presented himself to a grizzled old general officer noted for his very brusque manner.

The lad, in a brand new uniform, beautiful and useless, snapped into something that looked like a British salute once removed, and stammered: "Lieutenant Smith, Air Service, reporting for duty."

The general took one look and grunted: "Ninety-eight per cent Air, and two per cent Service."

Wasted Effort

Senator Borah was asked if he saw any solution to the French war debt problem in the recent financial changes in Paris. The Senator laughed.

"Really, I feel something like the politician in New York who was called upon by a charming young woman one day. She greeted him with a smile and asked:

" 'What's your opinion of the Child Labor Amendment?'

" 'Well, ma'am,' said the politician, 'it's this way. By the time they pass it, the kids will all be grown up, so there ain't any use passin' it.' "

Knew the Signs

"Cupid" Sparks once remarked: "A little bit more attention to home comforts would keep many husbands from wandering a-field. Most men, in order to hold their jobs in shop and office, literally have to make good. The wife, if she is keeping house, does not feel that she has to and her lack of one hundred per cent effort often leads to disaster.

"Too many wives are like Mrs. X. Her husband came home and found a wonderful dinner awaiting him, his favorite book and pipe ready, and his slippers and dressing gown conveniently laid out. He regarded them for a moment and then inquired:

" 'Well, my dear, how much is your account overdrawn this time?' "

Noncommittal

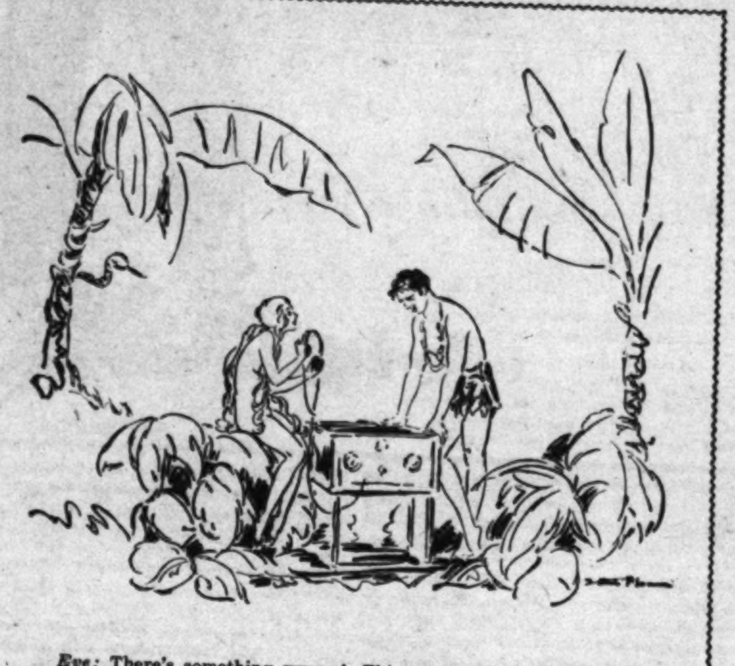
"Study, without observation and application, are of very little use," declared Prof. Jules Maynard. "Indeed, that is why so many business men are inclined to select employees who have had what they term 'practical experience.'

"Too many of our college boys are like the freshman who was on his way home after seeing one of the new shows, when he was accosted by an upper classman.

" 'How was the show?' the upper classman wanted to know.

"The frosh looked blank for a moment and then with no little indecision in his voice replied:

" 'I don't know. I haven't heard anyone say.' "



Eve: There's something wrong! This set oscillates too much.
Adam: Confound it! I wound that coil with a garter snake.

Regular Duck

"The public would not kick so much about the high price of labor, if that labor were efficient," said Walter Marchant of the Labor Statistics Bureau. "It really does seem that the average carpenter does not care what he does to the paint, and the paper hanger can wreck a polished floor with little or no trouble.

"Too many of our modern laborers are like the plumber who had spent nearly an hour at the kitchen sink. The lady of the house, peeping in on him, saw her kitchen floor flooded and shuddered. 'Dear, dear! Look at all that water,' she exclaimed.

" 'Oh, that's all right!' replied the plumber, 'I'm used to gettin' me feet wet.' "

Her Day Off

When Evelyn Edwards was a little girl, her Aunt Florence sent her to the store one Saturday afternoon, to buy some lace. After wrapping it up, the clerk said:

"There is one and a half yards of lace at ten cents a yard; how much does that come to?"

To which little Evelyn pertly replied:

"Well, I'm not going to tell. I have to study arithmetic all the rest of the week, and I'm not going to bother my head with it on Saturday."

No Use

The Keyes-Ryan feud led a well known city official to remark: "It reminds me of the little boy and the nurse girl.

" 'You mustn't ask so many delicate questions,' protested the nurse girl. Remember, Johnny, it was curiosity that killed the cat.'

" 'What was it the cat wanted to know?' demanded Johnny instantly."

Knew the Make

Walter Anthony, the music critic, had taken his car to the sanatorium for an overhauling. "And while you are about it," said Walter, "you might take out all the promiscuous squeaks."

"Listen, bo," was the reply. "This make of car don't have any promiscuous."

Good-by Fairies

"Young America is precocious," announced Mrs. Ellen Langley, the woman's clubs lecturer. "Not so very long ago, a dear, old fashioned lady was trying to teach her little grandchild to put his toys away when he was through playing with them.

" 'Bobby,' she said, 'let me tell you a story. Once upon a time there was a little boy who never put his toys away, so one day, etc. etc.—'

When she was finished, little Bobby said: 'Now grandma; I'll tell one. Once upon a time there was a cat—and it barked.' "

Wise Chink

"Domestic problems," said Dr. Stickney, noted settlement worker, "are by no means confined to America. Even staid, conservative China has them, as attested by the following story.

"A Chinese husband, returning home late from an exciting game of loto, found his wife waiting for him, with the customary femine fire in her eyes.

" 'And where hast thou been all this evening?' she demanded.

" 'A clever wife,' temporized the husband, 'never asks what her estimable husband has been doing.'

" 'And yet,' countered the wife, 'a clever man may ask his wife—'

" 'Nay!' interrupted the husband. 'Oh my unobservant one, a clever man never has a wife!' "

Let 'Em Lay

When Dot Adams married Harold Burcss of the Hoot Gibson Western Features, she plunged into a cook book with enthusiasm. But the cook book did not tell her everything. One day Dot said to the grocery boy:

"Those eggs you brought yesterday were very small."

"I don't know how that could be," protested the boy.

"Maybe the farmer took them out of the nest too soon," suggested Dot.

Worthy Cause

One day, while House Peters was out on location making a picture for M.G.M., he demanded ten cups of black coffee. They were brought and to the surprise of the waiter, he drank them down, one after the other.

"My goodness! You sure do like coffee!" the amazed waiter exclaimed.

"I sure do," said Peters, "when I drink ten cups of this stuff to get a little!"

Try and Collect

A man took a valuable watch to the jeweler's to be repaired. The watchmaker debated about the price of the repairs, but finally agreed that the charge should be not more than one-fifth of what the watch cost the man.

In a week's time the man called for the watch. He put it in his pocket and turned to leave the shop.

"Just a moment," shouted the watchmaker. "You haven't paid me one-fifth of what the watch cost you."

"Oh," said the man, jubilantly, "that watch cost me six months' hard labor."

Generosity

Al Jolson has at last discovered a generous Scotchman. He actually advertised that as it was the Christmas season he had decided to present each and every customer with a cigar lighter and coat hanger.

Jolson did not need either one of these items but curiosity took him to the shop. He made a purchase and received his gift package, neatly done up. When he opened it, he discovered that it contained a nail and a match.

Last Straw

Two men by the same name in a little Ohio town were always getting confused. One was a minister and the other a lawyer and the lawyer was constantly being annoyed with calls intended for the minister. Night after night he would get phone calls from couples wishing to get married, until it got on his nerves.

One night, close onto twelve, the lawyer got the usual call. "Would you mind marrying us tonight?"

"Yes!" shouted the lawyer, "I'm busy writing the other Smith's Sunday sermon."

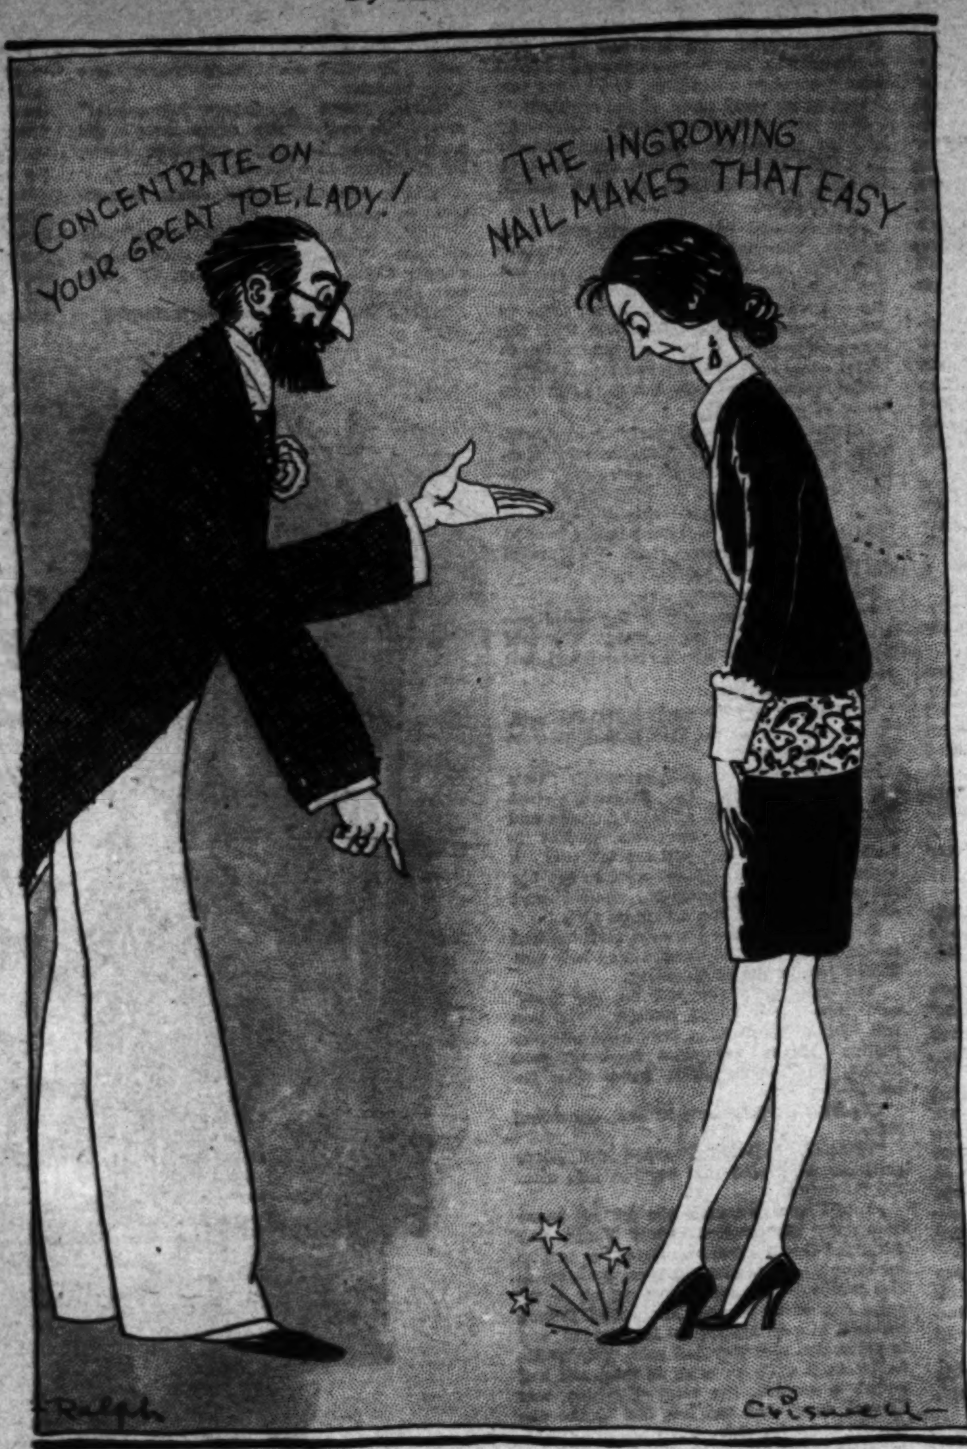
MIND OVER MATTER

By Alma Whitaker



CONCENTRATE ON YOUR GREAT TOE, LADY!
THE INGROWING NAIL MAKES THAT EASY
Ralph
Criswell

"NOW just for a moment," said the professor, "I will ask you to all concentrate your thought upon the great toe on your right foot. Wiggle it in your shoes, develop a picture of it in your mind."

Of course we all obediently did as we were told. We all suddenly became toe conscious. All the right-foot great toes in that audience began to have special feelings of their very own. Any that were bunion or in-growing-nail ridden began to ache like the dickens.

The professor smiled with superiority. "That's right. Most of you had forgotten you had toes. Now you are all peculiarly aware of the fact. You find yourselves wiggling those great toes. You are imagining all sorts of sensations about them. That, my friends, is a simple example of the power of thought. When your toes are not in your mind, you cannot feel them, there is nothing the matter with them. Toes that were in blissful oblivion a few minutes ago, are now actively interesting. Your minds are creating every sensation in those toes of yours . . ."

The professor's lecture was designed to teach us how to make our minds control our matter. But he didn't tell us how to make our minds control our minds. Many of us have heard the story of the man who was given a formula for making gold out of mud. But there was one catch in it. It would only work if he could keep his mind from thinking about a white bear. The fellow ended up in a psychopathic ward shouting that he was being pursued by herds of white bears.

But even that story is an awful example of the power of thought. The most powerful people in the world are those who can control their thoughts. Everything in life is born in thought. There never could have been a railroad or a great building or a work of art or even a fancy bazaar pincushion, if it had not first been born in someone's mind, if someone had not thought about it.

But our thoughts play such tricks on us. Some days mine behave beautifully. I am on the top of the world. Everyone connected with me is charming. I am gloriously capable of doing anything well that I undertake. The world is mine, everybody loves and admires me. The future lies ahead bright and glorious. My troubles don't amount to a row of pins, I can manage the lot . . .

And the very next day, without my condition and affairs having changed one iota, all the world looks black. Everyone connected with me is stupid and selfish. I am a dub, a useless barnacle. Nothing I do amounts to anything. Nobody loves me, everyone thinks I am a silly, vain creature. The future looks dismal. What am I going on living for? I am beset by troubles on all sides, I can never cope with them, oh, dear, oh, dear . . . and every trifle looms like a horrid black bogey.

Yet everything is just the same as it was yesterday . . . nothing but my thoughts are different. I remember the professor, give myself a good shaking, tell myself it all exists in my imagination . . . that the only remedy is to change my thoughts.

That's all. It is so simple. Just banish all black bogeys from one's mind and concentrate on something pleasant and successful and glorious and charming. But precious few of us can do that without a little outside help.

All the same we instinctively know that it is our thoughts that are all powerful. Even the most ignorant of mothers promptly sets herself to get the baby's mind off his sore place when he falls down and hurts himself. We know if we can distract his attention and make him smile, his sore place will be forgotten and not hurt any more. Millions of mothers from time immemorial having been "kissing the place to make it well" with huge success.

Yet even the smartest among us have not learned the secret of kissing our own sore places and making them well, and distracting our own attention.

Yet such is the mighty power of thought that, when we are feeling depressed and persecuted and ill-treated, if we can just smile and sort of mentally kiss ourselves, the healing begins right away.

I have a friend who confided in me that he had once lain awake all night wishing he could murder his wife. It was, he said, absolutely terrifying to harbor such thoughts, which began to take on such a dreadful power of reality.

"If I had encouraged myself in that vein of thought an hour longer, I should surely have done some horrible deed. But I got up and walked for miles, exhausting myself, and finally got home again in a disheveled condition. My wife, very reasonably, was most provoked with me and said so . . . if she had spoken to me like that when my evil thoughts were raging, I should surely have killed her. As it was the dog came and licked my hand, and the canary started trilling in its cage. Those two trifles distracted me for a second, and then she said "You look dreadfully tired; are you ill?" I said I guessed I was. She was immediately most concerned for me . . . and before very long I was thanking my stars for such a loving wife. For years since I have shuddered at intervals at the memory of that awful night. What queer force within us can prompt such hideous thoughts?" he said.

The psychologists have all sorts of explanations to offer, but they do harp so on the "subconscious" which they imply is embedded in us when we are too little to have any control over it. Yet there seem to be only two sources of thought—that coming from our subconscious and that from outside influences.

Although the subconscious gets most of the blame for our thoughts, the outside influences seem to be infinitely the most powerful. The professor could make us all envisage and think about our big toes, the lick of a dog and the thrill of a canary could save a man from murder by turning his thought . . .

And we all know what a marvelous tonic it proves when we are feeling depressed and crooked, if someone pays us a jolly compliment. It changes our thoughts into a happier current right way, and we actually look better forthwith. It works contrariwise when someone tells us we are looking wretched . . . we promptly feel sick. But it is quite horrible to be so susceptible to suggestion.

Quite obviously the most crying need of humans is the ability to exert mind over mind, before we can hope to exert mind over matter successfully. We have to have the sort of minds that will promptly recognize an evil thought when it pops into our heads, and squash it. But judgment, good morals, fine scruples are mind too. It is awful to think of us all walking around with tremendous powers like that which we cannot control. No wonder Solomon prayed for wisdom.

Some modern religions are concentrating upon cultivating this power of thought within us, and even materialistic M.D.'s instinctively use it in a vague sort of way, as when they admit that a certain patient has "lost the will to live." And this hypnotism that they have successfully used in the place of anesthetics in surgical operations is another concession to the power of thought. Even ether does not stop our minds working, it only gives us weird dreams—makes us think about something else while the operation is being performed, and then we don't feel it.

The clever modern advertisers understand this power of thought when they set out to make us think about their goods. Once they can get their product in our minds—make us, for instance, "automobile conscious"—we surely buy.

In the same way nations become "war conscious," "class conscious," "crime conscious"—somebody's original thought had the power to start this all-powerful consciousness that makes us do such wrong or silly things. It ought to be just as easy to make us peace-conscious, honor-conscious, virtue-conscious, brave-conscious . . . wisdom-conscious.

Yet the psychologists tell us we are more collectively and individually fear-conscious than any other. Nearly all the ugly, cruel, despicable and wicked things in life come through this fear-consciousness. Perhaps some of this comes from the old religious creeds founded upon the exploitation of human fear. It may take centuries more to get it out of our systems. Perhaps one of the first essentials of getting our minds to control our minds properly is bravery, beginning with the pluck to fight our own mean thoughts.

If that professor could make a huge audience concentrate on their own great toe and, for a spell at least, make us consider it the most interesting and important part of our anatomy, make us conscious of every little vein and twitch in it (and really, he was not a very bright professor at that!) it certainly ought to be easily possible for us to make ourselves think the sort of thoughts that make for well-being, righteousness, happiness, success.

But oh, dear, it is so much easier to think about white bears than not to think about them . . .

Moods

Where the gray sky meets the waters
In a rush of driving rain;
There the seagulls whirl and circle,
Then go swooping out again.

On the rocky shore the breakers
Race and tumble, mad with glee,
Wind tossed, storm tossed, mighty ocean,
Foam capped, restless, surging sea.

Where the blue sky meets the waters
On the far horizon's brim,
There the seagulls whirl and circle,
And chase the sunbeams home again.

On the rocky shore the breakers
Softly tripping, gently flow;
Cooling, murmuring, loving waters,
Bliss above, and peace below.

MARGARET V. PAGE.

Fallowby, who I have no doubt will give you the fullest information."

"There is no person named Mrs. Leslie Fallowby on the ship," said the purser, and Jeremiah stared at him. "The young lady," went on the officer, "states that she is your secretary, and that she is traveling in that capacity."

"My secretary?" said Jeremiah incredulously.

"She says she is your secretary, engaged by your wife."

Jeremiah sat down with a thump.

"Say that again," he said.

The obliging purser repeated his tremendous tidings.

"Now I don't want any trouble with you, Mr. Fallowby," he said, not unkindly, "or with your wife. I'm going to show you a copy of the wireless we have received from London, and you'll understand that the game is up."

"Which game?" asked Jeremiah faintly.

The purser took a sheet of paper from his pocket, evidently a typewritten copy of a radio that had been received that day. It ran:

> "To Captain, London Castle: Believe passenger named John Frimley and his wife are traveling under assumed name on your ship. They booked Suite No. 17, but they may be traveling separately to avoid detection. Frimley escaped our officers sent to arrest him at Waterloo and has not been tracen. He is a tall, good-looking man, clean shaven, may wear horn-rimmed spectacles . . ."

(At this point Jeremiah quickly removed the reading glasses he had been wearing when the purser came into the stateroom.)

> "His wife is pretty, looks younger than she is. If any persons answering this description or occupying Suite 17, hand them to Portuguese police, Funchal, to await extradition."

Jeremiah read the document twice.

"Your wife is already under guard in her cabin," said the purser, "and there'll be a master of arms on duty outside your stateroom to see that you do not attempt to leave until the Portuguese authorities arrive."

Jeremiah gasped at him.

"Wife, wife is what . . .?"

The purser waved a majestic hand and left the cabin before Mr. Jeremiah Fallowby began the exercise of the colorful vocabulary which he had acquired in his travels.

It was in the bare and whitewashed office of a Portuguese police officer that he saw again Miss Mary Perella. He expected her to be carried in, a pallid and wilting wreck whose nights had been made sleepless by the thought of her tragic sorrow; but it was a very healthy and indignant girl who came across the uncovered floor toward him.

"What is the meaning of this, Mr. Frimley?" she asked. Reproach was rather in her eyes than in her voice. "It isn't true that you are a jewel thief?"

"My name is Fallowby," protested Jeremiah.

"You told me your wife was on board and she isn't."

He guessed that this was his real offense.

"I never said my wife was anywhere," said Jeremiah loudly. "I was talking about my aunt, Mrs. Leslie Fallowby. You told me you were her secretary."

"I did nothing of the kind," she stormed. "I told you I was your secretary—that your wife had engaged me."

"But I've never had a wife!" he wailed.

"Attention!" The fat man behind the desk boomed the word. "I know English too well! Now you spik my questions when I ask them!"

"Fire ahead," said Jeremiah recklessly.

He slept that Christmas Eve in a stone cell which was very dark and very unpleasant in other respects. He had no acquaintance with the Portuguese language, but he spoke Spanish rather fluently and he learned that the girl had been taken to a convent. The British vice-consul had been requisitioned, but that worthy was not in Funchal. So Jeremiah dispatched long and vehement cables to London . . . and might have saved himself the trouble.

In the early hours of the morning came a wire to the chief of police, announcing the arrest of "Mr. and Mrs. Frimley," whose other name was Vanne, and an apologetic police dignitary of the first class came personally, and in uniform, to offer apologies.

It was from him that Jerry learned of Mr. Vanne's little plot (revealed to the London police by his "wife;") of the engagement of a secretary who was to charm from a susceptible millionaire a view of his diamonds and such information about their safe-guarding as she could secure.

Apparently, Miss Mary Perella had been similarly informed; he met her half way up the steep slope which led to the convent, and she came running down with her hands outstretched.

"Welcome, and a Merry Christmas, fellow convict!" she said, with a gayety that was immensely infectious.

He took her arm as they walked down the cobbled hill lane together and came to a bench that overlooked the bay.

She was beautifully sympathetic—apparently saw nothing in her own experience but a thrilling adventure.

"I knew, of course, that something must be wrong. I couldn't imagine you were a burglar, or whatever this Mr. Frimley was." She sighed. "I've lost a very good job," she said ruefully.

"Let me find you another," said Jeremiah eagerly. "I really am going to write a book—I have threatened to do it for years, and you can come along and correct my spelling."

She half shook her head. Yet apparently she accepted the position, for they went on to the cape by the next mail steamer, and the English chaplain who had married them on the morning they sailed came down to see them off.

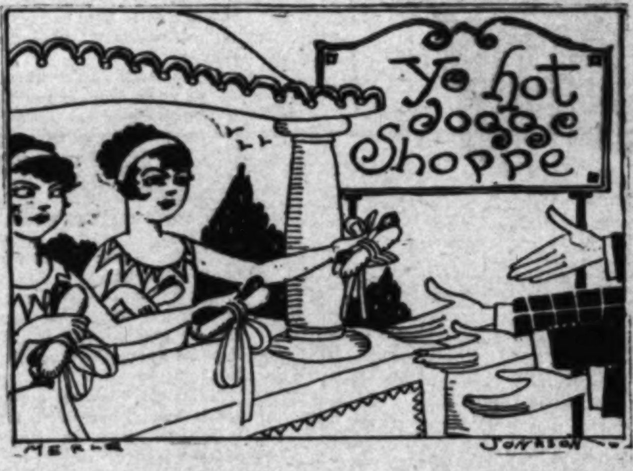
The Second of a Remarkable Series

The ART GAME

By
James J. Montague

TIME was, when a boy came home from college and announced that he was going in for art, his parents, after a sleepless night, decided to put him under some kind of forcible restraint. Had he threatened to become a poet they couldn't have been more worried. Even the slightest symptom of the artistic urge in a daughter was disquieting. But daughters, as a rule, get married, and then the suppression of tendencies that may wreck their lives is up to their husbands. I can sympathize with the parents of the girl who came back to Kansas after taking a cultural course in a Chicago domestic science school, and when asked to get lunch for the harvest hands, gave each of them a cup of bouillon with whipped cream, an olive and a sandwich tied up with a pink ribbon. But she probably married one of the harvesters, and promptly took up quantity production of ham and eggs.

If ever, for any reason, business would sag, the guiding spirit of the old establishment would tie each sausage inside its roll with a pink ribbon, and that would increase trade without any trouble.



But art is rapidly coming into its own. You remember, of course, the old greasy gasoline stations, in tumble down shacks along the road side, with decaying flivvers piled behind them, and three or four unshaven lads standing by the rusty pumps. Well, you don't see them any more. They were cheap to operate, but they didn't pay

Big business, through one of its research bureaus, discovered that art is profitable. So it bought up the old shacks, tore them down, and replaced them with shining porcelain edifices, which in most cases are the best-looking structures in the towns where they are located. The pump boys were sent home to wash up, and when they came back they were provided with new uniforms and caps, and equipped with manicure sets. Now when you drive through the country you get your gasoline at a chalet or a chateau or a miniature reproduction of the Louvre, or a quaint log cabin, or a reproduction of the White House on a very small scale.

And you are so delighted with these places that you can hardly get past one of them without stopping to fill your tank, and buy oil and accessories. Moreover, you are put so in tune with art and luxury that you bestow abundant largess on all the attendants. I am not prepared to say whether the gas in these esthetic stations costs more than it used to in the old places, but the extraction of money in luxurious surroundings is far more painless, as modern dentists have discovered, to the great increase of their practice.

I know one thing, and that is that Bill McMorrow went broke in the dirty little shed from which he dispensed fuel to the motorists of our village, and that the Greek Temple which was put up when his place was torn down seems to be making money hand over fist. So I begin to think there is something in art, after all.

Then there is the case of Tony, the Hot Dog Man. He began with a lunch wagon, from which he supplied nocturnal workers with various forms of comestibles. By and by he discovered that hot dogs sold faster and paid better than anything else, so he took out his range, substituted a gridiron, and sold these exclusively. He managed to do very well, what with school children in the day time, and burglars and policemen at night, but still the rearing of his eleven children bore heavily on him and it looked for a while as if he would never manage it.

Then Tony's daughter, who worked in a highly artistic home as a mother's helper, suddenly decided that what Tony's business lacked was art. She had a long and tough job in persuading her father of this, but she finally managed it. By putting a mortgage on his wagon, Tony raised enough money to rent a site along one of the highways and to erect on it a white painted house over which was a large sign "Ye Lowly Thatched Cottage." She told me that it was her opinion that spelling the last work "Kottage" would have brought more business, but that the woman for whom she worked frowned on it.

Now there were no hot dogs to speak of in this country when lowly thatched cottages were in style, and there seems to be no reason why the two should be associated. You might expect sausages and buckwheat or fried pork chops in a lowly thatched cottage, but not hot dogs.

However, as soon as the cottage was built and the sign put up there was always a line of cars in front of the place, and people came from all over the county to patronize it. After a week, it was necessary to run out a wing on either side, each with a griddle, behind which stood Tony's six daughters, all of them serving dogs as fast as they could be split and broiled. If ever, for any reason, business would sag, the guiding spirit of the establishment would tie each sausage inside its roll with a pink ribbon, and that would increase trade without any trouble. Tony today is living in a lowly thatched cottage with a sun parlor, a library, a breakfast room, four baths and five master rooms upstairs. Moreover, he takes a trip to Italy every year and doesn't have to make his own claret any more.

Down on Main street they still run the old style barber shops and meat markets and green groceries and they think that this application of art to business is all foolishness. But they'll learn. Pretty soon somebody will come along and sell cabbages and melons in cartons, and tie up asparagus with mauve ribbon, and invent new names for their markets, names suggestive of everything artistic from the days of Ur down to the present.

Then the boys will have to go to the library and find out what art is and how it can be applied to trade. They will have to create "atmosphere" in the bootblack stands and the garages and the butter-and-egg store if they want to keep up with the procession. All this will create such a demand for training in art as has never been known since the Renaissance.

Pretty soon when a young man or a young woman comes home from college with nothing but "arty" conversation, their parents instead of sending them out west until they get over it will send them to France and Italy to complete their educations. The profession which used to be regarded as something to follow only for its own sake, and not to be followed very far at that, has at last come to be as practical as the vending of life insurance—as prosperous, almost, as bootlegging.

SCOTLAND Yard's Spread a Net to Catch a Gem Thief, But Instead It Snared Young Jeremiah Fallowby and a Mystified Secretary

By Edgar Wallace

THIS story concerns four people: Larry Vanne, who understood men and lived on his knowledge; Eli Soburn, who understood and liked diamonds, and never traveled without a hundred thousand pounds' worth in a little leather wallet attached to his undergarments; Mary Perella, who understood most of the things that a ladies' school could teach, and in addition had that working knowledge which comes to a girl who has been left penniless and must shift for herself; and, fourthly, Jeremiah Fallowby, who had a knowledge of the world geographically, and who was suspicious of all women who might love him for his wealth alone.

Of these four, only one had a definite objective. Larry Vanne, pacing up and down his hired flat in Jermyn street, a long cigar between his strong white teeth, his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat, confided to his slightly bored wife that the North Atlantic trade had dwindled to vanishing point.

"I don't know what's coming over New York, Lou," he said, despairingly. "We hadn't been tied up ten minutes to the river end of Twenty-third street when along came McCarthy with a couple of bulls, and it was, 'The captain wants to see you, Larry.'"

"They had nothing on you," said Mrs. Vanne; "not if I'm to judge from the presents you brought home!"

"Sure they had nothing on me!" said Larry. "But it shows the tendency of the age, Lou. Suspicion, suspicion, suspicion! And I did no more than to sit in a game with that Boston crowd to trim a half-witted cinema boy—my share was less than a thousand dollars. I haven't worked the North Atlantic for years, and things have gone from bad to worse, Lou. There wasn't a dame on board that didn't park her jewelry in the purser's safe."

Lou yawned.

"Any man who works one-handed is asking for trouble," was her dictum. "That's where you're all wrong, Larry. Now, suppose you and me—"

"You and I," said Larry, gently. "Let's keep the conversation out of the steerage."

It was true that Larry had never worked the North Atlantic. He had confined himself mainly to the Pacific trade, and had made bigger pickings between Shanghai and Vancouver, B. C., than any man in his line. He had worked scientifically, allowing certain routes to lie fallow for years, had watched and noted changes in personnel, so that he could tell you offhand who was the captain of the Trianic, and just whereabouts in the world you might find that red nosed purser who nearly jailed him in '19.

He made no or few mistakes; his patience was remorseless. On one occasion he took two journeys to Australia and back and caught his man for £8000 worth of real money when the ship was in sight of port.

"I'm trying a new trade, anyway, and this time you'll work for your living," he said, but gave no further information.

It was his practice to be frank in general and reticent in particular, and he told his companion nothing of Mr. Soburn and his wallet of diamonds. He could have told quite a lot. He could have traced Mr. Soburn's family history from the day he started peddling buttons in New York; of his legitimate deals in furs, of his questionable transactions in the world of low and high finance. He carried these wonderful cut diamonds of his for the same reason as a girl carries a doll or a boy a clockwork motor car. They were his toys and his comforts, and he had frequent satisfaction in displaying these behind locked doors to his cronies with all the hushed pride that a Japanese virtuoso would display a carved jade box of the Ming period.

Larry knew his movements, past, present and prospective, but, mostly, he knew Mr. Soburn's chiefest weakness, which was for a pretty face.

Larry's wife was beautiful enough in her hard cut way, but it was not the kind of beauty that would appeal to Mr. Soburn.

"What I want," he told her frankly, "is something that hasn't lost the bloom—the sort of big eyed girl who would faint at the sight of a sparkler."

Mrs. Larry nodded her head slowly.

"That sounds so much like me that you might be painting my portrait," she said, "but I gather you want a different type."

That day she sent in an advertisement to two newspapers. On the third day came Mary Perella. Mary walked from Bayswater because she had reached the stage where pennies counted. She had had three jobs in six months. Her three employers suffered from a common misfortune, which they confessed at an early stage of her engagement—they were unhappily married. Unhappily married employers who absent-mindedly paw their secretaries' hands are not so infrequent a phenomenon as many people would imagine.

Mary descended the secretarial scale from rich city merchants to a musical composer who lived in a world of writs, and she had broken her last pound sterling and was owing one week's rent when she set forth to Jermyn street, never dreaming that the lady who required a secretary-companion to travel abroad, at a wildly exorbitant salary, would be likely to choose her from the thousands of applicants.

"She's made for the part," said Larry, who, unobserved, had made a very complete scrutiny of the new secretary. "Orphan and everything; no relations in London." He scratched his chin thoughtfully. "Fix her tomorrow. Get her passage booked and our own at the same time. We'll travel on the Frimley passports."

He was very practical now.

"She'll want some money for clothing—give her twenty-five on account. You told her that she was my secretary and not yours?"

Mrs. Larry nodded.

"She bore the blow very well," she said. "I suppose you're sure that Soburn is traveling on that ship?"

"Sure I'm sure!" he said, scornfully. "He's got the royal suite, two bathrooms—God knows why—and two of his best pals and traveling. Besides, the next packet is booked up. And, Lou, you can tell that kid to report on board. I don't want to see her till we get to Southampton. Somehow, I don't make a good impression on girls."

Mary Perella came the next morning and nearly dropped when the gracious lady confirmed her in the engagement.

"I'm quite sure you will do, my dear," said Mrs. Larry Vanne sweetly, "and you will find my husband a very generous employer. He is writing a book on rare jewels, but nobody must know this, because—"

The excuse, flimsy as it was, convinced Mary.

"What about Dennis?" asked Mrs. Larry suddenly when she saw her husband after the interview.

Though he was a man who did not usually display his emotion, Larry Vanne was surprised into a grimace. Detective Inspector Dennis of Scotland Yard was an atom in the molecule of uneasiness which never quite ceased to perturb him. And Dennis had met him on his arrival in England, and in his suave, nice way had said, "Don't." He hadn't been quite as terse as that, and had added a sermon the text of which was "Watch out," that had left Mr. Vanne distinctly uncomfortable.

Detective Inspector Dennis does not really come into the story at all, so it would be superfluous to describe that very wise man, who read the minds of jewel thieves and confidence men with such devastating accuracy.

At ten o'clock on the Thursday morning Mrs. Larry Vanne booked stateroom No. 17, the last available accommodation on the London Castle. A quarter of an hour later Mr. Jeremiah Fallowby also rang up the Castle office and was answered by a junior who was deputizing for the booking clerk, who had just gone out to lunch.

People often said that Jeremiah Fallowby was good looking. They qualified the statement in various ways; some said that he would be really handsome if he had a little more expression; some thought that his features were irregular, but he had nice eyes; others were inclined to the belief that it was his mouth which spoiled him. On one point they were all agreed; he could be very dull. He seldom went anywhere—you never met him, for example, dining at the Ambassador's on the night of the Grand Prix. He certainly went to Deauville—but always in the off season. The month he spent in Venice was the very month that the Lido was a wilderness. He was in town when everybody else was out of town, and Ascot usually coincided with the period that he chose for his stay at Aix.

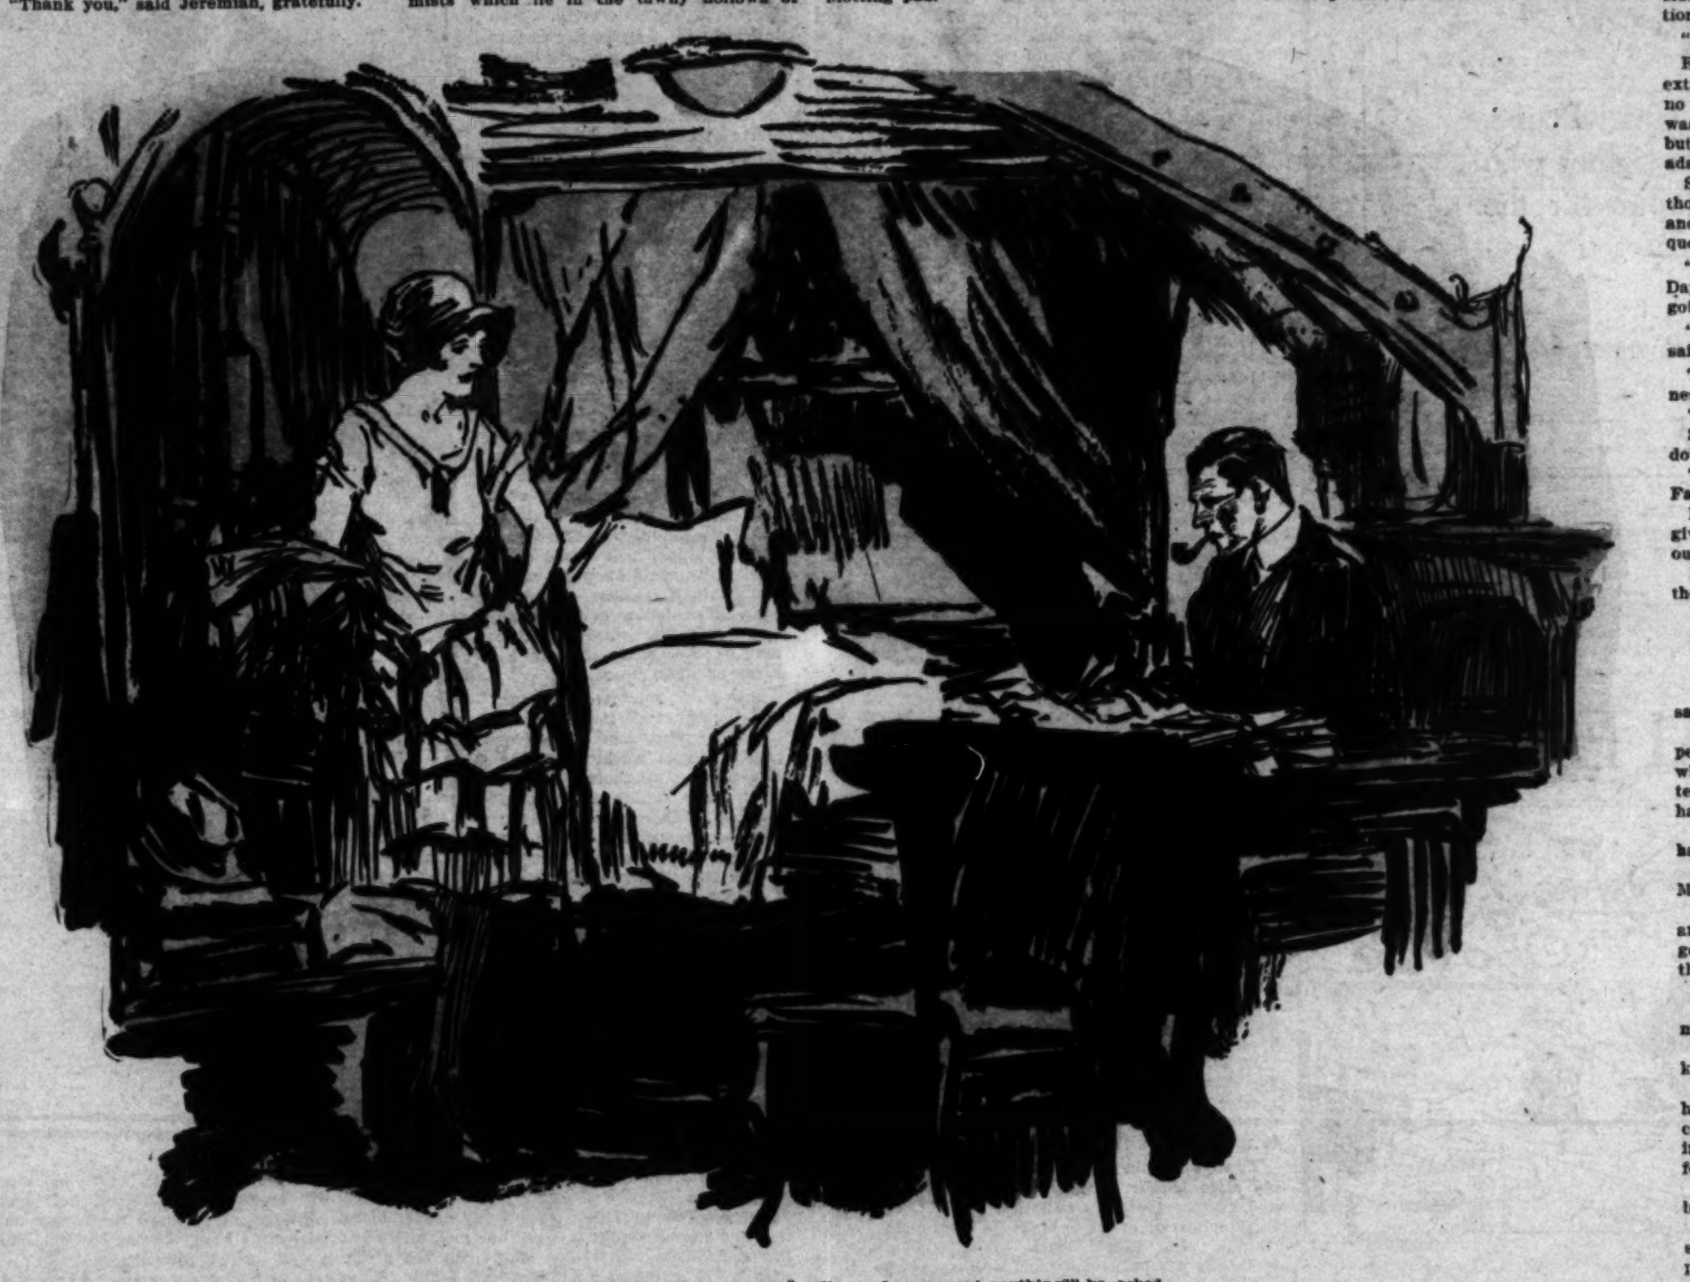
At the height of the London season he was pretty sure to be somewhere in the country, and when the north bound trains were overloaded with guns bound for the moors, Jeremiah would be writing excuses from Madeira.

"Jerry, you're absolutely impossible!" rasped his aunt. "You never meet a gel worth knowing, and you'll end up by marrying a waitress in a teashop!"

"Which teashop?" asked Jerry, momentarily interested.

"You're coming to us for Christmas," said his aunt. "I am not going to allow you to wander alone. If you go away, I'll come with you—I warn you."

"Thank you," said Jeremiah, gratefully.



He looked up and saw a girl. "Um-er-do you want anything?" he asked.

"You would like me to come?" asked the astonished lady.

"No," said Jeremiah, truthfully. "I'm thanking you for the warning."

None of his many relatives were really rude to his face, because he was worth a quarter of a million sterling. But the uncles and aunts and cousins who planned to marry him off and who arranged the most cunningly devised house parties, only to receive a letter which began:

" . . . most terribly sorry, but I shall be in Venice on the 10th."

had no scruples in speaking of him in the plainest possible manner.

"It is his damned romanticism," fumed Uncle Brebbury, who had five eligible daughters. "He's got a fairy prince complex. Thinks he'll find a (naughty word) Cinderella. Teashop gel! He'll be bringing home a—a—"

"Betrie!" murmured his shocked wife. "Please! The gels!"

But "the gels" were in complete sympathy.

Jeremiah wrote a little, read much, thought even more. He was modest enough to believe that he was entirely without attraction, sophisticated to the extent of suspecting that most mothers were prepared to sacrifice their daughters on the altar of his fortune.

One gloomy morning Jeremiah, having sworn to be a member of Mrs. Leslie Fallowby's Christmas house party, was contemplating the dismal prospect. Healthy men do not love caducity in any expression, and Jeremiah had met the frosts and the mists which lie in the tawny hollows of Burnham Beeches with an uneasy yearning for the moorlands, where spring was coming in with arum lilies growing on the seashore and wild gladioli budding on verdant slopes.

He would rise from his writing table and pace restlessly the worn carpet of his study. And inevitably he would be drawn to the drawer where, with the supreme indifference which summer brought to him, he had thrown the early sailing lists.

For hours this morning he had sat turning them over. He could go to the east coast, stop off at Naples or Port Said. He could spend a week in Nairobi . . . he knew a man who was trying to grow cotton somewhere in Kenya—or was it tobacco?

It would be rather fun to end the sea journey at Biera—push off up country to Salisbury and work down through Buluwayo and Kimberley to the Cape.

There was a delightful boarding house at Rondebosch, kept by an ex-civil servant, with great hedges of blue plumbago. Behind, like the backcloth of a theatrical scene, the ranges of Constantia.

Jeremiah Fallowby made a little face and, walking to the casement window, stared out over the darkening lawn. Rain was falling steadily. Every tree dripped dismally.

He sat at his table again and reached for the telephone, gave a London number, and waited indecisively till the bell rang.

"Is that the Castle line? Good. Have you anything on the London Castle—deck cabin if posible?"

He waited, the receiver at his ear, his pen drawing uncouth arabesques on his blotting pad.

A voice at the other end of the wire awakened him to realities.

"Good. My name is Fallowby, yes, Jeremiah Fallowby. I'll arrange to collect the ticket right away."

He rang off and immediately connected with a London agent in Threadneedle street and gave him instructions. The tickets arrived by first post in the morning, and Jeremiah went joyously to the task of packing.

If he had only been content to stay at Burnham Breeches, he might have been saved a great deal of inconvenience. Within two hours of the receipt of his letter he had left his home, with instructions that neither letters nor telegrams should be sent on to him, and had deposited himself in his club in St. James street; so that he did not receive the frantic wire addressed to him by the steamship company, nor yet interview a penitent junior clerk who had booked a stateroom that was already engaged. In complete ignorance he motored to Southampton, had a breakdown on the way, and arrived only just in time to hurl his baggage on board.

The cabin was a large one. He was annoyed to discover that there were two beds and directed the steward to remove one.

"Traveling alone, sir?" said the steward, phlegmatically. (Nothing surprises stewards.) And then: "There was some trouble about your ticket. Another gent was booked."

He glanced at the initials on the suitcase, took the counterfoil of the steamship ticket, made a few inquiries about Jeremiah's taste in the direction of early morning coffee and baths, and vanished.

To the purser, as he handed in the counterfoil: "Seventeen's aboard. The other fellow hasn't come."

"That's all right," said the assistant purser, and spiked the paper.

The ship had cleared Southampton waters and was nosing its way to the channel when Jerry, writing letters at the little desk in the cabin (the usual and untruthful excuses to Mrs. Leslie Fallowby,) became aware that somebody was standing in the open doorway.

He looked up and saw a girl.

"Um—er—do you want anything?" he asked.

Mary Perella came into the stateroom a little boisterously. She had that excited pinkness which adventure gives to young skins—the day was unexpectedly mild; there was a blue, cloud-flecked sky above and the white cloisters of the Needles on the port quarter.

Ahead a summery land and the immense possibilities of new lands.

Jeremiah glared up at her from his writing table.

"Oh, Mr—?"

He got to his feet slowly.

"Fallowby," he said, and she looked relieved.

"I've been worrying terribly about the name," she said. "You know, when Mrs. Fallowby told me, I didn't really catch it, but I hadn't the courage to ask."

Jeremiah frowned.

Mrs. Fallowby? Which of his innumerable aunt was this? Mrs. Hector Fallowby or Mrs. Richard—or was it that terrible little Mrs. Merstham-Fallowby with the impossible daughters? He uttered an exclamation, but swallowed its violent end.

"Not Mrs. L.?" he said.

Even in his agitation he thought she was extraordinarily pretty; she at any rate was no Fallowby. Gray eyes, rather big; there was the faintest film of powder on her face, but young girls did that sort of thing nowadays.

She nodded smilingly; he was, she thought, being a little facetious. Husbands and wives spoke about one another in such queer ways.

"It will be rather fun spending Christmas Day on board ship," she went on. "We are going to South Africa, aren't we?"

"Unless the captain changes his mind," said Jeremiah, and they both laughed.

Then he became conscious of his remissness.

"Won't you sit down?"

She sat on a sofa under the square window that looks on to the promenade deck.

"I suppose you have a letter from Mrs. Fallowby?"

It wasn't like any of the Fallowbys to give letters of introduction to pretty girl outsiders.

He saw a look of consternation come to the girl's eyes.

"Isn't she here?" she gasped.

Jeremiah blinked at her.

"Who—Mrs. Fallowby? I hope not!"

Mary Perella went pale.

"But—I suppose it is all right—but she said she was coming."

Jeremiah frowned. If there was one experience in the world he didn't want and which he intended to avoid, it was a tete-a-tete with a female Fallowby. Mrs. Leslie had evidently kept her promise.

"I suppose she's here, then," he said, unhappily.

There was an awkward pause. Into Mary's mind crept a doubt.

"She engaged me as traveling secretary, and she said I was to see you as soon as I got on board. Fortunately, I remembered the number of your cabin."

"Really!"

He could think of no comment more illuminating.

"So you're going to South Africa? Do you know the country?"

She had never been abroad. Her father had served in Africa. He was so interested a listener that she found herself telling him about the tragedy of two years before.

"I stayed with an aunt for six months, but it was rather—well, impossible."

"I never knew an aunt that wasn't," he sympathized. "You seem to have had a pretty unhappy time, Miss Perella—that is an Italian name, isn't it?"

She thought it had been Maltese two hundred years before and, he seemed to remember a General Sir Gregory Perella who had done tremendous things in the Abyssinian war—or was it the mutiny?

Suddenly: "What do you want me to do? I have a portable typewriter—"

"Nothing," he said, hastily. "The best thing you can do is to go along and find Mrs. Fallowby—no, I don't think I should do that. If I remember rightly, she is a terribly bad sailor and won't be on deck for a week. Just loaf around. If there is anything I can do for you, let me knew. Got a nice cabin? Fine! If you see Mrs. Fallowby, tell her I'm—er—awfully busy. In fact, I thought of writing."

She nodded wisely. "A book—I know."

She left him a little dazed.

He saw her that night at dinner, sitting at a little table by herself, and they exchanged smiles as he passed. There was no sign of Mrs. Leslie Fallowby, but the ship had a slight roll on and that would explain her absence. After dinner he saw the girl leaning over the rail and went up to her.

"I have not seen your—" she began.

"You wouldn't," he interrupted her. "Poor dear, she thinks this is rough weather.

He commandeered a chair for her and they sat down and talked till nearly ten o'clock.

'You're going to let me help you with your book?" she said, as they stood at the head of the companionway before she went below for the night.

"My book?" He started guiltily. "Oh, of course! Did I say I was writing a book? Naturally, I will be happy for you to help me, but I haven't got very far."

He found himself awaiting her arrival on deck the next morning, with some impatience. They were in the dreaded bay, but the sea was as smooth as a pond, and, save for the chill in the air, the weather was delightful. Pacing round and round the deck, they discovered mutual interests—she also would one day write a book, which was to be a tremendous affair about life and people. He did not even smile. Jeremiah was rather diffident; possibly he credited her with as extensive an acquaintance with the subject as he himself possessed.

"I can't find Mrs. Fallowby's cabin anywhere," she said. "My conscience has been pricking me. Couldn't I do something for her?"

"She's quite all right," said Jeremiah hastily.

It was time enough to brace himself for an interview with Mrs. Fallowby when she made her appearance. The letter of excuse he had written was already torn up. How like that enterprising lady to discover that he was sailing!

And yet he was puzzled a little. Why should Mrs. Fallowby have taken this voyage without her unprepossessing daughters? He resolved at the earliest convenient moment to discover from Mary Perella a solution to this private mystery.

"We shall be in Funchal harbor on Christmas Eve, by which time it ought to be fairly warm," he told her in the course of the afternoon walk. "It will be rather jolly doing one's Christmas shopping."

"Mrs. Fallowby will be well enough to come ashore by then?" she suggested.

Jeremiah prayed not, but refrained from giving expression to the hope.

The next night they leaned over the rail together and watched the faint star of light which stood for Cape Finisterre sink down behind the horizon; and he told her what a bore life was, and how he hated crowds and people who were terribly resolved to be gay to order. And she reviewed some of her landladies, and told him of a restaurant where one could get a wonderful lunch for 3d or 6d; and once he squeezed her arm to attract her attention to a passing sailing ship, its white sails looking ghostly in the faint light of the crescent moon, and she did not seem to resent that method. Yet, curiously enough, when he took her arm again to lead her to the companion-way, she very gently disengaged herself.

"I hope Mrs. Fallowby will be better in the morning," she said, "and I do hope you will do some work. I feel a great impostor. I haven't done a stroke since I've come on to this ship!"

He went to bed and dreamed of gray eyes and very soft arms that gave under his grip.

The night before the ship came into Funchal bay, and whilst he was dressing for dinner, the purser came to see him, and the tone of that officer was rather short and his manner strangely hostile.

"In what name did you book this cabin, Mr. Fallowby?"

"In my own name," said Jeremiah, in surprise.

The purser looked at him with suspicion.

"The name I have on the list is Frimley—the same initials, J. A., 'John Frimley.' Are you sure that isn't the name in which the cabin is booked?"

"You've seen my ticket—and really, does it matter?" asked Jeremiah, a little impatiently.

"It does and it doesn't," said the purser. "Who is this young lady you're with, Mr. Fallowby?"

"I am with no young lady," said Jeremiah, with pardonable asperity. 'If you mean Miss Perella, she is my aunt's secretary. Nobody knows better than you that my aunt is somewhere on this ship. I suggest that you should interview Mrs. Leslie

"JUNIOR" READERS SELECT WINNERS

CASH PRIZES GIVEN AS MERIT AWARDS FOLLOWING VOTE OF CLUB ENTHUSIASTS

At last we are able to announce the winners of the special prizes for the best stories and art work contributed to The Junior Times during October and November. These awards are made in accordance with the letter vote of readers of our magazine.

The list of extra awards, giving the amount awarded, name of the winner, date that his or her contribution was used, and, in the case of stories, the title of the contribution, follows:

Cover pages, $5 prize: Phil de Lara, October 23; Laura R. Brock, November 6.

Comic strips, $2.50 prize: Isadore Ellis, October 23; Bill Zaboly, November 20.

Stories, $2.50 prize: Lilly Hewitt, "When Troubles Prove a Blessing," published October 16; Sallie Freeman, "Mignon's Idea," November 6; Mellor Hartshorn, "Johnny Frog's Birthday," November 20; Anny Mae Brownstein, "The Portrait of a Lady," November 27. As Sallie, Mellor and Anny received the same number of votes in the ballot on the best stories of November, all three are given prizes.

Art work, $2.50 prize: Louis Bardwell, October 2; Ed Shultz, November 13.

To further add interest to this letter ballot, Aunt Dolly offers a $2.50 prize to the writer of the best letter picking the December winners. Remember, the awards are for the best cover-page drawing, the best comic strip, the best story and the best art contribution of the month. Just tell which ones you like and why, and mail your letters as early as possible to Aunt Dolly, marked "Prize Award Contest."

The prize-winning letter of criticism for November follows:

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

Among all the work for November, I like best Laura Brock's cover design, Sallie Freeman's story, "Mignon's Idea," and Isadore Ellis's drawing with Hamlet.

The cover design which I chose was for the 6th of the month. The moment I saw it I felt happier. It fairly radiated joy; sunbeams danced in the golden hair of the child; all the carefree charm of children was portrayed here; I felt a sudden love for the girl, whoever she was. Laura is a real artist!

The story was 100 per cent! I love Mignon with her fanciful ideas, and dreamy ways. I felt a curious satisfaction, a thrill of happiness, such as one may feel after finding a new friend. I felt that I knew her, had danced with her, and dreamed with her on the sunny slopes of Brittany. I shall never forget her! She would make a wonderful book character. Sallie certainly ought to make use of the wonderful art of description she possesses; she has a subtle, underlying charm in her work which is impossible to define, yet which reaches our very souls. It was a beautiful, tender story.

I always read "Incidents in the Lives of Famous Characters" first among the cartoons. Perhaps it is a mere matter of choice; I enjoy them most, and as a result I liked "Hamlet" best of this month's cartoons. The clever saying at the end was also amusing, "I'm getting tired raking in all this dough drawing for the T.J.C." I think this is largely a matter of personal opinion, more so than the superior work of the drawing, although there is no doubt that he is a clever artist, and his pen characters are work of a future genius.

Lovingly yours,

"QUESTION MARK" WANTS TO KNOW

Just another prize-winning letter in our "Flaming Youth" contest, but one that is mighty interesting reading at that.—Aunt Dolly.

This letter I am writing is based on my own experiences with the opposite sex. Perhaps the readers will think that I have been out with the wrong kind of girls, but I'll leave that up to them.

I am in a peculiar position. At times I can take the side of the girl against the modern boy and at other times it is just turn about. So, being only a boy, and to offset this quandary, I am naturally going to take the boy's side. In my mind there are three types of girls, namely: the girl who goes to extremes and is real old fashioned; the girl who goes to extremes and is real modern, and lastly, the girl that comes between these two. I am leaving the last to figure out for yourself, but in my mind she is the highest type of girlhood.

First, let us take the girl that is old fashioned. Would any boy like to take out a girl who did not powder and who wore her dresses to her ankles? I'm asking the boys, would you? I don't think so. At least I wouldn't. This is what I mean when I say, "the old-fashioned girl."

On the other hand, would you like to go to a dance with a girl who wore her dresses extremely short and painted and powdered too much? No doubt there are a lot of boys who would, but I don't think that it would suit the majority. I haven't a doubt but what there are more boys who like the latter better than the former and I don't blame them a bit. When it comes down to brass tacks, I would, too. Well, we have that point settled. Out of a majority there are not many who like a girl whose topics concern the black bottom and risque jokes, and there are even less who like girls who don't know the war is over.

But what about a girl who stands between? What about the girl who thinks and talks of the better things of life and dresses as though she had some sense? She's the girl to have. But there's only one thing wrong—try and find her. I'll admit there are some. There has to be some type to offset the others, but believe me they come few and far between.

Perhaps some will think that I do not know what I am talking about, but a boy can learn a lot without reading Elinor Glyn's "It," and Beatrice Fairfax's "Lovelorn."

AWARDED PRIZES IN STORY CLASS

MYRVIN PORTER AND MARGUERITE CLARK ARE WINNERS IN CLUB CONTESTS

Two interesting prize-winning stories in our club's story contest follow:

THE TURKEY HUNT

By Myrvin Porter, Long Beach

John Anderson awakened early from the unaccustomed sound of roosters crowing, horses stamping about and the call of a wild turkey. It really was the last named that brought John to full consciousness, for it was today that his Uncle Jack promised they should go out and hunt the wild bird with guns. Tomorrow was Thanksgiving Day, and it gave John a thrill to think that upon their marksmanship and skill as hunters their Thanksgiving dinner depended.

It was a dandy farm upon which John was to spend the holiday, just big enough to be entrancing to a city-bred boy. There were the quite extensive woods on the north part of it where the wild turkeys were to be found and where hickory nuts could be gathered in the fall.

Upon hearing his Aunt Betty preparing breakfast, whiffs of which made John's nostrils twitch and his mouth water, he left the warm bed and hastily dressed, for there was a wintery sharpness in the air.

"Hello, Aunt Betty! Where's Uncle Jack?" he called, entering the kitchen. "Gosh, but this stove feels good."

"Your uncle is out doing the chores, but you're up early, don't you think?" his aunt answered and asked at the same time.

"Not too early to get started on that turkey hunt for me," laughed John. "When do we start?" he asked, eagerly of his uncle, who had just come in.

"Soon as we eat breakfast," replied Mr. Anderson, who was a brother of John's father.

And in a half-hour they were warmly dressed in great coats and had rifles under their arms.

"It's easier to get a turkey with a shotgun, but it's much more sportsmanlike to get them with a rifle," Mr. Anderson explained.

"Now, remember that if you don't get any turkeys, we won't have much of a Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow," Mrs. Anderson called after them.

"We'll get at least one," said John.

After they were out of sight, John's aunt went to the telephone and called a number in the village about five miles away.

"Is this Mr. Schenck?" she asked. "Well, I'll let you know tonight whether or not we want that turkey you're holding for us."

"All right, Mrs. Anderson," came a deep German voice over the wire. "But why for you can't tell me now?"

"Because Jack's brother's boy is out here with us and thinks that if he and his uncle don't get a turkey in the north woods we won't have any for tomorrow. I want him to succeed, but I wouldn't have him disappointed in his dinner for anything."

"Oh, all right," said the German voice again, and Mrs. Anderson could hear him laugh heartily at the joke.

John and his uncle had walked for perhaps a quarter of a mile, when Mr. Anderson put his finger to his lips for absolute quiet.

"They generally roost hereabouts when there are any at all," he whispered. "We'll have to go pretty carefully from now on."

John felt his heart increase its beating. Of course, to one who had always lived in the country, this little hunt might be child's play. But John it was a thrilling adventure. The only times he managed to fire a gun in the city was at a shooting gallery.

He was beginning to tire of the silence they were maintaining, when Mr. Anderson touched him on the arm and pointed. Surely enough, there were two large gobblers on the

LITTLE DESERT WIND

By Margaret Peterek, Yuma, Ariz.

A sweet, verbena-scented wind,
A little desert wind, half shy,
Half bold, it pauses at my door
To kiss the grapevines, passing by.

The balsam apples, drooping firs,
Grown up since last he came this way,
Offer their luscious lips to him—
"A little one for us, we pray."

A murmur to his helpless slaves,
Perfunctory, "Hope you didn't mind."
He, fickle, does his daring deed
And leaves the grapevines, green behind.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I want to join The Times Junior Club and want you to send me the pin.

The club, I have heard, is very nice, so the girls here voted me in. I am very interested in it, as we send things to poor children.

I intend to get a kick out of the T.J.C., as some persons might say.

Your T.J.C. follower,
[Signed] LOIS JULIA BUNCH,
Morenci, Ariz.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I just adore aunts and uncles you know, in fact, every girl ought to, they are so good and kind.

I have a very pressing question to ask you, my dear aunt. I wish to belong to The Times Junior Club, may I? I know you'll let me, and I'll be awaiting the answer anxiously daily.

I am inclosing a short story which I have typewritten. My sincere wish is that it will be accepted.

You know, dear Aunt Dolly, I have previously written for The Star in Montreal. I just love composing.

Does the club have pins. If so, I'm anxious to receive one.

I do suppose I have many cousins now. Well! I'm glad, I love having them.

Hoping sincerely that my story is accepted and that I'm accepted as a member, I remain,

Your loving niece,
CATHERINE MARTYN,
Montreal, Can.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I have just finished reading The Junior Times, and I've just read about the fun as long as I can. Now I want to come in and have my share with the others.

I have only been in California a short time. I'm fresh from old Georgia land. I admit I've been a little homesick, although I love California. But I don't know any one out here and I had so many dear friends at home. That's one reason why I want to join your club, if I'm not too old. I'm almost 16.

I love to draw and I'm sending in a little drawing of mine that I hope can be used in our page! Will you please tell me if any member can draw a cartoon or cover design or do you have to be a club cartoonist? And how large should a cover design be, if I may draw one? And I also like to write poems. I'll send some in and see if they will do. If they won't do I'll send in some more!

Hope I will be a club member soon!

Lots of love,

Make This Kindness Month in Our "Times" Junior Club

CHANCE TO WIN OFFICER'S RANK

REMEMBER OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS AND A REWARD WILL BE YOURS

January, even in the sunny South, means a period of semistarvation for feathered friends. Birds have a hard time finding a refuge from stinging winds, and bread crumbs, no matter how small, add greatly to their comfort. They also need water, which is sometimes scarce this month.

Therefore, should we not have compassion, give a passing thought for the swallow in his flight, the gay little warbler, the oriole on his branch, the hawk wheeling proudly above barren plains! Let us make this kindness month for juniors. Remember those who wheel in the bright skies above us, and leave on your front porch or beneath a tree in your garden, a handful of bread crumbs and a bit of water. This will take so little of your time, such a tiny moment out of your busy school day, and yet the good resulting from such action, if it should be carried on throughout a large territory, cannot be easily measured. Boys may even go further and place birdhouses in the limbs of trees. They will be well repaid for their trouble when they see a pair of bright, inquisitive eyes peering out of a nest.

Above all, be kind to those who cannot defend themselves. Do not strike, beat or molest a dumb animal if you are a member of the T.J.C. They deserve all the consideration you are capable of giving, and especially during the month of January see that our feathered friends, those who sing in the early dawn, and serenade you on moonlight nights have sufficient food to tide them over the cold winter months.

Come on juniors! let's have a race. Who will give the greatest service, be the kindest member to animals or birds unable to look after themselves? Write in and tell us all about it. Lieutenants and captains are being appointed, according to service only. If you wish to climb to an officer's rank, this is a sure means to win success.

Boys, if you build bird houses we must have a photograph of both yourself and the house, placed in the tree. If you are putting out bread crumbs and water, send us a photograph of this as well, and then—for the big surprise. Just wait and see how kindness will be rewarded.

RIDDLE CORNER FOR TINY TOTS

BY AUNT DOLLY

Last week we had a lot of fun with our cake puzzle. Now we are launching a brand-new one. Over twenty-five prizes have been mailed our juniors who guessed the correct answers.

Now guess what is:

"All over the land,
On every hand.
Common, yet hard to retain.
Cool at times,
Hot at others;
Often changes form and color."

Daisy air rifles, the beautiful Aunt Dolly doll, boxes of candy, strings of pearls, Scout knives, cameras, baseballs and bats, vanity bags and a dozen other prizes will be yours if you solve this riddle. Remember, however, that letters reaching us on Tuesday will be out of the running. We must have immediate action, or none at all, so hustle, juniors; put on your thinking cap and let's go—what is the answer?

By the way, look over the following answers to last week's cake puzzle: (1) Sunshine cake. (2) Spice cake. (3) Marble cake. (4) Plain cake. (5) Delicate cake. (6) Kisses. (7) Angel's food. (8) Patty cake. (9) Sponge cake. (10) A cream cake.

And the answer to our mathematical twister was "eight cats."

Please remember we are glad to receive and print original puzzles, riddles and verses of all kinds, but they must be original. No copying allowed. Anyone caught doing this must forfeit their membership in the T.J.C.

COSY PARTIES FOR JUNIORS

Everyone loves to have a party, especially the kind that is novel and new. Let us suggest a clothespin party, with simple prizes to hold interest at a proper height.

To begin with, write your invitation on a piece of paper, and stick it between the two prongs of a clothespin. See that it is left on your friend's doorsill, and watch her surprised face when she picks it up and reads:

"Dear ——————
"A party is planned
Nice as can be
Bring scissors an' paste
I'm giving a tea

"With sugar and spice
And everything nice,
A surprise, dearest friend,
You surely will see!"

Place the date and your name and address in the upper right-hand corner, also the time of party. Then for fun.

Clear a table and place clean papers upon it, and a stack of clothespins, with lots of old scraps from mother's sewing basket. All sorts of odds and ends will come in handy, for this is to be a clothespin party.

When your guests arrive, give each one a clothespin, and let them choose their pieces of material, ribbon, etc. They have, of course, brought their own scissors and paste. Now note the time, then tell your guests they are to have a race in dressing clothespin dolls. The one who finishes the prettiest doll in the least time will receive the first prize. You may have a second and even a booby prize if you wish.

After the dolls have been dressed, and all the prizes awarded, refreshments are served. Ginger ale, hot chocolate, lemonade or clear fruit punch will be suitable. Ginger cookies or angel cake give a nice variety when it comes to planning a special treat for juniors.

MORE MEETINGS FOR CLUB JUNIORS

GET YOUR TICKET NOW OR YOU MAY MISS ONE OF THESE PLEASANT GATHERINGS

Juniors, here's a surprise, the most glorious one in the world, awaiting you. We are going to have more club meetings and heaps more parties. There will be special afternoons for junior writers and artists.

Yesterday, we had a meeting for boys and girls interested in making Indian bead work. They learned how to fashion beautiful belts, watch fobs, purses and many other valuable gifts. You must have a small wooden loom, beads, thread and a fine needle.

Next Saturday will be a day for those who love the outdoors. Boys and girls interested in the study of bird eggs, plant life, queer customs among wild animals, have a rare treat ahead of them.

There is also a surprise scheduled for this meeting, one you will welcome with a whoop. But you must be loyal, must be true, you must come to these meetings or have your name ruled off our books. The hour for all Saturdays meetings is 2:30 o'clock sharp. Parents are requested to call for children too young to be out alone after 4:30.

In February, there will be more peppy meetings, a different surprise each week, but you must secure your ticket. Admittance to the clubrooms on these days will not be allowed unless you present your ticket at the door. We have had to adopt this rule, as the crowds are too big to handle without cards of admittance. We expect seventy-five for a meeting and 500 show up. So remember, there are dozens of children eager to attend these week-end good times. If you secure your ticket and fail to come, you have cheated some little child who has perhaps been waiting for months to visit our clubrooms.

All meetings will be held at headquarters, 223 West First street. The hour is 2:30 o'clock; the meetings are over at 4:45 p.m. As a rule, refreshments will be served, iced drinks and cookies, and there will be plenty of music to help make an ideal day. But remember to secure your ticket. Have mother or daddy call for it or write in, then everything will be fine as a fiddle.

KLO-KLO LAND

BY AUNT DOLLY

Lysa clung tightly to David's hand, ashamed to admit that her heart was going pit-a-pat as his sandy-yellow-brown magic went whisking through the sky.

"Do you think it will ever stop?" she asked.

"You never can tell," David shouted, pulling hard on the reins, but the magic must have heard, for it began to dip slowly, until finally it rested in a field filled with the brightest flowers Lysa had ever seen. They had petals which opened and closed like butterfly wings.

"Isn't this strange?" David whispered, jumping into the meadow. "I think I'll pick one."

"Better not," Lysa cautioned "Why, David, they're made of glass and might enchant you." They paused, laughing uncertainly.

"Well," he urged, "if we pick 'em together it'll be all right," so they foolishly broke off a stem. Instantly it grew pitch-inky dark around them. David tried to call Lysa, but his voice was lost in a great roaring which covered them like a blanket. At first he struggled against it, but it kept sighing and swelling until he grew drowsy. The meadow and its glass flowers seemed far away, part of a dream, too lovely to break. A queer sound drifted through the roar, and he awoke to find Lysa still fast asleep, her cheeks wet with tears.

"Dear me," David sighed, "that was a lesson." Where on earth are we?" and he gazed curiously about him.

"Davey, Davey, why is everything so green?" Lysa called, opening startled eyes.

He hurried to her side, and told her bravely that they were in a beautiful forest with nothing to fear.

"Do not worry," he soothed. "But come with me, so we can find out what's down there," and he pointed to a small hill that dipped below them. Lysa was none too certain that it would be wise to meddle with the forest, but placed her hand trustingly within David's.

They had not gone far before she cried, "What's that?" pointing to a strange object before them.

"Bless me," David whispered, "It's as large as the two of us, and white as milk."

"And it has a nose like a string of bananas, and wears a hat like a clown," Lysa laughed. They advanced slowly to the edge of a pool and peered uncertainly at the stranger before them.

"Most gracious creature?" David begin, trying to be most polite, "who might you be? We are adventuring."

"I am an elephant, baby elephant. My name is Jing and I am bathing," answered their new friend. "It is very squoggly."

The children looked at each other in amazement. "We never heard of such a thing," they said. "Pray, would you please tell us what squoggly means?"

"With pleasure," he answered, in a voice that sounded as though some one had put clothespins on his nose. "To begin with, I speak the language of white elephants. It is different from the common words used by grey elephants. I am very rare, and many men in South Africa worship me. But I must answer your question. This is squog," and he lifted one plump leg out of the pool.

"Squog," he explained, "is good for the skin. You see, when I used to circus, they rubbed me with it."

"Were you, honestly and truly in a circus?" David cried, cheeks pink with excitement.

"I was the circus," their proud friend answered. "Draw close, my dears, and I shall tell you of many things. You shall hear of my mother who came from India, and my father, who belonged to Prince Rag-Tag. I will also tell of his ruby lamp, and what happened when I borrowed it."

"Oh do!" David cried.

"Very well," Jing agreed, and lifted his other foot out of the pool.

TEN LITTLE RAG DOLLS

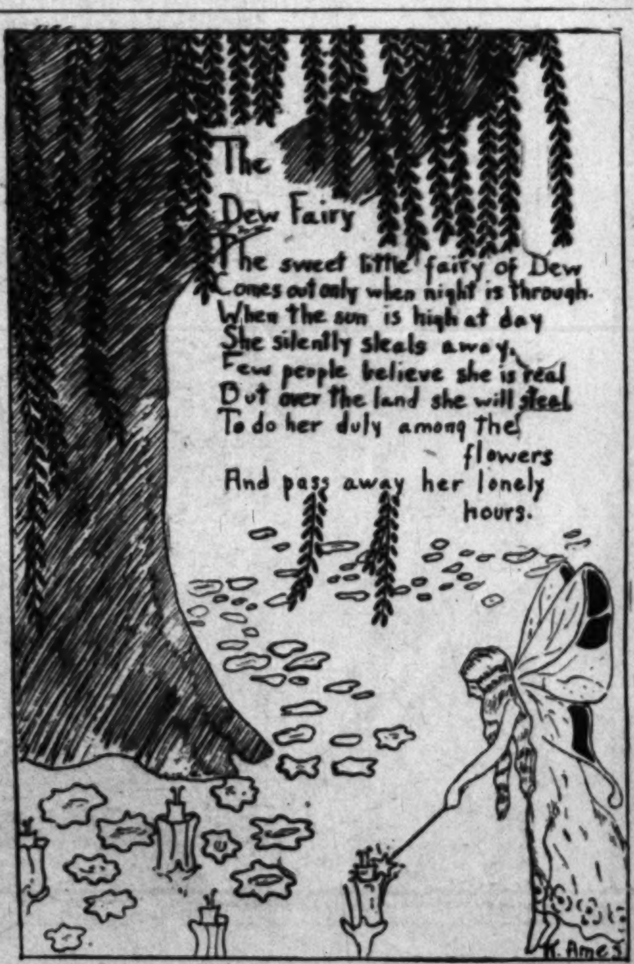
Ten little rag dolls hanging on a line;
One fell down, then there were nine.
Nine little rag dolls breaking up a plate;
One got cut, then there were eight.
Eight little rag dolls thinking of heaven;
One ran away, then there were seven
Seven little rag dolls picking up sticks;
One got hit, then there were six.
Six little rag dolls round a bee hive;
One got stung, there were five.
Five little rag dolls playing on the floor;
One got hurt, then there were four.
Four little rag dolls climbing a tree;
One fell down, then there were three.
Three little rag dolls hiding in a shoe;
One got caught, then there were two.
Two little rag dolls having a run;
One fell down then there was one.
One little rag doll sitting all alone;
He got so lonesome he had to go home.



The Dew Fairy
The sweet little fairy of Dew
Comes out only when night is through.
When the sun is high at day
She silently steals away.
Few people believe she is real
But over the land she will steal
To do her duty among the flowers
And pass away her lonely hours.

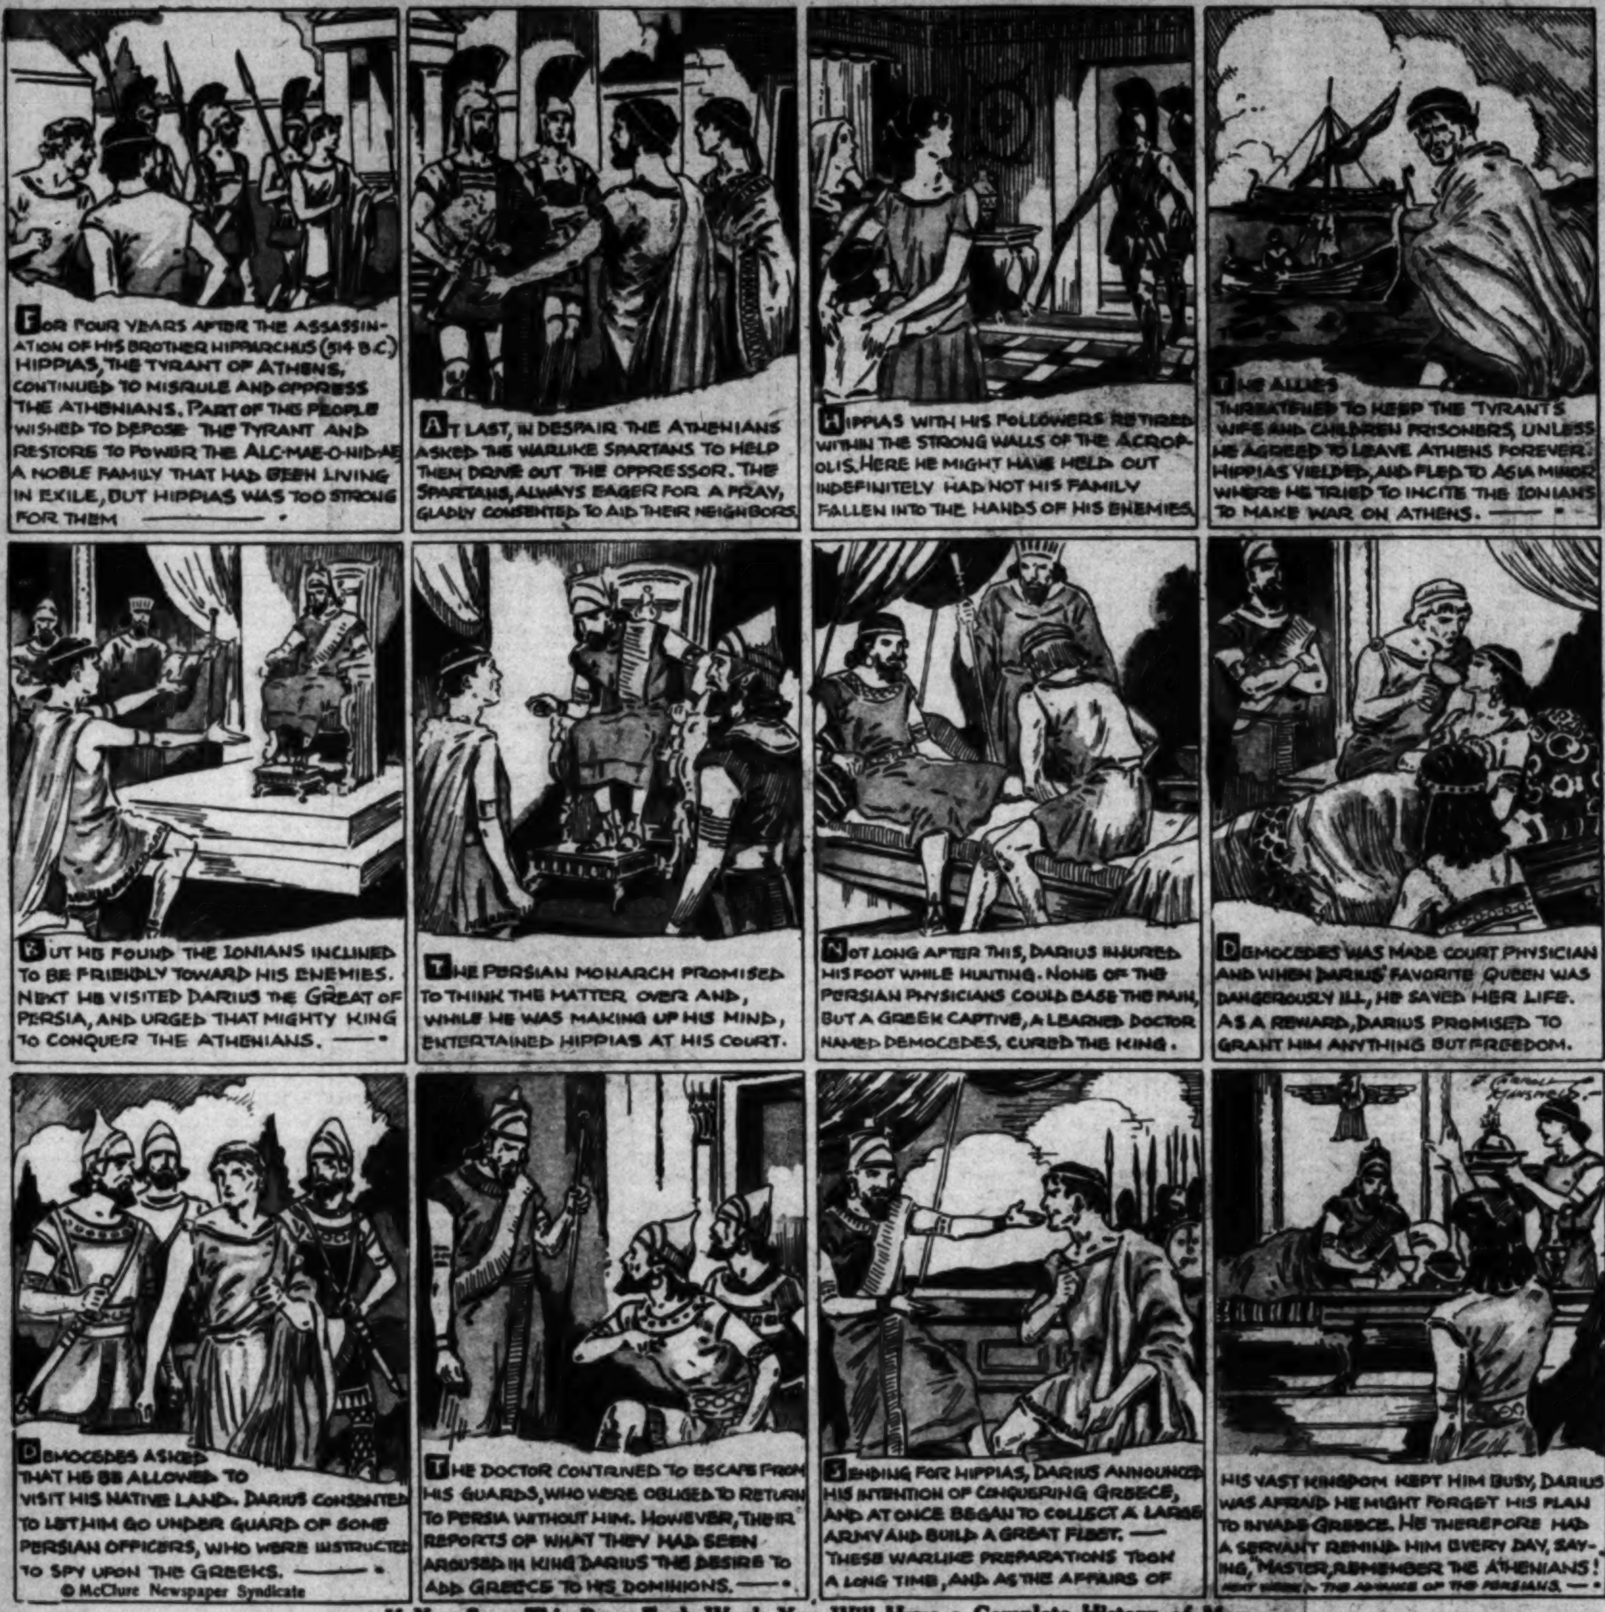
Chapter 46—The Fall of The Tyrant

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



FOR FOUR YEARS AFTER THE ASSASSINATION OF HIS BROTHER HIPPARCHUS (514 B.C.) HIPPIAS, THE TYRANT OF ATHENS, CONTINUED TO MISRULE AND OPPRESS THE ATHENIANS. PART OF THE PEOPLE WISHED TO DEPOSE THE TYRANT AND RESTORE TO POWER THE ALC-MAE-O-NID-AE, A NOBLE FAMILY THAT HAD BEEN LIVING IN EXILE, BUT HIPPIAS WAS TOO STRONG FOR THEM.

AT LAST, IN DESPAIR THE ATHENIANS ASKED THE WARLIKE SPARTANS TO HELP THEM DRIVE OUT THE OPPRESSOR. THE SPARTANS, ALWAYS EAGER FOR A FRAY, GLADLY CONSENTED TO AID THEIR NEIGHBORS.

HIPPIAS WITH HIS FOLLOWERS RETIRED WITHIN THE STRONG WALLS OF THE ACROPOLIS. HERE HE MIGHT HAVE HELD OUT INDEFINITELY HAD NOT HIS FAMILY FALLEN INTO THE HANDS OF HIS ENEMIES.

THE ALLIES THREATENED TO KEEP THE TYRANT'S WIFE AND CHILDREN PRISONERS, UNLESS HE AGREED TO LEAVE ATHENS FOREVER. HIPPIAS YIELDED, AND FLED TO ASIA MINOR WHERE HE TRIED TO INCITE THE IONIANS TO MAKE WAR ON ATHENS.

BUT HE FOUND THE IONIANS INCLINED TO BE FRIENDLY TOWARD HIS ENEMIES. NEXT HE VISITED DARIUS THE GREAT OF PERSIA, AND URGED THAT MIGHTY KING TO CONQUER THE ATHENIANS.

THE PERSIAN MONARCH PROMISED TO THINK THE MATTER OVER AND, WHILE HE WAS MAKING UP HIS MIND, ENTERTAINED HIPPIAS AT HIS COURT.

NOT LONG AFTER THIS, DARIUS INJURED HIS FOOT WHILE HUNTING. NONE OF THE PERSIAN PHYSICIANS COULD EASE THE PAIN, BUT A GREEK CAPTIVE, A LEARNED DOCTOR NAMED DEMOCEDES, CURED THE KING.

DEMOCEDES WAS MADE COURT PHYSICIAN AND WHEN DARIUS' FAVORITE QUEEN WAS DANGEROUSLY ILL, HE SAVED HER LIFE. AS A REWARD, DARIUS PROMISED TO GRANT HIM ANYTHING BUT FREEDOM.

DEMOCEDES ASKED THAT HE BE ALLOWED TO VISIT HIS NATIVE LAND. DARIUS CONSENTED TO LET HIM GO UNDER GUARD OF SOME PERSIAN OFFICERS, WHO WERE INSTRUCTED TO SPY UPON THE GREEKS.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THE DOCTOR CONTRIVED TO ESCAPE FROM HIS GUARDS, WHO WERE OBLIGED TO RETURN TO PERSIA WITHOUT HIM. HOWEVER, THEIR REPORTS OF WHAT THEY HAD SEEN AROUSED IN KING DARIUS THE DESIRE TO ADD GREECE TO HIS DOMINIONS.

SENDING FOR HIPPIAS, DARIUS ANNOUNCED HIS INTENTION OF CONQUERING GREECE, AND AT ONCE BEGAN TO COLLECT A LARGE ARMY AND BUILD A GREAT FLEET. THESE WARLIKE PREPARATIONS TOOK A LONG TIME, AND AS THE AFFAIRS OF dead branch of a hickory and a third one on a higher limb of the same tree.

HIS VAST KINGDOM KEPT HIM BUSY, DARIUS WAS AFRAID HE MIGHT FORGET HIS PLAN TO INVADE GREECE. HE THEREFORE HAD A SERVANT REMIND HIM EVERY DAY, SAYING, "MASTER, REMEMBER THE ATHENIANS!"

"You take the inside one on the lower branch and I'll take the one on the end," said John's Uncle Jack in a low voice. "Then when they fall they won't disturb the one above and we can both shoot at him if he doesn't get alarmed any way."

"Do we need three and have to kill them?" John whispered the question.

Mr. Anderson smiled at him. "We don't need three, but there's a poor family around here who could use one or two mighty well."

Their guns were raised and ready to be fired. John saw what appeared to be a part of another branch, move. Slowly it untwisted itself and formed into a giant snake, fully ten feet long and more than the thickness of a man's arm.

John turned his gun on the head of the snake. But evidently Mr. Anderson had not seen it, for a turkey fell at a shot from his rifle. Then the snake sprang. The two remaining turkeys gave vent to a series of wild cries and flew out of harm's way. The reptile fell to the ground before John could shoot, and made for the dead turkey.

Mr. Anderson saw the danger of losing their Thanksgiving dinner and rushed in, clubbing his gun, for it was a single shot and he had not had time to reload.

One blow was all that he could strike, for the snake pinned him to the tree by coiling around and around. Its ugly little head with darting tongue hovered over Mr. Anderson.

John was city bred, but he was a good shot for all that from constant practice in the shooting galleries of his home town. In ten seconds it would be too late. So he aimed at the snake's head, which was so dangerously near to that of his uncle, and pulled the trigger. Involuntarily, he closed his eyes and did not open them until his uncle's arm went around his shoulders.

"Good boy," said Mr. Anderson, huskily. "You saved my life—see."

The snake was lying in loose coils at the base of the hickory.

"We'll take the turkey that we did get and hurry home," Mr. Anderson said.

That night after telling his Aunt Betty for the hundredth time about the affair, John sighed.

"I only, I sort of wish that we could have gotten another turkey so we could give it to those poor people you mentioned, Uncle Jack," he said.

Mrs. Anderson clapped her hand to her mouth to keep in some telltale word. A knock sounded on the door, and Mr. Schenck entered carrying a fat gobbler.

"You see, John, those poor people will have turkey after all," said his aunt.

"Oh, gosh," said John. "I'm kinda glad, and now I guess I'll go to bed."

A HOLE IN A HEDGE

By Marguerite Clark, Long Beach

It was getting late in the afternoon, and the Little Old Lady had to bend low to see the pages that held her with such interest. Finally she let the magazine fall into her lap with a sigh and leaned back in her chair.

She thought back over the story she had just read in her Household Journal, a story of an elderly spinster who had held up a burglar with a pair of curling tongs and kept him under guard all night until the milk man came in the morning. How she would like to have an adventure like that to break off the monotony of her days, the Little Old Lady thought.

You see, she lived in a little cottage all alone except for her housekeeper who was hard of hearing and cross, and the Little Old Lady was just like a girl of 16 in her desire to have fun or adventure now and then. Every day she sat out on her lawn and read her journal and dozed, and her rebellious mind had more ambition than her tremulous little body could bear.

Suddenly, as the Little Old Lady was thinking deeply, she heard a scuffling sound on the sidewalk and saw a small package drop on the ground through the high hedge which surrounded her yard. The Little Old Lady could not see the one who had pushed the package through, but soon she heard more scuffling and gasped as she saw the head and shoulders of a policeman as he ran past her!

Wild thoughts raced through the Little Old Lady's head; a thief had dropped the package when chased by the policeman she had seen, and the thief would surely come back for his loot. She gazed fascinated at the brown package on the ground, and then an idea came to her, and with not a little difficulty she rose from her chair and moved it until it was about a foot from the hedge

The Hook-Swallowing Fish of Sandpit

Valley Sandpit, a body of water some twenty feet deep and covering but a small portion of an acre in size, had been abandoned as a producer of building sand just a short time. The pond had never been stocked with fish, but some boys, one Saturday afternoon, cast their lines in the hole, just for fun, and claimed to have lost several baits. Therefore, it was noised about the near-by village that Valley sandpit contained fish.

"Turtle, or something that crawled into the place," decided older heads. "The pond has no outlet, no inlet, that's certain; so there can be no fish in the pit."

Roy Ball and Henry Ward decided to keep alive the tale that the pit contained worth-while fish and they had a reason. The two were always together and more than one deep, dark trick had been charged to them.

One day the lads came to town with a couple of four-pound bass. It was the season of the year when bass were known to bite but seldom, so the catch excited the villagers. To all questions Roy and Henry shook their heads, and somebody concluded that the fish must have come from Valley sand pit.

"We are not talking," declared Roy Ball.

Before sundown that day Valley Pit was lined with eager fishermen, all of whom came armed with every kind of bait ever used in wooing sporty fish in or out of season; but never a strike did anybody get.

About dusk voices buzzed along shore, passing word that Roy and Henry were seen half hidden in a clump of willows and that the lads had already a catch of fish.

"Bass?" some one inquired.

"Fish—is all I know!" another muttered. "Heard 'em splash in the water, when Roy strung one. From the sound, there is a big lot of 'em, too."

Poles were cast aside and soon a small crowd gathered about the two boys who sat quiet and seemingly unwilling to talk.

"Catching anything?" an inquirer asked.

"Few," was the laconic reply. Then Henry muttered, "There's a big galoot in here and he's getting a square meal, I'm here to say!" At the same moment Henry Ward drew in his line with a deliberate but slow motion and gazed upon an empty hook. "Took the whole minnow this trip!" the boy growled. "Had a bait on there more than four inches long, too!"

This assertion was the means of causing much excitement among the crowd and everybody got busy. Again Henry pulled in his line. "It got a minnow bigger than the other that time. It's 'some' fish that's playing with this line," said he.

The moon shone brightly later on. The surface of Valley sandpit resembled a big sheet of silver and so quiet was the water that the slightest movement of a cork or line could be plainly seen. Eyes were directed over the end of every pole.

Roy and Henry finally rose, pulled from the water some perch, sunfish and a few bullheads on a string, and announced that they were tired of feeding a big tramp of a "cat" that was taking all their bait.

Whistling gently the twain started through the willows, homeward. As soon as they disappeared among the shadows several of the others along shore moved to the spot vacated and the "plunk, plunk, plunk" of leads told the tale of other lines being cast for the thief fish of Valley Pit.

Sometime later, of a sudden Jabe Hill uttered a suppressed shout, jerked in his line, muttered disappointment and in the moonlight gazed with disgust upon a hookless line.

Feverishly Jabe began tying on another hook; but before he succeeded, a companion threw in where he pulled his line out and watched with almost breathless interest for the big fish to tackle his lure.

There was a series of hard jerks, the placid surface of the pond rippled with many rings in the water and presently the cork on the line shot to one side a few inches and then, as if a load of bricks had been attached to it, went down. The holder of the pole distinctly felt the pull of the "bite" and out came the line, only to be found hookless!

"Jerusalem and jumping toads!" ejaculated the man with the pole. "That fellow is as big as a house with two stories!"

Jabe Hill was waiting his chance and with an excited, "Le' me at it again!" cast in.

Jabe's bobber stood quiet after settling for quite a while; but after a reasonable time elapsed it wiggled, then shot downward.

Once more the line was drawn in, minus bait and also hook.

By this time excitement was at fever height. Vowing there was a way to land the monster, every fisherman on Valley Pit changed bait and hooks. Some tried artificial minnows covered with ugly barbs that might have snared anything up to the size of a whale if it but got against the bait, to say nothing of tackling the bait with the mouth.

For an hour vicious strikes were experienced and for an hour baits and hooks were taken clean; then there came a sudden cessation of strikes, nobody got so much as a nibble and the excited crowd departed for their homes.

Next day the village was rife with wonder tales of a monster fish of Valley sandpit. Some of those on the banks of the pond the night before, even went so far as to assert they got a glimpse of the big fish, and one claimed he brought it to the top of the water. He described it as a "cat" weighing at least seventy-five pounds.

"And, whatever it is," declared another, "the varmint has a mighty good collection of hooks and sinkers in its stomach—enough to kill a dozen fish of size."

Sam Holliday, who owned a fifty-foot seine, was appealed to. A more or less secret expedition was arranged, the mission of which was to drag the pit and bring in the monster. "If we can't get it with a line, we can land the thing with the net!" declared Sam. Under reasonable circumstances he knew, too.

Next morning at daybreak Sam Holliday's "Lizzie" chugged off for Valley Pit and he was met at the shore by others in the scheme.

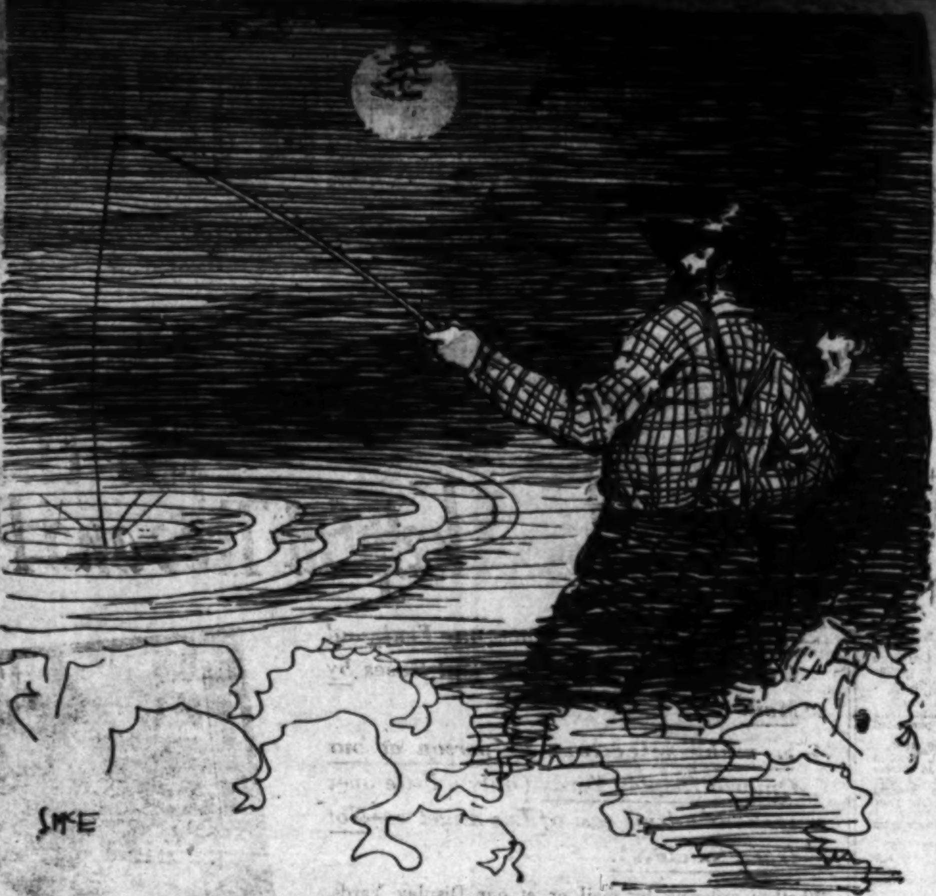
"Before we start operations," remarked Sam, turning to his companions, "let it be understood that, in case we land the monster, all share equally in what we get for it—that is, all but myself and I should be entitled to at least a third, for the reason that I furnish the seine and take chances with the game warden, in case we are seen at work. I'll also superintend the job."

"Fair enough!" the man's friends agreed. "What we want most, is to see the varmint. Guess everybody here would like to take a squint at a fish big enough and tough enough to eat hooks by the wholesale," a man observed.

"Yes, and it may not be a fish at all," another ventured. "It may be a big snake or some four-footed lizard of likely proportions."

These words caused a shudder to creep over several members of the party, and Sam had a hard time of it getting enough men of the crowd to enter the water far enough to put the seine into the depths.

Something like a dozen drags were made and each time the net was towed in it yielded not so much as a sunfish. Not even a crawdad was discovered; but every time the in-drag was made the seine was found to have clinging to it a fish hook or two, an artificial bait or two.



"That fellow is as big as a house," cried the man with the pole.

Sam Holliday scratched his head and spat thoughtfully. "We have combed the pond," he said. "Unless there is a hole back under the bank somewhere, no fish of any size could escape us. Anyway, no thing that swims knows enough to hide and that's the rub."

"Never was any hole dug in the bank of this pit," firmly said a man of the crowd. "Valley pit was made by a clamshell sand digger and everybody knows such a machine don't make holes in the bank. The pit wasn't made for a fish pond; it was made by taking building sand away. That's all there is to it. Next question is, where's the varmint?"

Sam again made ready for a drag, when of a sudden Roy Ball and Henry Ward appeared upon the scene. Spoke the former, "So you guys are seining, eh? Don't you know it's against the law to do that?"

"Who'll tell?" whined Sam Holliday.

"As to that, I don't know!" Roy laughed.

"Would you?"

"It wouldn't do any good, I'm thinking!" the boy giggled, nudging Henry. "There's a law against seining ponds that contain fish, but as this pond was never stocked and has no inlet, and no outlet, never was overflowed, it can't very well be said to contain anything but water."

"H'm!" Sam coughed, grasping at the ray of light thus thrown upon the subject. "That's so. If anybody did tell, who'd pinch us? Ain't nothing in the hole but water, sand and gravel."

"That's the very truth!" Roy and Henry chuckled, turning upon their heels and departing.

The lads were no more than out of sight than the net was hastily rolled and its owner set out for home, other members of the party following.

Roy and Henry loafed about town in various places of business during the day, listening to whispered conversations about the expedition to Valley sandpit and what came of it. When the boys got enough, they started a story of a far different kind and set the whole town upon its ears by noon.

To a clerk in the village postoffice the boys related their tale, for a village postoffice clerk is generally the local newspaper.

Roy and Henry did not catch any bass at all in Valley sand-pit. They never really claimed to have done so. They put up the entire job and had the time of their lives working out a sharp trick. With a long-handled tree-pruning knife, such as is used to cut high branches from trees, they did the job. Hidden in a clump of willows to one side of the spot they deserted at the pond—the spot which was soon appropriated by other fishers—they carefully and systematically reached under water with the pruner, jiggled lines for a moment, only later to pull the slide knife lever and thus cut off the end of a fish line.

That is the story the boys told and it was a truthful one. The string of fish they displayed at the pit had been caught elsewhere.

For a long time it was noticed how much respect two middle-size lads could command at the hands of their elder friends. Men who joined Sam Holliday's expedition to Valley pit, always had smiles for Roy and Henry; and the village drug store dished out many a soda and many an ice cream cone to the tricksters. They didn't have to pay for them out of their own pockets, either.

directly in front of the package. Then she sank, trembling, into the chair and crossing her feet, put one foot out until it rested ever so lightly on the package, and gave it the appearance of having been pushed under the foot. Then the Little Old Lady settled her head on one shoulder and shut her eyes.

Fifteen minutes later, a boy of about 16 crept cautiously inside the Little Old Lady's gate and looked eagerly in her direction. When he first saw her, he started back, and then crept toward her softly. Thank goodness, she was asleep, as he neared her he could even hear her gentle snoring, and occasionally her head would drop slightly as she dozed on. Crawling carefully along, the boy reached the package and put his hand to get it, when—

"Throw your hands up, or I'll shoot!" a soft voice said, and the terrified youth looked up to see a pair of blue eyes looking into his, and the cold barrel of a revolver leveled with the place where his heart would be.

Sinking to the grass, the boy threw up his hands and gazed steadily at the vicious-looking gun which was hidden under the shawl of the Little Old Lady so that only the tip showed. He wondered dumbly how the lady could have wakened so quickly and got hold on a gun on such short notice.

"Only a boy! Aren't you ashamed of yourself, young man?" questioned the Little Old Lady, after a full minute of complete silence.

The boy looked up at her in surprise. "Ashamed of what?"

"Why, thieving, of course, you young rascal. Don't add hypocrisy to your other sins." [illegible] Little Old Lady felt a thrill of admiration run through her.

For a moment the boy looked dumbly at the lady, and then as light broke through his puzzled mind, he grinned. "I guess you must mean the package I dropped through your hedge just now. That's mine, honest, it is."

The Little Old Lady thrilled with delight; he was a terribly clever thief and would try to get out of the scrape. Well, she would see about that. Sternly looking him straight in the eye, she said slowly:

"Young man, don't try to fool me. You stole that package, and I saw the policeman chasing you. I'm going to hold you here until I can call somebody, and you shall be duly punshed for your crime."

The youth's face became sober again, and he spoke seriously. "Gee, it did look bad, didn't it? It's all right, though, because the policeman you saw was my father. Tomorrow is his birthday, and I had just got his present and was coming out of the drug store around the corner when I saw him coming toward me. I started to run so he wouldn't see me, but he did and called after me. I pretended I didn't hear him and ran around this corner, but he followed, so I dropped the package through here, thinking I'd come back when dad had gone. Then I turned back to see what he wanted—it was just a message to mother, but he walked part way home before he turned, so it was quite awhile before I could get back. I'm awfully sorry if I scared you."

When the boy had finished speaking, the Little Old Lady was blushing as any young girl caught in a corner would blush. Then, suddenly, the humorous side of the thing came to her, and she began to shake with mirth.

The boy joined her laughter, which was further increased when the Little Old Lady showed him her "gun," which was the end of her bamboo walking-stick, which she had concealed under her scarf until just the hole in the bamboo could be seen.

"I'm just plain foolish," she said, when she could control her laughter. "If you had been a real thief, I could never have fooled you with that stick, even if the stories do say so. And if you had been a real thief, I would never have had the nerve to wake up when I did. I saw you were a boy through my eyelashes, or I would never have moved an inch."

"Well, I'm glad I don't look desprit," anyhow," laughed the boy.

"No, you don't, and I'm glad you weren't. Adventures are for young folks and middle-aged spinsters, not for old ladies," and the Little Old Lady sighed gently.

LETTER BOX

My Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I will never forget you, never, not if I were in the darkest predicament of my life, or if I were stowed away on some distant land. For you will always be my shining star, my goal to work toward.

It has been a long time since I wrote to you, but remember, I have not forgotten you, though.

I was greatly disappointed on Lindy's holiday as we had to go to school all day. I don't mean that if we had had that holiday I would have gone to see Lindy. No. You understand what I mean. I would have gone to some near-by nook to write. But this I was denied. It made me very angry. But after pondering on the situation for some time I thought, "My dear Aunt Dolly wouldn't act such. Oh! never," and so I let the rest of the day roll by happily.

Dearest, I hope your scenario work is coming along fine. But, how silly. I know it would with you as the doer. Dearest Aunt Dolly, I wish you all the success in the world. Every bit of it.

You must be wondering how I came across such news. You wrote to Lillian and I read your letter. That's how. Excuse me. Dearest aunt, I want to hear from you. Please write and tell me how you are doing and such.

Once more I wish to put something within your shining magazine that first put me in the straight-and-narrow road to fame, for, dearest, I have faith, that some day I will become successful. And then your name is going to shine, with mine. And how happy I will be.

Yours as ever before,

[Signed] ANNY MAE BROWNSTEIN, Burbank.

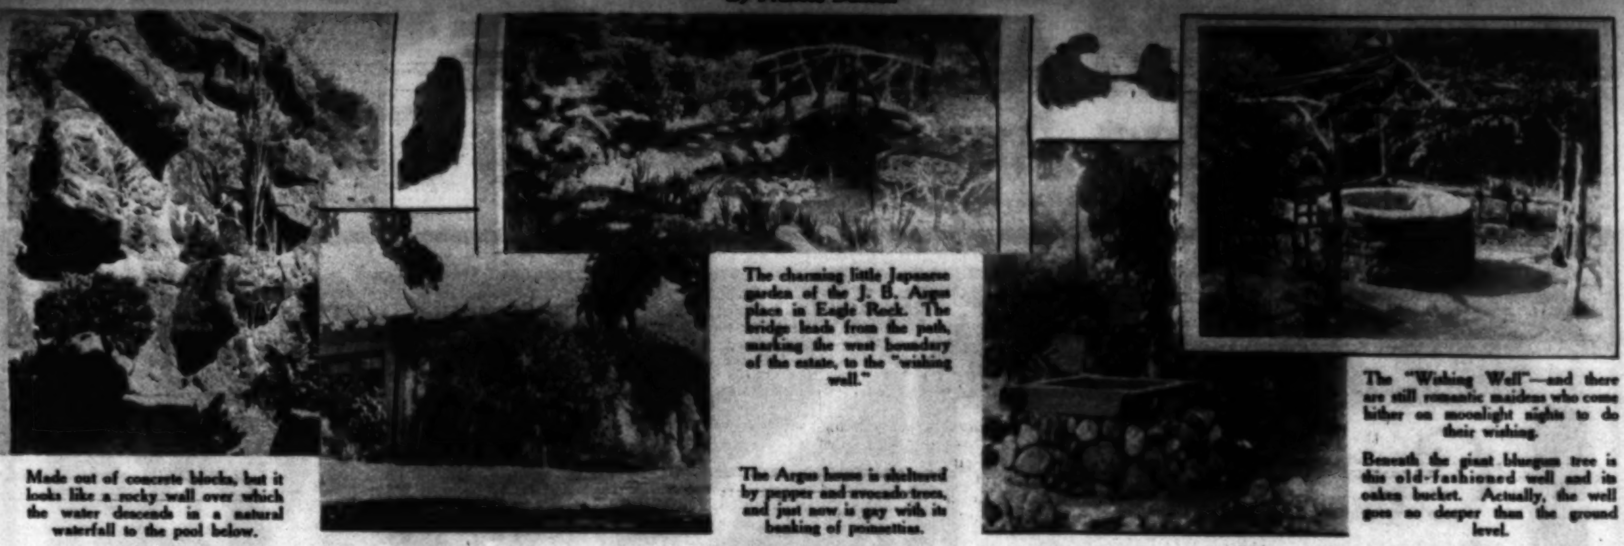
Individuality is Joy of Gardening—Why Standardize?

By Frances Duncan



Made out of concrete blocks, but it looks like a rocky wall over which the water descends in a natural waterfall to the pool below.

The charming little Japanese garden of the J. B. Argus place in Eagle Rock. The bridge leads from the path, marking the west boundary of the estate, to the "wishing well."

The Argus house is sheltered by pepper and avocado trees, and just now is gay with its banking of poinsettias.

The "Wishing Well"—and there are still romantic maidens who come hither on moonlight nights to do their wishing.

Beneath the giant bluegum tree is this old-fashioned well and its oaken bucket. Actually, the well goes no deeper than the ground level.

LIKE any object of one's affections, a garden is more beloved if, in addition to being beautiful, it is also interesting. Many of us are content to forego something of the former for the blessedness and enduringness of the latter quality. For this reason, the amateur garden is often so wholly delightful. Of course, one can see that this would be better "so," and that something else might "better be there," but the charm of it is that the owner's personality crops out. The garden is his garden—not that of anyone else. Thus if a man loves roses, he grows roses. If he loves the desert plants, he has them. If he likes to do amusing tricks with water, there is no reason why he shouldn't. I remember a widely-known journalist whose wife had a stately pleasure-dome decreed, with gleaming pergolas framing exactly planned color schemes in a perfect garden; yet I have seen the man search for a place where, free from the tyranny of marble exedrae, he might sit in his shirt-sleeves and smoke his pipe unrebuked by his surroundings. Above all things, the garden should fit the owner.

If there is a difference in tastes then each should plan for a place of refuge. If the chief gardener be the wife, surely the husband should have his own portion to garden as he likes. Gardening under someone else's direction is by no means so much fun as working out one's own ideas. They may not be the best, but one has a curious satisfaction in them—"a poor thing, but mine own," as Touchstone said of Audrey.

In our modern life we have sore need of places of refuge. For the most part, houses are planned so that there is scant chance of being alone. Whence it happens that an out-of-door place where one can be alone a bit is an inestimable benefit, and the California garden is tending more and more to the possession of the out-door living room—and the place in which there is seclusion.

Clever Gardening

A delightful time Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Argus must have had in making their garden at the head of Alverne Avenue in Eagle Rock. Like many an interesting place near Los Angeles, this is a hillside garden and the problems which hillside gardening brings have resulted in some novel and interesting solutions, of which other gardeners may like to take note.

The estate, twelve acres in extent, lies close to the mountains so that the house, charming and unpretentious, and something of the Swiss chalet in type, fits well into the landscape. So does the gardening, even some of it that is wholly artificial. For instance, behind the house, where the land slopes abruptly, the owners would have liked it had a steep, rocky wall been there, but since Nature had not obliged them, the next thing to do was to make one. Hence the concrete retaining wall. But it is not a flat wall of concrete—that would have necessitated a different type of garden. Instead, the wall was built of concrete blocks made to simulate large, rough rocks. Pockets and crevices in the wall afford foothold for rock-loving plants. Over this water slips, falling to a pool below. The waterfall, although the water comes from a pipe, is very realistic, and the whole effect is of a small, rocky canyon. So many of the water effects in California are constructed, not by Nature, but by clever gardeners, and the natural streams have seasons of being greatly in need of outside aids to beauty, that water in Southland gardens is most satisfying when it's a combination of art and Nature, and we do not have to wait for winter rains, but may turn a lever and have our waterfall.

Easterners may sigh for their mountain streams, for the deep, cool pools where trout lie hid in summer, but the Californian is well content. There are many interesting features of the Eagle Rock estate, one of the best being a very cleverly done Japanese garden, designed by a Japanese landscape artist of San Francisco. This is essentially Japanese in its harmony, its perfectness of detail, and in the way it is fitted to the landscape, or rather the way in which the miniature landscape that has been constructed fits into the scene. About the pool are planted the prostrate juniper, irises, cattails, with here and there a bit of blue Agathea coelestris to give a touch of heavenly color, and in the pool are the lotus and various water-lilies. From the Japanese garden, which is near the west boundary of the estate, the path leads to the "wishing well." This is a picturesque structure of rustic poles, overarching a brick well-curb. Over the "well" hangs an empty bird-cage. Typical, quite possibly, of the winged desire which is here to be caged like the blue-bird of Maeterlinck's play, ready to be taken home. Maidens who wish to avail themselves of its aid may come hither on moonlit nights.

Another spot for the romantic, who have little enough attention in our modern gardening is an old-fashioned well and its oaken bucket beneath a mighty eucalyptus tree. The effect is there, although the well goes no deeper than the ground level. Still we have a sun-dial in the garden, because it looks well there, though we no longer need its assistance to tell the time, for which purpose, when dials were first made, it was necessary. Also we have the "terms," the sculptured busts mounted on pedestals, which were first brought into gardens by the old pagans who believed their presence needful for protection. To be logical, the modern gardener should put up statues to the inventors of good spraying combinations, to the worthy toad.

At the highest point in the garden, beyond rows and rows of grapevines and of avocado trees, is a wistaria-covered pergola. Here one has shade, also a beautiful outlook on all Eagle Rock Valley, over Los Angeles, and over Catalina Island—and charmingly framed between the pergola pillars. Many interesting trees are to be found on the estate—fine specimens of deodars, sequoias, live-oaks, and many flowering trees and shrubs.

North and west of the house a depression has suggested the making of a natural amphitheatre, and here Eagle Rock folk may listen to home talent in song or play, and delightful programs and social functions are held. For, indeed, a place where an outdoor entertainment may be held is highly appreciated in a community. It is not often that a garden fits so many needs—seclusion, romance, a fine prospect—and an opportunity for entertaining on a fairly large scale.

The Winter Pruning

Winter pruning may be done now. Prudent folk whose grape vines are used to decorate and as heaven-given shade for pergolas and arbors should prune them now. But they need not emulate the vineyardist, whose idea is the maximum of production and nothing else considered.

It is not difficult to prune vines so they will go where they are desired. If the purpose is to cover an arbor, to have overhead shade and no side wall of green, then the vine should be trained to go directly to the top of the structure, with side-shoots lopped off until that point is reached. Then, not promiscuous branching, but two or three strong shoots, are permitted the docile vine, one to go along the overhead beams in one direction, one in the other, and, if desired, one across. This being established, the yearly pruning consists in cutting back to the main branch, for the grapes are produced on "new wood." Where trellises are wanted, the vines can be trained to go just as high and just as low as one pleases, the point being to have an erect growth reach the top, and as the vine progresses upward, to select laterals and train them along wires which are placed at the distances preferred. This being done, consider these chosen shoots as the vine and cut back the rest to induce fruit production. I have seen grape vines all over a house wall fifty feet high and yet producing grapes abundantly.

Pruning of other vines may be done now and of all vines which flower on the new wood. Good gardeners are careful whom they turn loose on their vines. I have seen Banksia roses, which made a glorious showing, climbing high in a tree, completely wrecked by a pruning-man who proudly and completely demolished them—and they had been the tree's reason for existence. All that these very luxuriant roses need is a cutting back, a removing of the dead wood and the weaker shoots.

Thinning of shrubs is in order and cutting back of those that flower on the new growth. A skilful pruner considers his subject as carefully as a skilled hairdresser regards the physiognomy of the girl whose hair he is to bob. The character of the shrub should be considered. Thus in shrubs of a drooping habit, one removes upright shoots which mar the symmetry, while in stiffly upright shrubs the contrary practice would hold. Interfering branches are removed—the growth should be outward. A simple beheading mars the gracefulness of the plant and induces a too-thick growth from the roots.

Plantings

Now is the time to plant deciduous trees and shrubs, and this means all the lovely race of flowering trees, also fruit trees. Now is the time for planting roots of hardy perennials, or the early blooming kinds. Chrysanthemums, having bloomed so recently, are better left undisturbed until spring, but delphiniums, anemones, and the rest may be planted. Bulbs may yet be set out for spring blooming, also lilies and irises—in fact, the latter may be planted almost at any time. Gladioli for earliest crop may be set out. In short, the autumn planting which might have been done in October and November may still be done if one does not delay—and the forehanded are already beginning their earliest spring planting.

Mr. Winters' SUCCESS

shows what intelligence and industry can accomplish at NORCO

In February, 1926, Mr. F. F. Winters purchased a small farm at Norco, and went into the poultry business. Having had no previous experience with poultry on a commercial basis, he followed the Norco Plan of Profitable Production, getting advice and assistance from the Norco advisers.

Now, twenty-three months later, he can point with pride to an unbroken record of success—in less than two short years Mr. Winters has achieved independence.

$60.00 to $183.00 per Month NET PROFIT

The Winters flock began laying in the summer of 1926, and since then there has been a steady income that showed a NET PROFIT EVERY MONTH, even during the low-price periods of 1927. These profits, varying from $60.00 to $183.00 per month, have been ample to keep the family, and allow generous sums for improving the business. Last month, Mr. Winters bought lumber for another 1,000-hen unit and paid cash for it. He has also ordered 2,500 baby chicks for spring delivery, and plans to build up his flock to 5,000 hens as rapidly as possible. Incidentally, Mr. Winters is enthusiastic about Norco.

NORCO IDEAL FOR BEGINNERS; ADVICE AND COOPERATION; RESPONSIBLE BACKING

Norco, founded in May, 1923, is the ideal place for small farm beginners, because the Norco Plan was thoroughly worked out before property was offered to the public. And the success of hundreds of families now living here is proof that you, too, can succeed under the Norco Plan.

Farm and poultry advisers are now at Norco to teach you the proper methods of small farm operation. Their technical knowledge and years of practical experience is at your command to help you avoid beginners' mistakes.

Norco is unique in that it is owned, developed, and sold by a company whose financial resources are ample to insure the purchaser a square deal and whose sales policy is based on the belief that the buyer should succeed.

This company will not knowingly oversell you. Our experience has shown that the men and women who go to Norco, start with small, comfortable homes, no more land than is needed, and put the larger part of their investments into profit-producing equipment, are the ones that succeed quickest.

MILLION-DOLLAR RESORT NOW BUILDING WILL BENEFIT NORCO RESIDENTS

The great million-dollar hotel, resort, and mineral hot springs baths project, now actually building at Norco, should benefit residents greatly. Already it has given many of them good-paying jobs, and very soon it will create a home market for Norco Quality Products.

Visit our office—there's no obligation—and get full information about the opportunities now offered at Norco. We believe this community is now in a stage of development where it offers greater possibilities to intelligent, industrious people than are to be found anywhere else in Southern California.

The Official Side of Pest Control Work

Chemistry Division, State Department of Agriculture, Concerned Only With Efficacy of Materials Used—Supervision Over Application Lies With County Horticultural Commissioners—Confusion Avoided

By K. L. WOLFF

TO MANY farmers and orchardists the line of demarcation between the work of the County Horticultural Commissioner's office and the Division of Chemistry of the State Department of Agriculture in regulating the materials and services of agricultural pest control is not clearly understood. As a result there has been considerable confusion, and valuable time has been lost through the sending of requests for aid or service to the wrong agency. The difference in function of the two offices is well defined, however, and a degree of smoothness in the operation of the two separate laws involved in their work has been attained by the experience of several years of successful enforcement.

The division of chemistry has jurisdiction in the control and regulation of dealers and manufacturers of the materials known as economic poisons. These, by the way, may not be poisons at all in the commonly accepted sense of the word. To use the legal definition: "The term 'economic poisons' as used in this act shall include any substance, or mixture of substances intended to be used for preventing, destroying, repelling, or mitigating any and all insects, fungi, weeds, rodents, or other plant or animal pest, collectively or individually, which may infest or be detrimental to vegetation, man or other animals or households, or be present in any environment whatsoever."

As a first step the Economic Poison Act requires all manufacturers or importers of economic poisons to secure a certificate of registration before offering material for sale. Only government officials manufacturing and selling products at cost and small manufacturers producing poisons for household and similar use, such as ant pastes or syrups, which do not have a retail value of over $500 a year, are exempted.

Applicants for a certificate must file with the Director of Agriculture a statement of the brands, trademarks, and kinds of economic poisons they intend to manufacture. They must also submit a statement showing the name and amount of each active ingredient and the total amount of inert ingredients in each material. Or, if the maker desires, he can deliver a sample of his product to the Department of Agriculture instead of a list of ingredients. This alternative procedure makes the "secret formula" proprietors feel better—the department chemists have to find out what the constituents are.

CAN REFUSE LICENSE

The director of agriculture has the power, after holding a hearing, to refuse to register or to cancel the registration of any material which has been shown to have little or no value for the purpose for which it is intended to be used, or if it proves injurious or detrimental to plant life. This provision makes it possible to eliminate many products of little or no merit before they are placed on the market. It also gives the authority for holding hearings to clear the field of insecticides which are ineffective. Hearings held by the officers of the division of chemistry follow the general lines of court procedure. A full opportunity is given the defendant to put on testimony to prove the goods in question to be valuable

Each lot or package of economic poison put on sale in this State must carry a label showing the brand, the name and address of the manufacturer or dealer and the place of manufacture. Inert ingredients, if present, must be indicated. The labelling clause is probably one of the strongest weapons of the entire act. Through its requirements the inspectors of the division of chemistry can trace faulty wares to their source. If the contents of any package do not conform with statements appearing on the label, the poison may be considered misbranded. Failure to label, misbranding or the adulteration of a poison constitute violation of the act—a misdemeanor.

Official samples of registered economic poisons are being taken continually by the inspectors. Some are secured at the place of manufacture, others from dealers and many from the consumer—all before the packages have been broken. Analyses of these samples are made at the laboratories of the division at Sacramento. Annually, the results of chemical analyses of the official samples are made public by the director. Findings of the government chemists are given in comparison with the guaranty of the manufacturer.

The work of the division of chemistry ends when a material which meets all of the requirements of the California Economic Poison Act is turned over to the consumer. But, as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so is an insecticide or fungicide no better than its application. The best material becomes but little more effective than rain water when carelessly applied.

USE ALSO CONTROLLED

Under modern agricultural pest control methods, in Southern California, the actual field work is done, not by the grower, but by individuals working for hire. In the fumigation and spray field there are two groups of operators, co-operative and commercial. The work of the former class is generally carried on as an adjunct to a growers' marketing organization, whereas the latter may be a firm operating several crews, or a grower, possessed of a spray rig, who does work for his neighbors.

If there was no form of supervision over the people doing pest control work for hire, much of the value of the Economic Poison Act would be lost. The administration of a law which requires the abatement of horticultural nuisances would, at times, penalize orchardists and others who have already been victimized by unscrupulous operators.

Any person, firm or corporation desiring to engage for hire in the business of controlling plant diseases, insect or other animal pests in California must, before operating, secure a certificate of qualification from the County Horticultural Commissioner as provided for by a section of the political code. In addition, the larger citrus-fruit-producing counties require a license by county ordinance. Although the county ordinances are similar to the State law in that they provide for the qualifying of operators and foremen, they also carry provisions more closely related to the local requirements.

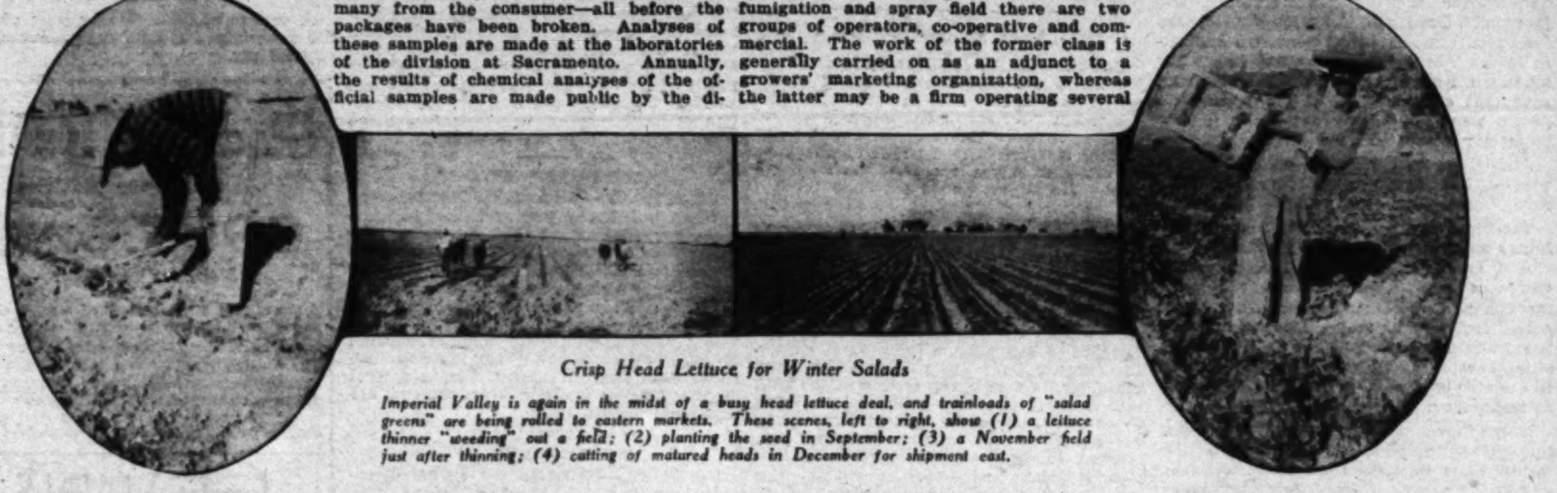
To secure an operator's certificate and license the applicant must prove his ability to engage in the desired work, and must have good equipment. Once he has secured his credentials, his equipment and work are liable to inspection at any time. Monthly reports have to be rendered to the Commissioner, giving the name and location of each piece treated, the pest treated for, the material and strength of material used and the amount applied. The carrying on of work in an unworkmanlike or negligent manner constitutes grounds for revoking the operator's license, a procedure which is carried out by means of a hearing before the Board of County Supervisors. The certificate demanded by State Law may be revoked for cause at any time. In several counties a policy of requiring all credentials to be renewed annually is followed, thus allowing a closer check on the various operators.

THEY WORK TOGETHER

In the foregoing an attempt has been made to briefly outline the legal requirements governing the activities of the people manufacturing and dealing in economic poisons as one group and those who apply the materials, or sell their services, as another. No detailed explanation of the methods of procedure of the two governmental bodies concerned is made, however, as the purpose is to tell what is done rather than how it is done.

Summing up, it may be said that the Division of Chemistry in the enforcement of the Economic Poison Act and the County Horticultural Commissioner, through a section of the Political Code, work to secure a high standard of pest control and eradication, one organization by efficacy of materials, the other by efficiency of labor. Both are separate but at the same time interdependent. The good of one would be greatly nullified by the absence of the other.

What the consumer should remember is that the State Department of Agriculture is concerned in the case of ineffective materials while the County Horticultural Commissioner has jurisdiction when questionable workmanship in the actual application occurs.



Crisp Head Lettuce for Winter Salads

Imperial Valley is again in the midst of a busy head lettuce deal, and trainloads of "salad greens" are being rolled to eastern markets. These scenes, left to right, show (1) a lettuce thinner "weeding" out a field; (2) planting the seed in September; (3) a November field just after thinning; (4) cutting of matured heads in December for shipment east.

Imperial Valley Now Harvesting Great Crop of Winter Lettuce

By IVA M. McFADDEN

BRAWLEY.—The annual winter head lettuce season, the "green-gold" harvest for Imperial Valley growers, is on once more. Essentially a game of chance, the lettuce deal holds promise of dazzling returns—with the ever-present possibility, also, of a disastrous financial "flop." The chance lies not so much in the growing, which in recent years has become highly effective, as in the condition of eastern markets. No other crop, say distributors, is so susceptible to changing market conditions. An overcrowded or glutted market will cause lettuce prices to tumble overnight, as evidenced by last year's results when the Imperial Valley attempted to market the largest crop in its history during December and January.

The present deal, which opened with a few carlot shipments in December, and which will hit its peak this month, holds bright promise. The lettuce, fortunately, is of exceptional quality, and the acreage has been cut to slightly more than 22,000 acres—15,000 acres less than last year's.

Weather conditions throughout the season have been excellent. Slight rains came early, but the plants were too immature to be harmed. A rain, coming when some lettuce was being cut, ended so soon, and was followed by such cold weather, that no ill effects were seen. Although planting was not begun as soon as last year, weather conditions actually advanced the crop generally, perhaps a week, with the first cars going out December 7. With good weather continuing, Nature seems to be doing her best to help the lettuce man this year.

THE GROWING SEASON

Planting of lettuce in the Imperial Valley begins in September, and continues until early December. The seed is planted in dry ground, on the top of ridges that have been thrown up north and south. This ridging is opposite to that of cantaloupes, which are laid east and west to provide a sunny slope for the plants. Lettuce distinctly does not want an overdose of sun. Two rows are planted on each ridge, and when the time for irrigating arrives, the water is run very slowly down the furrows so that it "subs" to the top of the ridges.

As soon as the lettuce plants have obtained a little growth, ridges are cultivated with two-horse cultivators, so constructed as to work up the dry, cracked furrows, cultivate the edges of the beds, and clean the ground between the lettuce rows. This leaves only the lines of lettuce for the thinners who follow with short handled hoes. Some growers allow twelve to fourteen inches between plants, while others allow them to stand as close as five to eight inches. Thinning is hard work, for it must all be done with a stooping posture, but Mexicans, who become expert at the business, can cover a large amount of ground in a day. Usually this sort of labor is contracted by the acre. Later weeds must be hoed out with the ordinary long-handled hoe, and cultivation keeps up as long as necessary to keep the great lettuce fields free from weeds.

Early lettuce matures in about ninety days, while later lettuce, which goes through the coldest weather of the year, takes about 120 days to mature.

MADE TO ORDER

A very interesting feature of the head lettuce industry has been the development of blight-resistant plants. In 1920, a field one-half mile wide and two miles long, was found to be so badly infested with Brown Blight that much of it was unfit for cutting. Blight spread rapidly over many fields, and caused growers grave concern. Dr. Jaggers of the United States Department of Agriculture became interested in the disease, and planted about 110 varieties of lettuce on this same field the following year. Practically all known varieties were given a chance to see what they would do. Very few proved satisfactory. There were many kinds that were not infected, but they were either unsuitable for growing in this district,

CROP ROTATION BEST

MESA (Ariz.)—Experiments made by the University of Arizona in the use of commercial fertilizer on cotton lands in the Salt River Valley have resulted in a report that the increased production is not sufficient to pay for the cost of the fertilization. It is asserted that better results may be secured, in a relatively inexpensive way, by crop rotation.

LABOR SUPPLY MENACED

Dr. Clements gave the crucial place of labor in the California farmer's scheme thus:—

"There are around 136,000 farmers in our State. Of these 100,000 have under 100 acres; 83,000 under forty acres—and it is this latter group who are mainly responsible for our agricultural supremacy. The success of the farmer depends upon his handling of the crop to keep production costs as low as possible. His project is a one-man affair until his harvesting period is reached.

"A hired man for the year is unnecessary. A single hired man at harvest is a cypher—he needs 10, 20 or 50—and he needs them quickly to get his crop off and into market. Fluid, casual labor is his only salvation; it is an absolute necessity. Suddenly cut off the single dependable source of that labor and your small farmer faces ruin.

"You can arrive at some idea of the urgency of a fluid, casual labor by a study of the crops which brook no delay at harvest. For instance, the grape crop—July to November—represents some 73,000 cars and requires fifteen men to the car. Cantaloupes, May to July, and melons, June to November, require 20,000 cars, ten men to the car. Deciduous fruits from April 15 to November 15 fill 25,000 cars. Oranges and lemons, handled all the year represent from 55,000 to 60,000 cars, with four workers to one car per day. All perishables represent 240,000 cars with ten workers per car.

"Now when I say that, to handle these and other crops, labor was short this last year, including all the Mexican labor we have, what is going to happen when that Mexican labor is wiped out by act of Congress?"

Dr. Clements added that when he was a guest of the Mexican government last year on a tour of agricultural investigation, he found the States of the Mexican West Coast themselves short of labor and was told the Calles government was bending every effort to cut down emigration to the United States in favor of its own agrarian schemes.

"A great many worthy people" he continued, "are alarming themselves over 'the pollution of the blood stream' of the Anglo-Saxon by a descending horde of Mexican Indians. Theoretically that cry sounds pretty dreadful; practically it is a whisper in a whirlwind.

"The Mexican laborer we have in California and the Southwest—and now he is percolating even into the potato fields of Idaho and Minnesota and back into Eastern industrial centers—is not even a potential citizen, nor the father of potential citizens. This Mexican crosses the border to trade his labor for our dollars—to him a small fortune to be gained in a few months—and when he has them he goes home again.

"Nobody possesses any reliable and scientific data on the migrations to and fro of Mexican labor, for the greater part of it has been 'bootlegged' across the border since the imposition of visa and head tax by the law of 1924. But from labor agents, industrial bodies and kindred observers from El Paso to Los Angeles a fair grading of figures shows that between 80 and 85 per cent of all Mexicans in agriculture and industry in this country go home in the slack season. The Mexican is a homing pigeon; he will not stay permanently in surroundings of an unknown tongue.

"If Los Angeles social workers are alarmed by a drain on their charitable funds of 68 per cent devoted to indigent Mexicans congregating in our city in the slack months of winter, they might consult with social workers in El Paso. The Texas city, with a Mexican population of from 60 to 70 per cent of the whole, distributes only 6 per cent of its charitable budget among that race. The Mexican population of Los Angeles is but 5 per cent of the whole."

HARVESTING LETTUCE

or could not meet the market requirement. It was necessary to carefully pick over the field, and find here and there a plant that was not infected. The seeds from these plants were planted the following year, on soil that was known to be infected. This same process of selection was carried on for three years, and it finally developed three strains of blight-resistant lettuce seed. E. W. Cuff, a Brawley man, helped Dr. Jaggers very materially in the first selection of seeds.

This making-to-order of lettuce is certainly in line with the great strides agriculture has made. "Give us ten years, and we can develop any kind of a lettuce head we wish," said a well-known grower not long ago.

MARKET PRECAUTIONS

When lettuce swung into its stride in Imperial Valley, the United States government sent a representative of the bureau of markets to help in the marketing deal. Last year many new markets were opened up. Stampeding of large cities was avoided as much as possible, and cars were diverted to smaller centers where distribution could be made to towns of lesser size. This wider distribution has greatly aided in keeping lettuce prices stabilized.

Cultivating Lettuce

An important field operation designed to keep down weeds after thinning.

Fields which were thinned in November are now the scene of activity. Field boxes are distributed along roadways to be of convenience to the workmen. Approximately one-third of the field men employed, cut the lettuce with short knives especially adapted for the work, and throw the heads from three rows into one. The other two-thirds of the crew place the heads in field crates, without any regard to size, as packing is done later. These boxes are carried to roads and gathered on low wagons. At a convenient place the crates are loaded on trucks and taken into the packing sheds, which are in town along the railroad tracks.

Grading and culling are done at these central sheds, and the county employs inspectors to watch the pack and see that inferior stuff does not leave the packing-house.

While the winter lettuce deal really started in a small way in December, the real activity is just now getting underway. It is estimated that fully two-thirds of the winter crop will be harvested and marketed during January and the early part of February, although the deal will string along after that time until the later part of March. The peak of the deal is expected to be reached between the 20th and 28th of January, at which time several hundred carloads of packed and graded lettuce will be leaving each day for eastern marketing centers.

Growers and distributors are enthusiastic over the outlook for the deal. Shipments from the Salt River Valley of Arizona will decrease daily from now on, and the Imperial Valley deal will have the markets alone until the Arizona spring deal starts during the later part of March. With the acreage in California materially decreased from last year, there appears to be little danger of glutted markets, in the opinion of distributors, and prices are expected to be well maintained throughout the deal. It is estimated that between 12,000 and 14,000 cars will roll from the winter deal in the Imperial Valley area, which centers at Brawley and Westmorland.

Farm and Orchard Magazine
Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Orchard Magazine is the only farm journal in the West printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"The Greenest Pastures—"

WHAT are the reasons responsible for the unprecedented migration from farms to cities in recent years?

Well, the reasons are exactly as those given for their action by the large army of former city dwellers who in recent years have moved to the farming areas, if the United States Department of Agriculture is to be believed.

A survey just conducted by the bureau of agricultural economics of the department, covering 2745 persons in cities who have moved from farms scattered generally throughout the country, and 1166 persons who have moved from cities to farms, indicates that both classes of citizens have moved in their various directions for the primary purpose of "bettering their economic conditions." The farm has its "drawbacks," the city its "inducements," say those who have quit the wide open spaces for paved streets, sky-scrapers and synthetic food. The opportunities are better for making a living on the farm than in the city, says that other section of the population, grown weary of paying assessments, poor street car service and installment collectors.

And there you have it—"The greenest pastures are always on the other side of the fence," or words to that effect.

The Department of Agriculture survey contains a number of interesting features. It disclosed, among other things, that some farmers move to town because they cannot make farming pay. Others move because of better school facilities for their children; some are physically unable to continue with farming; still others, a notably small proportion, move to the city because they are financially able to retire from the farm.

Most of those moving from cities to farms, the survey discloses, were found to be former farmers who had been disillusioned by city life. They have found they could make a better living on the farm than in the city. The bright lights, it seems, have been hard on the eyes; the city has proved a hard taskmaster, in spite of its promises of comfortable incomes. Some families, says the report, have moved back to the farm because of better living conditions in the country; the high cost of living in the cities has driven others to the country; still others have been induced to take up farming for the satisfaction of an "independent life."

While the survey discloses that the movement of population from farm to city has been much greater in recent years than that from city to farm, the farming communities haven't suffered so much as might appear. Migrants from cities to farms, the survey shows, have usually been men in the early prime of life. They have had an average of two children to the family, and about two-thirds of those interviewed have stated that they left the city because they believed that better health for both parents and children could be found on the farms. This indicates a steady weeding out of older people on the farms, who are replaced, in part at least, by men and women in earlier life, who are developing a more vigorous and efficient agriculture.

The greatest loss from the increasing migration from farm to city, says the Federal survey, is that those farmers financially able to retire take with them to the city a large volume of wealth and experience, the loss of which retards rural institutional development.

A Worth-While Book

Practical orchardists as well as beginners in orchard and vineyard culture in Western America will find much of value in a new volume, "Practical Horticulture for the Pacific Slope," by H. K. Dickson, head of the agricultural department of the Kern County Union High School at Bakersfield, and Harry L. Holmes, instructor in horticulture and landscape design in the same institution. This book of more that 300 pages was intended mainly as a textbook for high school students taking up agricultural study, but is packed full of information of usefulness to everyone interested in tree and vine planting. The clearness and simplicity of the style is one of the things that will commend the volume to the general reader, while it is comprehensive to the extent of covering about the whole range of conditions and problems encountered by Pacific Coast growers.

Those Record Prices

Stockmen of the Southwest are still talking about the high prices realized at the public auction sale held in connection with the recent "Christmas Fat Stock Week" at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, when a steer sold for $1.75 a pound on the hoof, the highest figure recorded west of the Rocky Mountains, and a fat lamb brought the record-breaking price of $5 a pound. Such prices, it is admitted, are only realized on "special" occasions of the kind when bidding for the "best that is" becomes somewhat of a "stunt" but the opinion is held that they reflect a new and increasing respect for fine meat animals in this part of the country, as well as the fact that Los Angeles is becoming a great meat center. The auction method of selling is also given credit for its part in the setting of the high values, since it takes a public sale to bring about real competition and rivalry among buyers. The C. F. Calhoun Company, Inc., handled the public auctioning of the notable local sale.

Store credit costs more than bank credit because storekeepers are equipped to handle merchandise and not credit; bankers are equipped to handle credit and not merchandise.

Farm News of the Great Southwest
DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

REDLANDS.—The heavy snows of December have brought smiles to the faces of the orange growers, for early snows mean more water for the mountain reservoirs. The big reservoir for this territory is Bear Valley. At the start of the season the water was up to sixty-five feet on the face of the dam. It went back to fifty-four feet, but the melting of the snows will bring it up rapidly.

PERSIMMON SURVEY

SANTA ANA.—The agricultural extension service has just completed a survey of the persimmon industry in Orange county. A census was taken of all plantings as to age, acreage and varieties. Cultural practices of the growers were also investigated and summarized. The survey revealed a total of 537 acres of persimmons, classified in three age groups, as follows: 392 acres, 1 to 4 years; 89 acres, 5 to 8 years; 64 acres 9 years and over.

STUDY WEEVIL CONTROL

TALBERT.—Pepper and pimento growers from all parts of Orange county met here recently to receive instructions on pepper weevil control from United States Department of Agriculture officials. The pepper growers' department of the Farm Bureau, headed by J. A. Knapp and R. N. Ellis, assistant farm adviser, is sponsoring a county-wide campaign to turn under all plants of the past season. The entomologists recommend this procedure to reduce or eliminate winter quarters for the weevil, which normally hibernates in the stems of the pepper plant. Between 5000 and 6000 acres will be thus treated in the country. A delegation of local growers will visit San Diego county to start a similar campaign.

GOOD CROP REPORT

BEAUMONT.—More than $300,000 was realized by fruit and grain ranchers in Beaumont township during the past season, according to the annual report of horticultural inspector J. E. Liddle. The cherry crop, estimated at 500 tons, produced the greatest revenue, with a value of $70,000. Grain, hay, apples, pears and grapes were other heavy revenue producers for the district. Mr. Liddle's crop report for the San Gorgonio Pass district for 1927 shows a total of 16,275 acres under cultivation, and 928 nonbearing acres.

WALNUT SCHOOL

VENTURA.—W. B. Hooper, walnut extension specialist, has completed plans with Ventura County Farm Bureau officers and executives, for the holding of a walnut growers' school in the Ventura county court house, January 19, 20 and 21. This school will be one of several scheduled for Southern California. Several authorities on walnut growing will be present as instructors.

HEATERS FOR RHUBARB

COVINA.—Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cleugh, who are growing ten acres of improved Cherry Giant rhubarb in this vicinity, have definitely proven the effectiveness of protecting rhubarb from frost damage by the orchard heater. Mr. and Mrs. Cleugh began their experiment last year, and now have their acreage equipped with heaters designed to throw the heat close to the earth. Mr. Cleugh states that rhubarb is more susceptible to frost than citrus trees, and he begins to heat at a temperature of thirty degrees.

PASS MEAT ORDINANCE

VISALIA.—Designed to provide rigid inspection of all meats or meat products disposed of in the county, the Tulare county supervisors have adopted a county-wide meat inspection ordinance. Dr. George Gordon, in charge of the State department dealing with inspection of meats and meat products, was present at a meeting of the supervisors to explain provisions of the ordinance and lead the discussion in its favor. Representatives of the cattle industry and slaughter house interests of the county were also present. This ordinance is virtually the same as those now in effect in a number of California counties and cities.

A cow must have three quarts of water for every quart of milk she produces, dairy experts say.

Vitally Important Labor Supply Menaced by Impending Bill

ACCORDING to private advices from Washington the House Committee on Immigration of the new Congress plans to perfect its organization immediately after the holidays and the Box Bill extending the immigration quota of 1924 to cover all of the Western Hemisphere will be among the first on its program. So a matter vital to California's agriculture, and that of the Southwestern and Intermountain States as well, goes into the hopper of legislation.

If this amendment to the Johnson Bill of 1924 is favorably reported out of committee and passes the House and Senate, the signature of President Coolidge upon it will limit the number of Mexicans entering the United States each year to around 1500. The San Joaquin Valley alone requires 30,000 in the peaks of the grape and cotton crops.

"It behooves every Californian, whether he be an agriculturalist or an insurance actuary, to go into his closet and pray that Congress may not pass this bill without first making a conscientious effort to equip itself with all the facts involved in the problem," said Dr. George Clements, head of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Comerce. "I say everyone in California advisedly because it is the unanimous opinion of all leaders in California agriculture that the sudden shutting off of the State's single reservoir of casual farm labor will bring about an economic dislocation bound to be felt in industry and finance."

"California agriculture is not wedded to Mexican labor," he said. "No more than it was wedded to Japanese labor when that was available and Chinese labor behind that. The California grower takes Mexican labor now because the doors of the Orient are closed to him and, in 1924, the doors of Europe. A great reservoir of Mexicans at his doors is all that remains to him.

"Nor is he wedded to Mexican because it is cheap labor. That cry raised against the Mexican farm worker is a fallacy. Mexican labor is far from cheap. White workmen, when they're available, work side by side with the Mexican in the grape vineyards and cotton fields, and at the same wage for piece work."

Nevada Laying Returns Show Falling Off

RENO (Nev.)—Egg production per hen in Nevada has declined in the last year, according to Prof. V. E. Scott, poultry specialist of the agricultural extension division of the University of Nevada, who has just completed a study of figures received from poultrymen in various parts of the State keeping production records.

"The greatest cause of this drop is that producers have kept more old hens than usual, whereas ordinarily the higher the percentage of pullets in a flock, the higher the production per fowl,' Prof. Scott said.

Even the pullet flocks have not apparently done as well this year as last, the figures reveal, for only two flocks were reported producing an average of over 200 eggs, while in 1926 there were five such flocks.

Prof. Scott's conclusions are based upon the reported production of but a small percentage of the laying hens in the State. Of the several hundred thousand such fowls, 13,563 in 1927 produced 156.6 eggs per hen, while 11,090 in 1926 yielded 175.9, a decline of 45 eggs per hen. With an average wholesale price of 32 cents a dozen, hens must average 120 eggs per year just to pay their way without any return for labor, Prof. Scott points out. Carefully kept production records offer the poultryman a way to increase efficiency in his flock, he says.

High production is not confined to any locality, the figures show, with a flock in Yerington averaging 179 eggs per hen, one in Washoe county 213.8 per hen and one in Humboldt county 211.7 per hen. In Churchhill and Humboldt counties, where about 73 per cent of the birds are pullets, the highest average production is reported.

Poultry production records have been kept in Nevada for three years. The production year begins in November, when most pullet flocks are laying at the rate of 10 to 12 eggs per hen per month, and ends the last of October, when most old hen flocks are producing six to eight eggs per hen per month.

Pigeon Ranch Combined With Gardening

By FRANCES DUNCAN

The man who, with only a small acreage is yet able to do two things well, is far safer, so far as livelihood goes, than is he who has but one remunerative industry. It's the old adage exemplified of not putting all one's eggs in the same basket.

Odell Sabbe of Van Nuys is a successful gardener, and, with the assistance of Mrs. Sabbe and lusty twin boys, he also manages a profitable pigeon ranch on Ventura Boulevard. Mr. Sabbe has so planned his one-acre farm, that it advertises both industries. In front is the beautifully kept lawn—greensward irreproachable enough to have won a prize in a front-yard contest, and a pretty water garden, with a margin very interestingly planted.

Back in Belgium, Mr. Sabbe was a pigeon fancier—the garden-work he has taken up since coming to this country some fifteen years ago. The pigeon houses are up-to-date and very attractively placed, running back from the house, directly north, then across, at the end of the property, forming an L. In the long oblong space, are apricot trees which bear excellently, and give the squabs and pigeons a little shade besides.

The pens are numbered, like houses on a city block, each apartment housing twenty pair; running water is in each inclosure. About 650 of the birds are White Kings and there are perhaps the same number of Silver King. A few pens of Red Carneaux complete the total. Mrs. Sabbe does quite a bit of the work of caring for the squabs and pigeons, Mr. Sabbe finding time to do the plucking of the birds and preparing them for market in the evenings. The weekly cleaning of the houses is the job of Saturday afternoon and Sundays.

Although the pigeon ranch has been running but a year, the owners say they find it prosperous. It takes the foreign-born, it seems, to work all days and evenings and Sundays—and with zest. But it's the way to make a small ranch pay.

Plan Hatchery Project for County

FONTANA.—Fifteen San Bernardino county hatcherymen attended a recent meeting here at which time plans for an accredited hatchery project were formulated. The hatchery plan is sponsored by the San Bernardino county farm bureau, and is an outgrowth of the hatchery project started at Fontana as a branch of the Southern California Farm Bureau accredited hatchery and breeders project.

It is proposed to have a complete county organization by next spring. H. V. Pond, Ontario, chairman of the county farm bureau poultry department, appointed a committee comprising H. M. Harter of the Fontana Farms Company, [illegible], Ontario, and A. P. [illegible], Redlands, to take charge of organization work preliminary to a meeting to be called in January.

RABBIT BREEDERS ELECT

FONTANA.—Albert M. Davidson has been re-elected president of the Fontana Rabbit Breeders' Association for the ensuing year. Other officers follow: first vice-president, W. H. Horton; second vice-president, J. H. Ort; secretary-treasurer, John T. Lynch; member of the board of directors, W. E. Mills. Members of the organization are making plans to buy their feed co-operatively, it is announced by the president. Louis Lenz of Los Angeles was one of the speakers at the meeting, his address dealing with marketing conditions so far as they pertain to rabbits and rabbit meat.

[illegible]

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Much benefit has been derived through the organization of the Poultry Producers of Arizona, Inc. This association now is marketing a large part of the egg crop. Three grades are maintained. The first, the "Gold Spot" brand, runs twenty-four ounces to the dozen, minimum. Second-grade eggs run down to twenty ounces. Small pullet eggs are packed separately. Each of the three grades has its own carton color. Only infertile eggs are marketed. Already prices are improving, the range now being at about San Francisco quotations.

FARM BUREAU DINNER

VENTURA.—The annual membership drive of the Ventura County Farm Bureau will be inaugurated with a dinner, January 10, preceding the three days' campaign.

San Gabriel Shippers Make Good Report

COVINA.—The 1927 citrus crop of the upper San Gabriel Valley sold at approximately $7,000,000, which growers and shippers state is the largest local return in the history of the citrus indusry. This figure does not include receipts for a few shipments that were made very late in the season and for which the figures are not available.

Although the Valencia oranges were unusually small, the return was the greatest ever received. The combined cash returns from the associations of this district, which market through the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, was $5,998,399. The figures furnished by these associations are f. o. b., the packing and selling charges having been deducted.

Ventura Citrus Men In Annual Meeting

SANTA PAULA.—At the annual meeting of the citrus growers' department of the Ventura County Farm Bureau, held recently at Glen Tavern, Santa Paula, managers of nine citrus packing-houses addressed the assemblage. Other speakers were Vincent F. Blanchard, county farm adviser; J. N. Thille, president of the farm bureau; A. C. Hardison of Santa Paula; and Fred Evans, manager of the Ventura Citrus Exchange.

All the addresses, with the exception of that by Mr. Evans, dealt with the citrus industry in Ventura county. Mr. Evans discussed the subject, "By-products of the Citrus Industry."

Business of the meeting included the election of executive committeemen, as follows: James Shiells, Fillmore; A. S. E. Beall, Ventura; Floyd Warring, Piru; G. E. Stinson, Simi; J. D. Culbertson, Santa Paula; Ernest Borchard, Oxnard; W. P. Daily, Camarillo; Wade Gerry, Ojai.

They Won Independence by Hard Work

MONROVIA.—When Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Mayer, about eight years ago, decided to leave Los Angeles and start some kind of business in the country, they faced a series of problems. Both members of the family were employed in the city, but they felt the urge to get out of the "working for someone else "class, and establish a business of their own. While they were considering what they should do, word came of the death of a relative who had been a beekeeper. It was impossible to sell the bees he had owned, except at a tremendous sacrifice, so the Mayers decided to go into the honey business. Accordingly, Mr. Mayer severed his Los Angeles connections, and took a government course in beekeeping in San Diego.

Then came the problem of finding the right location. After much searching, they found a seven-acre tract of raw land two miles east of Monrovia, and facing on the Foothill Boulevard. It was boulder strewn and so densely covered with tangled weeds and prickly cactus that Mrs. Mayer had to chop out a trail with a hoe before their little car could be parked on the premises. Prepared for hard work, they moved their bees to the property, and took possession of the small shack and roadside stand they had built for themselves. No conveniences were available, although this territory was at the edge of a delightful community of well-equipped, modern homes. There was no gas, no electricity, and, more lamentable still, there was no water. Every day for more than a year, Mr. Mayer cranked up his flivver and, driving more than a mile, filled two large barrels with water, hauling them carefully up to the roadside place. This water had to serve all public purposes, as well as the home needs of the family.

While her husband worked with his bees, Mrs. Mayer cooked and served lunches, and put up quantities of canned fruit, jams and jellies that sold readily to passers-by. Pure, fresh honey from hives plainly visible from the highway, also found a ready sale, and the small "store" erected to house the wayside commercial project soon proved inadequate to care for the growing business.

Feeling the need of a distinctive salesroom, the Mayers spent every spare moment in gathering boulders from their acreage and the dry river bed close by. It was a task to gather enough for the building they had in mind, and the job did not end with the gathering. After the stones were assembled, six weeks were spent in sorting them and selecting exactly the right ones for the walls. The task was finally completed, however, and the "Honeyville" pavilion, as it is called, is a most attractive structure. Water, electricity and other conveniences are now enjoyed.

Six hundred colonies of bees, distributed at Newhall, Calabasas, Glendora and Duarte, provide a constant supply of honey, which is sold not only to passing motorists, but also to regular customers who are glad to drive the twenty-three miles from Los Angeles for the product.

Catches the Eye

The rocks in this beautiful wayside honey store near Monrovia were gathered from the land in the rear, where many colonies of bees are working for Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Mayer.

To Plant More Grapes at Atascadero

ATASCADERO.—In continuation of the program of the Atascadero development syndicate to develop vineyards throughout the district, 500 additional acres will be planted within the near future. Ground is now being prepared for this year's planting, according to Earl Henderson, in charge of syndicate orchards and vineyards.

In the nursery at Morro road, near the western boundary of the Atascadero Estates, there are about 600,000 vines that will be used for planting purposes. Most of these grapes are of the Zinfandel variety, although several other varieties of wine grapes are also being cultivated. Table grapes are not being attempted, as they do not do as well as the wine grapes in this section.

Between 300 and 400 acres of land was cleared this year, and this is to be used for vineyard land in 1929. It will be farmed to grain this season. It is being roadripped fourteen inches deep, and the ground will be disced after the grain is planted preparatory to staking out. The land that is at present devoted to vineyards, consisting of 465 acres, was planted last year, with a number of varieties of grapes being used in an experimental way. Those that gave no great promise are being cut out and the land will be replanted with the varieties proving successful.

Plan Cauliflower Tour

A cauliflower tour is to be held by the Los Angeles county agricultural extension service Wednesday afternoon, January 11. All phases of cauliflower production, such as cultural practices, the use of commercial fertilizers, seed selection and seed production, and packing and shipping of cauliflower are to be discussed. Four stops will be made on the tour, the first at the A. M. Stoll ranch near Norwalk, the second at the Barker Brothers packing station in Artesia, the third at Frampton Brothers ranch, Artesia, and the fourth at the James Alderson ranch, Artesia. In addition to the general grower discussions, there will be demonstrations in the field. Material will be presented by R. G. Risser of the California Vegetable Union, on improved cultural practices, and by assistant Farm Adviser F. H. Ernst, on the use of fertilizers.

It takes a head to plan ahead.

Suggest That Dairymen Raise Own Heifers

Since Los Angeles county has prohibited the importation of cows not tested for tuberculosis, the Western States have scoured for clean cattle to keep up the numbers of milk-producing animals in the county, say officials of the dairymen's department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau. Since most of the available clean cows of good milk-producing ability in the neighboring territory have been already brought into this territory, dairymen here should make an effort to conserve the cows they already have, and perpetuate good cows by raising heifers from them sired by good pure-bred bulls, they say.

Dairymen, it is pointed out, have been expending too much of their profits in replacing worn-out cows. It is suggested that they should test their cows in the Farm Bureau Cowtesting Association, and use the records obtained as guidance in feeding the cows, according to their needs, on sensible rations that will prolong the useful lives of the animals for many years.

Because of the great need of the citrus and truck crop industries for fertilizer, it is held, dairying should be encouraged in the county up to the point of supplying the cities' needs for milk. By using good cows here, it is declared, and by daising good calves for replacement purposes, dairymen will be able to produce milk cheap enough to discourage the bringing in of milk from outside territory, where the fertilizer would not be available for local crop needs.

It is the opinion of many successful dairymen in the county that calves may be raised here more reasonably than outside cows of similar quality can be purchased, if skim milk powder instead of whole milk is used for the first six months of their lives.

Use Fruit By-Products As Stock Feed

Following their experiments with dried orange pulp and raisin pulp as feed for live stock, S. W. Mead and H. R. Guilbert of the animal husbandry division, University of California, have just announced the results of similar experiments with dried lemon pulp, dried pineapple pulp and dried olive pulp. A summary of the experiments follows:

Pineapple pulp is a by-product of the canneries, consisting of the outer skin, trimmings, core and ends of the pineapple, from which the juice has been extracted. It has been used for some time with satisfactory results as a feed for dairy cattle and swine at the University of Hawaii. Profs. Guilbert and Mead found that where dairy cattle are largely fed on alfalfa, dried pineapple pulp may be used with advantage in balancing the ration.

Dried lemon pulp was found bitter in taste, and must be mixed with more palatable feeds to induce stock to eat it. It compares favorably with dried orange pulp in total digestible nutrients, though it contains 8 per cent less digestible protein.

Dried olive pulp was found not satisfactory, although with the seeds removed the digestibility of the nutrients was increased. Unless the pulp, free from pits, can be produced commercially and in large quantities, no more work along this line will be done.

The total digestible nutrients in 100 pounds of feed, for various feeds, is given as follows: Common barley, 79.4; dried orange pulp, 78.2 dried lemon pulp, 72.8; dried beet pulp, 71.6; dried pineapple pulp, 59.9; alfalfa hay, 51.6; raisin pulp, 51.0; wheat straw, 36.9; dried olive pulp, 36.6.

DISEASE VANISHING

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Work that has covered five years now is declared to be showing excellent results in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis in Arizona. Since 1922, the State of Arizona and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry have been co-operating in testing dairy cattle for disease. In the past eighteen months about 76,000 head of cattle have been tested, with 1238 condemned as reactors. According to E. P. Johnson, State veterinary inspector, tuberculosis may soon be a thing of the past in Arizona dairy herds.

GOOD STEER PRICES

PORTERVILLE.—Ed Pratt, cattleman of the Porterville district, recently sold a choice car of steers in San Francisco for $11.75 per hundred, according to reports. The average weight of the steers was about 1100 pounds. A good steady mark has been maintained by the cattle market this year and cattle shipped from this district have brought good prices.

BEE MEN TO MEET

UPLAND.—William Atchley, Upland beekeeper and Elmer Matthews, San Bernardino county bee inspector; will attend the National Beekeepers convention at San Francisco the middle of January. At the conference, effort will be made to create a new co-operative marketing organization for honey manufacturers. Mr. Atchley represents the San Bernardino county bee club and the county farm bureau directorate.

Results of Swine Feed Tests Announced

With the idea of utilising the supply of low-grade raisins and making available a feed for pork producers, experiments to prove the value of cull raisins as a feed for swine are being carried out by the division of animal husbandry, University of California. Four such feeding tests have been completed, and the results are published in Bulletin 440, written by Prof. E. H. Hughes.

"The results of the last trial indicate that a ration of raisins and tankage on alfalfa pasture was not altogether satisfactory," says Prof. Hughes. "The addition of raisins and rice bran to a barley and tankage ration, on alfalfa pasture, would be a satisfactory practice."

Prof. Hughes gives the following summary of the results of the trials:

"Cull or damaged raisins, a carbohydrate feed carrying a high percentage of sugar, were found to be a palatable feed for swine.

"Raisins, when fed with barley and some nitrogenous concentrate, produced satisfactory gains and had a value when fed in this manner somewhat less, pound for pound, than rolled barley.

"The addition of raisins to a barley and tankage ration resulted in a slight increase in total feed required for 100 pounds of gain.

"Pigs fed on raisins and tankage on alfalfa pasture gained very slowly and scoured severely at times. Such a ration is not a satisfactory one when rapid gains are desired.

"These trials indicate that less barley is required for 100 pounds of gain and that the rate of gain is usually more rapid when dairy by-products constitute the nitrogenous supplement than when tankage is used for this purpose.

"A ration of rolled barley fifteen parts, tankage one part, by weight, with alfalfa pasture in addition, proved more efficient in the amount of feed consumed for 100 pounds of gain than a ration of rolled barley five parts, raisins five parts, rice bran five parts, and tankage one part by weight. The average daily gain, however, was less.

"Alfalfa pasture was a valuable addition to a ration of barley, rice bran, raisins and tankage."

This High School Boy Makes "Pork" Profits

BAKERSFIELD.—Selling pigs for breeding stock, and showing them at the recent State fair and Kern county fair, were profitable business for Vining Barker, a Kern County Union High School Agriculture club boy. Here is the boy's story of how he did it:

"My pure-bred Poland China sow farrowed ten pigs, and raised six. By accident four were born dead. There were four sows and two boars. They were born in March, and so showed in the junior pig class at the 1927 State Fair. I took the sow and her six pigs there with the other Boys' Club stock of the Kern County High School Agriculture Club.

"At the California State fair and the Kern county fair, I cleared $120 in prize money, above expenses. Then I sold four pigs for $50 each, one for $60 and one for $75. My gross receipts were $455, as all went for breeding stock. My feed expense was $130, so my net profit from the six pigs in six months was $325."

All Kern County Agriculture Club boys are not as fortunate as Vining Barker in selling all of their pigs for breeding stock but as a group they ship breeding stock all over California, and even into South America. Each year the repeat orders come in, so that the younger club members are getting the benefit of the good sales made by the older members.

"This is a fine example of the accumulative effect of good co-operative farm sales effort," said one of the instructors recently. "These boys will be good farm co-operators later on."

"Lunch Time"

This is the type of porkers that Vining Barker, and other Kern county high school ag. club boys are raising and showing at state and county fairs in competition with their "dads."

Heavy feeding is dangerous if assimilation lags

It costs but a few cents a month per cow to play safe . . . .

Think what an extra burden your cows take on when they come into the barn for winter! A sudden shift to dry hard-to-digest food. Little exercise; limited fresh air and sunlight. To keep up a milk flow that seems to tend downward some outside help—besides good food—is demanded or a breakdown is certain.

Kow-Kare is designed to supply what winter-fed cows need to keep the milk-flow at top notch. Gradually, but surely, this great regulator and conditioner builds up the vigor of the digestion and assimilation, a liberal, rich milk-making ration is now safe because the cow is capable of turning it into milk. She is responsive, profitable, able to ward off disease.

The Kow-Kare conditioning treatment is so simple, so inexpensive. A tablespoonful to the feeding, one to two weeks each month is all the average cow requires. Use Kow-Kare on the whole herd this winter and you will never go back to the old way.

Freshening Cows Need Kow-Kare

At calving, no feed, be it ever so well balanced, supplies all the elements needed to withstand the terrific shock of producing and bearing a healthy offspring. A tablespoonful of Kow-Kare in the feedings for three weeks before and after will save hundreds of dollars in the disorders it prevents. Don't allow cows to freshen without this valuable aid.

Feed dealers, general stores and druggists have Kow-Kare. Large size, $1.25; 6 cans for $6.25. Small size, 65c. Each can shows how to use Kow-Kare in successfully treating—at home—such disorders as Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Abortion, Bunches, Scours, Lost Appetite, etc. If your dealer is not supplied we will mail, postpaid.

He's Spent Twenty Years Learning What He Knows About Grain Growing

By F. H. ERNST, Agricultural Extension Service

IN THE northwest part of Los Angeles county is a considerable area used almost exclusively for grain growing under dry farming methods. This area has a rather low rainfall and is inclined to be windy and dry during the spring and summer months

One of the ranches of this region which has been successfully operated over a considerable period of years is owned by Joe Geier. This place, which is about three miles west of Del Sur, was homesteaded by the owner's parents, in the '90's. Mr. Geier himself has been in the region since 1900 and has been actively managing the ranch since 1905. In addition to being a pioneer in the point of time in this region, Mr. Geier has "pioneered" in cultural methods and in the discovery of wheat varieties best suited to his part of the county.

The weather conditions of the section make it necessary to plant grain varieties which are not easily shattered and which are drought resistant and Mr. Geier's data in this respect can be considered very reliable, inasmuch as they have been compiled from a large number of field trials carried on over a period of six years and with an experience background of about twenty-five years.

In 1921, Mr. Geier, in co-operation with B. C. Bougher, then of the Los Angeles County Agricultural Extension Service, but now superintendent of the Pasadena City Farm, planted about twenty of the most promising wheat varieties in small trial plots. With the elimination of the least suited varieties and the enlargement of plots, these tests have ben carried on each year since.

The owner's chief conclusions from these tests have been, first, that the once most commonly grown variety, Sonora Wheat, is not suited to the region; second, that the White Federation and the Early Baart are the best producers, in the order named. The advantage of the Early Baart is in its appearance. It has a large, amber kernel, while the Federation looks somewhat shriveled. The public buys according to appearance and not by analysis and consequently the Baart is favored in the market.

SOME VARIETY DATA

The following statistics show some of the interesting data on varieties collected by Mr. Geier:

In 1921, Indian 24 yielded 1128 pounds per acre, while White Federation produced 1038 pounds.

In 1922, Indian 24 yielded in rod row trials 535 pounds per acre. It is a drought resistant hybrid from India. White Federation, one of the best yielding varieties south of Davis, Cal., yielded 515 pounds per acre. Early Baart produced 490 pounds, and Sonora, 500 pounds. The latter is an old drought-resistant wheat which is very susceptible to bunt and rust.

In 1923, in rod row trials, White Federation produced 1584 pounds per acre and Early Baart, 1482 pounds per acre, while Sonora ranked eleventh in order of yield, with a per-acre production of 1184 pounds.

In a second set of field trials in 1923, White Federation produced 1375 pounds per acre and Early Baart, 1062 pounds. The data and observations to date indicate that White Federation is well suited to the area and in performance is as good or perhaps a little better than any of the forty odd varieties which Mr. Geier has tried.

Mr. Geier finds that "commercial acre" farming is not at all suited to this part of the county. His grain farming is done on about three thousand acres. One-half of this is summer fallowed and the other half planted to grain each year. This large area farming enables him to operate very economically despite the rather low yields per acre as compared to those in some other sections. He gives the following figures to justify his summer fallowing practice: During the past five years he has found that summer fallowed ground produced 823 pounds per acre, while the area which was cropped every year yielded 292 pounds. Experimental data from many sources have shown that increased yields from summer fallowing are due to increased soil fertility. This is brought about by the storage of nitrogen by nitrogen fixing bacteria and by the storage of soil moisture over a period of two years.

WATER IS PRECIOUS

The conservation of the rainfall in this region is exceedingly important. The problem is to get the water into the soil and prevent run-off and soil washing, which is characteristic of these rolling, upland areas. Mr. Geier has tried furrows at frequent intervals along the countours with some success. The chief drawback to this method, he says, was that it left the ground rather uneven for the use of the harvesting machines.

He now uses a harrow to break up the crust which may have formed after seeding. This leaves small furrows on the contours to catch and check the tiny water streams. The water seeps into the ground and is stored until the plant roots develop and use the stored moisture.

Not only is all of the moisture available needed for the maturing of the grain, but when it is allowed to collect and run off, it damages the fields considerably. It pours down hillsides and causes severe gullying of the fields. Very rough fields are impossible for harvesters to cover. This problem of the control of the flood waters is a difficult one and often necessitates the filling in of the small gullies before the grain can be harvested.

Around Del Sur two or three inches early in the season is considered enough to justify planting. Further to the west, where the soils are somewhat heavier, this amount of moisture penetrates only about one-half as far and more of it is, therefore, lost from evaporation. Consequently, seeding is usually delayed until more rain has fallen.

Mr. Geier has found that bunt, a fungus disease common to wheat, can best be controlled by dusting with copper carbonate and that this is best done and most economically done by machine. He uses two ounces of copper carbonate for every bushel (60 pounds of seed. This mixture destroys the germinating spores which may be on the seed at the time of planting. Mr. Geier's field tests have proven to his satisfaction the value of this seed treatment.

The introduction of new and improved practices such as summer fallowing and seed treatment, and the use of new and improved varieties, represents a distinct contribution to this farming community. Unselfish leadership is always at a premium, especially in rural districts. Such leadership is an inspiration to a community and makes for lasting progress and development.

Mr. Geier, in experimenting to find the best grains and best methods for his farming requirements, has had in mind helping others as well, and has advanced the interests of all the growers of the region in which he lives.

Points Out Errors in Tree Pruning

ONTARIO.—Errors to be considered in tree pruning, particularly in deciduous orchards, were pointed out by George P. Weldon, Chaffey pomologist, during the recent field day demonstrations in the Chaffey Union High School and Junior College experimental groves. During the demonstration Mr. Weldon pruned two trees to illustrate his talks on "long pruning" and "short pruning."

The long pruning practice is advocated by Mr. Weldon, who revealed results of both types of pruning in the same orchard. The long-pruned trees yielded much more fruit that those pruned closer, he said. The short prune has more main branches, more small wood, and is not able to carry as heavy load of fruit, he pointed out. Five main branches, he declared, are best for the long prune tree, since they are able to carry a heavier load of fruit. He advocates keeping the tree in an upright position, and not spread out.

Main branch selection for trees should not be made until the tree is four or five years old, he said, and branches should be selected as they develop. Mr. Weldon told of a hybrid peach he is experimenting with, one between the Sims and Lukens Honey peach. This hybrid, he says, leaves out earlier than either parent, and seems to be a regular bearer.

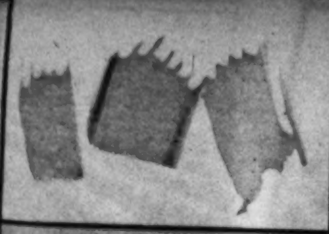
"Green Salad" in Car-Lots from Imperial Winter Fields

(Illustrating Story by Iva M. McFadden)

The work of harvesting 22,000 acres of Imperial Valley head lettuce is on in earnest this month, and thousands of cars of the nation's favorite salad vegetable will roll to eastern markets during the next several weeks. The fields were planted, in double rows, as shown, in September, for harvest in December, January, and February.



Thinning of head lettuce is hard on the back, but Mexican laborers are expert at the job and make quick work of large fields. After thinning, the heads are usually from eight to twelve inches apart, allowing the growing plants an opportunity to absorb all the fertility in the soil.

The fields are irrigated with a slow stream, that "subs" to the top of the seed beds.

This field, thinned in November, was ready for cutting by the middle of December.

Mexican labor is also used in the cutting. Field inspectors usually precede the cutting crew, and only fully matured heads are harvested on first cutting.

Matured heads are cut and placed in field-crates, which are carried from the rows to a large pile near a truck-loading platform.

Loading field crates for the trip to a packing station.

This truck load of field crates will be sorted, graded, inspected, repacked and iced at a packing plant located on a railroad siding in town.

Below—Lettuce packing plants are highly specialized and efficient, with each man doing a certain part of the work. Trimmers first sort the heads from field crates, and pass the inspected heads to expert packers, who place them in paper-lined crates. The packed crates are then "lidded," after which they are trucked directly into iced refrigerator cars ready for the trip to marketing centers.

Lettuce crates, or "shook," come "knock-down" to expert box-makers who "build" the finished crate near packing sheds.

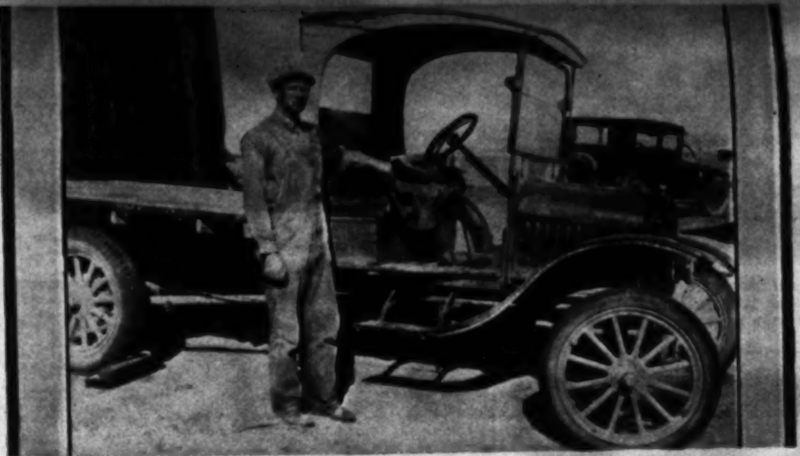
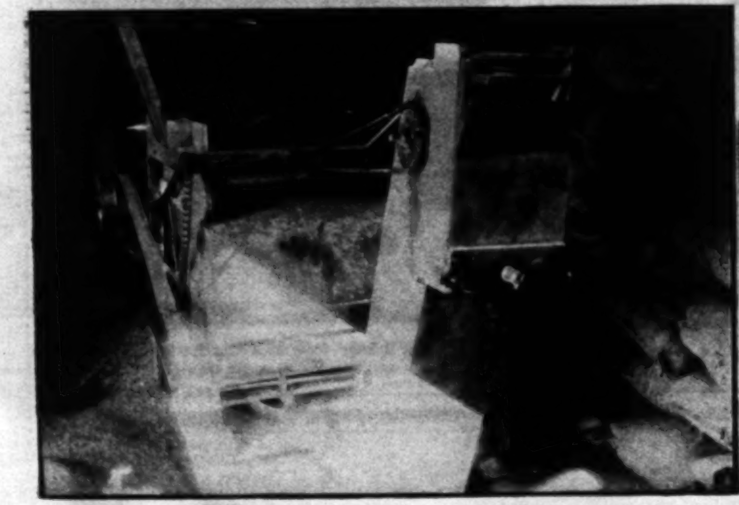
Farming in Los Angeles County's "Great Open Spaces"

(Illustrating Article by F. H. [illegible])



Joe Geier, of Del Sur, has bucked the grain game in the western part of Antelope Valley for more than twenty years, and knows what he knows from experience. Willing to help others, he has cooperated with the Agricultural Extension service since 1921 in cereal variety trials, White Federation and Early Baart wheat having been introduced by him. This wide-awake farmer advocated summer fallowing when others "didn't want to bother about it," and his records for five years show more than twice the yield from summer-fallowed land as he has had from annual cropping.

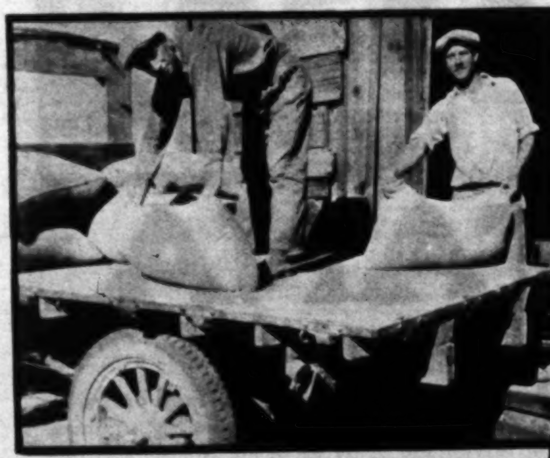
A glimpse of Antelope Valley from the bordering hills near Fairmont. In this vast expanse of plain, Mr. Geier is farming three thousand acres to grain. It isn't a place for "small farms," he opines.



Field tests have proven to this grain farmer the value of seed treatment. Here is his machine for recleaning wheat before dusting it with copper carbonate to control fungus disease.

This is the dusting machine for dusting wheat seed with copper carbonate. Mr. Geier says that wheat seed which is well dusted does not clog the drills, a difficulty sometimes experienced with poor dusting. The dusting prevents smut from developing in wheat at the time the seed germinates in the soil.

Below—A small combine thresher on the Geier ranch. It cuts and threshes the grain and dumps the sacks as shown. Wheat so harvested must be ripe and therefore resistant to scattering. White Federation is an excellent variety, and has outyielded all other varieties on his ranch to date, according to the Del Sur rancher.



Unloading wheat seed at the ranch recleaning and dusting plant. Mr. Geier is the man on the truck.

Seeding wheat in the west end of the Antelope Valley. These two drills can seed a quarter-section in a couple of days. Drilling is generally considered more satisfactory, since the seed can be planted at almost any depth, depending on soil and moisture conditions.
